out, Robbie took hold of Billy's hand. He sent, 'Let's get this party on the road,' and led Billy back to the dining room. The two boys saw that the girls were lined up at dimensional doors heading to Oneula Beach.

Lanna Seaver went to Billy and Robbie, saying, "Laura and I are going to spend a few hours with our new girls. We'll give them a crash course on becoming young ladies."

Billy smiled, "Thanks, Aunt Lanna. If they want, the girls can join us when you're done."

Lanna then squinted at Robbie, smirking, "Last night, Laura and I decided to spend this morning with the new girls. It's only coincidence that it works for your benefit, Robbie."

Robbie giggled, "I thought you might miss hearing Cesar and Felipe."

"I was, actually," Lanna warmly smiled, and turned to join the rest of the girls.

Walking toward the group of gathered boys, Billy grinned at Robbie, playfully challenging, "Not everybody and not all the time, huh?"

"Aunt Lanna's different," Robbie smiled. "She's the perfect mom for telepathic twins. She could hear Cesar and Felipe the very first day, before they were even adopted. That's another reason why I know there's something very kewl about you, Billy." Obviously surprised, Billy snapped his neck turning to Robbie. "I don't know what's different yet either," Robbie giggled. "All I know is that you heard Ronnie and me, in a different way than most. That makes you interesting..." Blushing and giggling, Robbie added, 'cute and cuddly too.'

Breaking out in a nervous sweat, Billy whimpered, "No one's ever said that about me."

'I only thought it, and you heard it,' Robbie giggled. 'Yes, I can hear you too, and I think you're right, there's a lot of exploring to be done.'

Two blushing and giggling boys joined their brothers and friends. While simultaneously sharing thoughts with Robbie, Billy loudly announced, "Let's get going." Hearing their big brother speaking so loudly, Jason's eyes widened, and Jimmy and Scott bounced in their seats. Noticing Billy and Robbie were holding hands, Jason's eyes almost jumped out of their sockets. All the other boys around the dining room were standing and walking towards the rec room, but Jason remained seated, dizzily trying to process Billy with a boyfriend. He could only wonder how it happened. The whole time Jason's wheels were spinning, Robbie was sharing Jason's thoughts with Billy.

To snap Jason out of his trance, Billy giggled, "Are you coming with us, bro?"

Looking down at the table, Jason saw the PADD sitting there, reminding him to bring it along. Standing with the PADD, Jason wordlessly joined the mass of boys lining up at the dimensional doors.

Robbie giggled to Billy, 'Jason's completely confused. He's remembering a talk you two had in the shower this morning. He thinks you've changed, just because we're holding hands.' Starting to loudly laugh and following Billy to the dimensional doors, Robbie sent, 'Yeah, I really do like you, especially when you think stuff like that! You're younger than me, but not that much younger, only ten months. That means, two months of the year were the same age. None of what you're thinking matters to me. Richie and Ronnie were in situations just like you, and I love them.'

Focused on the kids going through the doors to Oneula Beach, Billy instructed, "Just like here, guys. As soon as you get there, turn sharp and you're going toward regular doors into the rec room there. Ya can't miss 'em." At the same time, Billy wondered what Jason was really thinking.

'He's thinking it's very kewl that we're hookin' up, and that he needs some of that kind of luck,' Robbie shared with Billy. 'Don't worry so much about your bro, he'll be fine, once he makes up his mind which guy he likes most. Excuse me for a few moments, Billy; triple-trouble are giving me shit.'

Realizing that Robbie was hearing all of his three brothers at once, and wondering what they might be saying, or sending, since none were actually speaking, Billy sputtered and started laughing.

Giggling his butt off, Ralphie sent to Billy, 'Kiss Robbie, now!'

'Billy, you know you want to,' Richie teased.

'Robbie wants you to do it,' Ronnie slyly smiled.

Robbie squinted, 'Ralphie, suck face with Pat and shut up. Ronnie, I'm telling Garrett how bad you are. Richie, stop acting like you're only paying attention to Carrol and Trevor; you are far from innocent, bro.'

Richie sniggered, 'You can't even act like you're really angry, bro. You really want it as bad as Billy.'

All three brothers loudly ordered, 'JUMP HIS BONES, BILLY!'

Privy to this entire telepathic exchange, the Stoeher twins sadly shook their heads. Tanner interjected, 'I don't know why some guys make such a to-do about being boyfriends. Do they need an announcement letter or what?'

Toby smirked, 'You have to admit, the ones that act shy are cuter.'

'And usually the ones that start stuff up too,' Tanner evilly grinned.

Toby firmly objected, 'I did not start anything Saturday night or last night!'

'I didn't say that, did I?' Tanner snickered. "It works like a charm, every time." He then focused on Robbie, sending, 'Kiss him and get it over with, will you, please?'

Robbie sent the equivalent of a telepathic APB, shouting, 'I WILL KISS HIM, WHEN WE'RE READY, NOT FOR ANY OF YOU!' Intensely blushing, Billy's eyes widened, he sputtered, turned away briefly and cracked up.

About three-hundred meters away, sitting at a school computer station and taking his placement test, John Hundser heard and helplessly began laughing. Wade softly giggled, making it obvious that he heard too. Saturday, John had told the quadruple Rs to keep practicing their telepathy. Obviously, there would be some additions to his Intel team quicker than expected.

Walking through the dimensional doors with Pat, Ralphie giggled, 'Yeah, yeah, big deal. You really want to jump his bones.'

Returning his attention to Billy, Robbie sighed, "Sorry about that."

Nodding, Billy breathlessly giggled, "Why did I hear Tanner and Toby too?"

Robbie softly explained, "The best me and my bros can figure is that there are senders, there are receivers, or there are receiver-senders. Like I said earlier, you're a little different, cos you can definitely hear us, but your thoughts are open enough to allow us to hear you too. I'll bet you could learn to be a full time receiver-sender too, at least with me."

Following the last kids, Billy and Robbie passed through the door to Oneula Beach. The Hunnicutts, Billy's three brothers and Kaleo's sons were waiting. Jason passed the PADD to Billy. Almost simultaneously, the next two oldest boys, Kenny and Stan asked, "Whaddaya want us to do, Billy?"

Not noticing that almost everyone in the room was listening, Billy shrugged, "I was thinkin' it might be kewl to know which games are for which age groups. I can also put groups of pluses and minuses next to games, like a rating system, for each age group. You guys test games, and me and Robbie will keep the notes."

Ralphie, Ronnie and Richie sent, 'You're still taking notes? We thought you'd memorized the book by now!'

Billy blushed and giggled. Sadly shaking his head, Robbie sighed, "Don't pay attention to them, Billy. I'll take care of perv brothers at home tonight, I promise." Receiving ideas from Robbie about what he intended to do, Ronnie, Ralphie and Pat went in one direction, and Richie quickly took Carrol and Trevor in the opposite direction.

"That was easy," Billy grinned, and then wondered, "What did you tell them?"

"A threat that I might still have to keep, if they're not good. I promise to tell you another time," Robbie giggled. The two boys wandered over to where some older teenagers were checking various video games out. Terry Parkinson and his roommate, Mike Busse, were at the jukebox. They chose the rock genre, and started it randomly playing songs, beginning with Hotel California.

* * * * *

AI Division Headquarters, Sullivan's Island, S.C.

Monday November 8, 2004 3:07PM EST

The moment Reyes entered Marc's living room, Danny went over to offer a hug, softly sniggering, "I can't believe you heard me pulling on my jeans. Marc was clear across the room. Stevie denied having any involvement."

Reyes chuckled, "Nope, no AI pranks, I heard it." He then waved and said hello to Marc, before returning his attention to Fred and Chauncey. Still loosely holding Danny, Reyes introduced, "Danny Page and Marc Furst, this is Fred Eckhart, and his brother, Chauncey, and Chauncey's puppy is Rikko."

Recalling having seen Marc at Vision Industries many years ago, Fred reached an arm out to him to shake hands and say hello. Chauncey followed his brother's lead.

Danny smiled, "Welcome to Charleston. Keep your clothes on if you wish, but Marc here doesn't mind looking."

Marc's eyes shot up. "ME?" he incredulously yelled. "The only person around here who is a bigger perv than you is Stevie!"

Doing an excellent imitation of a female ferret, Stevie squeaked, "It's not my fault grandpa programmed me this way! And you guys keep taking your pants off, fueling topics of conversation." Reyes helplessly chuckled.

Alden giggled, "Far be it for us to let a commentary pass by."

"You're both pervs, so give up on the halos already!" Jerry said as he walked in the room. "Hey there, I'm Jerry Owens; I'm the only sane AI specialist in the entire Division."

Danny flipped Jerry the bird. "You, sane? Yeah right, you're the only programmer in AI history to have programmed a version of the OS that has a habit of collecting anything furry that walks within five miles of him!"

The back door slammed. From the kitchen and running to the living room, Joey screamed, "Dahdy, can I..." Seeing Reyes and Rikko, Joey audibly gasped and came to an abrupt halt. Kneeling down, Joey giggled, "Whad a pweddy doggie! We gods do ged a puppy doggie, Dahdy!" Rikko bounced over to the new little boy, licked Joey's face and jumped up, knocking Joey off balance. While Rikko gave him kisses, Joey loudly laughed, "We gods do ged lodsda puppy doggies, Dahdy!"

A calico cat came walking into the room, going directly to Joey. "I approve of this idea. You may add canines to our house, Joey. I find them most entertaining."

Joey giggled. "Okay, Fuzzy. You gonna say hi do dhe new guys?"

"Of course; the kittens are looking for new pets," Fuzzy replied with over-dignified assurance.

"SEE!" Marc and Danny chorused in unison.

"Hey, it's genetic, he's Timmy's brother!" Jerry responded in his own defense.

Releasing Danny and going to stand between Fred and Chauncey, Reyes threw his arms around them, sniggering, "This is AI Division normal. My first visit here, I wasn't in the door a full ten-seconds before I was victim of an in-progress pillow and tickle fight." Proving the shock of cat-speak was wearing off, Chauncey and Fred began giggling.

Coming downstairs, KC helpfully added, "Reyes was standing with Noah and his board shorts at his ankles, with his pecker flappin' in the breeze. A hell of a thing to wake up to, by the way, but nothing shocks me any more."

"When did your shock circuit ever work?" Danny giggled.

"Your batteries are failing you, geezer," KC grinned. "Was I not shocked on the side of that cliff when Prez tried to seduce me?" Chauncey and Fred cracked up.

"I was too; I think Prez needs to see Dr. Dan!" Danny replied. "His tastes are definitely slipping fast; must be stress related."

Softly, but still loud enough to be heard by KC, Reyes told Chauncey and Fred, "KC had major wood after that incident."

"Cos Unca Pwez is cuder dhan Unca Dahny," Joey giggled, and quickly hid behind KC.

Grinning, KC sighed, "And we wonder why our AIs have penis envy."

"I don' god penis envy! Dahdy gave me a BIG one!" Joey stated proudly.

Pulling his little brother in front of him, KC lifted and flung Joey over his shoulder, sniggering, "I rest my case, twerp!"

Fred and Chauncey looked to Reyes for explanation. Shrugging, Reyes giggled, "It's true enough." He then asked Danny, "Is it CAT scan time?"

"I have already scanned you. I approve," Fuzzy factually stated.

Everybody in the room looked down at the calico cat, watching it strut toward the kitchen and the basement door. Rikko followed Fuzzy, and so did Chauncey, Fred, Danny and Jerry.

Giggling, Reyes wondered, "What is it about this house that causes normal people to lose it?"

Marc shrugged, "It's a vibe that started... shit, it started soon after Danny was reactivated."

"We need someone to intervene the next time Cory and company invade," KC joked.

"Actually, Danny managed to warp reality long before Cory called," Marc giggled. "The Clan just accelerated the process."

Glancing around the room at Marc, KC, and Joey, who was still hanging off KC's shoulder, mostly upside down, Reyes smiled, "I guess I'll take a quick walk next door, to let Paul and Ryan know that I'm here."

Marc nodded, "I'll go downstairs. After you rescued Fred, I checked the old logs. Fred's last software and firmware upgrades were done in 1986."

KC grinned, "Is Fred usually so quiet? He barely said a word."

Reyes shrugged, "Honestly, I haven't spent that much time with him. Considering what happened in Colorado, and how upset Chauncey was, I think they're both adjusting pretty well. Besides, since arriving, we didn't give them much of a chance to say more than hello." He then asked Joey, "Do you want to come with me, little brother? Once we get your uncles movin', we'll come back here, or go to Ewa Beach and jam for a little while."

Joey giggled, "Okay, Weyes. Pud me down, Casey." KC helped Joey down. In moments, Joey was on his feet and flying into Reyes arms.

Catching and lifting his little brother, Reyes planted a kiss on Joey's cheek. Reyes smiled, "We'll be back in a little while."

"See ya," Marc and KC chorused.

Walking to the kitchen, with Joey still in his arms and planted on his left hip, Reyes asked, "Is it raining still, Joey?"

"A widdwe," Joey answered, "nod as hawd as id was befowe." At the back door and noticing that it was raining hard again, Joey giggled, "I god hewe dwy. We've going do have do wun." Agreeing, Reyes put Joey down. Soon they were racing out the door and over to the Owens' house. It was a relatively short run, about fifty meters, but they still got drenched.

Sitting in the living room watching television, Jon Owens saw his grandson and Reyes come in the house. Chuckling, Jon stood and offered, "Let me get some towels." Joey stripped off his shirt and kicked off his sneakers. On his way to the linen closet, Jon asked, "How're you today, Reyes?"

"I'm good, Uncle Jon," Reyes replied. "School started today. My family and about half of our Clan are there, and the other half are newbies exploring the two bases."

Returning with two bath towels, Jon smiled, "You have two bases?" and handed off the towels.

Nodding, Reyes began drying his thick auburn hair, and answered, "We have five bases on four islands. The two on Oahu are occupied with rescued kids, as of yesterday. The other three have refugees, since Friday's insanity."

"Hi, Reyes," Willie purred as he slinked around the corner. Reyes greeted the panther hybrid.

Hearing Reyes voice, Paul and Ryan galloped downstairs. Ryan gasped, "You're sopping wet!"

Sadly shaking his head, Paul smirked, "I told you to wear a raincoat."

Jon recommended, "Why don't you boys get Reyes into some dry clothes?" Looking down, Jon instructed, "You too, Joey, change into dry clothes, before you catch cold."

"Choo!" Joey faked a sneeze, then giggled, "I don't think we can catch cows, gwandpa."

Almost simultaneously, Paul and Reyes corrected, "Yes we can, Joey."

Reyes smiled, "We'll get past it quicker and easier, but listen to your grandpa. You can't keep time and play drums when you're sneezing, sniffing and coughing, twerp."

Beginning to strip off his remaining clothes, Joey giggled, "I'ww pud showds on fow Hawaii." In moments, Joey raced naked up the stairs, leaving a pile of damp clothes on the entryway floor.

Ryan called, "Come on, Reyes. You're not catching cold today either." Reyes followed Paul and Ryan up the steps. Catching eyefuls of two round butts, currently covered in jeans, Reyes began giggling. Without turning, Ryan wondered, "What's so funny?" Reaching both hands forward, Reyes pinched both brothers' buns, causing them to yelp and race up the remaining steps. Laughing, Reyes hurried after them.

At the top of the staircase, Paul squinted, "Very funny."

"We should've expected that though," Ryan giggled.

Paul huffed, "We've got stuff to talk about anyway," and started down the hall.

Ryan reached for Reyes' hand and took it in his, saying, "Me and Paul have been talking, and you need to know about it."

Nervously, Reyes nodded. He didn't expect them to have discussed anything quite so quickly. As soon as he stepped into Paul's and Ryan's bedroom, Ryan released Reyes' hand to close the door and lock it.

At the dresser, with his back turned from Reyes and Ryan, Paul opened a drawer, softly saying, "We told you about what we did on the streets, but didn't tell you about how things were before that."

Locking eyes with Reyes, Ryan grinned, "We're brothers, so of course we fooled around a little bit, now and then. It was never like we were boyfriends though. When we talked about you with us though, suddenly we had to face facts."

Returning to his brother and Reyes with boxer-briefs, board shorts and a polo shirt, Paul dropped the clothes on the nearest bed. He cautiously explained, "I love Ryan, he loves me, and we're obviously feeling strongly about you."

Reyes noticed Paul's eyes darting around, almost as if he were making sure he was safe in his own bedroom. It was probably the door being locked, Reyes rationalized. Paul's only escape route was altered.

Reaching for the comm-badge on Reyes' T-shirt, Ryan took it off, softly giggling, "Four times since Saturday night we talked about you, and got stiffies." Intensely blushing, Reyes also giggled. Leaning closer and on Reyes, Ryan whispered, "We'd like to try having a real relationship with you."

"If you're still considering it," Paul quickly added, intentionally leaving all three of them an easy out.

Reyes warmly smiled, "I am and do want to try, but I'd like to say a few things to both of you. If that's kewl with you, then we can talk more or move forward?"

"Kewl," the brothers chirped.

Gesturing to the bed, Reyes prompted, "Have a seat." He took his damp T-shirt off while Paul and Ryan sat down. Holding out his T-shirt, he grinned, "Swap ya, wet for dry?" Widely smiling, Paul took Reyes' wet shirt, snarled, and then dropped it on the floor. Giggling, Ryan handed the fresh shirt to Reyes, and then returned the comm-badge. Once he had slipped the polo shirt on, Reyes grinned, "Right after my rescue, between Saturday and Wednesday morning, I hadn't woke with morning wood once. Since Wednesday, every morning, without fail." Ryan giggled louder. Paul smiled and nodded.

Reyes continued, "I tell my brothers, and even myself, it's because I'm healing, returning to normal, but I know that's only half true. I would've been with you everyday since we met, but I just didn't get the chance. As soon as I heard it was raining here, I wanted to get here, to bring you to Ewa Beach, where it's sunny and warm.

"I've noticed some other stuff too that has to be aired out." Before either brother could ask, Reyes locked eyes with Ryan, saying, "Paul needs you, just as you are, and so do I. At the beach house, I told you that I couldn't be with one of you without including the other. That wasn't a very difficult decision for me, because you would be shattered without Paul, and he'd be destroyed without you. Each of you are only half a person without the other in your life. To make this work, you come to us, Paul and I, for everything, together or one at a time, but know that everything you tell me won't be kept a secret from Paul. Secrets aren't possible between two when there are three."

Ryan rapidly nodded agreement, smiling, "That's easy."

Focusing on Paul, Reyes sighed, "I see more than you probably think I do, Paul. Please don't take this wrong, as any sort of threat, but I often see your eyes bouncing and darting around, to make sure you're safe. You always need to know your escape route; I saw it here Wednesday, I saw it at the beach house, again yesterday in the basement store, and just a minute ago when you crossed the room with the clothes. As fucked up as my situation was, your time on the street was every bit as bad, possibly worse. It's all changed now, Paul. It's time to share all those old worries, get 'em off your chest. For twenty years you did your best to keep Ryan safe. You did it, Paul. He's here, with us and perfectly fine and completely safe. Going forward, that becomes part of my job. I intend to prove to both of you how safe we really are."

Paul reluctantly mumbled, "I can't help myself sometimes."

"I know," Reyes warmly smiled. "Here, your contact with other kids is limited, compared to my life at Ewa Beach. I want to go back there with both of you today, so I get time with you, and you get time around all our kids. We're perfectly safe now, Paul. Nobody is going to hurt Ryan or me. Can you share your old job, protecting Ryan with me?"

Shedding tears, Paul nodded, "I'll try. You guys will have to let me know when I'm messing it up."

Kneeling down on the floor between Paul and Ryan, Reyes offered both his hands, firmly assuring, "I will, but don't worry about it." Paul and Ryan each took one of Reyes' hands. Reyes softly reminded, "I want to be with both of you; one without the other won't cut it. I need both of you, with the past way in the background where it belongs. The really interesting thing is that I've always been in families of three. I thought my orphanage family was big, but the Clan's got that beat. The future is all three of us. I already feel like we're family, and have high hopes it'll only get better."

Ryan wondered, "Having two boyfriends doesn't scare you, Reyes?"

"Compared to the orphanage, two dudes I really care about will be easy and fun," Reyes answered. "This is my place now, between you with my hands in both of yours. What I've learned from my dad, pop, and the other Core Rimmers is that we're a team, from now on. What isn't already fixed from our pasts will be, with two helping the other one."

"We can try," Paul sighed.

Ryan corrected, "We will try, bro. There's never been anyone like Reyes, and you know it."

"There's no rush and plenty of time," Reyes gently reminded. Brightly smiling, Reyes added, "As the song says, we can work it out."

Blushing, Paul grinned, "We get a boyfriend who can sing us to sleep at night." Ryan cracked up.

Reyes giggled, "I get a warm comfy place between you." Paul and Ryan grinned at each other then pulled Reyes up off his knees and onto the clothes, face down on the bed between them. All three giggled and cuddled together for the first time. Reyes told his two boyfriends what was going on in Hawaii that day. After a minute or so, while Reyes was still talking, all three heard feet running down the hall.

"Weyes?" Joey yelled from the other side of the door, "Awe we going do jam hewe ow ad Ewa Beach?"

Paul loudly replied, "Ewa Beach, Joey."

"I'ww teww gwandma, gwandpa and dahdy," Joey cheered, and took off running back down the hall.

Since Reyes was on his belly, Paul shared an unnoticed mischievous glance with Ryan. Without warning, both boys goosed Reyes' butt, to get him back for the pinches on the stairs. Lurching, Reyes squealed and giggled into the mattress. Laying back down on his side, Ryan smiled, "What I'd like to know is how you got so sexy?"

"I dunno," Reyes giggled. "Maybe it's only apparent to my equally sexy boyfriends."

Paul grinned, "Nope, I think it's a unique combination of brown Polynesian skin, hazel eyes and auburn hair wrapping up a very caring heart."

Reyes moored through giggles, "You're the seducer? I never would've guessed."

Ryan evilly snickered, "He never used to be. Again, that's your effect on Paul."

Paul grinned, "See, Ryan is trying to make you believe he's innocent."

"I already know Ryan's not innocent," Reyes playfully teased, and quickly turned his head. Ryan's jaw dropped and he uncontrollably blushed before laughing along with Paul and Reyes.

Paul sniggered, "Remember, bro, we... as in both of us got bones talking about what we might say to Reyes today."

"I'm curious," Reyes giggled, "exactly what were you discussing that caused that? We spent hours naked together Saturday with no visible reactions."

"Exactly!" Ryan and Paul loudly laughed.

Ryan playfully offered, "Delayed reaction?"

"Seeing a guy dressed versus undressed are often two completely different pictures," Paul carefully explained. "In both conditions, we liked what we saw. Your words, voice and personality didn't change at all. Some guys might get naked and then act superior, others might be the opposite, very shy and reserved, but not you though. Ryan confirmed what I saw, so that's simply you."

Ryan added, "Which is why I called you sexy. You definitely are perfectly proportioned, everywhere. Everything about you is becoming very familiar."

"Ditto times two," Reyes smiled. "That's why I had to pinch your butts. Also, I spent more than twenty years in the ROH, before the orphanage, and spent a fair amount of time naked around other naked people. It's simply the way I learned to be, before orphanage pedophiles clouded the picture."

Paul thoughtfully hummed, then smirked, "I want to get changed into shorts and get to Hawaii. Who's ready to leave?"

Ryan nodded, quickly sat up and giggled, "It just so happens that I didn't put undies on, so Reyes gets another peep show."

"Which I will take full advantage of," Reyes cackled.

Paul squinted and smirked, "How full?"

"Only half," Reyes giggled, "unless you show some white butt too. So keep your underwear on, or we might not be leaving quite as quickly as we hoped."

Sounding like a newscaster, Paul stood and huffed, "Thus proving that once human or android becomes sexually active, there is no undoing it." He started across the room to change clothes.

Ryan got up and Reyes rolled off of the boxer-shorts and boardies that he had landed upon. Unbuttoning his jeans, Ryan locked eyes with Reyes, seductively asking, "Do you want to touch me?"

Reyes smiled, "I've loved every hug and kiss you guys have given me, and I do want to go there, but not right now. Simply knowing that we're going to try being partners is perfect. If we see it's working out, three ways, we know what to do next, later today, tomorrow, whenever."

Pausing a moment then proceeding to unzip, Ryan giggled, "You know, as much as I want you to touch me, no one has ever said no that gently, seriously or warmly."

Turning around in only gray boxer-briefs, Paul sighed, "I think we've all had our share of experiences that weren't fun or good. It was a meal, or a temporary place to sleep."

Nodding, Reyes admitted, "Honestly, it's those bad sexual experiences that are in my memories, and what I'm most afraid of."

"How so?" Ryan wondered, and reached for the boxer-briefs on the bed.

"I remember every word of what you said about your orphanage," Paul admitted, "but I'm not sure why you would be frightened by us, Reyes."

Reyes shrugged, "I want this to work, not short term, weeks or months, but years. We've all done enough sexually to be experts. My wish is for us to be together, everywhere, all the time. That's how all the people I look up to act. Maybe you don't see it because you haven't gotten to know them, but my dad and pop show their love for Prez and Keith everyday, without running into a bedroom. From day one, as soon as we met them, the four of them have been inseparable. All the people in love that I've ever known have been like that. We can be like that.

"I learned stuff that makes me wonder how things might work over years. For example, Ryan might not be feeling very well one day, he's sick, and doesn't want to mess around, but Paul and I are completely ready and only waiting for Ryan. How do we work that? When is it okay for two to be alone without the third? How do the two that were alone make it up to the third, so he never feels separated, out on the edge of the branch?"

"We hadn't thought of that," Paul murmured.

"Think of it," Reyes prodded, "if I've been alone with you, for whatever reason, then both of us have to make it up to Ryan, alone as couples and again, all three together. It's not the way I want it to be generally, but there will very likely be instances exactly like that. Only yesterday, what I thought would be an hour or two in the store, and then plenty of time to be with just the two of you, didn't quite work out that way."

"No, it didn't," Ryan giggled. "I felt just like those kids. This stuff is free? GIMME!"

With the brothers dressed and ready, Reyes stood, sadly saying, "Plan is a four letter word. I thought we'd have way more time than we actually had."

Sandwiching Reyes between them, each brother planted a soft kiss. Paul sighed, "Please don't worry so much about what we did with our time. It was important to us that we be there with you. We've watched you here, interacting with everyone, and there at Ewa Beach, with your brothers, fathers, friends and all those new kids. You don't change very much for anyone, and that's how I know it's you I want to be with. The only thing delayed was the talk we just had; no harm done."

Nodding, Ryan added, "It sure wasn't boring, Reyes. We did have dinner together, which was really nice. As much as you wanted to know about the kids, they wanted to know about you and us too. It was so good to hear how hopeful those kids are."

"Even better was the concert after dinner," Paul beamed. "You were with the rest of your leadership team, and then with your band, where you needed to be. Those are parts of you that we completely accept and enjoy."

"It was after ten when we left Ewa Beach," Ryan reminded. "It was after four in the morning when we got home. We were awake about twenty hours."

"Time zones are another little issue we'll be dealing with," Reyes softly huffed.

"Then we're staying there with you or you're coming here with us," Paul firmly said. "As for when we'll be acting as couples, let me say that I think it will be very rare. For instance, what you didn't notice, I sure did, namely Ryan's chubby!" Reyes and Ryan cracked up.

"BUSTED!" Stevie and Alden shouted from the ceiling speakers.

"You two pervs stay outta this!" all three boys chorused as one.

"Hey, we've graduated to pervs!" Stevie giggled. "Dad's gonna be so proud of us!"

Realizing they would never be truly alone, Paul released Reyes and Ryan, went to the door and opened it. Reyes picked his wet shirt up off the floor. All three exited the room. Paul softly bitched, "First thing, we're going out on a date, away from perv AI cameras and microphones."

Ryan hopefully gushed, "Waikiki?"

Reyes nodded, "My treat."

Paul stopped walking and spun around, forcing Ryan and Reyes to stop short or bump into him. Paul squinted, "What? You're paying?"

Reyes nodded, "I've had a Clan debit card most of the week that I haven't used once, and I'm a Core Rimmer, with access to funds I can't even count. Waikiki it is, and then a moonlit walk on the beach after we eat."

Without delay, Paul and Ryan jumped Reyes. All three fell to the floor with loud thuds and crazed giggling. Downstairs, on the living room sofa, Jon grinned up at the ceiling. Hurrying to the staircase from the kitchen, Mary yelled, "Is everybody all right up there?"

Paul laughed, "We're fine, mom." He then softly warned Reyes, "But one of us may not be so all right tomorrow morning." Ryan nodded and proceeded to try and rip open the Velcro on Reyes' boardies. Howling, Reyes blocked Ryan's hands from completing the goal.

Blinking rapidly, Mary realized that Paul had quickly, and without hesitation or stammering, called her mom. She walked away satisfied, but confused nonetheless.

As she was about to re-enter the kitchen, Stevie whined, "Mommy! They called me a perv!"

Mary sighed, "If the shoe fits..."

"I don't have feet."

"You don't have a butt either, but when you do, it will be swatted, with love, of course."

"Of course!" five of six AIs cheered.

Stevie sniffled, "So much love from my mother and brothers..."

"Stop teasing the boys and help me in the kitchen, Stevie," Mary lovingly instructed.

"Kay mommy," Stevie happily replied.

Sharing an abundance of kisses and playful gropes, Paul, Reyes and Ryan managed to get off the floor. Between the brothers, with both hands taken, Reyes giggled because he had never even considered what it might be like holding hands with two boyfriends. Paul led the way downstairs, with Reyes in the middle, and Ryan bringing up the rear, softly commenting on Reyes wiggling backside the entire time. Arriving in the living room, they went to Jon. Paul said, "Dad, we're going to go next door, and then we'd like to go to Hawaii with Reyes, if that's all right?"

Jon reminded, "Lunch will be ready in a few minutes. Joey said that Marc and the boys there will be here soon, including Reyes' friends." Paul and Ryan checked with Reyes.

"It's kawl," Reyes smiled. "Last time I had two breakfasts and two lunches in under six hours. This time, Paul and Ryan can eat two lunches." Jerry walked in the room with Joey. Reyes scowled, "Is Fred all right?"

Nodding, Jerry assured, "Fine and completely up to date, with all the latest stuff we gave you last week, minus the special skills stuff from Austin. They'll be here in a few seconds."

Reyes blinked, "Is it still raining?"

Jerry shrugged, "I think so."

"You're dry," Reyes noticed.

Nodding, Jerry giggled, "And you've got boyfriends, I see. Now that we've gotten the obvious out of the way, when's lunch?"

Looking down, Reyes glared and grinned at Joey. Joey giggled, "WHAD?" and hid behind his dad.

Passing by with platters of food, Jon chuckled, "Has any one ever told Reyes that Joey likes running?"

"Especially in the rain," Jerry simply stated.

"Com'ere, Joey," Reyes evilly snickered, and let go of Paul and Ryan. Joey bolted down the hallway, giggling his little android ass off, with Reyes in pursuit. Joey ran through a dimensional door, to Marc's house, through another door to Orlando HQ CIC, where Seth and others noticed the ongoing chase. Joey actually led Reyes around and above the world, to Terra Main, the Ark compound, to Northeast Division's CIC, to Wales, to St. Petersburg, the Oceanic Division, and even through Ewa Beach on the return trip through the Desert Division, Des Moines, Gulf Coast and Fort Lauderdale before returning to his own house and out through the back door into the rain, where Reyes would not go.

"Congratulations, Reyes!" Stevie giggled. "You're the first person to visit all of the Clan's divisions!"

"Actually the second, Joey beat him by at least five-seconds!" Alden giggled.

"Joey is Timmy's brother and has spent more time out of time than Uncle Galli, so he's exempt from counting!" George helpfully added.

"Reyes, do you realize that you already visited tomorrow without the help of a Mikyvis?" Kerry mischievously added. "Joey's already corrupting your reality!"

<I do believe that both of them have set a new record for distance traveled by a human in five minutes, without the assistance of a Federation transporter.>

Still breathing heavy, Reyes returned to the living room, softly panting, "Joey's getting tickled to tears today, Jerry."

From down the hall, running feet were heard. Daringly, Joey ran into the living room. He cackled, "Anodhew go, Weyes?" and actually ran around the sofa and past Reyes. Capturing the android imp, Reyes held Joey still while Paul and Ryan joyfully tickled him to tears.

Danny walked into the room, grinning at Joey's plight. "Okay, that explains why I've just got calls from every division in the Clan, asking what Joey did this time. Reyes, you do realize that tickles just encourage him, don't you?"

Reyes chuckled, "This lets my little brother know I'm not angry, just getting even. One good prank deserves another."

Paul evilly grinned, "When will we stop?"

"Just before Joey wets himself and me again," Reyes sniggered.

Chapter 18

Oneula Beach Rec Room

Monday, November 8, 2004, 9:50AM HTZ

Using the PADD provided by Alden, Billy and Robbie took notes on the various games available at the base. With Alden's help, Billy had organized his first spreadsheet, naming games and listing pro and con columns by age groups. Jason, Jimmy and Scott were with groups of boys their own ages, testing games and chattering up a storm, so Billy saw everything was very kewl. Not far from Billy and Robbie, dancing to the jukebox music, Travis McAuley was with his roommate and new boyfriend, Erik Kendricks. Some other teenagers were playing foosball or billiards. Level one and level two orphanage teen boys were watching and asking questions, to learn the rules and how to play both games.

Heading out of the rec room to get sodas from the kitchen, Lance Kinchen and Scott Shetley, the two guitarists rescued from New York City, were losing interest in exploring the bases. Lance sighed, "This is all kind o' kewl, but getting good at a video game seems pointless to me. I'd rather play guitar or dance."

After a restless night, Scott sleepily nodded, "Your pick, I'll do either."

Giggling, Lance teased, "Ya wanna dance with me, big guy? I didn't know..."

Moving closer and guiding Lance to a private area of the dining room, Scott stopped Lance from walking. Gently resting a hand on Lance's shoulder, Scott whispered, "I saw and heard you last night, and I know you saw me." Not quite a year younger than Scott, Lance fiercely blushed, apologized and briefly tried stammering nonsensical excuses. "Shush," Scott warmly smiled. He released Lance's shoulder, whispering, "Every guy does it, and I'm not bothered at all. The thing I have to tell you is that I was looking at you, wishing we... ya know, uh... weren't so far apart. If you... ya know... want... we could try... if it's kewl, and we still want, then we'll see?"

Relieved, but also very surprised, Lance nervously glanced around. Since no one else was nearby or paying any attention, Lance whispered, "I didn't think you'd want to."

Scott shrugged, "I just don't know, Lance. We walked out o' the city together and stayed together. My time's spent playing and practicing guitar, for four years. I never gave much thought to being with anyone at all before. Since Saturday, I can't seem to stop thinking about it. If I can't with you, then I just can't with any guy. Together, we could try. If we both like it then we can talk it out, and see what we wanna do about it."

Lance blushed and softly confessed, "I didn't think you'd be interested. I'm just gonna admit it, I would've joined you in your bed, or asked you into mine, if I thought I had any chance at all."

Scott carefully shared, "Thanks." He then wondered, "Why wouldn't you have a chance?" Only turning redder, Lance decided to keep his thoughts private and shrugged. Scott smiled, "After three days together, you and I have the best chance. No matter how it works out, we'll still be roommates and buds, Lance. A while ago, during last summer, I got two hand-jobs, from a guy and then from a girl. Neither ever spoke to me again. I guess they were embarrassed, and so was I, but not that bad. Maybe it was my fault. I could've returned something, but I was too freaked out and didn't. No matter what the reasons, we ain't going there, man. When this experiment is over, you tell me what you liked or didn't like. I'll tell you the truth too."

Lance worried, "What if one of us likes it more than the other?"

"We can figure that out if or when we get there," Scott offered. "If it's kewl, we've got bunches of gay guys to confide in and talk to."

Nodding, Lance suggested, "Let's get some sodas, and then tell Billy we're heading to our dorm to jam." Scott agreed and they did exactly that. Knowing that the two older boys played guitar, Billy nodded and reminded them to find the group again when they were ready.

Watching the teens walk out of the Oneula Beach rec room, Robbie giggled, 'Ya know, I guess some dudes are just thick as a brick.'

Tilting his head, Billy smiled, "What do you mean?"

"Lance and Scott," Robbie grinned. 'You seemed a little bummed that they were leaving, so I did a quick scan. They're already best friends. Lance would walk on his hands through glass if Scott told him to. Scott thinks Lance is the cutest, most cuddly dude around. Every time Lance smiles at him, Scott feels like king of the universe. They've got the same interests and the exact same thoughts. They ain't playing guitar, Billy; they're gonna try making love, like a test, to see if they can deal.'

Billy grinned, 'Those two guys? Never in a million years would I have guessed.'

Robbie shrugged, 'What makes any guy gay?'

'Attraction first, I think,' Billy offered.

Robbie nodded and smiled, 'Exactly. As much as I'm attracted to the way you look, the way you think is the kewlest. It's exactly the same with Lance and Scott. All the attractions are there. The difference is that you and I know we're gay. They're just now considering it more seriously than they ever needed or wanted to before.'

During the silent walk from Oneula Beach to their room, Lance tried to wrap his mind around what they were going to do. For three days, Scott had been the best friend ever. Lance completely suppressed any sexual thoughts involving Scott. The fact that Scott wanted to make love with him was simply too unreal to be true. Considering what could very likely happen when they were alone, there wasn't a single idea that didn't thrill Lance to his soul. If he wasn't so terrified, Lance might've actually gotten more than a chubby, but the truth was, he was scared to death of doing something wrong.

Only minutes later, Lance and Scott were back at Ewa Beach, walking into dorm room thirty-one-fourteen. They noticed their beds were remade and the room seemed spotless. Once the door was closed and locked, Scott put his soda down on his desk, sincerely imploring, "Don't ever stop talking to me, Lance." He pointed at the two guitar cases leaning against the wall, firmly reminding, "That's us, no matter what. Before we got here, we were talking about getting our own band together. Before we crashed last night, all we talked about was the Platinum Habits concert. Music is the foundation... our reason for being together from the start, early Friday morning. The second anything seems wrong, let me know and I'll stop."

After putting his soda down on his dresser, Lance nervously replied, "Kewl, you too, okay?"

Hearing the soft and shaky tone of Lance's voice, Scott asked, "What's wrong?"

Turning to face his best friend in the world, Lance shrugged, "Nothin'." Shyly glancing across the room, he sighed, "I don't know how to do anything, man. I've never... with anyone before. I'm so scared that I'm really shaking like a leaf. I want to, but I'm just thinking, maybe I can't."

Scott grinned, "Course ya can! I caught you spankin' it, and you must've caught me. Did you shoot?"

"Yeah!" Lance giggled. He wanted to add, 'it was the best ever', but held back the remark.

Moving slowly toward his roomie, Scott smirked, "Then you can, when we get to step two."

"What's step one?" Lance wondered. Done explaining, Scott demonstrated by softly running a hand up Lance's arm. Lance watched his friend's hand travel up his arm as far as he could then locked eyes with Scott. The slightly taller, older boy moved closer and placed the first tender kiss on Lance's mouth. Lance returned it, trying to copy it as best he could. Scott kissed Lance again, with only the tip of his tongue brushing Lance's lips. It tickled and Lance uncontrollably giggled. Moving back, Scott grinned. Lance giggled, "Obviously you've practiced step one."

Shaking his head, Scott assured, "Only in my dreams, man. I made the first move, now it's your turn." Wrapping his arms around Scott, Lance planted a deep, lingering kiss; tasting lips, tongue, teeth and mouth, causing both of them to breathe through their noses. When the kiss broke, Scott chuckled, "Whoa! I thought maybe I was moving too fast for you, but I guess not!"

Turning beet red and vigorously shaking his head, Lance giggled, "Was it okay?"

"Incredible!" Scott assured.

"I would've kissed you last night, before we went to bed, but thought you'd slug me," Lance giggled.

Scott smiled, "We're still thinking the exact same things, Lance. I would've kissed you last night, but thought you'd freak out on me."

Relieved, Lance sighed and let some truth slip out. "I wouldn't let myself consider this before. We like all the same music, play some of the same tunes; we're already teaching each other songs, and you don't treat me like I'm younger than you at all. I want to learn everything with you. Just cos I'm scared doesn't mean I don't want to do this with you... ya know?"

Scott nodded, "I know. It's only a little weird when I think of it. Like, what might happen if..." He let his hands travel down Lance's back to his butt. His right hand gave Lance's left butt cheek a firm squeeze.

Jumping in place, directly against Scott's front, Lance's eyes widened. He giggled, "I haven't moved away, so I must've liked it, from you, I guess."

"See, that's what I mean," Scott chortled. "I think of kissing you, and it's weird, but the reality was it was really nice. I think of goosing your ass, and it's weird, but the reality is that now I want to touch more of you." He paused, and then grinned, "Holding you close like this feels really good. Your heart is beating just as fast as mine, I can feel it. I would've hugged you Saturday, but then Paulie showed up.

Instead of giving a hug, we both wound up on the ground with a VI Panda on top of us."

Lance wanted to say so much, but couldn't find words to express himself without talking for an hour. He reached up and gave Scott a second deep kiss, pushing his taller friend backward a step. The whole time he was kissing Scott, Lance hoped and prayed that his message of complete acceptance was being clearly received.

After a moment and muted chuckles, Scott let Lance push him back again, and kept slowly moving back, until they were standing at the foot of his bed. By the second backward step, Scott knew precisely where they would eventually wind up. Lance broke the kiss, giggling, "Look where we are."

Surprised again with Lance's actions, Scott laughed, "Ya know what? Fuck it! I don't care anymore if I can't give you a descent hand-job or blow-job. I promise, I'll learn exactly what makes you crazy. I'm falling in love with you, Lance. I was so scared to think that, never mind say it."

Lance nodded, "I'll have to agree, screw all the worries. I feel perfect like this, real close together. I love being held by you, and holding you here, against me. It's not so surprising, now that I think about it. If this is what the Core Rimmers feel like, no wonder they travel in pairs all the damn time."

Scott checked, "Do you want to try it, being boyfriends, I mean?"

Nodding, Lance grinned, "After kisses like that, we already are, it seems," and then tried to shove Scott over, so he'd fall back on his bed. It didn't work; Scott only wobbled.

Scott evilly snickered. Lance cackled and the battle began to see who would land on the bed first. Being two inches taller and about fifteen pounds heavier, Scott eventually won the battle of the bed, and the subsequent battles for Lance's sandals and clothes. He then stripped in record time and climbed onto the bed, over Lance, softly checking, "You've got a chubby?"

"Yeah, that was fun," Lance giggled. "You do too, it seems. You're pokin' out of your foreskin."

Carefully lying down on top of Lance, Scott smiled, "If I ask you something, promise you'll tell the truth?"

"Uh, we're naked on your bed," Lance cackled. "I think I can promise that easily enough."

"How far do you want to go?"

"All the way and everything," Lance blushed, "if not today then soon. If this is going to work, we need to know what it's all like. I just don't know all the specifics, ya know? I've never had any friend like you before. During the shower Friday night, and every shower since, I thought stuff about you that I've never ever thought before. I'll admit that I pictured you and me rollin' around together last night. It's all scary, man; thinking about the stuff I'm thinking and feeling; dicks in hands, mouths and butts, I mean."

Lowering all the way down, Scott whispered in Lance's ear, "I want it all too, everything and every way. But I want it more than good for both of us. It's gotta be great, cos I really don't wanna fuck it up by hurting you, or being hurt by you, only cos we're dumb virgins. Agreed?" When Lance nodded and whispered approval, Scott asked, "Would you get pissed if I asked Mike for a few recommendations?"

"I'd rather talk to Drew or Corey," Lance confided. "I just feel like they're the best two to ask, since they're younger, but married, and were probably where we are now not so long ago."

"Then you talk to one or both of them, and I'll talk to Mike. Between what you learn and what I learn, we'll be kewl."

"It's gonna be a real hot night tonight," Lance giggled. Wide-eyed and rapidly nodding, Scott evilly snickered, and then dove down to munch on Lance's neck. Cringing from tickles, Lance howled laughing. He couldn't get Scott to stop either. Before hyperventilating, Lance figured he had to fight fire with fire, and reached up to nibble and suck on Scott's neck. In seconds, both were loudly laughing, and only occasionally getting nibbles or sloppy wet sucks in.

After taking a breather to cuddle, Scott teased, "Gonna squeeze your lemon, boy."

Getting the Led Zeppelin reference, Lance giggled, "Make the juice run down my leg?"

Sliding down Lance's body, Scott shook his head, teasing, "Over my hand or in my mouth." He soon had a hand wrapped around Lance's circumcised bone and inspected it up close. Wondering what was going to happen next, Lance's wide eyes watched his best friend's every movement. The new sensation of someone else's hand firmly stroking his rod caused a guttural groan to escape. Scott checked, "Okay?"

"Friggin' awesome," Lance panted. Scott returned to his inspection. Having never been in a similar situation, everything was brand new. He didn't expect another guy's cock to feel so warm, look so perfect or smell so intoxicating. Lance's pubes were the same color as his hair, light brown. Scott lowered his face closer and gave a tentative lick. It didn't taste of anything; like wetting a finger to turn a page of a book. He licked again, longer and slower this time, to be certain he could finish what he was about to start. At the warm, wet lick, and subsequent coolness, Lance shivered, "Oh God, Scott. That feels awesome, man. Do just that, as long as you want."

"Yeah?" Scott chortled.

"Definitely!" Lance cheered.

"Ya want some too?"

"Definitely!" Lance giggled, "You have got to know what that feels like."

Shifting around so they could progress together, on their sides and with plenty of access, Scott sniggered, "Judging by the way you're shaking, it must feel great."

Dizzily nodding, Lance reached for Scott's hardness. It was as if Scott's two previous quick experiences never happened. Scott reasoned that they were quick because they were meaningless. The girl and the guy were only acquaintances that Scott barely knew. Time already spent with Lance far exceeded both his other times combined. It dawned on him that it was probably a safe bet that neither wanted him as a boyfriend, they only wanted sex. He had never even kissed the guy or the girl. Being with Lance was much more important. Just feeling Lance's hand on his dick caused Scott to gasp.

Lance had no issue with foreskin and was soon discovering that even with a stiffy, the flesh could still completely cover the head. This was the greatest first time; far better than he had ever dared imagine. Foreskin was different, and Lance could see how it attached, rolling over and back off the head. He gave the length a good long lick.

Moaning, Scott repeatedly blinked, wondering if his brain had melted and would ooze out of his ears. Lance giggled at Scott's reactions. Realizing he was being goofed on, Scott smirked at Lance and took the unsaid dare by licking completely around the glans of Lance's throbbler. Lance was sure something snapped inside his head. Ravenously, he engulfed a comfortable mouthful of Scott and twirled his tongue around.

Scott softly instructed, "That's really kewl, man. Pull the skin back and forth like that, yeah. It's great both ways, covered and uncovered." He then dove onto Lance's cock to share the same process and good feelings. Explorations continued to scrotums. Lance had only a couple of scattered hairs on his sack, so Scott licked the wrinkled flesh and carefully sucked each testicle. Even though Scott was a little hairier, Lance again enthusiastically repeated his friend's actions. They then took the first looks at pink, puckering sphincters. Both had brown hair and brown pubes, even down there. Scott wet a finger and gently rubbed Lance's orifice, pausing only to ask, "How's that?"

"Really nice," Lance softly replied. He wet his middle finger, and then said, "Here, check it out." He rubbed, tapped and then carefully inserted only the fingertip.

Pulling his face out from between Lance's legs, Scott sighed, "Really, really nice." He then called for his new boyfriend. "Com'ere, sexy lover boy."

Lance worried, "Is it too funky down there, Scott?" and pulled his head out to see Scott's expression.

"Not in the least," Scott firmly replied. "I showered with you, ate with you and we've been together all morning. Nothin's stinky; you smell and taste awesome. I only wanted to see... to look in your eyes... to remind myself it's really you that I'm doin' this with."

Smiling, nodding and sitting up, Lance crawled over and lay on top of Scott. Gently running his fingers through Scott's shorter and darker brown hair, Lance warmly smiled, "It's no dream, but it sure feels like one. It's me you've been touching, and you're the one I'm touching. Everything you've done that I did too, I wanted to do.

"How many times can I think something you say is kewl, something you show me on guitar is better than my way? Who did I choose to sleep beside Friday night and have as a roommate? The likes have way outweighed the dislikes from the first minutes. I've prob'ly been falling in love with you since we walked out of New York. I wouldn't let myself admit it, but now I want you to know, I really love everything about you."

"I love you too," Scott whispered, and sealed it with a series of varying kisses. Lance accepted and returned as many kisses as he received. Becoming desperate, the two teens started grinding against each other, resolutely calling each others' names between kisses, leading to their first uncontrollable orgasms as a couple, with open eyes and open mouths.

Giggling with relief, neither could believe they climaxed so quickly. It wasn't what either had thought would happen when they walked into the room; Scott expected and wanted to suck dick, and Lance would've been happy with jackin' off, but it was still the most intense sexual experience either had ever had. They shared those expectations and firmly assured what they had done was better, although neither knew why exactly. More important to them at that point was fulfilling the others fantasy. They did all that and enjoyed themselves immensely. After three orgasms each, they cuddled on Scott's bed. Lance really felt fantastic in Scott's embrace, with his head resting on his friend's shoulder. Scott liked it very much too, but wanted to try reversing, so he could cuddle against Lance. Once settled with Lance's arm around him, Scott had to admit it was the better place to be.

Checking the clock on the night stand, Lance sighed, "I don't want to move, but it's getting near lunch time. Prez said they'd be back in two hours, and it's quarter to eleven."

Rubbing the crusty dried cum spot on Lance's belly, Scott chuckled, "And we must smell like we've been having sex. Since no one else is around, we could probably have a shower."

Lance giggled, "We need to and I really want to, but..."

After waiting a few moments, Scott widely smiled and finished, "But we're gonna be hard as steel the whole time?"

"Yeah," Lance giggled.

After thinking a few moments, Scott grinned, "We have two choices; chance a shower, and go to lunch looking and smelling innocent..." Lance evilly snickered. Scott giggled, "Or we go to lunch stinking like cum and sweat."

Lance laughed, "The shower is a risk we have to take."

Scott smiled, "Agreed. If anyone comes in the toilet or shower, the first thing we do is hug and hide our bones."

"Kewl," Lance giggled, "but if we get caught, my bone and the rest of me will shrivel into the smallest corner."

Propping himself up on one arm, Scott confirmed, "Was what we did good?"

"It was awesome!" Lance cheered.

"I want to do it all again, and more."

"Me too."

"We'll protect each other."

"Always, man. We love each other."

Scott leaned over for a short, tender kiss. Lance returned a deeper, passionate kiss. Grinning like madmen at the experiment that had apparently become a lifestyle change, they got out of bed and went to the door. Like a city thief in the night, Scott stuck his head out the doorway, checked the hallway, turned and nodded at Lance, and then took his hand. They ran for the lavatory and into the mob shower, laughing and giggling the entire way.

Once under the shower spray, they started bathing each other. To keep their intimacy and presence secret, they only whispered affirmations that their friendship was growing into a serious love affair. Beginning to relax, Scott showed Lance how to wash his uncircumcised dick. Getting excited and forgetting where they were, they locked eyes and locked lips, caressing the other's erection and jewels. The world around them vanished. It wasn't their intention to climax, but neither would break the kiss or release the other's erection.

From the changing area, Chris Stokley gasped, "Whoops!" and spun around, toward Jay and the wall.

Their trance shattered, Lance's and Scott's heads snapped to the sound, and they saw Chris and Jay. As one voice, the two startled lovers shouted, "AW FUCK!" and slammed together, hiding their erections as previously planned.

Not the least bit disturbed, Jay took his T-shirt off and tossed it on the bench.

Moving as one with Lance, Scott reached to turn the water off. Embarrassed far beyond his thirteen years, Lance began sincerely apologizing.

Jay grinned, "Don't even try, you're not sorry."

Chris smirked, "Jay, be nice."

Together, Lance and Scott began shuffling toward the shower exit, and both profusely apologized.

"Well, I sure wouldn't be sorry," Jay told Chris.

The two long time lovers blocked the shower exit and loudly demanded, "CHILL AND RELAX!" Holding on tightly to Scott, as if his life depended on him, Lance quivered in fear and hid his flushed face on Scott's shoulder. All Lance could picture was Chris pounding him unconscious, and Jay turning the lump on the floor into soup.

Jay grinned, "That's why we're here, guys."

Paying close attention to Scott and Lance, Chris nodded, "Since everyone else is busy..."

"We decided to chance it too," Jay smiled.

Locking eyes with Scott, Chris gently shared, "Of all the guys we expected might be here, you two weren't even on the list."

Holding Lance's head down and his body firmly against his own, Scott nervously stammered, "Well... uh... we just... alone... and then... umm... and before lunch... so-oo..."

Jay checked with Chris for help interpreting. Chris reached to hold Lance's and Scott's wet shoulders, and then confirmed, "You just started and discovered you're more than friends?" Feeling his face flush more intensely, Scott slowly nodded. Chris smiled, "Kewl. Listen and hear me, okay?" Again, Scott nodded. Chris admitted, "We're here for the exact same reason, to make love."

Jay gently called, "Lance?"

"This is so fucked up," Lance softly whimpered.

"No, it isn't," Jay assured. Since Scott seemed a little more composed, Jay asked, "Do you love Lance?"

Nodding, Scott replied, "Yeah, a lot."

Barely believing what he had heard Scott say, Lance's head turned enough to see Scott's hyper-serious expression. Tears that were pooling in Lance's eyes flowed freely down his cheeks and onto Scott's shoulder.

Pointing into the mob shower, Jay gently begged, "Please, stay? We can deal with this easily."

Releasing Lance and Scott, Chris turned to his lover, blinking, "We can?"

Jay chuckled, "I'm burning up, man! You know I am."

"It's their first day," Chris grinned. "I can't understand how they spent two nights in the same room, but only this morning did they decide to try anything."

Nodding, Jay reminded, "It's not our first day. We can relieve their embarrassment or let it fester. Sorry, but we live in the same dorm and the same hall, two doors away from each other. We have to fix what we accidentally screwed up." He turned to Scott, saying, "It's better to become closer friends than barely be able to face one another, right?"

Scott checked with Lance, carefully asking, "Can you do this?"

Barely lifting his face up, Lance sniffled, "Jay's right. We have to try, or we'll wind up avoiding each other, running in the opposite direction."

Jay smiled, "We'll make it worth your while, I promise."

Glaring at his long time lover, Chris cackled, "Ya wanna rephrase that, Jay?"

Hiding his face on Scott's shoulder, Lance began giggling. Scott sniggered, "It did sound pretty bad, Jay."

Untying his board shorts, Jay chuckled, "The important point is, it's not bad. It's who we are. The Core Rimmers told us to be brothers." He slipped his shorts and boxers off, then tossed them onto the bench, telling Chris, "By sharing three years of history, we can make this better." On his way into the shower, Jay tapped Lance on the back, prompting, "Come on, back under the water, so I can explain a few dozen things."

When Lance nodded, Scott led them back under the same shower. Chris began undressing. Jay turned on the shower across from Lance and Scott. Once he was soaked, Jay turned to face his two new brothers, sharing, "Do you want to know what's bad? Being in love for three years and not feeling comfortable to show it is bad. Knowing you're gay, and happy that you are, and happier that you have the best boyfriend in the world, but feeling the need to always hide all of it, is bad. Telling the most important guy in the world, 'don't hold my hand, here and there and those places too, because someone might see and figure us out,' is very bad. Saying, 'don't try to kiss me anywhere, except behind closed doors in your bedroom or mine,' is extremely bad. Saturday morning, when I was brought here, I learned it doesn't have to be that way anymore. It was like having every worry I've carried suddenly shoved off my back. During the day Saturday, Chris showed me around this base, and for the first time, I kissed him in public. Every chance I get, I'm gonna hold his hand and kiss him, simply because I finally can without anyone caring. A lifetime of worries began falling off and away. I've got three years of major fuck-ups to fix."

Chris padded naked into the shower. Jay glowed and proudly beamed, "Look at this sexy guy!" Pausing about two meters away, Chris glared at Jay like he barely knew him. Jay prompted, "Really, look at all of him, guys." Seeing Lance and Scott giving Chris a good once over, Jay shared, "He was cute when we were eleven. Cute has become almost blindingly hot. Dozens of times Chris could've told me, 'the hell with you!' Dozens of times, I had to fix what my big mouth fucked up. The number of times I could've lost him forever is horrifying; that's exceedingly bad."

Barely believing what Jay was saying, Chris sighed, "You're making mountains out of molehills, Jay." He went directly to his lover.

Sliding close to Chris and taking him into his arms, Jay seriously said, "They're molehills now, but they were the Himalayas at the time."

"We've gone over this the last two days," Chris reminded.

"Now I'm proving how serious I am," Jay smiled. "If you want me to, I'll scream it to this entire base; I repeatedly fucked up."

Shaking his head, Chris smiled, "You don't need to; it's over and done, way in the past. The way you've been since getting here proves it."

Jay leaned closer for a tender kiss that was passionately returned. Jay softly said, "For each time I denied my love, I'll declare it, starting right now, with these two guys." Stepping back and exposing his hardening dick, Jay told Lance and Scott, "Lesson one, do as I say and not as I've done. When you really love someone, tell him, all the time, whenever the mood strikes you. Don't wait for an argument to say it; it becomes a desperate plea when you haven't said it enough."

Chris giggled, "It's the concussion, guys. Jay hasn't been well since an apartment building fell on him." Scott and Lance softly chortled.

Jay sniggered, "It knocked some sense into me."

"Well, one of us needs serious psychological help," Chris giggled. More loudly, Lance and Scott chuckled.

Jay grinned, "See, because I haven't said three simple little words enough, he thinks I've lost my mind, now that I'm saying private things in public." Trying to sound disappointed, but failing miserably and wearing a wicked grin, Jay huffed, "I guess I'll just have to show Chris how much I love him." Turning around, Jay backed up to Chris and ground his butt against Chris' hips, madly chuckling, "You'd better believe I'm his bottom, especially now with this damned cast. Have you guys gotten this far yet?"

Going into a giggling fit, Lance vigorously shook his head. Slipping in front of Lance and reaching back to hold him in place, Scott duplicated Jay's grind and chuckled, "It's next on our list of things to do." Cracking up, Lance blushed crimson.

"Great!" Chris giggled, "Your insanity is contagious, Jay."

Glancing back over his shoulder, Jay grinned, "I've only just begun." Like an Olympic skater, Jay spun around behind Chris. Exposing his lover's erection and grinding his woody against Chris' ass, Jay gleamed, "The game is dare-match-dare. Are you guys playing that game?"

Sliding in front of Scott and reversing the grind, Lance giggled, "Yup. I did everything Scott did."

Jay sniggered, "Very kewl. I was beginning to wonder if you would get into this, Lance."

Chuckling insanely, Scott playfully wondered, "What're you doin', Lance?"

"Recovering from the heart attack I just had, and what they're doin'," Lance giggled.

Chris grinned and confirmed, "You two guys just started today?"

Slightly out of sync, Lance and Scott answered, "Yeah."

Lance blushed, "We've barely been alone a whole hour."

Jay smiled, "But you haven't had intercourse?"

Scott blushed and sang, "Not yet."

Chris smiled, "I'm Jay's bottom boy. In the dare-match-dare game, nothing is really out of bounds. You decide what's kewl and when." He paused then giggled, "Of course, I never expected this to happen. Since it has, and you're both obviously ready, I'll strongly recommend careful and slow penetration. We started before we turned thirteen, and found careful and slow is the only way."

Sliding in front of Chris again, Jay intensified his grind, causing his cock to crazily swing. Jay checked, "Are you guys getting the picture?"

Slipping back behind Scott and holding his hips, Lance confirmed, "We're each bottoms and tops, all the time?" Jay nodded.

Scott asked, "It's not like one leads and the other follows?"

Chris replied by posing the question; "Real life isn't that way, so why expect anything different now? Just like one of you might have an off day, but the other is doing just fine, so get used to being versatile in the sack. When either of us has had a bad day, the other knows it, so we do what's necessary to fix the problem, at least temporarily."

Jay added, "You guys set the pace and the rules. From what's been said, I got the impression that Scott led the way, this time. The next time around, let Lance lead." Showing off the cast on his wrist, Jay smirked, "This damn thing is slowing me way down, but the best part is, I'm getting some great bottom action for the next week, simply because it's easier with this cast."

Chris sniggered, "And next week, my butt or my legs are in the air as often as possible." He suddenly shoved Jay and loudly reminded, "DAMMIT! We'll be in school by then!"

"Oh, really?" Jay innocently chuckled.

At Chris' twisted smirk, Lance and Scott cracked up. They decided to turn off the shower and leave the room, so Chris could get Jay back. In a flash, Chris jumped and landed on Jay's back.

Under attack from Chris and cracking up, Jay quickly asked, "Are you dudes wanting to be out, to more than us?"

Picking up two towels from the stack, Scott shrugged at Lance, waiting for his decision. Taking one towel, Lance moved closer to Scott and stole a tender kiss. Holding Lance in place against him, Scott turned to answer, "Yeah, it's kewl, Jay."

With his feet off the floor and still hanging onto Jay's back, Chris prompted, "Let's have lunch together then."

"Kewl," Lance answered.

Scott replied, "We'll see ya later then." Taking the towels with them, Lance and Scott left their two brothers wrestling in the shower.

Alone in their room drying off, and at last comfortable enough to drop the bullshit along with the towels, Lance grinned, "So, I guess we don't have to talk to Mike, Drew or Corey anymore."

Nodding, Scott chuckled, "Let's get their opinions anyway. We also need to talk to Horacio at lunch. We'll need lube and rubbers, and he's got 'em."

Lance widely smiled, "You told them that you love me, a lot."

"I do," Scott grinned. "My boyfriend is my best friend."

Going to wrap his arms around his new boyfriend, Lance giggled, "Ask for two dildos too, smaller than either of us. You've got a mouthful that will stretch my skinny ass."

"You've got length I gagged on, twice!" Scott sniggered. He leaned over and nibbled on Lance's ear, softly assuring, "I'll get used to it soon enough. I know I want more of you."

"Now?" Lance incredulously giggled.

"Now we jam, and then we have lunch," Scott chuckled, "and then this afternoon, you're my dessert!"

"So much for exploring," Lance grinned.

"We are exploring, each other."

"I want beefy Scottish sausage."

Scott giggled, "Before we jam?"

"After," Lance corrected, "with the dildos, lube and rubbers."

"Kewl."

"Can I play your Strat? You can play my Les Paul."

Going to the guitars, Scott giggled, "Now I know we're serious! First we swap mouthfuls of spit, then cum, and now we're sharing our axes too?" Sadly shaking his head, Scott joked, "I must really love you."

"Hey!" Lance laughed, "Don't forget I love you back!"

Pulling the first of two guitar cases out of the corner, Scott teased, "Guaranteed by tomorrow morning, neither of us will ever forget it."

The only reason Scott wasn't immediately tickled is because he was holding Lance's Les Paul case. At the first opportunity, when the cases were on his bed, but the guitars not yet out, Lance started a tickling free-for-all. As Jay had suggested, Scott allowed Lance to lead the way, wherever he was planning. All Lance really wanted was more kisses. Landing on top of Scott on the other bed, Lance freely shared his love mouth-to-mouth, and received Scott's tight hug and desperate moan, "Damn, I love you so much!"

Pulling back to look into Scott's eyes, Lance giggled, "That's all I wanted to hear."

"You were so scared when they walked in on us. That scared me way more than anything they saw or thought."

"Why?"

"I thought maybe you'd change your mind about us."

"Never," Lance firmly declared. "I couldn't hide from you. This is where I need and want to be, holding you and being held by you."

Scott smiled, "Doing regular stuff seems a little weird too, huh?"

"Yeah, it does," Lance giggled, "but that's what we do, besides suckin' face." Scott sniggered and softly slapped a bare butt cheek. Lance gasped then cackled, "Do that again!"

Cracking up, Scott laughed, "Get off me or I will. Once I get started, it may be hours before I leave your pretty butt alone." Still cackling, Lance rolled off Scott and the bed.

They got the guitars out and started playing a twelve-bar blues in A. From Lance, Scott learned new lead licks. Lance learned new chord patterns from Scott. For about half an hour, they sat on their desk chairs with their male bits hanging out, playing their guitars without amplifiers. When they were ready to take a break, they were horny and hungry. Rather than chance making a mess that would require another interrupted shower, they dressed and went to the CIC dining room.

At Sullivan's Island, Aunt Mary's lunch had been devoured. Rikko was on the dining room floor with Fluffy and some kittens. Still sitting at the table, Joey, Paul, Reyes and Ryan were wrapping up their plans for the afternoon. Also at the table were Rich and John Murphy, and KC, Chauncey and Fred Eckhart.

In the weeks since their arrival in South Carolina, neither John nor Rich had been surfing. They decided to join the party going to Hawaii. Once Joey was safe on the Pacific Rim Division base, they would take a trip off base to surf for a few hours. They would then meet Joey on base before returning to Sullivan's Island.

While that conversation spun around the table, KC asked Fred, "Have you ever played any musical instruments?"

Fred grinned, "Only pianos, for family sing-a-longs at Christmas, Independence Day, and other gatherings like that."

Sitting between Fred and KC, partially paying attention to Rikko, Chauncey noticed his brother and KC, smiling at each other, but not saying another word. Waving his hands before their faces, Chauncey giggled at them. KC grinned, "I was just thinking of practicing guitar for a while." Before doing anything else dumb where everyone would notice, KC stood with his empty glass and left the dining room.

At eleven-twenty, the morning test was finished. All the kids walked out of school feeling like they had played games or watched cartoons and movie clips for two hours. From a respectful distance, the teachers watched the kids, joking about the morning's pointless test concerns and worries. Everyone was surprised to various extents. A beeline was made to the CIC dining room.

Leading the pack, Sean and Troy were in a bit of a hurry, wondering how Billy and their sons were doing. AJ, Jerry, Kaleo and Tory just wanted to see their sons. The remaining Core Rimmers found it cute, and now knew what they looked like a week earlier when racing to find their kids.

Almost everyone else went directly into the CIC to get lunch, except Corey, Drew and Leo. Having a stray thought during the test turn into a revelation of sorts, Leo asked for a few minutes alone with his dad and pop. Knowing that Friday dinners and Monday lunches included pizza, Geoff and Lenny raced to the dining room door. Corey, Drew and Leo took the long way around the auditorium and the CIC, so they could talk.

Worried silly, Leo told Drew, "This morning, you asked how I felt after your shower and before we went to sleep." He wondered, "Did I understand what you were asking, or jump too fast?"

"That's exactly what I was asking, Leo," Drew proudly replied.

Only partly relieved, Leo bluntly asked, "Did you think you were molesting me?"

Drew sighed, "We're in a weird situation, because of our ages, Leo. Part of me did think we went a little too far, but your responses last night and this morning made me feel better."

Corey carefully reminded, "I told you that you could easily be our friend, Leo. I'm surprised that you're calling us dad and pop so quickly."

Leo smirked, "Because you wanted the jobs as much as I wanted you to have 'em. Yeah, the age thing is a little strange, but it's so good too. I couldn't have had so much fun learning the facts of life with my mom or dad, as I did with you, pop. You two did stuff for me last night; it wasn't done to me, I all but directly asked for it. We are friends, and we are family, willingly adopting each other. I won't be asking you more than questions about boyfriends and the next steps. You're a couple, and I ain't looking to squeeze myself into that picture. I want a boyfriend of my own, to have what you two have, and all my uncles have, and the other Core Rimmers have too. My younger brothers know sex stuff that I don't."

"Didn't, past tense," Corey briefly corrected.

Confused, Leo glanced at his pop and then his dad.

Drew grinned, "You know plenty, Leo. From what you've said, I know for certain that if your folks had ever met our folks, they'd be friends and we'd be friends. You know how to care about people. The only thing you didn't know was the sexual stuff. Geoff and Lenny learned it in the wrong order and wrong way; first the sex and without any caring. The right way is caring first and then the sex."

"You've gotta have the closeness to be able to deal with the sex," Corey smiled. "Just like our first time, and how much we talked afterward and for days later, you're talking to us about your first time. And you'll do all this again, with your boyfriend. Like you wanting know how we feel, he'll want to know that you're okay with what was done. You'll want to know if he's okay, and if you did it right, or if you could do it better. First the friendship, and then the fun, in that order."

Drew said, "Keith told me once that someone you have sex with, but don't talk with, is just a sex-buddy, and not a boyfriend. Sex-buddies can still become boyfriends, and boyfriends can fall apart and away, becoming sex-buddies. You and your boyfriend talking keeps the friendship going, so you're more than sex-buddies. Fail to tell the truth and you're in trouble."

"It takes hours to talk about every first time experience," Corey stated with certainty. "There's immediate questions and answers, and then additional stuff that has to be talked about. I taught you only one major lesson about oral sex – covering your teeth with your lips. The rest you'll learn about with a boyfriend."

Drew checked with Leo, asking, "You're comfy thinking about intercourse too?"

Blushing, Leo shrugged and giggled, "Only thinking about it. I can't see myself as either top or bottom, so that's way off in the future. Hugs and kisses are all that seems doable for now."

Squeezing Drew's hand, Corey reminded Leo, "Years of hugs, leading to months of kissing, leading to months of masturbation, months of oral, and only now have we reached the last, best stage. It's all worth the time it takes." He giggled, "I was in a rush, Leo. I would've gone from hugs to humping in four days." Drew and Leo cracked up and so did Corey. When he could speak again, Corey giggled, "Be like Drew. Taking your time is better, believe me!"

Drew chuckled, "I'm only curious, but did Geoff or Lenny try to wash your dick this morning?"

"OMIGOD, NO!" Leo gushed. Blushing, he softly giggled, "After how quick it happened last night, I wouldn't let them. I felt weird enough with all three of us sportin' wood, seeing them and them seeing me like that."

Drew offered, "We've watched Geoff and Lenny bathe. They know how to only wash a dick. They'll get silly about it, but now it's a game to them. Exactly three quick passes with a soapy hand, rinse, and then they return to teasing and playing grab-tag."

"Exactly where little dudes like them should be," Corey smiled.

Leo nodded agreement. Another stray thought crossed his mind, prompting him to ask, "Dad, was I too heavy to lift yesterday?"

Drew chuckled, "I got us to the chair in the nick of time."

Leo giggled, "Kewl, I won't ask for a piggy back ride then." Evilily snickering, Corey and Drew rounded on Leo. Before Leo knew it, each father had one of his legs in an arm, and their other arms behind his back, lifting him off the ground. Holding onto their shoulders, Leo happily cheered, "This works great!"

Corey smiled, "If you're into the idea, have lunch with my mom and dad. Tonight, have dinner with Drew's parents."

"Kewl, I'll do that," Leo giggled.

While that was going on outside, AJ, Jerry, Kaleo, Tory, Sean and Troy saw other newbies in the kitchen chow line, and sitting at tables already eating, but didn't find their sons. Walking through dimensional doors to Oneula Beach, they found all twelve sons and some other boys still in the rec room there. Jason was surrounded by a bunch of eight-, nine-, and ten-year-old boys, including Kenny Hunnicutt and Stan Given. Jimmy, Scott, Leonard, Marv, Mark and Russ had a pack of rug rats around them. All six new fathers proudly watched the kids interacting. Initially, Billy wasn't seen, because Robbie had decided he was comfortable standing behind his boyfriend, with both arms wrapped around his belly.

Suddenly, Robbie stopped telepathically communicating with Billy and turned around. Billy looked around for the problem, making himself visible to his fathers. Troy's jaw dropped to his chest. Between his lover's obvious surprise and the wide grins of the other four Core Rimmers, Sean sputtered then completely lost it and howled laughing.

Giggling, Robbie told Billy, 'Remember how confused Jason was earlier this morning? I think Troy's twice or three times worse.'

Displaying the PADD to his dad and pop, Billy giggled, "Alden got me this to keep track of games and rank them."

Still speechless, Troy grinned and slowly nodded. Sean howled, "Alden got you a boyfriend too?"

"It's not my fault!" Alden giggled from the speakers.

Briefly looking up at the ceiling, Billy blushed. Robbie planted a kiss on the back of Billy's head, and then explained what had initially happened earlier that morning, minus his brothers' telepathic remarks. He then shrugged, "We were holding hands, but then Billy needed both hands to work the PADD. This is where I've been ever since."

Nodding, Billy giggled, "It works out pretty good too. Robbie gets stuff from his brothers, and the Steibs, and the Stoeher twins too, then passes it to me, vocally or telepathically." Hanging his face and rubbing his eyes, Troy could only quietly wonder.

Robbie told Sean and Troy, "Billy's a telepathic receiver, at the very least. He's heard every word sent to him. He knows a lot about me, my family, and I know some stuff about him and his family. I know how you two guys became a couple, and how you adopted Billy and his brothers. What started out pretty good has been getting even better."

Billy nodded and joked, "Yeah, I think I'll keep Robbie around."

Robbie incredulously laughed, "You think?"

Blushing fiercely, Billy giggled, "I've been waiting over two hours for a kiss." Robbie stepped back, took hold of Billy's shoulders and turned him around. Instantly, they were face-to-face and grabbing hold of one another. Anxious and nervous, Billy's heart rate doubled in mere seconds. Robbie planted an open mouthed whopper of a kiss. They held it for a long minute, only breaking it off when the room of giggling turned into applause.

Clapping his hands along with the others, Sean told Troy, "Insecurities are bursting like balloons, I guess."

Also applauding, Troy found his tongue and smiled, "I expected something positive, but not this." He and Sean stopped clapping and moved closer to Billy and Robbie. Seeing their dads going to their older brother, Jason, Jimmy and Scott prompted their groups to get lunch, then went to join their fathers, and Billy and Robbie.

The new young couple remained hugging. Billy smiled at his dad and pop, sharing, "I told Robbie a bunch of stuff about my old life. He don't care."

Robbie told Billy, Sean and Troy, "Course I don't. Richie and Ronnie had it like that too. We talked with my folks about that, all Friday night, and privately shared more, on-and-off all day Saturday. With Ralphie on my side, we've got that all out of the way now. It hasn't been mentioned since the adoptions yesterday, now that I think about it." He softly giggled, "I didn't wake up thinking about a boyfriend, but I got lucky."

"I'm luckier," Billy warmly smiled, and stole a quick kiss before breaking into giggles again.

"Let's all have lunch together," Troy prompted. "I'd like to know how the remainder of the morning went." The rest of the family and Robbie agreed. On the way out of the Oneula Beach rec room, they decided to remain there for their meals. Kaleo's and Jerry's families agreed it was a good idea and also stayed at Oneula Beach. This was their new home and it was time to start treating it as such.

Back at the Ewa Beach dining room, Prez, Keith, Derrick and Mike noticed only some of the level two orphans were there, and that the rest of their Core team mates hadn't returned. That allowed them to sit and eat their meals with their sons. Reyes' small group had returned from AI Division HQ. John and Rich Murphy had already left to go surfing. Sitting at a table for twelve, Reyes was with Paul, Ryan and Joey. They were with Randy, Dillon, Jonah and Gage, who were chattering about school and the tests they had taken. Placing their lunch trays down, Mike and Derrick took two chairs at the table.

As soon as his dad and pop sat, Reyes smiled, "Fred's been checked and upgraded. His sense of humor hasn't changed."

Seeing only a soup bowl before Reyes, and salad plates before Paul and Ryan, Derrick nodded and wondered, "Eating light today, dudes?"

Munching on a cheeseburger, Joey broke into giggles. Paul grinned, "It's our second lunch in just over an hour."

Ryan nodded, "Our mom fed us another huge smorgasbord." He paused to glance at Joey, and chuckled, "Joey is a bottomless pit."

Glancing at both his fathers, Reyes shared, "We'd like to go out tonight, off base. What do I need to do?"

"All three of you?" Mike checked. Reyes, Paul and Ryan grinned and nodded. Mike answered, "Take your security and two of mine, since there are three of you to keep safe."

Reyes confirmed, "That's it?"

Nodding, Derrick smiled, "That's it. What's the plan?"

"We were thinking the Ocean House at Waikiki," Reyes offered. "It's always been nice and has good food. We can dress casual too."

Paul asked, "Is security really necessary?"

Mike nodded, "Definitely. Think of the Clan more like Vulcan diplomatic facilities, Paul. Each of us are citizens of Earth and of Vulcan. Also, Reyes is part of our leadership team, and you and Ryan are wards of the Clan, with family in South Carolina and here."

"It's just precautionary, dudes," Derrick added. Noticing Joey eying the pizza on his plate, Derrick grinned, "There's more where this came from, Joey."

Rapidly nodding, Joey swallowed then giggled, "I'm gonna ged some doo, Uncah Dewwick."

Mike chuckled, "The pizza at the beach house was okay. This is ten times better, Joey."

Widening his eyes, Joey inhaled the remainder of his cheeseburger and stood. Still chewing, he hurried toward the kitchen.

"Bottomless," Ryan giggled. "He ate good at home too."

Across the room, Chris and Jay shared a table with Aaron Farris, Stephen Wickes, Roger Mosqueda, Nick Shavers, Keanu Hekekia, Liki Kealoha, Lance Kinchen, Scott Shetley, Travis McAuley and Erik Kendricks. Chris wiped his mouth and told the other boys, "Me and Jay used to be real careful of what we did in public. Now that we're here though, we've been holding hands everywhere we go together."

"We always wanted to, but couldn't," Jay smirked. "Now that we can, we almost always do."

Scott wordlessly checked with Lance. Chewing pizza, Lance shrugged and mumbled, "If ya want."

Scott grinned, "Do you want to though?"

Aaron offered, "It's not like you have to, Lance. Stephen and I are done looking around. We'll be long term, so we show it."

Stephen noticed, "Liki and Keanu don't hold hands." Glancing at them, Stephen asked, "Have you made up your minds yet?"

Nodding, Liki grinned, "It's been a real good week, so we're goin' for it."

"We tried holding hands a couple of times," Keanu explained. "It's not something we're very comfortable with yet, but we'll keep on trying. We want to, but one or the other of us suddenly feels odd actually doing it."

Liki smiled, "Trying is enough, Keanu. Don't sweat the small stuff."

Lance asked Scott, "Do you want to?"

"If you do, I do," Scott smiled.

Giggling, Lance assured, "I will if you will." Aaron, Stephen, Chris and Jay softly chortled. "What?" Lance giggled, "It's true!"

Slowly shaking his head, Aaron chuckled, "We can tell you're just starting out."

"You're still being careful," Chris sniggered.

After swallowing, Jay leaned forward to speak softly. "It starts that way," Jay told Lance, Scott, Keanu, Liki, Travis and Erik. "Telling the truth only seems rough, guys. You've all managed to say enough of it to get started, so keep on keepin' on. Every time you tell each other the truth, it helps to let the other guy know what to expect. If you can't truthfully say whether or not you really want to hold hands, what're you going to do when you're bent in half, with your partner hovering over you? He may be perfectly fine and happy, but you can't stay like that very long. It's the same on top, holding that one push-up, on top of a bouncing, soft mattress, for a couple o' minutes. One of you has to be able to say, hey, let's change positions, before my aching back bitches about it later."

Aaron also leaned forward to confide, "After our times in the orphanages, and with fosters, we go out of our way to always make it excellent. For us, the best way to start is by straddling and going for a ride. That way, the one on top has more control, how fast and how deep, and can say when it's kewl to shift into another position."

"Even if it's only for a few minutes," Stephen smiled. "The dude on top is actually bottoming, and can choose to stay in that role in another position, or he might ask for a complete reversal. You've gotta tell the truth, be glad to hear it, and respond to it. For months, pedophile scum tried to make us believe we were worthless because our parents died. The whole time, we were telling ourselves, no, they're worthless, and Joel proved that. I don't recall ever hearing a single news story about one of those fuckers; they all simply vanished, and no bitter tears were ever shed."

Aaron, Liki and Keanu stopped eating to applaud Stephen's rant. Erik, Travis, Lance, Scott, Chris and Jay also clapped their hands. Intensely blushing, Stephen laughed, "That ain't even half of what I'd like to say, but we're eating, and my folks did teach me some table manners."

Offering his fist to Stephen so they could knock knuckles, Chris smiled, "Getting back on the topic of being a couple; by talking and listening to each other, you can make what usually lasts five or ten minutes more like thirty or forty."

Travis chuckled, "Can it really last that long?"

Aaron, Stephen and Chris nodded. Jay explained, "When Chris and I were younger, it was kewl enough just going five minutes, but we weren't being truthful either. I wasn't telling him, hey, my arms and back are getting sore. Because I was uncomfortable, and didn't say anything, I wouldn't get off on it. Then it's him making it up to me so I do get off. That's kewl and all, but it's the very best is when we both get off during intercourse. No matter what the position happens to be, it's always better that way."

"We swap all the time," Chris grinned. "Especially with the cast on Jay's wrist, we have to swap roles and positions. Yesterday morning, after two entire days apart with no sex, neither of us lasted long at all. By last night, we were back in the groove and lasting thirty minutes. This morning's romp took almost forty minutes."

Nodding, Aaron giggled, "Slow and easy wake up calls are awesome."

"It's a hell of a lot better than an alarm," Stephen smirked.

Jay grinned, "Going longer than five or ten minutes requires communication, guys. Just because you started in a position doesn't mean you have to remain that way. The whole purpose is to make each other feel good, right? So, share it all and make it last. Taking more time is more fun, but say something if you'd be just as happy with a quickie."

Chris sniggered, "Yesterday morning, once Doc Andrews said it was kewl, there was no reason to say a word. We expected that first time wouldn't last very long, but we got to play both roles."

Turning to Scott, Lance sighed, "I want you, all the time now, and I want everybody to know this ain't fake."

"We've got a lot in common," Scott brightly beamed.

Erik asked, "What about condoms? Do you guys use 'em?"

Keanu nodded, "We are."

"We stopped last night," Stephen cheekily smiled.

Chris grinned, "We used to use 'em all the time, but now, after thinking Jay was dead for a day, we agreed to not bother."

Thoughtfully scowling, Travis admitted, "I think they're really uncomfortable. Erik's not quite as bad, but he's said it too."

Jay thoughtfully frowned then asked, "Trav, are you beefier than Erik?"

Travis paused to consider the question. Before his boyfriend could reply, Erik giggled, "Yeah, he is." Widely grinning at his partner, Travis turned red. "What?" Erik giggled, "I'm about a half inch longer than you, but you're at least a half inch thicker around than me."

Locking eyes with Travis, Jay chuckled, "Switch to the next larger size, bro. Length is how they measure, but thickness matters too. Just don't unroll it all, so it fits you."

Scott checked, "So the more permanent a couple you think you are, the less need for rubbers."

Jay nodded, "I don't want anybody else, male or female." Chris brightly smiled. Jay had always been the voice of reason, reminding Chris of what was kewl and where and when. Now he could tell that Jay never lied and was only dealing with high school and homophobes. Seeing Jay acting completely unconcerned about their relationship was the best part of Clan life.

Nick checked with Roger, saying, "Without isn't all that different from with. It's only a little more comfortable for both of us, I think."

"No elastic pullin' pubes out," Roger nodded, and then scowled, "but it seems we're not lasting as long again." Nick giggled and the others around the table knowingly grinned.

After clearing his throat, Keanu sighed, "Because of the orphanages, me and Liki considered ourselves more on the straight side of bisexual. The men we were with were nowhere near as fun or good as most women."

"Since getting together this past week, we're really confused," Liki shared. "We'd both like to have kids of our own, but we can still say that where we've been at all week has been really awesome, better than the men and women we were with."

"I'd love to have some kids," Jay chuckled. "Now, in the Clan, we can eventually adopt some. If you want to make babies of your own, there's ways to accomplish that and still be partners."

Chris laughed, "You're blowing me away!"

Jay smiled, "What?"

Chris squealed, "You want kids now too?"

"Course," Jay smiled. "I always have. I think most guys would admit they want to be fathers. Some admit it, do the deed, and then run away from 'em too. Here, adopting is a different deal. The kids have as much say as the parents, as it should be."

Chris hollered, "PREZ!"

Prez looked over, found Chris and replied, "What's up, Chris?"

"Someone put Maui-wowie on my pizza!" Chris laughed. Prez, Jay and half the dining room cracked up.

Mike chuckled, "You thought it was oregano, didn't you? Surprise!"

Scott checked with Lance, asking, "Are you done? Maybe we could talk with Mike now?" When Lance nodded and picked up his glass to empty it, Scott called over, "Have you got a few minutes, Mike?"

"Sure," Mike answered, "come on over, when you're ready." Leaning over nearer to Derrick, Mike whispered, "I've been expecting this since they showed up Friday."

Derrick nodded and grinned, "Here they come. It's fairly important, obviously."

Scott smiled, "How's it goin'?"

"Good," Mike grinned. He gestured to the two chairs beside him, abandoned by Dillon and Randy, saying, "Have a seat, dudes."

Saying, "Thanks," Lance and Scott sat down. Scott took the chair closest to Mike.

"We've got two issues to talk about," Scott began.

Nodding, Mike placed a hand over his forehead, mystically muttering, "At least one of 'em has to do with guitars."

Lance giggled, "You're pretty good, with a room of telepaths around."

"No brain leeches this time," Mike grinned. "We're axe wielding brothers. I fully expected this, so tell me what you'd like."

"Without amps, we can't hear what we're playing," Scott smiled.

Derrick asked, "You'll be taking music classes here too?"

Lance nodded and Scott smiled, "Definitely. That's the primary reason we chose this division."

"We've got several options open," Mike said. "First, living in the dorms, I can get both of you amps that you can even play at night, without disturbing your roomie or neighbors, by using headphones. Another possibility is, I can get you acoustic guitars for the dorms. And you can check out the auditorium at Oneula Beach. There are amps, drums and keyboards there you can use. I haven't seen them, but I expect they'll be the same sort of stuff our band got from Starfleet."

Lance loudly cheered, "KEWL!" Reyes and Joey cracked up.

At his boyfriend's reaction, Scott chuckled, "Are they alternatives, one or the other, Mike?"

Shaking his head, Mike grinned, "Music students, and all our students, no matter what their specialty, will get what they need. You'll eventually need acoustic guitars anyway. You two came with electric guitars, so I'll assume you had amps to go with them. Since you can't really rock out in the dorms, make use of the Oneula Beach auditorium when you want to blast the jams."

Before Joey bounced out of his chair, Reyes held his little android brother down, giggling, "We'll go over there with you. I promised Joey we'd jam today anyway."

"Excellent!" Lance happily gushed.

Nodding agreement, Scott chortled, "It's been a while since I played with a drummer. I'm looking forward to it."

Derrick asked, "Can either of you read music?"

Lance shook his head, answering, "I always played by ear."

Scott replied, "Only a little bit. I took lessons for two years, got off the ground, and now I mostly play by ear too."

"We're heavily into Zeppelin," Lance smiled, "a little Deep Purple, and a little Black Sabbath too."

"Guitar music, mostly rock and metal," Scott offered. "Your band kicked ass last night, by the way."

"Thank you," Derrick, Mike and Reyes smiled.

Mike asked, "What brand acoustic guitars do you prefer?"

Scott grinned, "I rarely played acoustic. I traded my old Yamaha in for a down payment on my Stratocaster."

"I never touched an acoustic in three years," Lance admitted.

"We'll get you guys going right away," Mike said, and tapped his sub-vocal, calling, "Alden, musical education expenses for Scott Shetley and Lance Kinchen. Get two Fender Mustang amps, and two sets of headphones. Also, get two Taylor 214CE acoustic-electric guitars. Throw in extra sets of strings, electronic tuners for both of them, and tool kits so they can change their strings. If they don't know how now, they'll learn next week." After a brief pause, Mike chuckled, "Kewl. Thanks, Alden."

"This is so amazing," Lance giggled. "I spent a year whittling down my parents to get a guitar, and the next year to get an amp. All we had to do is ask."

Derrick nodded and grinned, "Next week, when drummers need stuff, I'll be making similar calls."

Mike asked, "What's the other thing you wanted to talk about?"

Glancing between Mike and Joey, Scott softly balked, "Uh, it's not for younger ears."

Getting up from the table, Joey giggled, "Id's okay, Uncah Mike. I'ww go dawk widh Jonah and Gage."

Reyes promised, "I'll call you over when it's time to jam, Joey."

"Okay, Weyes," Joey giggled, and walked toward the other table.

As soon as Joey was away from the immediate area, Scott reached for Lance's hand and took it in his. Displaying their clasped hands, Scott blushed and chuckled, "We learned some kewl stuff this morning." Reyes, Ryan and Paul began chortling. A moment later, four additional clasped hands were on the table.

Madly chuckling, Derrick leaned back, calling, "Prez? Keith? A couple of minutes, please?"

Mike grinned, "It never ceases to amaze me, really. I have no idea why usually, but with you two, I got no gay-dar pings when we met."

Intensely blushing because two more leaders were coming over to join them, Lance giggled, "I guess ya can't from two virgins who thought they were straight."

Watching Prez and Keith come around and join them at the table, Scott chortled, "Yeah, two mostly ex-virgins now."

"I love it!" Prez beamed.

Keith nodded and smiled, "Horacio has the lube. His girlfriend, Sonia has the rubbers. Problem solved."

"I wish," Scott sniggered.

Slightly tilting his head, Derrick wondered, "What's the problem?"

Scott explained, "As best as we can tell, it's nothing too unusual. Having never gone there before, we just want everything as good as it can possibly be, ya know?"

"Then go slow and easy, like you're in love," Reyes smiled. "Quick and rough is for jerks that don't care."

Paul thoughtfully hummed. Widely grinning, Ryan's eyes danced.

Mike nodded, "That's pretty much it. Instinct says, slide it in and pound away. The reality is that people in love care enough to make it good all around."

Keith smiled, "We started young, so everything was a game. Keep the love and friendship, and keep it fun."

Leaning back and relaxing, Prez grinned, "I saw you over there with Chris and Jay and the other couples. You talked with them too, I suppose?"

Nodding, Scott helplessly chuckled, "We kind o' tripped and fell out of the closet, when Chris and Jay walked in on us in the shower." Everyone at the table cracked up. When the laughter and remarks faded, Scott giggled, "That's what they were going in there for too, so it was kewl... eventually... after my nervous breakdown and Lance's heart attack."

"No surprise there," Prez grinned. "Jay arrived with a concussion to match his broken wrist. When Doc Andrews said no exertion for a day, I thought Jay and Chris would flip out."

Keith nodded, "They've actually been a couple about a year longer than any of us. It's a fair assumption that they made the same mistakes and learned the same lessons we did."

Derrick grinned, "The bonus you two have is being musicians, like us. So, we'll put this in musical terms." He locked eyes with Lance, pointed at Scott and prompted, "You play guitar with him and keep the tempo, right?"

Getting the implication, Lance giggled, "Yep. So we make our own tempo with this too now?"

"Precisely," Derrick smiled. "This time, it's more like building up to a crescendo. Like in any good tune, the melody, harmony and rhythm build to the finale. We could give you tons of advise, but the fact is, it's your love that will keep the tune going."

"Your moods affect the music you want to hear or play," Mike added. "The same applies here; your emotions tell you exactly how to do everything. We've got built in barometers too. When it's not good for one, you'll both see it. All it takes is harmonizing together. Talk with each other and not to each other. To get the difference, consider it as working with each other, and not working on each other."

Prez offered, "The word 'with' implies teams together; at least one speaking and at least one listening. The other way, talking to each other, doesn't require a listener. Hear each other and participate, in the conversation, in the music, and while making love. Today you're a giver, tomorrow you're a receiver, and that has nothing to do with roles or positions; it's way more emotional than physical."

Keith reminded, "You're dudes, but still human beings; flesh and blood with thoughts and emotions. Treat each other that way, and everything will be kewl. Misunderstand each other, and we'll be chatting again."

As if in a hurry, Prez quickly asked, "Scott, from the heart, do you love Lance?"

Looking into Lance's green eyes, Scott warmly answered, "Yeah, I really do. There's never been anyone like him. As friends, it's been great. Since this morning, it's surprisingly getting even better."

Suddenly, Lance couldn't decide if the dining room was very cold or very hot; he was shivering and sweating at the same time. Scott had proclaimed his love twice, to two different sets of guys, effectively scrambling what little remained of Lance's brain.

"Show him, all the time, dude," Prez smiled. "Lance has to know how you feel and what you're thinking. Saying it and proving it to anyone else is time wasted."

Keith softly sang, "Every breath you take, every move you make, every single day, every word you say."

"And play guitar too," Mike sniggered. "For the four of us, just like the two of you, music started the friendships. If I don't get to hear you for myself, at Oneula's auditorium later today, I'll be following you back to your room sometime soon. I thrive on competition, dudes; with Derrick, Keith, Prez and now Troy too."

"We're not there yet, Mike," Scott sighed. "We're pretty good, but not at your level."

Lance nodded, "We saw you playing, most of the time without looking at either hand."

"Then we'll be learning a lot," Mike smiled, "you two as our students and us as teachers. It's all good."

Prez shared, "What I used to do was multitask; I'd be running simple scales, but watching TV, or reading a book for school. It's something you learn, just like everything else."

Around the table, there were a few moments of silence. Paul wordlessly checked with Reyes, who checked with Ryan. Receiving a nod, Reyes asked Scott and Lance, "Are you dudes ready for Oneula Beach, or would you rather have time alone first?"

Scott checked with Lance. Releasing Scott's hand and covering his face, Lance loudly giggled, "Oh my God, I really can't decide!" Around the table, the boys softly sniggered and chuckled. Lance whined through his giggles, "This was an easier decision earlier today. Guitar or Scott, music or sex? Suddenly there's no difference! Either way, I win!" All nine boys cracked up.

Locking eyes with Reyes, Scott chuckled, "We'll get our guitars and meet you there, Reyes."

"Kewl," Reyes giggled and nodded.

Standing up, Scott turned to Lance, sniggering, "Let's go, lover boy."

"Don't start that," Lance giggled as he stood. "I'll pick up my axe and fumble around, lookin' for a zipper, completely lost."

Keith chuckled, "The neck is the long, hard, wood thing your left hand holds on to."

"OH MY GOD!" Lance loudly laughed. "That was too funny." Helplessly chuckling, Scott led his confused partner back to their table to clean up their trays.

For a few moments, Prez and Derrick watched Lance and Scott. As soon as Lance and Scott returned, all the teenagers at that table stood and gathered their trays to take to the dishwasher. Derrick smirked, "Don't you wish we had someone like us to help us make fewer mistakes?"

Prez shrugged, "Apparently, we did all right, for eight- and nine-year-old kids."

Keith nodded, "Just like we learned, they'll learn too. We can't do it for them."

Glancing around the table at the four Core Rimmers, Paul softly asked, "It's true then, you really did learn everything together?"

All four nodded. Mike grinned, "It's really not much of a secret anymore."

Ryan smiled, "Have you got any advice for the three of us?"

Shaking his head, Derrick answered, "The same rules apply. You three know how bad it could be, so just don't go there. Remaking the same mistakes some other butt-head made will get you nowhere, except frustrated and alone. As much as the little head wants to take over, don't let it, use the brain in the bigger head."

"Understand, I was the last one to move here," Prez gently explained. "Keith and I were six-years-old, and going on seven, and Derrick and Mike were already seven-years-old. We were friends that summer. Mike and I played guitar; Keith played keys, and Derrick was playing drums. Like every other kid, there were sleep-overs with one or all of the other three. Unlike straight kids, we figured everything out together. Two years ago, it changed to the two couples we are now. Just before school started last September, we all agreed intercourse was only for the couples. What you witnessed Saturday was me, with toasted biscuits, and barely maintaining with only oral sex when I wanted more. Derrick and Mike knew it would be kewl for the four of us to get together again. It was kewl and will probably always be kewl, because we know each other so well. If four can manage, three can too."

Checking with his new boyfriends, Reyes smiled, "Like I said, what we had to do versus what we want to do are two entirely different situations." He then tapped his comm-badge, calling, "Alden, make reservations, for a party of three at the Ocean House restaurant in Waikiki, at six o'clock, please, dude?"

Alden replied, "I'm dialing now, Reyes."

Noticing Paul's eyes darting around the table, Prez asked, "What's wrong, Paul?"

Shrugging, Paul sighed, "I guess I expected someone to say it's wrong; two brothers adding and sharing a common partner."

Mike grinned, "Different strokes for different folks. How we grew up isn't like Drew and Corey, or Kaleo and Tory, or anyone else I know."

Keith assured, "You won't hear a single negative remark from us. I'd doubt anyone else would pass a comment either. Especially after what you dudes went through, you've earned the right to choose to be happy. Don't allow anyone to interfere with that, cos I sure wouldn't if I were in your shoes."

Derrick thoughtfully scowled, "Are we that different? Someone please say we're not different."

Leaning forward, Mike softly assured, "I'm sure it's not us. Common sense dictates a lot of this stuff, from sex between couples, threesomes, foursomes, and so on, to knowing when it's inappropriate to judge another person's choice. I saw Saturday how much Reyes cared for you two dudes. It seems you also care about Reyes. My kid is happy, there's no reason for me to interfere, so I won't."

Keith reassured, "I'm sure Scott and Lance got our message clearly. It's up to them to decide to take the advice." Smiling at Paul,

Reyes and Ryan, Keith added, "The three of you together is already becoming the expected norm. Don't worry about anyone's opinions except your own."

* * * * *

Meanwhile, immediately after finishing their lunch, John and Stephen went to take care of a very important task. It was lunch recess time at Stephen's old school in Hilo. Since the prior Monday night, John had wanted to pay a visit to the boys that had harassed his husband. Only Blake and Mitch, their young human security, went with them to the Hilo Union Elementary School's playground, but all the security guys were ready to execute the plan.

Stephen pointed to where his class was playing kickball. Holding Stephen's hand tightly, John led the way. These boys weren't any taller than John. They were several inches taller and many pounds heavier than Stephen was though. John was ready for more than a fight that he could've won without his N-Gen powers. Not knowing any better, four boys began walking toward them, shouting anti-homosexual remarks at Stephen and John, who were still holding hands. Suddenly, the leader of the pack tripped and fell. Not knowing how or why he fell, he got up and angrily pushed his buddies' hands aside. Brushing himself off, he continued his homophobic tirade.

As planned, John pulled Stephen behind him. Blake and Mitch kept Stephen out of harms way while John went off. "You think you're so tough? I'll bet you suck three tiny dicks at once, every night." Pointing at the other three boys, John said, "His, his and his. Puny little peckers make you shiver and shake, huh?"

"Who the fuck are you?" the lead boy screamed.

"I'm Stephen's husband, here to teach little jack-offs like you dudes a lesson you'll never forget."

All the boys began laughing at John and mocking him. Mysteriously, another boy fell and knocked over the boy standing closest to him. John giggled, "I knew it. Too afraid to admit you like dick, but there's your pals, one laying on the other. Hump away boys, hump away, now!"

The lead boy took a swing at John, which never came close, but sent him and his three buddies flailing to the ground. 'Now' was the pre-planned keyword. By the time the boys stood and were ready for a fight, Lucky appeared behind John, Stephen, Blake and Mitch. Behind the other four schoolyard bullies stood Bond, Stephen's personal gorilla. Noticing one massive gorilla wearing military fatigues was shocking enough, but when the second gorilla behind the four bullies was seen, the lead boy lost bladder control and started bawling like a baby. The other three boys screamed and scattered. Blake and Mitch moved so that the remaining boy couldn't get away.

John laughed, "Big bad bully pissed his pants. Where's your suck-buddies now, big bad bully? Don't cry bully, I won't let the gorillas tear your little dick off. Be careful who you bully from now on, pussy. Clan Short is watching. If I have to come back here and see your sorry ass again, I'll let the gorillas deal with the problem."

Bond growled, "Stephen is mine to protect. A word of warning; I like my bullies shaken, not stirred." Another few drops of urine escaped, further dampening that boy's shorts and underwear.

Stephen stepped forward and yelled, "Did you hear my husband and my gorilla? We're watching for pants-pissing jerks like you." Wiping bitter tears from his eyes, the boy nodded. Stephen then shoved the boy with all his strength, saying, "I thought I might feel sorry for you, but I don't. How many times did you make me cry? I don't even know, dozens maybe. Think twice about squealing to teachers too. John's a Vulcan trained telepath and will have you all expelled from school, right, hon?"

Floating two feet above the grassy ground, John nodded and smiled, "You got it right, baby. I have enough on all four of them to have them locked away for a very long time. You're not the only kid they bullied." The bully couldn't believe he was seeing John floating above the Earth.

Lucky noticed two adults rapidly approaching and said, "It's time to go, Johnny-boy."

John told Lucky, "No, I want to talk to the teachers too," and lowered to the ground.

Rolling his eyes, Stephen teased his tormentor, softly giggling, "And scan them too, if I know my husband."

Already doing precisely that, John innocently smiled, "Who, me?"

Sadly shaking his head, John's eleven-year-old enhanced human security, Blake smirked, "In the mood you're in, the halos aren't working, bro."

Reaching a hand into his shorts pocket, Stephen reminded, "Get your ID cards out, guys." John and all the boys pulled out their wallets.

"What's going on over here?" one of the two adult women shrieked.

Coming to a halt before the group, the other woman asked,

"Stephen? Where have you been this past week?"

Holding up his wallet for the woman to see, Stephen answered, "I'm part of Family Clan Short, Pacific Rim Division now, Mrs. Kravitz." The woman looked closely at the cards held before her; one proved that Stephen was a Clan Short leader, and the other identified him as a Starfleet Lieutenant Commander. While the two teachers inspected the cards and suspiciously eyed the two gorillas, Stephen explained, "I told you that Jaiden was harassing and mocking me, Mrs. Sherman. Since no one would believe me, I told my boyfriend, John Hundser, who became my husband last Tuesday."

John took over for Stephen, adding, "Mrs. Sherman, since you are the Principal at this school, I must tell you that I know your actions have been proper and just for the majority of similar cases. However, when you have a bunch of larger boys and one smaller boy in your office, it's almost always a case of bullying. Similarly, when there are several normal girls and one larger girl, who is a bit of a tom-boy, again it's generally a case of bullying. It's worth the time it takes to get to the truth. The rules and guidelines you have been adhering to will be changing. King Aalona is at our base, I'm sure you know."

Nodding, Mrs. Sherman said, "Yes, I saw his speech."

Glancing at the two adults, John sweetly smiled, "Where the King's actions and laws end, Clan Short's actions and laws fill the void. As my identification proves, I am head of Pacific Rim Division's Intel team. I am telepathically scanning you and Mrs. Kravitz as we speak. Also, personnel are being briefed for operations at all schools in the ROH. Kids from the Clan Intel departments will be monitoring schools for more bullies, and for adult personnel that fail to act appropriately to cases of harassment. We will act upon all cases where the school could not or did not act."

Gesturing to Stephen's tormentor, John smirked, "I've telepathically scanned Jaiden Levy. In many cases, bullies are themselves victims of abuse. That is not the case with Jaiden. In this case, he gains power from having three friends back him up."

John continued speaking calmly and logically to the two women, but also telepathically sent to Jaiden, 'You're gay, dude. Don't bother denying it or saying a word aloud; you'll only out yourself to everyone here. Stop thinking you're weak because you like boys and dick. That's where you're messing things up majorly. The Clan can help you too, if or when you need it, but you really have to stop thinking that you're a bad person because you're gay. Continuing the way you're going, you'll wind up in jail for assault, or rape or both, before you're out of high school. I'm going to help you change direction right now. Of your three friends, Tann Cheng-ho shares the same secret. Grow up, Jaiden, and talk to Tann. Your parents would be kewl too, dude. Go that route instead of this one, and maybe you can avoid years in a jail.'

Naturally, everything John was silently sharing with Jaiden, Stephen also immediately knew. Jaiden could tell by Stephen's expression that his secret was out. Stephen could tell from Jaiden's expressions that the only reason he was targeted was because his tormentor found him cute. John and Mrs. Sherman wrapped up their conversation. Mrs. Sherman assured, "We'll gladly work with all Clan representatives, Commander Hundser."

"We have the same purpose and goals," John smiled, and glanced at Jaiden, adding, "We're here to help, educate wherever possible and prosecute when necessary."

Taking hold of Jaiden's shoulder, Mrs. Kravitz wondered, "What should we do with Mister Levy?"

Humming and smiling at the two women and Jaiden, John offered, "I think Jaiden understands how and what he screwed up. He needs some time to talk with his parents and figure stuff out anyway." John asked Jaiden, "What do you think; three days or the remainder of the week?"

Jaiden sighed, "Probably three days with my folks, and the rest of the week for me."

John grinned at the women, "There you go." He also sent to Jaiden, 'Dude, don't make such a big chore out of what simply is. I couldn't imagine fighting what you've been, or acting the way you have. Instead, I saw a really sweet and cute boy last week and acted upon that. Because I acted, Stephen and I couldn't be happier. As if that wasn't kewl enough, we've adopted two sons. Chill out and give me a call if you find the bullying table has turned. Lucky really likes acting grumpy and mean. He'll do it just for laughs.'

John politely asked, "May I roam around the field another minute or two?" and quickly explained, "I think I need to have a few words with Tann Cheng-ho. Perhaps he could use some think time, or maybe he needs more help than that." He sent to Jaiden, 'Assuming Tann's parents are kewl, you might have a boyfriend by the end of the week, dude.'

The two women glanced at each other. Mrs. Sherman told Mrs. Kravitz, "I'll deal with Mr. Levy and contact his parents."

"I'll escort Stephen and John until they leave," Mrs. Kravitz softly assured.

The teacher and John's group went over to the field where Tann was playing kickball. John scanned the other bully and found his situation was the same as Jaiden's; he had two loving and understanding parents. Tann and Jaiden were on the exact same page of the same book. John started telepathically speaking to Tann. Trying to play the game and listen to John at the same time, Tann made two major errors in the field, causing the inning to end. Tann walked off the field, directly to Mrs. Kravitz and sorrowfully told his teacher that he had also been bullying Stephen.

Mrs. Kravitz took Tann inside to the Principal's office. Determining that the other two boys from the group were not homophobes or the type who might become bullies, John left them alone. Having completed the mission, John, Stephen and their security returned home. On the lawns between the Rimmer family homes, John thanked and dismissed the security teams. He then turned to Stephen, giggling, "I did good?"

"In so many ways," Stephen warmly smiled, and lead John into the Hundses' home and to their bedroom. They would remain there until needing to return to Clan school to take their placement tests.

* * * * *

While Lance took care of the trays and waited with Chris and Jay, Scott had a brief chat with Horacio. A comm-badge tap later, Scott was assured there would be condoms, lube and two small dildos waiting in their room. Chris and Jay walked out of the CIC with Scott and Lance. Both couples were holding hands and heading across the quad, back to dorm three. Chris glanced over at Lance and Scott, wondering, "How'd it go with the Core Rimmers?"

Scott smiled, "Really good. We'll have new amps and new acoustic-electric guitars soon. While talking about us being a couple, they put it in terms we easily understood. I expected more sexually descriptive information, but they skipped right over that. Honestly, I learned as much about music as I did about having a sexual relationship."

Jay checked with Lance, asking, "You're good too?"

Nodding, Lance smiled, "About so much, I'm not sure where to begin."

Chris offered, "It's obvious why they wouldn't get too descriptive with you. Being leaders, they probably guessed you'd heard enough. That's for us brothers to share. We all have sex the same basic ways, it's only the individuals sharing the acts that make each of us unique."

"Damn!" Jay grumbled. "Where's my fuzzy hand puppet when I need it? At the bottom of a pile where our apartment used to be." Facing Chris, he then bounced his eyebrows and grinned.

Out of sync and very loudly, Scott and Lance incredulously laughed, "WHAT FUZZY HAND PUPPET?"

"No, Jay," Chris softly chortled.

"I miss that thing," Jay sadly moaned. "Chris misses it too."

"No, I don't," Chris giggled.

Jay smirked, "I'd have to put it on my left hand, temporarily."

Widely grinning, Scott told Lance, "Don't ask. I'm sure we don't want to know."

"Very strange images are running through my mind, that's for sure," Lance giggled.

Jay chortled, "I could prob'ly make one just like Mr. Fuzzy."

Rolling his eyes, Chris explained to Scott and Lance, "Amongst other reasons, Mr. Fuzzy was Jay's way of making up after an argument. It wasn't used for sex, but a way for Jay to get me laughing, wrestling and instigate sex." While Lance and Scott softly sniggered, Chris told Jay, "That concussion really scrambled your brain. How you went from uniquenesses to Mr. Fuzzy, I can't begin to fathom."

"You were getting too deep, man," Jay teased.

Chris sighed, "You forgot how scared we were before our first time."

"No, I didn't," Jay sniggered. "Mr. Fuzzy helped me that day too." Unable to hold it any longer, Scott and Lance roared laughing.

Sadly shaking his head, Chris giggled, "Those days, plural. You seduced me over three frigging days!"

"You used Mr. Fuzzy to seduce me too," Jay playfully reminded. Practically breathless from laughing, Scott opened the dorm three exterior door and held it for Lance, Chris and Jay. Following Lance and Chris inside, Jay chuckled, "Another very important lesson is that make-up sex is awesome. It doesn't make arguing kewl or fun by any means, but rekindling the flames after big fights is fucking hot! All that stuff we said about making it last longer goes right out the window; forget all about it."

Walking down an empty hall toward the common room, Chris softly giggled, "Sure, be more proud of yourself, if you can."

"I don't think I can," Jay laughed. Hysterical, Lance staggered through the common room. Jay teased, "We're killing Lance. Don't you know this is a very serious, romantic day for them, Chris? Be kewl, dammit." Snickering, Chris shoved his lover.

Unlocking his dorm room door, Lance stumbled inside the room. Scott, Chris and Jay followed. In seconds, the two couples were holding their partners close and trying to kiss between giggles and laughter. Moments later, and still wearing a wide smile, Scott softly told Lance, "I love you." He also saw the two amplifiers on the floor near their packed and stacked electric guitar cases.

Having caught his breath, Lance hung off Scott, giggling, "I love you too." Facing the opposite direction, Lance noticed acoustic guitar cases and piles of something blue on each bed. Lance excitedly told Scott, "We got our acoustics, man!"

Before Scott could tell Lance about the amps, Jay hollered, "Look Chris! It's Mr. Fuzzy! Dozens of 'em!" Turning and seeing the heaps of fuzzy blue on the beds, Chris howled laughing. Jay bounded to a bed to get a Mr. Fuzzy puppet. Lance and Scott hurried to the other bed and worked together to open the guitar case latches. Getting their first looks at the new acoustic-electric guitars, Lance and Scott wickedly grinned. In the meantime, Jay had put a puppet on his left hand and began tickling Chris' neck, throat and torso.

Forgetting all about the amplifiers, Scott pulled the guitar out of its case. In the little storage area of the case, Scott found strings, an electronic tuner and a zipped case containing tools. Only glancing over at Jay, who had digressed to Mr. Fuzzy attacks on Chris' ass and naughty bits, Lance saw the amps and pointed them out to Scott.

"Yeah, I know," Scott smiled. "I just forgot to mention 'em, man. Sorry, but these guitars are sweet! We've gotta bring them to Oneula with our electrics."

Nodding agreement, Lance slightly turned, loudly giggling,

"Jay, we're outta here, man."

"Kewl," Jay chuckled, and fuzzied Chris toward the door, asking, "Bring a couple of puppets with us, guys?" Mr. Fuzzy got in a good one that caused Chris to squeal and jump almost a foot off the floor. Jay giggled, "I'll bet Trav and Erik and a bunch of other gay couples would really enjoy 'em."

Returning the Taylor acoustic to its case, Scott teased, "Not as much as you, Jay."

Jay sniggered, "Once they get instructions on proper use and abuse, they will."

Thinking about it for a moment or two, Scott nodded and loaded the empty space around the guitar with Mr. Fuzzy puppets. Seeing what his boyfriend was doing, Lance went to the other bed, stuffed a few extra puppets in his pockets and grabbed the other Taylor acoustic guitar case. Once out in the hall, Chris ran away from Jay, starting a chase back to the CIC. Walking out of the room, Scott sniggered, "We might be like them in time."

Following his friend, who was now his new lover, Lance nodded and giggled, "Not a terrible thing." Seeing other new items on the top of his dresser, Lance cheered, "We've got the lube, rubbers and dildos too."

"I'm hoping I remember all we learned, and don't attack you the second we get home," Scott grinned.

Putting two guitar cases down to close and lock the door, Lance mooed through giggles, then playfully asked, "Promise to attack me?"

Watching Lance pick up the guitar cases, Scott nodded and sniggered, "I promise, and I'll even treat your pretty butt nice too."

They started back through the dorm, taking the same path they came in from.

"Check a mirror sometime, Scott," Lance giggled. "My butt's skinny compared to your tight muscular cheeks."

Scott laughed, "I can't believe we're talking like this!"

Lance smiled, "Between us hookin' up, new amps and new guitars, and getting to jam with Reyes, I've got a chubby." Scott glanced over and evilly grinned. "Seriously!" Lance giggled. "I wasn't lying before when I said I was confused."

Scott nodded, "I'm there with you too now. We'll jam with Reyes for an hour or so, then get back to our room. I've got a plan, if you'd like to hear it?"

"I'd love to," Lance warmly smiled.

"Tonight's about you and me," Scott shared. "We'll have at least another hour or two alone before dinner, then the rest of the night together. Once we're back from dinner, our clothes are off. With amps and acoustic guitars, we'll actually hear each other. The rest of the time, we're on a bed together, learning how to be a gay couple."

Lance softly admitted, "I loved holding hands, man."

"Me too," Scott smiled. "Four days ago, and until last night, I considered myself bisexual, just sexually inactive."

"Did I do something that changed your mind?" Lance wondered. "Was it showers, or something else?"

Scott sighed, "Don't think that stuff, man. If you're to blame, then so am I. I'm completely thrilled with you and us, okay? Honestly, you were my best friend in the world by the time we arrived at Des Moines, and that's what made us want to try stuff. It's also what made everything so great. It's just a quick about-face. Last night, I thought you were asleep."

Near the inner doorway, Lance put the two guitar cases down, sharing, "Saturday night, I woke in the middle of the night with a hard-on. You were out cold, so I took care of it, rolled over and went back to sleep. Last night, I guess it was the concert that made me horny, but very tired too. I was almost asleep when I heard your sheets rustling." He opened the door and Scott passed with his two guitar cases.

To open the outer door, Scott put his cases down. Lance approached with the other two cases. Scott smiled, "So you watched me and I saw you?"

"Yeah," Lance blushed and giggled.

Holding an arm out to make Lance pause, Scott admitted, "Before breakfast this morning, in the shower, I watched you closely."

"I didn't notice," Lance softly giggled and turned more red. He took a few steps outside and turned to wait for Scott.

Releasing the door and picking up the guitar cases again, Scott admitted, "I think you're extremely cute. You're only a year younger, but you've got pubes, a deep voice..." He trailed off then blushed, "And a really nice dick. You show a nice bit, and I've learned that you grow a little too. This morning's shower is when I knew that I had to say something to you about last night." Recalling ten teen and tween boys taking showers at once and the collection of limp dicks, he paused, thoughtfully scowled, and then softly shared, "Figuring out what to say and how to say it was a problem." He started walking with Lance and huffed, "You mentioned dancing, and I was already processing a lot. I slipped."

"You're not regretting it, I hope."

Vigorously shaking his head, Scott firmly assured, "Not in the least. Everybody said to tell the truth, so I'm only clearing the air. I don't carry any excess baggage about gays or lesbians. Whatever rocks your boat, ya know? Before we go any further tonight, you needed to know. I do love you, Lance. Since we met on the road out of the City, you've been great in every way. I hope I've shown that."

Crossing the quad between dormitories, Lance reminded, "I asked you if you wanted to be roommates Friday after dinner. When I said I was tired Friday night, I was surprised you joined me, and set up your spot in the nest right next to mine."

"I knew you best and felt safe," Scott admitted.

Taking a deep breath in preparation to share more truth, Lance huffed, "Friday afternoon, at Des Moines, I realized how cute you are." Scott warmly smiled at Lance, but Lance continued to look forward and didn't notice. Nervously, Lance admitted, "Having any close relationship outside of my immediate family wasn't high on my list of things to do. I had chances with girls at school. For every dance, every opportunity to go anywhere with anyone, I chose to practice rather than do anything else. Girls aren't scary, but were never a priority either. It seems most guys aren't generally attractive. I saw enough dicks hangin' in high school locker rooms to know I never thought much about them. At Des Moines, I noticed every Clan boy there - every one, even John and Stephen and other younger guys. Once we got here, it was suddenly like, jeez, all the cutest guys in the world are right here. You though, you've changed everything I used to think. You're a little taller, a little more muscular; a nice flat belly, a tight chest, strong arms that aren't overly buff, and wide shoulders."

Barely controlling his voice, and trying to hide the fact he was becoming emotional, Lance shivered, "I have to wonder if I've always felt this way, but was too into guitar and music to notice or care. There never was anyone attractive enough, or interesting enough to make me think about it, until you. Almost immediately, I couldn't stop following you, looking at you, listening to you. What you've got hangin' are the most perfect, completely beautiful dick and nuts I've ever seen. Seeing it chubby and getting harder and bigger... For me, of all people... I... wanted... to touch... feel... taste..."

Quickly putting the guitar cases down, Scott hurried to get in front of Lance. Seeing his tears and puffy eyes, Scott pointed to the ground, ordering, "Put the guitars down, man."

Sighing and doing as he was told, Lance muttered, "I'm sorry."

"No," Scott softly and firmly said. When Lance looked up again, Scott took him in his arms, resolutely and gently assuring, "I am definitely not sorry, so you don't need to even think that ever again. It was fate, Lance. A fucked up morning of insanity allowed us to meet. In a city of six-million, we might've lived our entire lives and never crossed paths. Instead, I saw this other guy, a teenager like me, carrying a guitar case, like me, getting the fuck out of town. You were alone and so was I, so I went over to you. We talked while we walked. Every chance we had at evac centers, the guitars were out and we were jamming. You were the center of my world by the time we went to sleep Friday night. You're the one I followed around every bit as much as you followed me. I noticed that Saturday and forced myself to stop following you for a while, only to find you following me.

"We lost our families, but gained each other. Right now, I feel like you're my life. Every moment I started to miss what was, you were right there, showing me what is. What I heard you saying is that you need me. Well, I need you too, Lance. Know this too, I got hard for you. That shows, in no uncertain terms, that I think you're incredible, naked and dressed, alone and in groups, and at a table eating lunch with a bunch of other gay teenagers. I wouldn't have done that at my school. I can guess you wouldn't have either. Here, it's kewl, man. Our leaders are gay couples. We're all allowed to be whoever we are. You heard what Chris and Jay were saying about how they used to be. In the City, we would've been like that, if we ever met. And by the way, did you notice Reyes?"

Still a little nervous, Lance wondered, "What about him?"

"I took your hand, said we're becoming a couple, and Reyes took the hands of those other two guys on either side of him. He's got two boyfriends, Lance."

Pulling back and looking into Scott's eyes, Lance's jaw dropped. He grinned, "Two? I was so into your hand in mine and the conversation, getting amps and acoustics, it never even registered!"

Scott smiled, "You see what I mean? I want one boyfriend – you. I want to touch, feel and taste one body – yours. When you want me, I am all yours, so don't ever hold anything back. The truth is all out now, and I still think you're the best I could've ever hoped for." He sealed all they had said with a tender kiss, and followed it with a deep, lingering, passionate kiss. When they broke the kiss, Scott asked, "Better now?"

Lance shyly grinned, "You really like my skinny butt?"

Smirking, Scott replied, "You're perfect, man. Everything about you, I love; from the color of your hair to the tips of your curled little toes. Given half a chance, I might find a way to kiss your green eyes. Those parts in the center are what I'll be concentrating on later, to show you that this ain't a whim or a quick fad that I'll get over. That facts are, I love you and lust for you. I really don't give a shit that I'm gay. It really means nothin' horrible to me, cos I'm still me and you're still you. What matters most to me is having someone that's got the same interests as I do." Lance blushed and giggled. Stepping back, Scott assured, "Believe me, the only thing more exciting than what I'll be doing to you, is wondering what you'll want to do with me. I'm getting hard just thinking of it, so let's get to the jams, before I turn us around and get crazy on you."

Picking up the guitar cases, Lance widely smiled at Scott. Scott bounced his eyebrows at Lance. They continued walking to the CIC. After humming thoughtfully, Lance softly giggled, "I've got some ideas for when we're alone."

Scott chuckled, "I'm sure you do. Save 'em for later though. Think music, like what songs we're going to play that might sound good, after three days of farting around without amps. Reyes is as good a drummer as Derrick, so we've got our work cut out for us."

"Music, yeah, right," Lance giggled.

Scott laughed, "You're not gonna be able to do this, are ya?"

Lance giggled, "I am trying, but..."

Pausing outside the CIC dining room, Scott chortled, "But what?"

"But everything," Lance giggled. "I'm trying to process it all, really, but it's all too much."

"Be more specific, please," Scott grinned. "I need you in music mode, so let's hear it."

"Think about it, Scott," Lance playfully prodded. "In a couple o' hours, between breakfast and lunch, we went from straight friends to gay lovers. That's such a complete flip around, that I'm really happy about, but still trying to figure out. I know the how and why everything was so awesome, but it's like, wow; I did that for you and you really loved it; you did stuff for me that snapped my sorry little brain into pieces, and made me flop around like a fish out of water."

Scott patiently smiled, "We're the same, man. Everything that we were before today is still here, just with more attached. This is like learning that you know a song I want to learn too. It's news to me, but you're kewl about it and showing me the chords and leads. Now we know that our music is loud and raunchy, but there's a ballad melody playing just under the surface. Don't ever doubt that I love you."

"Kewl."

Walking into the dining room and finding it empty, Scott asked, "What tunes do you want to play?"

"Pour Some Sugar On Me," Lance giggled.

Scott loudly laughed, "STOP!"

"I'm serious," Lance giggled. "I watched Mike and Troy like a hawk last night."

"We've only tried a little of that tune once last night."

"Without amps; we couldn't hear what should have been crankin'."

Scott giggled, "We'll try it. If it works, we'll have drums."

Lance enthusiastically sang, "Love is like a bomb, baby, c'mon get it on. Livin' like a lover with a radar phone. Lookin' like a tramp, like a video vamp. Demolition woman, can I be your man?"

Amazed and thrilled that Lance could sing it so easily, Scott sang, "Razzle 'n' a dazzle 'n' a flash a little light. Television lover, baby, go all night. Sometime, anytime, sugar me sweet. Little miss ah innocent sugar me, yeah!"

"Kewl!" Lance cheered, "We can sing it too!"

Pausing at the dimensional door, Scott ordered, "Oneula Beach," and the silvery facade faded to show the dining room there. He walked through and waited for Lance. Once Lance had joined him, Scott wickedly teased, "Television lover, baby, go all night. Sometime, anytime, sugar me sweet."

Stunned wide-eyed for a moment, Lance laughed, "And I'm right back in our bedroom again!" Scott cracked up, turned and started walking again. Following his partner, Lance giggled, "You rat bastard! I'm gonna sugar you sweet, all right!"

Nodding, Scott sniggered, "A reminder that I'm right there with you."

"Great!" Lance sarcastically giggled. "Do you think my cock will work as a slide?"

"Prob'ly, but shockingly!" Scott laughed.

Sadly shaking his head, Lance giggled, "I can see us already. You're gonna be the serious, quiet type, then slam me into orbit with some wacky remark."

Scott provocatively sang, "I'm hot, sticky sweet, from my head to my feet!" Lance howled laughing, and Scott continued singing, "Listen! Red light, yellow light, green-a-light go! Crazy little woman in a one man show. Mirror queen, mannequin, rhythm of love, Sweet dream, saccharine, loosen up!"

"It's your job to loosen me up," Lance giggled.

Nodding, Scott assured, "I promise, it's a task we'll both love. Then we'll flip it over for you to loosen my ass."

Stepping out of the Oneula Beach dining room, Lance dreamily sighed, "This is exactly what I'm trying to process. You're talking about loosening my ass, man. It's like I should be saying, no way, get away from there, that works one way, as an exit only, but I'm not. Instead, I'm looking forward to it."

"Don't even think about it," Scott recommended. "The virgin straight boys are gone now. We're past that. Do you know where we are?"

"Besides tired of carrying these guitars around?" Lance huffed, and put the cases down. Swinging and shaking his right arm, Lance bitched, "That damned Les Paul is heavy."

Also putting his guitars down, Scott seriously asked, "Do you love me?"

Lance nodded and smiled, "Very much."

Scott smiled, "I love you too. Since this morning, my body isn't mine any more. I walk around in it, but it's completely yours. I've only begun checking out your hot bod. It's a task I may never complete. As soon as I think I know every inch, you'll be an inch taller, or a pound heavier, or hairier. Are you getting it?"

Lance nodded, "I'm yours and you're mine. It's kewl with me, man, but I've never even thought this stuff before."

"Look at Chris and Jay," Scott prompted, "or the other guys we ate lunch with, or any of the Core Rimmer couples. Do you think they're not doing what we are, or saying what we are? Married or not doesn't matter, because anyone can see they're in love. Even Keanu and Liki seem to be in a similar place; trying to reconcile what they thought they wanted with the reality of being a couple in love. I can easily understand them and you too. It's a mind fuck, but I'm totally blowing it off, because I am very happy with my new friend, who is now my newer lover and partner. Did you expect the actual acts of making love to feel anything like they did?"

"Not at all," Lance grinned.

"Neither did I," Scott admitted. "The stuff that happened to me last summer was nothing like what we did. Just kissing and grinding was awesome, man! Your hand was far better than my own. I never knew when you were going to speed up or slow down, or make a looser or tighter fist. As if all that wasn't enough, we blew each other in a sixty-nine and swallowed. As worried as I was about what it would taste like, I wanted to take all of you. No was quickly replaced with yes, believing I was getting a part of you inside me. Never once have I bounced around the way I did three times with you."

Nodding, Lance smiled, "I thought stuff like that. You were great too."

"So why should I worry about any of it? You love me, I love you, we showed it then and we're showin' it now. I couldn't last like Keanu and Liki, talking about what was versus what is, for days. This is how I feel. This is how you feel. Kewl, we're in love. My job is to keep you, right here with me, by my side, each of us following the other around, because that's where we want to be. From now on we're in my bed every night. That's what I want. One clean, unused bed with guitars on it. The other bed is now ours, and a lot less clean."

Dreamily sighing again, Lance assured, "I want all that too. You make it sound so awesome and easy."

"It is awesome," Scott smiled. "All the facts of life and what we've been taught all our lives makes sense now. You're the one most worthy of caring about and for. What we're feeling, every new couple must feel. The better long term couples feel it all their lives. I haven't talked about my parents, or yours, since Saturday, when you told me your folks had to die together, it was destiny that they even crossed over together. That was a wicked kewl idea, man, and it came out of your mouth. That thought fixed everything for me."

Blushing and shrugging, Lance giggled, "It's true enough."

"I got it, completely, at that moment. At this moment, I know that this is our destiny now. Our parents' generation, human and Romulan, almost fucked everything over for everyone. We won the war for our planet. Now we're Clan. There's no better place to be and no better person than you to be with. If you disagree with anything I've said, then tell me you do, because this is important to me. We've absolutely got to understand where we're coming from; without that, forget knowing where we're at and where we're going."

After thinking for a few moments, Lance smiled, "I can't find fault anywhere in anything you've said."

Counting it out on his fingers for Lance, Scott made his points again. "The circumstances that caused us to meet was chance as far we know, but maybe it was destiny." He grasped the second finger saying, "You brought your Les Paul, I brought my Stratocaster, and we learned that we're into the same music; we might've been two completely different extremes, with one playing the raunchiest, evil death metal, and the other playing Christian hymns at church. Nope, we're friends on the same page from the same city." A third finger was grasped when Scott reminded, "Right after we saw the dorms, you asked me to be your roommate; kewl with me, kewl with you. Travis even gave me an alternative, asking me to be his roommate. All this could be happening with him, but it's not. Trav's got Erik. They're both obviously in love. There's that same dreamy quality to Trav's eyes that you have, and I know I've got it too, cos I feel it. It's perfect as is though, because two west coast kids hooked up, just like two east coast kids are doing now."

Dropping the fourth finger, Scott chuckled, "Before we even moved into our room, we knew exactly where we were at; virgins spankin' it a couple o' times a day." Nodding, Lance went into a giggling fit. Wrapping his thumb around the other four fingers, Scott sniggered, "You heard me pounding it and watched me across a dark room." Lance howled laughing. A sixth finger was presented when Scott laughed, "So I watch you and wonder, does that thing stay about six inches long or what? It's damn nice as it is, but what if... it... gets... b-b-biggerrrrr - UGH! SPLASH! Okay, that was really good. Now I'm all wet." Shaking his head and laughing too hard to say anything, Lance waited for Scott to display another finger. He did, warmly smiling, "This morning you joked about dancing. I was scared to admit what happened last night. I had two choices; either go there and see what happens, or ignore it. I went there. You could've denied it all; then I would've been angry about it and simply said, fine, you stay over there jackin' off and I'll stay over on my side of the room. We're roommates and axe wielding buds, and that's it. Again, none of what might've happened did happen. That's seven different times in a couple o' days anything might've happened to change what is. Lucky seven, man. We rolled the dice and won."

Tilting his head and only briefly glancing at Scott, Lance shyly and cutely wondered, "Are you really that happy with me?"

Stepping closer, Scott gently lifted Lance's chin, passionately assuring, "Extremely happy. In addition to those seven things, you did everything I did this morning. Neither of us ever said, 'no, I won't do that'. All that stuff we thought might be weird wasn't odd at all; every hug and kiss was better than the last. You treated me real nice. We weren't too happy our first loads blew between our bellies, but shared what we expected and wanted. You made my fantasy a reality and I made yours too. All that was awesome."

"Getting caught in the shower wasn't so awesome," Lance giggled.

"Again, we got lucky. A gay couple caught us, not two straight dudes. The latter would've been grossed out. They might've even mocked us. Instead, we got the former, who loudly got us calm enough to hear why they were there. Chris and Jay stripped and took the shower right across from us. Chris is absolutely a real blond, and his bone was pointing straight up, proving beyond any doubt that he had no problem that we were there. Jay's a muscular brunette hunk; plain and simple. The fall he took when his apartment crashed might've killed you or me. And what did you do? Did you pay attention to the other two extremely cute guys with major woodies? No, amazing and thrilling the hell out of me, you did what you saw them doing, grinding your ass against my cock. My brain spun, my heart raced and my dick got hard really fast."

"They're cute and all, but I barely knew them. I know them better now, and they're great, but I still choose you, Scott. None of the guys I've seen naked in the showers, here or anywhere else, is better lookin' than you."

"Not many people would say that. The fact that you did has my brain flippin' and spinnin' again. Now that I think of it, I did what Jay did; I showed you that my ass is yours. What really knocked me for a loop was when you showed me the same; that your ass is mine. It was a question lurking that you answered with actions, in front of two other guys. I knew when we started that I would willingly give my ass to you, but wasn't sure if you thought the same. You answered that question in the most awesome way."

Realizing that Scott didn't consider himself that good looking, Lance sadly shook his head, smirking, "I don't want the two blonds, Chris or Erik. I don't want the two Cali surfers, Erik or Travis. As kewl as Jay is, he's not a musician, he's way too buff for me, and most importantly, he's crazy for Chris. I've got so much in common with you, and you've got everything they've got, plus one other thing that they can't have."

"Such as?"

"Me, crawling all over them and lovin' every second of it," Lance warmly said, and pulled Scott into a tighter embrace. He shared, "Goin' from losing everything to gaining the best of everything is what's blowin' me away. I'm really very happy with you, and have been since we met. Part of me is screaming; how can you be happier than ever after loosing it all, you fucking dope, what's wrong with you? The answer is you, right there, every time I turn around. I was happy enough with you as a friend. It's not even so much switching from a straight virgin to active gay boy, it's loving the change. It ain't like I've never seen dicks before, man. What we did already was such an extremely awesome, fun time, I'm in heaven right now. I lost my virginity with my best friend in the world. What we haven't already done, I know we will. All that is what's making me dopey and silly, from the sex to standing here and holding each other now. I don't give a fuck who sees us like this. I should care, shouldn't I?"

Scott smiled, "In New York City and lots of other places, we probably might, but here, there's no reason to worry about it."

"And what about suddenly liking dicks?"

Scott shrugged, "That's an important part of all this, sure, but talking like this is almost as good. If we both had erections too, then I could say it's every bit as good. Since this is a serious chat we're having, boners are kind o' inappropriate, so it's kewl. A dick is only flesh hangin' most of the time. I can be gay easily enough, cos I'm still me and you're still you. I've noticed plenty of dicks in showers too, and always compared what I saw to what I have. To some extent or another, I'll bet most guys do that. What matters most now is that my dick is only for you to have, and your dick is only mine to have. Your dick is the one I want to caress when it's limp, and the one I want in me when it's hard; every other guy's dick is just decoration to me, because they're not attached to you. The changes that have happened makes everything that was already great, far better. We both knew people called the ROH a paradise; for us it was a kewl idea because of virtuoso leadership. Little did we know what was already awesome would really become our shared paradise." He paused to joke, "Don't start wearing dresses though, man. You'll force me to take drastic measures."

Lance giggled, "Not that I ever would, but what drastic measures are these?"

Scott chuckled, "You're a guy, all male, I checked and know it for certain. If you start acting like a girl, I'll have to be on the bottom constantly, to remind you that I not only like your dick, it's mine; I want it, in my hands, mouth and ass." Lance watched Scott speak every word and saw he was very serious, but having such a major cutie admit all that caused a brief giggle. Scott assured, "Don't ever change a thing, Lance. All of what you are now is exactly what I want. Liking dick doesn't make either of us effeminate, it makes us gay. Besides, your legs are too hairy for dresses and nylons."

Lance giggled, "No nylons pulling my hairs out by the roots, all at once, thanks."

Scott grinned, "Plenty of changes will happen whether we like them or not. We've got a couple o' years before we're fully educated and grown up. Think of learning from Mike, Prez and Troy for the next few years. We're pretty good now. By then, we'll be as good as they are. Also, what's very kewl now between our legs will get even better, and very probably bigger. You're thirteen and have exactly what I want. Thinking of what you've got now, and what you'll probably have, my mouth is watering."

Lance nodded and smiled, "I have briefly considered both of those things, and our things too. Is it kewl to be this happy though, Scott?"

Scott sighed, "We can't stay sad. We've cried for our families, man. They wouldn't want us to do that. My dad would crack my ass into the middle of next week, for crying over what can't be changed. Doc Wiener..."

"Doc VEE-NER!" Lance laughed.

"Whatever!" Scott giggled, "He said we're survivors. We knew when to get the fuck out o' there; without which, this conversation wouldn't be happening. I believe we're lucky, in so many ways, not the least of which is that we might've died too, without having ever met. That's a loss we'd have never known, but a damned sad state of affairs, dying as virgins, never feeling any of the love we've already felt."

"Others did die that way," Lance groaned.

"That's exactly why we need to follow through, to make surviving worth our effort and the whole worlds' time. The Clan is changing the world and we're part of it, man! A universe of opportunities has opened up for us. Ya wanna talk about chance versus destiny, how about this thought; this division was created, exactly seven days before we needed it, and half of the leaders are virtuoso musicians! Holy fuck, that still makes me shiver, man! Deciding to come here was a no-brainer decision for both of us."

Nodding, Lance agreed, "It was a freaky thought Friday, way before we crawled around your bed. Now we're even more like them."

"So, do we cry over the past and worry about shit, or go jam with Reyes?"

"We jam," Lance smiled.

Scott stole a quick kiss. He stepped back and tapped his comm-badge for the first time, calling, "Alden?"

Alden sniffled and sobbed, "Here guys."

Scott frowned, "What's wrong?"

"Nothing and everything," Alden whimpered, "I heard every word you both said and watched the two of you. I've seen some extremely sweet and romantic stuff before, but you two... I wish that I had eyes to wipe."

Lance smirked, "How do we help an emotional AI?"

"Got me," Scott shrugged.

"I'll be fine," Alden sighed. He wondered, "What did you need?"

Scott said, "We got tired of carrying guitars and stopped walking. Can you make life easy and get us onto the Oneula Beach auditorium stage?"

"Oh yeah, that's right," Alden said. "Reyes, Chris and Jay have been wondering where you are. One free trip, and another when you're ready to leave for Ewa Beach." Before either boy could say another word, they were exactly where they asked to be, with guitar cases still near their feet.

Looking up and around for the nearest camera, both thanked their AI. Out in the audience front seats sat Jay, Chris, Travis, Erik, Paul and Ryan. Erik approached the stage, calling, "Lance, toss me one of those hand puppets, dude."

Lance pulled a Mr. Fuzzy puppet out of a pocket and tossed it, giggling, "Better hurry, Travis is making a run for it."

Catching the puppet, Erik giggled, "Thanks, dude," and hurried after his prey, still pulling his puppet onto his hand.

Holding up his Mr. Fuzzy puppet hand, Jay grinned at Chris, squeaking in his Mr. Fuzzy voice; "A new Pacific Rim Division tradition for gay couples is born."

"Still born, maybe," Chris giggled.

Ewa Beach School

Monday, November 8, 2004 1:01 PM HTZ

Prez walked into the school's computer lab, raised his right hand and loudly teased, "Okay, I swear, the teachers said this will be the easier part of the test." Kids started giggling. Younger kids, including Prince Kaimi howled laughing. Doubling over, Richie grabbed his belly, dropped to his knees and rolled. Knowing what he had said wasn't that funny, Prez blinked at his youngest son.

Sadly shaking his head, Keith sniggered, "Look up, T'hy'la. What's that on your hand?"

Seeing the blue hand puppet with it's whacked out, crooked eyes, and big red mouth, Prez chuckled, "Alden, what the hell is this?" Older kids cracked up. Kaleo, Tory, Keanu, Liki and Horacio had to turn away. Sean collapsed against Troy and they roared laughing.

Over the ceiling speakers, Alden giggled, "Jay mentioned it. I found some and made sure he got plenty to pass around. Jay's planning on giving them out to every gay couple in the Division, and making it a tradition. I thought you'd like to know."

Grinning at the puppet and Richie, now pounding his little fists onto the carpeted floor, Prez chuckled, "A tradition, huh? I can see this. As a matter of fact, I can see it Clan wide. Share the wealth and puppets, Alden."

"I was hoping you'd agree with the idea," Alden giggled. "Ten thousand Mr. Fuzzies are being passed around. Another twenty-five thousand are on order, boss. You guys in school will find them in your rooms..."

"No," Mr. T grinned, "if it's going to become tradition, let's make them available here too. Anyone that wants one can grab it."

Alden cheered, "Two boxes of two-hundred Mr. Fuzzy puppets, comin' up!"

As soon as the cartons appeared, behind Prez and beside Mr. T, every kid in the room congregated. Squatting down, Mr. T opened the boxes with a small pen knife and got out of the way. He pulled Prez, Keith, Kaleo, Derrick and Troy aside. AJ, Jerry, Tory, Mike and Sean were with the rest of the kids, handing out Mr. Fuzzy puppets. In a small huddle, Mr. T whispered, "Do you know the boy that started this?" All five Rimmers nodded and grinned. "A new teammate has presented himself," Mr. T told them. "It's your decision, of course, but I highly recommend him."

Nodding, Prez tapped his sub-vocal, softly calling, "Alden, log this date and time. Christopher Stokley and Jason Montigua are Morale Rimmers, reporting to Troy and Sean. Their commission is effective immediately, but I'll wait until Jason's wrist is out of the cast before telling them. Please remind me when Doc Andrews removes the cast."

"Got it, boss," Alden giggled.

Keith wondered, "Why wait to tell them, baby."

Prez grinned, "When they get their ID cards, prob'ly tonight, neither will look that closely. Then they'll get debit cards in a day or two, and again, they won't think to check their balances, just like we didn't. If they come screaming, then we'll know that they know, but let's assume Jay's out of commission until the cast comes off. Don't say a word, dudes. It would be even funnier if they don't find out until they're notified of phaser training."

"Ba-a-ad Head Rimmer," Troy softly chuckled. "Pissed Off Chickens lost its charm?"

Prez giggled, "Lance has Scott to shake his chicken. I challenged Reyes, but with Paul and Ryan around, I don't expect a response anytime soon." Around the room, a variety of Mr. Fuzzy voices began escaping mouths of puppet-masters.

Mr. Taylor loudly called, "As soon as you've got your puppets, return to your seats. The test is timed from when you begin. You may leave for the day, after reporting to a teacher to learn your recommended career and educational paths."

"We have baseball caps for everyone," Mr. Stevenson added. "The caps are marked with insignia, or symbols, that show your field of expertise. That way your friends know your specialty too. You'll get twice the learning experience you might normally get by helping your friends understand assignments. For examples, musicians like the Core Rimmers will likely wear hats with treble clefs; the math whiz kids get pi symbols, the scientists with physics knowledge will see the equation $e=mc^2$, biologists will see the DNA double helix, literature experts will see an image of William Shakespeare. Everybody gets a hat today and knows what they'll be studying."

"Prez gets a hat with a deceased chicken," Mr. T calmly announced.

With kids beginning to giggle again, Prez chuckled, "Really?"

Nodding, Mr. T smiled, "You'll have to take your test first."

"Aw," Prez sadly groaned, and wandered toward Keith. Holding up his puppet hand, Prez squeaked to Keith, "I still don't get any respect."

Taking Prez's un-puppeted left hand, Keith led his lover to the computer workstations, so they could finish playing the games and watching cartoons that had been cleverly disguised as a placement test. "Come on, fuzzy sex-machine," Keith sniggered, "we can't be the last to finish."

"You only wanna play with my fuzzy," Prez squeaked.

"Damn right," Keith leered.

Running up to his dad and pop wearing his Mr. Fuzzy puppet, Richie raised the pitch of his already high voice, giggling, "Mr. Fuzzy wants to play with Jimmy." Troy wasn't far away, and sputtered trying to hold in his laughter.

Prez's Mr. Fuzzy told Richie's Mr. Fuzzy, "You can find Jimmy's fuzzy right after school."

Wearing an extremely evil grin, Sean approached Troy with his Mr. Fuzzy. Troy cracked up and jogged away. Sean chased after his Lover. All around the room, kids were being silly with their puppets. Couples of every orientation were being provocative. Aaron Farris and Stephen Wickes were being uncharacteristically bad, starting a fuzzy-grab-tag game. Bruce Downing was already at a station, taking his test and consulting with his Mr. Fuzzy for the correct answer to the current question. Seated at the next row in, Carmella, Dewi and Kokaku were watching their big brother and completely hysterical.

* * * * *

Since Billy had done such an impressive job that morning with the spreadsheet, Troy and Sean promised to arrange for the data to be uploaded onto the web server. There it would become part of the Morale Rimmer's section of the web site, so kids could see what games were at which base. Billy was relieved of his data gathering role to concentrate on building his relationship with Robbie. The task was passed to Jason. Enthusiastically, Jason took the job, believing that if his quiet and shy big brother could score a boyfriend, then maybe he could too.

Deciding to break the larger group of kids into smaller teams, so they could cover more ground, Jason asked for volunteers to check the pools, pool house, indoor rec center and playground. The youngest kids, led by Jimmy and Scott, were sent to the playground. Terrance Parkinson and Mike Busse had just volunteered to scope out the pool areas with the other teens when Travis raced into the rec room, with Erik only a few paces behind him, wearing his Mr. Fuzzy.

All the teens and tweens began giggling and laughing at the two goofy boyfriends. Bouncing their eyebrows at each other, Neil and Tad knew exactly how to play fuzzy games and evilly grinned. Jason giggled, "Where did you guys get that... thing?"

"It's a Mr. Fuzzy!" Travis laughed.

In an altered voice, Erik snickered, "It's a randy Mr. Fuzzy!"

Carter Rackham chuckled, "Where did you get it?"

"At the auditorium, next door," Erik answered, and circled the pool table that Travis was using as a blockade.

Travis giggled, "There are more over there."

"Oh, hell yeah!" Carter cheered.

Carter's roomie and boyfriend, Doug Zimmerman chuckled, "You wouldn't?"

"We would," Carter smiled. He took his boyfriend's hand and started out of the room.

Glancing around and noticing that all the kids were interested in the toy, Jason giggled, "Okay, let's explore the auditorium and get our Mr. Fuzzy puppets." Giggling kids started out of the rec room.

To Jason's right, Kenny Hunnicutt shook his head, softly sniggering, "It's a baby's toy, man."

Stan Given, on Jason's left side, pointed to the two teens in a stalemate at the pool table and smiled, "Looks like any one can have fun with it though." As soon as the last of the youngest kids were out of the rec room, Erik faked a dash across the top of the pool table. Roaring hysterically, Travis bolted. His next stop would be their dorm room, where he hoped to get his Fuzzy possessed boyfriend under some semblance of control.

On the way through the dining room, Jason tapped his comm-badge, calling, "Jimmy?"

Jimmy giggled, "Yeah, Jase."

"We're going over to the auditorium to get some toys, bro," Jason shared. "I'm pretty sure your group of kids would like them, so meet us there, 'kay?"

"What kind of toys?" Scott suspiciously wondered.

"Goofy hand puppets," Kenny giggled.

A bunch of little kids prompted Jimmy and Scott to go see the puppets. Jimmy giggled, "Kewl. We're on our way, Jase."

"See ya in a few, bro," Jason smiled.

The Oneula Beach auditorium was about one-fifth the size of the auditorium at Ewa Beach. With five thousand seats, they could still accommodate the entire division's future needs. The kids from the rec room came in the theater, not realizing anyone was in there. On stage were Reyes, Joey, Lance and Scott, playing the Rolling Stones classic Brown Sugar. Lance and Scott were singing and playing their guitars. Behind them and on risers, Joey played electronic drums and Reyes played a drum kit. In the audience front row seats sat Chris, Jay, Paul and Ryan.

First down to the stage and front row, pulling Doug along with him, Carter saw the puppets on Jay's and Ryan's hands. Over the music, Carter loudly asked, "Where are they, Jay?"

Pointing Mr. Fuzzy forward, Jay hollered, "On the stage."

The puppets Lance and Scott had brought with them were in a pile near a stage monitor. Thankfully, Alden saw the group of kids and teleported another box of two-hundred puppets directly beside the quickly diminishing pile. Over the auditorium's ceiling speakers, Alden giggled, "There are more in the box guys, plenty for everybody."

Taking over the lead vocals, Lance helplessly sniggered at the crazed and enthusiastic kids. Backed away from the microphone, Scott cracked up.

Slowly shaking his head, Chris muttered, "Look what you've done, Jay."

Shrugging, Jay grinned, "My idea was gays only. How would I know all the kids would want a Mr. Fuzzy? Now that I think of it though, it makes sense." Chris suspiciously squinted and smirked at his partner. Leaning closer, Jay explained, "These kids have had years of cold prickly circumstances and lives. Now they've got a kewl place to live and lots of warm fuzzies."

Chris giggled, "You're a sick, sick man," and then stole a kiss. Around and behind them, kids armed with Mr. Fuzzies and playing with their friends took seats.

On stage, the song ended and all four musicians laughed at the kids. The kids applauded the musicians. It was the first time Lance and Scott had ever been on stage, and they were surprised with the applause. They looked back at Joey and Reyes, who began tapping their drums stick together to applaud the two newbies. Reyes smiled, "You guys are pretty good." He checked with Joey, asking, "Did you expect them to play and sing complete songs?"

Shaking his head, Joey answered, "I jusr wanded do jam widh you. I didn'd expecd anyone ewse ad aww. We god an audience doo now." He wondered, "Whad's dhe nexd song?"

Shrugging, Scott wordlessly checked with Lance. Lance suggested, "Do you guys know Girls, Girls, Girls?"

"Yup, I do," Joey giggled.

Putting down his drum sticks, Reyes said, "Since I don't know it, take over, Joey. I'll go spend a few minutes with Paul and Ryan." Standing, he prompted, "Call me back up, if you need to." Reyes walked down off the risers and out toward the audience, where his boyfriends were sitting.

"Keww," Joey giggled. Looking over at Lance and Scott, he asked, "Wouwd you guys wand do meed anodhew good guidaw pwayew?"

After checking with Scott and receiving a nod, Lance said,

"Sure, Joey."

Tapping his comm-badge, Joey called, "Casey, ged youw guidaw and come jam widh us."

"Let me change into shorts and I'll be right there," KC replied over Joey's comm-badge.

Using his Mr. Fuzzy puppet to talk to his brother, Chauncey giggled, "You like KC, I can tell."

Fred grinned, "It's that obvious?"

"His name was mentioned and you immediately brightened up," Chauncey giggled. "I think he likes you too."

Standing to hug Reyes, Paul asked, "With all these kids in here now, do you think we can make the sound system a little louder?"

Offering both hands, Reyes nodded, "Sure. We only needed the stage monitors to hear ourselves before." Paul and Ryan each took one of Reyes hands. Sandwiched once again, Reyes gave each boyfriend a kiss and got kisses returned. In this smaller auditorium, the PA system was situated in the middle of the auditorium floor. The threesome walked back to the gear.

Fred softly wondered, "What am I going to do about KC?"

"What do you want to do?" Chauncey's puppet covered hand sniggered.

"I'm more concerned about you, bro," Fred admitted.

Dropping his Mr. Fuzzy, Chauncey smiled, "I know you are. We're brothers, not boyfriends though. What we've done together is fun. It's something you enjoy more than me though. That's obvious from your kisses. You taught me as much as mom and dad, in the best ways. I'm pretty sure I'm straight, even though I could possibly go for the right cute guy. This is about you though, Fred. You were my dad's brother, and you are my brother. For almost fifty years, you've been family, and you'll be family another fifty more years, easy. When I have kids, you'll be their brother. You're allowed to be happy, bro. Find who makes you happy. You know me and Brandon will love whoever, and make him part of our family."

Nodding, Fred smirked, "It's never hit me like this before, Chauncey. I've always known I'm homosexual; your dad knew, your mom knew and you know. I just never met anyone like KC before."

"This is the place and now is the time," Chauncey assured.

Transporting onto the stage a few meters before Joey, wearing boardies, a T-shirt, and carrying his guitar, KC glanced around. "Sweetness!" he cheered, and put down his guitar case. Joey introduced Lance Kinchen and Scott Shetley to his adopted big brother, Kenneth Casey McKensie. While KC got situated and ready to play, he and Joey told Scott and Lance about their band, Time Touched. Joey shared the tune they chose to play, and KC hurried to get his guitar strapped on and plugged in to an amplifier. Lance and Scott couldn't help commenting on KC's custom made Carvin electric guitar. It had a pearl white finish, a twenty-four fret ebony fretboard and a Kahler tremolo system. It was a hot rod guitar that Lance and Scott wished they could try out.

Noticing his android brother's dreamy expression, Chauncey nudged Fred, giggling, "Yeah, they put all his parts together right."

"Gimme a break!" Fred cackled and blushed.

From the mixer's microphone and over the stage monitors,

Reyes told the guys preparing to perform, "You've got the primary monitors active and an audience waiting, dudes. I'm ready for a sound check when you are."

Joey concentrated on the tempo and beat for 'Girls, Girls, Girls' and then started playing. To keep his boyfriends involved, Reyes explained the mixer, what he was adjusting and why. Having never operated a PA system before, Paul and Ryan had plenty of questions that Reyes patiently answered. With his new databases, Reyes had more knowledge than his life experiences to draw upon. KC started playing the riffs to the song. About thirty-seconds later, Scott joined in, and then Lance did. Stepping up to a microphone, KC sang the lead vocals. On queue, Scott and Lance added backup vocals during the choruses. The group jammed to an audience of about one-hundred-fifty girls and boys.

Having been on stage before, playing to much larger audiences, KC and Joey performed for them. Lance and Scott were doing their best to keep up without flubbing their guitar and vocal parts. They were doing very well, considering they had only met four days earlier, and this was the first time they'd played through amps and could hear one another.

Scowling, Chauncey asked Fred, "What are you waiting for?"

"They're singin' about girls," Fred smirked.

"That's what Lance and Scott wanted to play," Chauncey sniggered. "If ever I saw two completely straight guys, there they are." He wondered, "Would you be more willing to at least talk to KC if I weren't here?"

Shaking his head, Fred sighed, "Probably not. At least with you prodding me, I might have a chance."

Nudging his brother again, Chauncey grinned, "Go get a Mr. Fuzzy and show him you're interested."

Fred chuckled, "How?"

"Oh, don't you dare try acting shy with me," Chauncey laughed. Fred put on a perfect halo and innocent act for his bro. Chauncey giggled, "KC might buy that, but I know you. All I ever had to do was ask or show I was interested, and you were right there." Chauncey stuck his Mr. Fuzzy puppet inches from Fred's face, teasing, "Long dirty blond hair, I'm not sure if his eyes are blue or gray, and that's a really nice pair of legs attached to a nicer ass. With him dancing and shakin', I'm only wondering what's swinging. Maybe I should go find out."

Fred cracked up. Chauncey started to stand, but Fred pulled him back down into his seat, giggling, "I can do it!"

"I'm not the one you need to tell," Chauncey cackled. "Tell KC!"

At the end of the song, while the audience applauded, KC asked Joey, "What do you think?"

Joey smiled, "Dhey'we good, jUSD need some mowe pwacdice."

Nodding, KC approached Lance and Scott saying, "You are planning on taking music courses at school from the Rimmers, right?"

Lance nodded. Scott answered, "That's on our list of things to do. We've only been here since Friday, so we're taking the week off that they recommended."

Pointing to the acoustic guitar cases still closed and pushed off the side of the stage, Lance grinned, "Mike just got us those acoustics, and we each have new amps in our room. This is the first time we've played and could actually hear each other."

Scott nodded, "We didn't even know the other could sing until minutes before we came in here."

KC chuckled, "Very kewl. Let me tell you a few things." Seeing Scott and Lance nodding, KC explained, "Our band is really good, but let me tell you about your leaders. Saturday, I met Derrick, Mike, Keith, Prez and Troy. At dinner, they gave me some free info, which was really kewl. They named a chord and sang that chord in perfect five-part harmony. It's no lie, dudes, I checked it on the piano there. I'm still processing what they said, and trying to get a jump on the classes they'll be teaching. After dinner, I challenged them to learn a song from scratch. In about twenty-five minutes, they learned all of 'Band On The Run'. They played it twice, the second time as good as the record. For a comparison, so you understand, it would've taken our band three or four hours to learn that tune, and then rehearsing it as a band another couple of hours."

Scott raised his eyebrows and checked with Lance. "That's a kewl song, I guess," Lance cheekily admitted, "but not exactly what we're into."

"I figured," KC smiled. "But even the heaviest rockers toss in ballads. That's what I'd like us to try next, if you're into it?"

Lance enthusiastically giggled, "Sure. Anything new we can learn is kewl."

Scott smiled, "Show us the way, KC."

KC asked, "You've heard The Eagles tune, 'Best Of My Love'?" When they both nodded, KC instructed, "Get your new acoustics out. I'll teach you the progression, you play rhythm guitar, and I'll play lead slide." Noticing Fred Eckhart standing before the stage, KC asked, "Can you handle the keyboards?"

"It's a sing-a-long I've played before," Fred answered.

"Come on up here then," KC prompted. Watching Fred walk toward the stairs, KC added, "We need some bass to fill out the bottom, Fred. With three guitars, drums and you, we might be able to make this sound pretty decent." Scott and Lance plugged their acoustic-electric guitars into the Acoustasonic amps on the stage.

In the audience, little kids began playing a game of Fuzzy-go-seek between the rows of seats. KC taught Lance and Scott the chord progression. Fred added some piano chords to KC's instruction. Joey moved over to the full size drum kit, where he all but disappeared. KC also taught the three newbie musicians, "Since we're dudes with deep voices, the trick to singing high background vocals is to back off the microphones; that way there's less of the booming male voices and more highs. It's called proximity effect; the closer you are to the mics, the richer the sound, kewl?"

"Got it," Scott assured. Lance nodded.

KC checked with Joey, "You set back there, punk?"

Through his head set, Joey giggled, "Weyes, is dhis dthing on?"

"Sing something, twerp," Reyes answered through the stage monitors. Lance and Scott suspiciously eyed each other, wondering how good anything might sound with a vocalist that had a speech impediment.

Joey sweetly sang, "Whoa-oh-oh-oh, sweet darling, you get the best of my love. Whoa-oh-oh-oh."

Hearing perfectly enunciated words with the correct melody, Lance and Scott hollered, "WHAT THE FUCK!"

Joey loudly laughed. Something similar had happened at Archmania the first time he sang. KC sniggered, telling Scott and Lance, "This is why Joey's a twerp and a punk. When he speaks, he's not really thinking or trying, so his words come out messed up. When he's singing, he's thinking of the words and the melody, so bye-bye speech issues."

"Fucking amazing," Lance softly giggled.

Scott grinned, "We haven't started the song and I'm blown away."

KC checked, "Then let's play the tune." When Lance and Scott nodded and were ready, KC prompted, "Count us off, Joey."

Joey began hitting the hi-hat then softly counted, "One, dwo, dhwee, fouw." Scott and Lance began strumming their acoustic guitars. KC played slide guitar and Joey played the drums with brushes. Stepping up to the microphone, KC sang the lead vocals. As they had been instructed, Lance and Scott stayed about a foot back from the microphone edge and sang the second verse with KC, Fred and Joey.

Kids in the audience got up and started slow dancing together. Chris rested his head on Jay's shoulder. Jay's Mr. Fuzzy gave Chris a kiss. Chris goosed his goofy partner's ass. Jason talked Kenny Hunnicutt into dancing with him. With space between them, the two younger boys swayed and swung their clasped hands. At the end of the song, the kids applauded and cheered. One of the loudest was Chauncey, who was very proud of his android brother, sitting at a piano on the stage.

Facing Scott and Lance, but pointing at the audience, KC smiled, "See what I mean? Kids want to rock, but they want to slow it down and dance too. We're their entertainment. If we're not entertaining them, we might as well stay home."

"Let's try another tune," Scott suggested.

Humming thoughtfully, KC grinned, "Okay, The Eagles again, this time with a little more of a beat. Let's try 'New Kid In Town'." For the next few minutes, KC taught the progression. Calling Reyes back onto the stage to help him out, Joey moved back to the electronic drums, only because his short arms couldn't reach the tom-toms or cymbals on the big kit. Scott played arpeggios on his Stratocaster. Lance strummed his acoustic. For the first time, Fred tried an electric piano, since they needed those tones on the tune. When they were ready, Joey and Reyes counted off, and all six began playing.

For their audience, this tune was especially appropriate because they were all 'new kids in town'. Many of the kids got back on their feet and danced to the band. At the end of the song, they clapped and cheered even louder.

While he was playing, Lance didn't think very much of the simple chords he was strumming, but the enthused audience taught him the valuable lesson that KC intended. The song ended and the dancing kids in the audience applauded. Taking his guitar off his shoulders, Lance went to KC, giggling, "Man, we've learned so much. I can only say, thank you, but it don't feel like enough."

Nodding agreement, Scott suggested, "Would you mind playing one more tune, KC? We'll be standing right in front of the stage watching, but I'll be honest, we need to absorb some of what we've learned, or risk forgetting half of it."

KC chuckled, "That's kewl, dudes. Me and Joey can think up something for these kids."

"Pway Id's My Wife, Cwash," Joey prompted. Going to put their guitars away, Lance and Scott helplessly sniggered.

KC giggled, "I don't have a wife and don't want one, punk." Joey cracked up.

"I'm way glad to hear that," Fred softly muttered.

"Oh, really?" KC laughed. Caught like a deer in headlights, Fred blushed, giggled and nodded. Walking over to Fred, KC smiled, "Do me a favor?"

"Like?"

"Hang around for a while? I think we've got a lot to talk about."

Nodding, Fred giggled, "Yeah, I think we do too." Overhearing the two teen androids, Scott and Lance grinned at one another.

Joey went into a giggling fit and cackled, "I'm dewwing Uncah Scodd!" Hearing his name mispronounced, Scott Shetley glanced over. Seeing no one looking his way, he shrugged and finished packing his gear.

KC smirked, "As of a few days ago, we're only friends, punk."

Fred asked KC, "You broke up with your boyfriend?"

Nodding, KC shared, "He's human and sixteen. He'll be getting older and I'll always appear thirteen. What's not a problem now will eventually become one, when he's thirty and seen with me. We figured it's better to stay friends."

Fred sighed, "I'm sorry to hear it."

Shaking his head, KC grinned, "Everything happens for a reason. When I saw you today, I wondered if maybe you were the reason. Were you thinking along the same line?"

Nodding, Fred giggled, "Yeah, and wondering why Joey calls you Crash." Joey howled laughing and slipped off his drum throne, falling to the riser floor absolutely hysterical. Reyes helped his android brother up and made sure he was all right. Joey never stopped laughing to answer the question.

Rolling his eyes, KC grinned, "I promise, I'll tell you later, when certain little twerp ears can't hear."

Walking down the drum riser's steps, Reyes softly chortled, "Does anyone want to go surfing at Malibu Bay?"

"QUIET YOU!" KC laughed. Sputtering and trying to not crack up, Reyes nonchalantly walked down off the stage and returned to Paul and Ryan.

Suspiciously glancing around, Fred wondered, "In California?"

Nodding, KC chuckled, "You'll know everything there is to know tonight." Gesturing to the piano bench, KC smiled, "Have a seat. After me and Joey play another tune, we'll go for a walk."

Nodding, Fred softly muttered, "I like the view better here anyway," and looked over his shoulder at KC.

Beginning to realize that Fred was a nice mix of shy and sly, KC bounced his eyebrows. Joey giggled, "Dhad means Fwed wikes youw budd, Casey."

"I know what it means, punk!" KC chuckled. "Are you ready to play, or just make bad jokes?"

"I can do both," Joey giggled, and returned to the drum throne behind the full acoustic drum kit.

Tapping his comm-badge, KC ordered, "Stevie, get my acoustic guitar, dude." When the guitar didn't appear and Stevie didn't reply, KC called, "Stevie?"

Sounding very annoyed, Stevie sourly grumbled, "What?"

"Uh, my acoustic, please?"

"No."

Slumping, KC scowled, "Why not?"

"Because you're hooking up with Fred," Stevie bitterly complained. "All the really cute androids are dropping like flies! We lose Paul, Reyes, you and Fred, in one day's swipe! This bites!" Out in the audience, Chauncey cracked up.

Fred giggled, "Stevie, and all you guys listening, you need to check out Brandon, over at Des Moines."

Six previously disgruntled AI's pleasantly sang, "That's right!" and the arguing over the cute Des Moines Division's android began. KC rubbed the center of his forehead, as if his positronic brain were about to explode.

Sniggering his ass off, Fred called, "Joey?"

Unseen behind the drum kit, Joey giggled, "Yeah, Fred?"

"Are you thinking of a boyfriend?"

Joey blushed and giggled, "Uh huh, about my size, maybe a widdwe tawwew wouwd be weawwy nice!"

"There aren't any androids or humans about Joey's size," KC softly teased.

Breaking the audio connection with his five brothers, making an audible pop over the comm-badges, Stevie giggled, "Can we talk later, Joey?"

"Suwe, Sdevie," Joey giggled, "pwease ged Casey his guidaw fiwsd."

"Anything for my well endowed boyfriend," Stevie giggled, and the acoustic guitar materialized on its stand, as it had been in KC's bedroom.

KC returned his electric guitar to its case, and then picked up his acoustic guitar. He checked with Joey, "Ready, well endowed boyfriend?"

Waving the brushes high over his head so KC could see, Joey giggled, "Weady, cude-blond-budd!"

"My butt's not blond," KC sniggered.

"I'ww have Fwed doubwe check," Joey cackled.

"This is not a problem!" Fred cheered, and uncontrollably blushed. Joey cracked up.

KC sniggered, "Don't encourage him."

Fred giggled, "I'll encourage you then."

KC smiled, "I really hope so," and went to the center stage microphone.

Well hidden behind the full-sized drum kit, Joey teased in a sing-song voice, "Casey and Fwed, sidding in-a dwee..."

Stopping before the microphone, KC ignored the remark, and instead told the audience, "This song's called, It's My Life." He began playing the solo acoustic guitar introduction that he had spent hours rearranging.

Standing directly before center stage, Lance and Scott watched KC play and start singing. KC only occasionally looked at his fretboard. He was playing an intricate combination of chords, bass lines and licks. It was obvious that KC had experience before an audience. Lance leaned over to tell Scott, "We've got a lot of work to do. Singing for six was okay, but over a hundred freaked me out."

Nodding, Scott assured, "When we're not in bed, we're practicing all day and night, every day and night, from now on."

Moments later, Lance leaned over again, giggling, "You're making plans?"

Nodding, Scott made eye contact with Lance, promising, "Lots, about twenty of sixty years worth, I figure, but give me time; I'll fill the sixty years."

Completely speechless, Lance reached over and took Scott's right hand in his left hand. As badly as they wanted to watch KC perform, Scott and Lance kept gazing at one another. They occasionally squeezed their hands, until the song ended. KC smiled, "Thanks, you've been awesome; that's about it for now though. We'll catch you later."

Releasing one another, Lance and Scott clapped their hands like the rest of the audience, and then walked the length of the stage to climb up the steps. Since the show was over, Mr. Fuzzy armed kids in the audience began filing out of the theater. Fred noticed that Chauncey was leaving too, with Pat, Ralphie, Richie, Ronnie, Garrett, Carrol and Trevor. Once down off the drum riser, Joey flew across the stage and down the steps to Reyes, Ryan and Paul. Lance and Scott thanked KC for a great time and chatted a few minutes. Knowing that KC had plans with Fred, Scott shared that he and Lance had become a couple that morning. Scott and Lance went to stand near their guitars. Lance tapped his comm-badge, calling, "Alden, can you get us home, please?"

Both were instantly transported with their guitars into their dorm room. Alden giggled, "There you go, guys. Just so you know, the video and audio feeds in your room are now being routed to one of my VI's. That means that only if the VI hears 'a kid in trouble' will I see or hear anything. You already taught me so much, you deserve privacy, and you'll get it."

Looking over at the corner camera, Scott and Lance sniggered, "Thanks, Alden."

When there was no response, Lance asked Scott, "Sixty years?"

Scott grinned, "Until we're old, gray and can't get it up without a day's forewarning."

"If I can't get it up for you, check my pulse, I must be dead," Lance giggled.

Scott smiled, "Tell me that you love me?"

"I do love you, very much," Lance assured, and lifted Scott's hand. Concentrating, he inspected Scott's palm and then traced each finger. "I never thought I'd be doing anything like this," Lance muttered. "I just can't help it though." He looked up into Scott's eyes, softly asking, "Am I being dumb?"

Reaching up and gently wrapping his free hand around Lance's ear, Scott whispered, "No. Nothing you've ever said was dumb."

"This hand plays guitar and touches me. Before we met, I was never touched the same way."

"Your ears hear me. You make me feel like I have something important to say."

They moved closer together, embraced, kissed and remained like that several minutes. They softly chortled when their bodies reacted to the closeness. Without delay, they helped one another undress. Lance confirmed, "You want me in your bed, all the time?"

Nodding, Scott smiled, "It's our bed now. We haven't disagreed once in four days. If we ever do, we'll talk it out and then still sleep together. I don't even like the idea of one of us getting sick, so that we can't sleep together." He led Lance to his bed. A few Mr. Fuzzy puppets had to be tossed over onto Lance's bed. Scott then flipped the top blanket and sheet down to the foot of the bed. He lay on his bed, took Lance's hand and guided him onto the bed.

Only laying as far as a propped arm allowed, Lance warmly smiled, "What would my boyfriend like?"

Scott shivered, "I've already got what I love. Take what you want."

Nodding, Lance stole a tender kiss then flew off of the bed. He went to both dressers, gathering lube, dildos and condoms then returned. He put everything down on the night stand beside Scott's bed, explaining, "It's the only scary thing left to try."

Patting the bed, Scott nodded, "My ass is all yours, sexy lover boy."

Joining Scott on the bed, Lance checked, "You want me to do you first, really?"

Scott nervously chuckled, "I'm as scared as you are. Those dildos are smaller than either of us, but I know it's gonna hurt a little bit."

"That's why I want you to do me first. You're more careful and gentle."

Patting his chest, Scott instructed, "Right here, on top of me." Shifting and rolling, Lance got situated. Holding Lance in place, Scott warmly smiled, "You were great this morning. Nothing you did hurt me. You can do this every bit as carefully and gently as I can. I don't want more instructions from anyone. I want you, Lance."

Lance whined, "If I hurt you, I'm going to completely freak out."

"I know the feeling. Just like this morning though, take it slow and easy. You tell me everything you're going to do, and I'll tell you everything I'm feeling. This is going to take time; probably as long as three did this morning. We'll flip every now and then, so our bodies adjust and we each learn a little more. We've got plenty of time before dinner, so we'll take breaks to play guitar too. At some point tonight, I want to try and sit on your cock. Stuff might not work perfectly the first time, so we'll tell each other what we're feeling, exactly like all the other talks we've had since Friday morning."

Lance sighed, "Only we can make it work. I guess I'm scared that it won't work. This is way different than screwing up a song. If I mess this up, you're hurt and I'm limp as a noodle, crying my eyes out, apologizing over and over."

Warmly smiling, Scott assured, "I'd be in the very same place too. I'll tell you something though; limp dicks will get hard again, wet eyes do dry. I know you're not gonna jam an entire dildo in my ass all at once, cos your ass is just as tight as mine, and you can guess what's too much, too fast. Understanding all that, I can pretty much guarantee neither of us will be crying."

"You're awesome, man. I really do love you."

Scott chuckled, "I love you enough to go first and give you my ass. Now take it and make me yours."

Nodding, Lance giggled, "We'll take turns?"

"Here's where I want us to be real soon," Scott shared. "I want us to have our own little signals. Like singing a line or two from 'The Lemon Song', like we did this morning, only in public and without getting as suggestive. That's me telling you, 'I want you, alone, right now.' We wander back here and get busy. Nobody knows a damned thing, but we're in tune. We'll have simple looks and gestures that to everyone else are completely innocent, but we're getting it and taking off for quickies."

Nodding agreement, Lance leaned down for a deep, soulful kiss. When the kiss broke, Lance checked, "Ready?" Scott nodded. Pushing up off Scott, Lance asked, "How do you want to start?"

Spreading his legs and bending them at the knees, Scott grinned, "Like this, so we can see each other. If it don't work, I'll flip onto my belly. That's a last resort though, cos we can't see each other that way." Nodding, Lance grabbed a dildo and a bottle of lube then knelt between his lover's legs. He poured a few drops of lube onto two fingers then reached to get Scott wet.

Writhing around and reaching up over his head, Scott found a Mr. Fuzzy puppet hiding under a pillow. He slipped it over his right hand and used it to display his erection. Looking up and seeing the crazy-eyed puppet holding Scott's big, hooded bone, Lance giggled. In a goofy Mr. Fuzzy voice, Scott sang, "Well I left home just a week before, And I'd never ever kissed a woman before, But Lola smiled and took me by the hand, And said dear boy I'm gonna make you a man."

Giggling, Lance sang, "Well I'm not the world's most masculine man, But I know what I am and I'm glad I'm a man, And so is Lola, La-la-la-la Lola la-la-la-la Lola. Lola la-la-la-la Lola la-la-la-la Lola."

* * * * *

Finished showing Billy around his new house, Robbie led the way back downstairs, asking, "Do you really want to check on your brothers?"

Billy smirked, "Only partly. I'd really rather be with you, but us being alone is making me nervous."

At the landing, Robbie nodded, "I understand." He silently shared, 'I want to be with you too, Billy. Stop thinking you're a perv cos of what happened to you. If you're a perv, then I must be too, cos I want all that same stuff. Before we go there, let's spend more time getting to know each other.'

Billy nodded and sighed, "I barely know what I like, Robbie. Until I got here, I ate frozen and canned dinners. We weren't allowed to do school home work or play normal games..."

Taking a baby step closer, Robbie placed a finger on Billy's lips and softly shushed his boyfriend. Robbie smiled, "Then we have a lot we could do, besides kissing and hugging."

Intensely blushing, Billy smirked, "That's what I was taught should happen."

Robbie nodded, "Today, we're going to try a bunch of stuff." Taking Billy by the hand, Robbie led the way to the basement, saying, "The normal way to play cards is for money or plastic chips, not for clothes and dick." He took Billy to the velvet covered card table his parents had always owned. Robbie sat his boyfriend down and then parked his butt in the next chair. Picking up the deck of cards, Robbie explained the rules to Blackjack. They played a few hands without chips, just to enforce the rules and teach Billy the game. Robbie passed out equal piles of red, blue and white chips while Billy shuffled the cards. The first hand Billy dealt gave Robbie two fives, so Robbie patiently explained, "I can keep these together and work towards twenty-one, or I can split them and double my chances of winning. That's what I'm gonna do, so when I say, 'hit me', you add onto only one of the stacks. Only when I've stayed or busted do you move to the next stack. Kewl?" He put an extra chip down to cover the split fives.

"Kewl," Billy smiled.

"Hit me," Robbie instructed, and pointed to the five closest to Billy. A seven was dealt, so Robbie nodded, "Hit me again." A Jack landed and Robbie groaned, "Busted!" and pushed the stack aside so he could pull the other five closer to Billy. "Hit me," Robbie prodded. Billy laid down a King and started giggling. Sadly shaking his head, Robbie huffed, "I hate fifteen! What the heck, hit me!" Billy placed a six of clubs down, and Robbie cheered, "SA-WEET! I'll stick with twenty-one." He giggled, "Now the dealer shows the goods." Knowing what Robbie meant, but acting as if he didn't, Billy stood and reached for the fly on his shorts. Pulling Billy back down into his chair, Robbie giggled, "We'll show each other those goods soon enough! You got to pee alone after lunch. Next time, I'm following you to the toilet. I want to see my boyfriend's wiener, while he's leaking, so it won't get really stiff. Another time, away from a bathroom, I'll start playin' with it."

Billy grinned, "I'm happy enough knowing that, for now, I guess."

Tapping the table, Robbie giggled, "Show me your cards."

Already face up before Billy sat a four of diamonds. Billy flipped the other card to show a deuce of hearts. Both boys mooded.

Robbie reminded, "This is a good one for a possible five-card-charlie, the only way you could beat my twenty-one, Mister Dealer." Billy placed a three face up on his pile. Cautiously, he placed another card on the pile. It was an eight of spades. Again both boys mooded. Pointing at his busted other hand, Robbie explained, "You've gotta go for it, Billy." Another card was placed on the pile face up – another three. "LUCKY!" Robbie loudly laughed, and pushed the chips over toward Billy.

"It figures," Billy giggled, "for years I kept losing at cards and losing my clothes. Now I win plastic chips."

"You're winning way more than that," Robbie smiled. "Maybe someday we'll play your way for clothes, with Ralphie, Pat, Ronnie and Garrett."

Billy squealed, "Seriously?"

"Sure, dude," Robbie giggled. "It's fun and normal for gay dudes like us. It's not fun or normal for adults to play with kids, who're less than half their age."

Fumbling the cards, Billy balked, "Uh... that sounds dangerous."

Helping gather the fumbled cards, Robbie assured, "Us getting boners isn't a problem; that's completely expected, before the first card is dealt. The only thing dangerous is flirting with somebody other than your boyfriend. It also proves how serious each of us really is. I know who I'm most interested in. How about you?"

Unsure how to say anything, Billy softly whimpered then abruptly leaned over to steal a quick kiss.

'I know,' Robbie silently grinned, 'I'm falling for you because of what you think, Billy. There are bunches of really cute guys around these bases, but none are like you. There's only one reason why we're not rolling around a couch or a bed right now; I want my parents to meet you. Once that's done, we're set, dude. As close as we've been all day, we're going to get lots closer tonight. You'll see my folks treating my brothers the same as me. They really don't care about Ronnie's or Richie's pasts. All they want to do is fix what was seriously messed up, by showing a real parent's love, not some pervs whacked out bullshit.'

Vocally, Robbie gently but firmly assured, "You'll learn that you're exactly like every other dude in the Clan. What you wish you could keep a secret from me is exactly the stuff I need to know, as your boyfriend. The only way I can prove to you that everything is very kewl, is to show you. We're here because this is where my parents will come after the school day is done. About the same time, Ralphie will be here with Pat, and Richie, Ronnie, Carrol and Trevor will be here too." He paused a moment then grinned, "Ronnie just told me Garrett is here too. You're gonna see another example of a real family, right here."

Billy softly wondered, "I'm not as bad as I think?"

Vigorously shaking his head, Robbie smiled, "Pissing on your dead foster mom was completely appropriate for that bitch. You might not know it, but I'll tell you now, since you'll learn it soon enough anyway; Garrett killed his foster father for raping him one too many times. My parents don't care about that. Actually, they think the scum got it ended too easy. Thinking about that jack-off, my dad had the most violent thoughts I ever heard – seriously worse than any horror movie I've seen. A lot of the adults here are just as disgusted as my folks are with that stuff. Knowing what their sons can do and have done, the Core Rimmer's parents are ripped up inside. That's where you are now, Billy; completely safe with everyone, surrounded by good men, women and kids. Most of all, you're safe with me."

With a brief pause, Robbie easily read Billy's next worry. He sighed and smirked, "I don't know exactly what's in your pants, but it don't matter; it's a dick I'll love only because it's yours. I know from two of my brothers exactly how sex shouldn't be. I learned from my parents how sex could and should be. You deserve to know what real love actually feels like. What Troy and Sean can't show you as parents, I can and will."

Billy grinned, "You really did stuff with your brothers?"

Nodding, Robbie smiled, "As equals, as brothers, and with lots of love. Like I told you, the first grind off was automatic the other morning. Now we're kewl to do anything, but we want to save intercourse for boyfriends. Right now, Richie is the only one of the four of us who hasn't found a boyfriend he really likes. Once you and I start doin' stuff, my brothers are on their own. Ralphie and Ronnie said the same thing, telepathically, of course." Nodding, Billy giggled. Robbie assured, "Me and my bros know exactly what's goin' on. We're reunited now and making up for twelve years apart. Soon enough, we'll each have boyfriends. That means the stuff we've done will be happy memories of something awesome that we shared. Don't be jealous of them, cos I'm not jealous of you and Jason."

"That was forced though."

"Think of it this way then; you're not a virgin and I'm not really either. You preferred Jason over the scum-bag fosters, and he preferred you too. That makes you two exactly the same as me and my bros."

"Not quite exactly the same," Billy softly shared.

Robbie sighed, "What that perverted man did to you I don't even consider sex or love, Billy. He shot his wad and was done, the fuckin' bastard. That isn't what love is. When you and I decide it's time to go there, it's gonna be way more than a wet stain on the sheets; it's going to be fun and silly and warm and all the best stuff we can give each other. That's why me and my bros decided we won't go there, dude. As brothers, we can only have the fun and part of the rest of the best stuff. A part of that isn't good enough, especially for Ronnie and Richie; they deserve it all too, just as much as you."

Robbie suddenly got up from the table. He went to a shelf unit where his old stereo boombox sat and turned it on. Loud rock blasted the room from the station it was set to the prior night. He lowered the volume then flipped the station until he found something slow and smooth. Returning to Billy, Robbie offered his hand, smiling, "Dance with me?"

Standing up and taking Robbie's hand, Billy giggled, "I didn't know you liked to dance."

Robbie shrugged and grinned, "Dancing alone or with my mom wasn't too kewl, but this is one of many dreams coming true. I want to hold you close, hear all your thoughts and reply to them." Soon, the two boys were close together and swaying. Robbie purred, "You're a really good dancer."

"I can count to four on good days," Billy sniggered, and then shared, "My dad's been teaching me a little too. When he dances, it's like he's completely fluid."

Robbie pleasantly sighed, "This is love too, Billy. It's at least ten times better than I ever dreamed it might be."

Feeling a rising problem, Billy whispered, "Don't get mad, but I'm getting stiff."

"I'm not mad," Robbie softly assured, "I'm getting a woody too. That means we really like what we're doing and who we're with. It's sex without actually having sex, cos we can feel it."

"I can feel your heart. It's beating really fast."

"So is yours."

Billy and Robbie remained in the basement dancing close together until the radio announcer told them it was approaching three in the afternoon. Bursting bladders also proved it had been too long since their previous bathroom visits. As promised, Robbie joined Billy in the bathroom off the kitchen dinette. Slow dancing for about two hours meant they shared far more than originally planned. Giggling through the time it took for their erections to deflate enough to allow a good piss, they had chances to pass several silly remarks.

Robbie had dropped his shorts to give Billy the entire picture and had gotten a good look at Billy's goods. Far too quickly, Robbie's leering grin was replaced with a worried frown.

Billy wondered, "What's wrong?"

Robbie smirked, "Here comes my brothers and Pat." Because it was faster and silent, Robbie sent, 'Pull your shorts up, Billy. Wash your hands in the sink here, I'll wash mine in the kitchen sink, and we are totally innocent.' Pulling his underwear and boardies up, Robbie made a hasty exit from the bathroom.

Watching Robbie's white ass wiggle into his clothes, Billy helplessly giggled.

'Very funny!' Robbie giggled, 'Get it out of your system, cos one of triple-trouble will read your thoughts. They can know we're falling for each other, but that's it.'

The front door opened and Trevor ran into the house, down the wide foyer and into the kitchen by the time the other five made it into the house. Sticking his Mr. Fuzzy covered arm into the bathroom, Trevor giggled, "Hi Billy." He ran to his big brother Robbie at the sink, proudly displaying his new toy and telling him, "We got you and Billy some Mr. Fuzzies too!"

Entering the room, Ralphie grinned, "All the kids love 'em, bro." He added, 'And watch what happens with a boyfriend,' and then had his Mr. Fuzzy covered right hand nibble on Pat's neck.

Cringing, Pat laughed and countered with a Mr. Fuzzy neck nibble of his own. Cracking up, Pat backed off and down the foyer with Ralphie pursuing his Fuzzy quarry.

Carrol scooped up his little brother, telling Robbie, "Jay and Chris started it. Scott Shetley and Lance Kinchen are boyfriends too now. They were at the auditorium here, jammin' some tunes with Reyes, Joey and another teenager. You missed it!"

Holding up his Mr. Fuzzy before Carrol, Richie evilly grinned, "I get the feeling Robbie and Billy had enough fun this afternoon."

Robbie smirked, 'Careful, bro. With no boyfriend, I think you'll be needing helping hands, if you get my drift.'

Richie giggled, 'I'm being a good boy, unlike you and Billy. I think it's awesome, bro, you know it too.'

Ronnie chuckled, "Garrett was here. We played some Fuzzy games too, right up until he left for home, with both our Mr. Fuzzies."

Richie sniggered, 'Ronnie's not allowed Fuzzy fun until Garrett returns.'

Smirking at Richie, Ronnie reminded, 'You've always got Mr. Fuzzy to give you a hand!'

'I'm being good!' Richie giggled. 'All this is private, unless Robbie tuned Billy into us. We're on the private line, as far as I know.'

'Would I do something like that without telling you?' Robbie sweetly asked, halos hanging on every letter.

Walking out of the bathroom, Billy saw a lonely looking Mr. Fuzzy laying on the dinette table. He slipped it on, pet the blue fuzzy head, made the eyes bounce and then displayed his Mr. Fuzzy to the room, wickedly grinning at Robbie.

"Billy!" Robbie incredulously laughed, and started backing away. Watching with great amusement, Richie, Ronnie, Carrol and Trevor saw shy, reserved Billy transform into a Freakin' Fuzzy Fanatic that had only one goal – to Mr. Fuzzy fondle Robbie everywhere he possibly could.

Ralphie and Pat stopped their Fuzzy fun to see what Robbie was laughing about. Billy advanced and Robbie backed up toward the dining room. Madly giggling, Ronnie, Richie, Carrol and Trevor cleared Billy's path. Laughing his ass off, Robbie bolted through the dining room. Without a word of warning, Billy uncharacteristically leaped between Pat and Ralphie to intercept his prey. Met by a madman in the living room, Robbie roared laughing and raced back through the dining room and kitchen, with his Mr. Fuzzy possessed Mr. Hyde chasing after him.

Chapter 19

Oneula Beach, Taylor Residence

Monday, November 8, 2004, 2:52PM HTZ

Robbie Taylor raced out the kitchen sliding door with Billy Whitmore only a step or two behind him. After closing the sliding screen door, Ralphie turned to Pat, giggling, "I guess Robbie talked Billy through some worries."

"It might be a Taylor trait," Pat grinned.

Carrol joked, "So, who's going to talk Robbie through his new worries?"

"Mr. Fuzzy can do it!" Trevor giggled, not realizing the implications. Carrol, Ronnie, Richie, Ralphie and Pat evilly snickered.

Out in the open, Robbie had the freedom to really stretch his legs and run. He went around his new house, periodically looking back to make sure Billy was still behind him. Robbie playfully sent, 'Fuzzy Mr. Billy?' and waited for a reply.

'Munchie, munchie, munchie!'

'Yeah, there's gonna be lots of mouth exercise, later, after my mom and dad get home.'

'Butterscotch coated Crispy Cream cruller, yum, yum, yum!'

'That too! Swear to God!'

'Eat 'em all up! Eat 'em all up!'

'Yes, we'll eat 'em all up, holding each other close, like boyfriends do.'

'Holding... you holding me?'

'We'll never ever be apart, I promise.'

'Hungry. Deprived.'

'Me too. Starving.'

'Make it better?'

'Easily.'

'Slow?'

'Very slowly. Believe me?'

'Believe you.'

At the front of the house, Robbie slowed and soon stopped running. He faced his rapidly approaching ravenous boyfriend. Opening his arms, Robbie willingly waited for his boyfriend's onslaught. Billy stepped right into Robbie's arms and held on with all his strength. Knowing what Billy needed most, Robbie tenderly kissed every inch of Billy's face.

As the son of two teachers, Robbie knew a little something about transference. Billy's deepest demons had just made their presence clearly known through Mr. Fuzzy. From all the talks and mind-talking they had done since that morning, Robbie understood perfectly where Billy was at. Before being rescued, Billy had plenty of sex, but very little real love. In the many kisses he was planting, Robbie accepted the task of correcting those problems, beginning with assurances that he had every intention of being exactly what Billy needed at all times. Billy would get a lot of love, primarily from Robbie, from Billy's new family, and also from the entire Taylor family.

With each kiss, Billy's strength escaped a little more. Soon, Billy was withering and softly cooing. Holding Billy tight against him, Robbie planted the final deep kiss. Swooning, Billy had to hold on to Robbie a little tighter for a moment.

Ralphie and Pat came out of the house, only going as far as the top step and sat on the porch. When the kiss broke, Ralphie grinned, "You ain't a perv, Billy." Looking over at Robbie's longer-haired mirror image, Billy then checked with Robbie. Robbie smiled and nodded.

Pat giggled, "Me and Ralphie played show-and-tell a couple o' times since Saturday. That's step one."

Gesturing to himself and Pat, Ralphie smirked, "We're what you think of as 'those normal kids', ones that didn't have perv adults messin' with them. Robbie's thinking just like me and Pat. I swear it's true."

Pat firmly stated, "We're gay, just like you, Billy. Me and Ralphie took step two yesterday."

Ralphie sniggered, "Talk to Ronnie about Garrett. What you're thinking and so worried about, we're thinking too. If you still want more proof, ask Richie how he wants it to be with a boyfriend, once he gets one. It'll be the same story, man. Will he hold me close? Will he want me to hold him close? What's he got hangin'?"

Grinning and blushing, Pat continued, "What's he got hard?

How does it feel to touch another guy's bone, or have him touch mine? Will he want me to feel it? Will he want to touch me that way too? They took what they wanted from you, bro. I didn't take from Ralphie, I gave him what he asked for. He gave me what I asked for. Giving is way different from taking."

Ralphie nodded, "Getting there is nerve wracking, like Christmas, birthdays and amusement park thrill rides all rolled into one, but it's all worth it. We're hoping for step three and some oral fun soon, but ya know, step two was so much fun too. It wouldn't bother me if we stayed on step two a while."

"Won't bug me either," Pat confirmed. "There's something that happens when two guys hold each other close and kiss, then just add a slow stroke. All that stuff you had to do changes when it's something you both want to do. You'll keep checking with him, is this okay; am I doing you good?"

"The real trip is realizing you can't even be separated to take a dump without feeling like someone's missing here," Ralphie giggled.

Shaking his head, Pat sniggered, "It's really sad, but so awesome. Five minutes apart and we're getting jittery, swear to God."

Ralphie turned slightly then leaned over to rest his head on Pat's lap. It was as much for closeness and sharing as it was to show Billy how easy and comfortable things get. Pat ran his fingers through Ralphie's hair. Ralphie looked down the porch steps at his bro's new boyfriend, giggling, "Pat reads while on the bowl. He disappeared for almost fifteen minutes, reading one of our mom's magazines, believe it or not, and I about had some kind o' breakdown." Innocently smiling, Pat looked up for his stack of brightly shining halos.

Billy giggled and again checked with Robbie. "It's true," Robbie chortled. "Me, Richie and Ronnie were like, let the dude have a healthy shit and relax. He won't fall in and drown!"

Stepping outside with one of Trevor's blow-up pool arm-floats, Ronnie lay it on top of Pat's red head, sniggering, "There ya go, Pat. It almost looks like a halo." Ronnie smirked, "All you guys have it easy compared to me and Garrett." Taking a seat on the other side of Pat, Ronnie sighed, "We're separated by five time zones. He's got family to be with there, and I've got family to be with here too. I'm getting used to going from daytime to nighttime to daytime, in the seconds it takes to walk through a door."

Robbie grinned at his boyfriend, assuring, "I've never lied to you and never will. We're the same. Everything you want, I want too."

Pat asked, "Do you know what testosterone is, Billy?"

After mulling it over, Billy reluctantly admitted, "I'm not sure."

"It's a hormone," Ralphie stated, and cupped his crotch, adding, "from right here, in our jewels. What we ain't pumpin' out yet is swimming in our blood, making each of us a little crazy. It's what's pushing us to hookup with boyfriends."

Pat grinned, "Of course, if we were straight, then we'd be chasing tits instead of dicks, but you get the idea."

Ronnie grumbled, "Those pricks in St. Joe took advantage of us, Billy. Me and Garrett have lots of dirty laundry to clean. Every chance we get, the piles get just little smaller." Forcing himself to calm down, Ronnie sighed, "My bros helped me, and got me hooked up with Garrett. Robbie's falling for you, so it's time to return the favor. We'll get together with Adam and his bros to help you too, Billy."

Stepping outside, Richie grinned, "Sorry I took so long. Trevor wants to learn to read, like now, before school starts, so me and Carrol got Alden to get some books and videos." He briefly locked eyes with Billy and then with Robbie. Richie scowled, "You all covered just about everything except one thing. As soon as we can, when Billy's more ready, we have got to find out what the deal is with his telepathy. I wanna know why we can hear him, when we can't hear hundreds of other adults and kids when we're looking right at them, here and in Des Moines."

"It's a little less important than Billy's worries," Ralphie softly reminded.

Walking around Ronnie and heading down the steps, Richie grinned, "I know, bro. So, Billy, Carrol's been my foster brother for years. Because I missed him so much the first few days here, I thought I was falling in love with him. He wasn't so sure if he was falling for me. Kisses proved that ain't the case. French kissing Carrol was fun and funny, like a silly joke, so we're brothers, which is plenty. Somewhere out there is a dude made just for me. God help him when I find him." Robbie, Ronnie, Ralphie, Billy and Pat cracked up. Richie giggled, "It's so true. He won't be able to stand still without me attaching myself to him. You're not a freak, Billy. You're an adolescent gay dude, just like the rest of us." Spinning around to face Ralphie, Richie laughed, "Yes, I will, daily!"

Grinning madly, Ronnie and Robbie sadly shook their heads. Covering his face and hair with both arms, Pat suddenly went into a giggling fit. Robbie checked with Ralphie. Shrugging, Ralphie giggled, "Go ahead."

Robbie told Billy, "My bros have long hair, and so did I, about a month ago. My hair's been cut to support a friend with cancer. Ralphie and Richie take their love of hair just a tiny bit too far, which is why Pat's embarrassed. Pat raced over here to shower with Ralphie this morning. Ralphie shampooed Pat's hair and then started licking it."

Ralphie giggled, "It's a game! I swear, it's just fun!"

Wrapping an arm around Pat before he imploded, Ronnie focused on Billy, sniggering, "If you still think you're weird, take it from Ralphie and Richie, you're not quite so weird after all."

Richie sniggered, "You're thinking the same things too, Ronnie! You just ain't gotten to shower with Garrett yet."

Widely grinning, Billy asked Robbie, "Will you want to lick my hair too?"

"I really don't know!" Robbie laughed. "This morning it was just too funny and weird, but now... yeah, I can almost see me tasting every part of you, including your hair."

Billy thoughtfully hummed then grinned, "I can see it too. I'll bet that licking your buzz-cut hair would feel wicked kewl." Blushing and softly sniggering, Robbie gave Billy a few more tender kisses. Ralphie, Richie and Ronnie roared laughing.

Still covered behind his arms, Pat giggled, "Oh my God, we're all certifiable."

* * * * *

Ewa Beach Base, C.S.P.R.D. School

Monday, November 8, 2004 3:00PM HTZ

Working on his placement test, Prez listened to Vivaldi's Four Seasons, the Winter movement. Questions were popping up on his screen almost as fast as he answered them. In Prez's sub-vocal, Alden confirmed, "This is your last question, Prez."

"This was too easy," Prez grinned. "The strategy game was at least challenging."

"You and Derrick did very well there too," Alden confirmed. He then giggled, "I had to wake up Mike twice during this Vivaldi series of questions."

Marking the final answer to the test, Prez stretched and chuckled, "I'm not surprised."

"Go get your deceased chicken hat, boss," Alden prompted.

Standing and looking over Keith's shoulder at his test, Prez smirked, "All this to learn I'm a poulterer?"

"I am not goin' there," Keith cheekily grinned.

Leaning down, Prez placed a kiss on Keith's cheek, softly promising, "Then I will; as soon as you're done, I'll finish off your chicken."

Into all the Core Rimmers' sub-vocals, Alden giggled, "Um... guys, I really hate to tell you, but there's work to be done first." A chorus of groans rang around the school's computer lab.

Slouching, Prez softly bitched, "A rescue, three days after Battle Of Earth? You've gotta be..."

"No," Alden quickly corrected. "We received a phone call just before you started your afternoon session. It's from the Southwest regional FBI Director, wanting to talk to you, Prez."

Knowing bits and pieces about the strained relationship between the Clan and the FBI, Prez grouched, "Wonderful, I can barely wait."

Alden said, "Although I don't know the purpose of his call, I'd doubt the task will take too long. The better, more enjoyable task is what King Aalona asked me to pass along. He'd like at least Prez and Keith to join him at Kaho'olawe this afternoon, before dinner."

From the sub-vocal in his left ear and from his right ear, several workstations down, Prez heard Kaleo cheering, "I'd have no problem going there again. It's beautiful, Prez." Completing his test, Keith stood, wrapped an arm around Prez and pulled him close, so they were hip-to-hip. Mike, Derrick, Drew and Corey finished their tests. They all joined Keith and Prez.

"King Aalona took a tour of that island this morning," Alden informed the team. "I believe our King was as impressed as Kaleo, which is why he'd like to go again, with as many Core Rimmers as are able."

Lines of kids that had already finished their tests were before the teachers. Troy, Sean, Kaleo, Tory, AJ and Jerry joined their teammates gathering around Prez. Drew softly shared, "Me and Corey still need to talk to Leo. We haven't even decided when, never mind how we're going to tell him."

Laying his right palm out flat, Prez asked, "My PADD, please Alden?"

Alden giggled, "I played a few games of Pissed-off-Chickens, since I have your PADD as much as you," and transported the device into Prez's hand.

Prez grinned, "How'd you do, Alden?"

"I'm sorry, boss," Alden giggled, "but it's way too easy for me."

Maybe when I have fingers I'll try again."

Looking at his PADD's calendar and planning to also check e-mails, Prez softly asked, "Does everyone want to go with the King?"

Around Prez, heads nodded or vocally confirmed they wanted to check out the Island. Troy stipulated, "We need to check on our boys, Prez. Billy's hookin' up with Robbie Taylor, so we'll take some time to talk with them and the rest of the Taylors."

Prez nodded, "Do what you need to do. Kaho'olawe will be there another day."

Preoccupied with another matter, Drew instead wondered, "Prez, when do you think it would be good to talk to Leo?"

Prez shrugged, "It's not like my situation was at all. Since he already knows, I don't think I'd ruin a dinner with thoughts like that. I'd shoot for a time well after he's digested dinner, and at least an hour or so before bed. Give him time to cry it out, don't you think?"

Catching something in Prez's tone and stance, Corey softly asked, "You don't think we should tell him?"

The remaining Core Rimmers gathered around. Prez gently prodded, "Tell him what? The only things I would tell him are that his parents are being cared for, and their murderers will also be taken care of." Looking back at his PADD, Prez checked e-mails and softly shared, "Leo doesn't need to know they stayed where he found them for two days, does he? One big nightmare of mine, and I'll bet of Bruce too, is that we knew our parents were missing. Neither Bruce nor I needed to see our parents' remains to understand they couldn't have been pretty. Save Leo from that nightmare. As for the murderers, when you mention them, you'll have to tell him our plans too. How do you think he'll take that?"

So no other kids would overhear, John sent to the team, 'Leo was raised like us. I know he'd react the same way we're reacting.'

Looking up, Prez said, "Jerry and AJ, your phaser training is tomorrow from three until six, and on Wednesday from one until four, at the Rapid Response Base. Details are on your PADDs. Attend a half-day of school on Wednesday morning, if you feel like it. If I were you, I'd spend the time with my kids." He paused and then grinned, "Keith's research into bonding and marriages says that Lieutenant Vorik is fully qualified to perform the Vulcan bonding. The real kick is that, because of my Starfleet rank, I'm supposedly qualified to perform marriages."

Stephen went into a giggling fit and all eyes turned to him and John. "It's not me," John grinned, "it's what you dudes are thinking."

Tory teased, "Okay, who's been nuptializing before their nuptials?" Smiling and backing up, Kaleo pulled Tory out from between Sean and Jerry. Kaleo guided Tory closer to the other married Rimmers. The remainder of the team sniggered and side-stepped away from AJ, Jerry, Sean and Troy.

Mike giggled, "Aww, they're blushing."

"Too cute," Corey and Kaleo sang.

Sadly shaking his head, Troy grinned, "I wish I could believe Archnania made you all this evil, but I can't."

Sean smirked, "Like you dudes are so innocent and never did more than kiss."

"That's our story and we're stickin' to it!" Kaleo, Tory, Drew, Corey, John and Stephen giggled.

Prez chuckled, "So, decide on a date and whether you'd like a formal, semi-formal, or boardies and T-shirts informal wedding."

Keith sniggered, "Think about your sons too. Unless there happens to be a nest, seven boys will need to sleep-over at friends homes..."

"So their dads can nuptialize themselves into wheelchairs," Derrick joked.

Almost as red in the cheeks as his hair, Jerry tapped AJ and giggled, "We should find our boys."

Beginning to restore his normal skin tone, Troy nodded, "We know where Billy is. We'll have to find our other three."

"For the meeting with the fumbling FBI dude, I think we should all be together," Prez suggested.

Nodding agreement, Keith said, "Let's get that boring little task out of the way first."

Chattering agreements, the Core Rimmers went to the next building, where tables were set up and the teachers had been waiting. AJ, Jerry, Sean, Troy, John and Stephen were the first to stop before the teachers.

Mr. Stevenson reached back into a box of baseball caps then handed one to John, smiling, "We'll be getting to know each other well, Doctor Hundser."

Seeing the DNA double-helix on his cap, John giggled, "Sweet!"

Drew softly teased, "Guess how he learned the thigh bone connects to the hip bone." Stephen turned red. Without warning, Drew flew to the high ceiling and hovered there. Drew cackled, "It was a joke, brat!"

"Which is why you didn't crack your empty skull on the ceiling," John grinned, and put his new cap on his head.

Mrs. Taylor handed Stephen a cap emblazoned with the Shakespeare bust. Stephen smiled "Literature?"

Mrs. Taylor nodded and smiled, "You almost got the question mark of a philosopher, and could likely go either way."

Mrs. Diaz handed Troy a hat with a treble clef. Gleefully, she told Troy, "I was amazed and thrilled with your performances last night." She glanced back at her four former students, joking, "You had to go five thousand miles to find a boy as capable as yourselves." Concentrating on Troy again, Mrs. Diaz smiled, "You have a gift for language too. Merging the two, you could become the band's lyricist."

Mr. Taylor gave Sean a cap with Ohms law emblazoned on it and explained, "That equation describes the relationship between current, volts and resistance. As an electrician, you could someday repair the band's amplifiers or design computer circuits."

"Really?" Sean squealed. "I'm lucky I can flip on a light switch." Slowly, Drew wafted down toward the floor.

Mr. Taylor smiled, "You identified the tools of the trade and got ninety-five percent of the answers to electrical content correct. You may have guessed a few things and gotten lucky, but you have the ability, Sean."

Troy grinned at his Tiger, proudly proclaiming, "I told you."

Mr. Stevenson passed Kaleo a cap with a T-square and compass, smiling, "Architectural design is your dream career."

Miss Perez gave Tory a cap with Picasso's self-portrait, cheering, "Abstract art. It's no wonder you and Kaleo teamed up. You're both creative thinkers."

AJ received a hat with a pi symbol. Seeing the uncertainty on the teen boy's face, Mr. T smiled, "A third of two-hundred-twenty-five is?"

"Seventy-five," AJ quickly answered, and then smirked, "Big deal, its easy."

"To you," John, Stephen and Sean chorused.

Sean told AJ, "I figured that answer only after you already said it."

"We'll build on the knowledge you already have," Mr. T calmly assured.

Jerry looked at the hat given to him by Miss Perez. She offered, "It's a computer symbol for an IF-THEN-ELSE construct. You'll be studying software engineering with Drew. Not too surprisingly, your boyfriend will be able to help you with the math, and you'll be able to help AJ understand some theory."

Stepping forward, Corey took a look at his cap with an image of Da Vinci on it. Corey scowled, "Art?"

Shaking his head, Mr. Stevenson corrected, "Leonardo Da Vinci was an artist and an engineer. He designed automatic weapons, helicopters and tanks, three hundred years before they were feasible. He also sketched pictures of human anatomy from corpses for physicians, and of course, for his own use in paintings. Your curriculum will be diversified until we can narrow down your abilities further." He then passed Drew the same hat as Jerry, asking, "Do you have questions or comments?"

Drew wondered, "Who will be my teachers?"

"Primarily, Marc Furst and Cory Short," Mr. Stevenson replied.

Three hats with treble clefs were passed to Keith, Derrick and Mike. Mr T passed Prez his deceased chicken hat. Prez chortled, "There's a sword in my chicken!" The entire team and all six teachers cracked up.

In a few moments, when he had caught his breath, Mr. T chuckled, "That sword represents your strategic and tactical abilities, Admiral. Lieutenant Vorik will be a teacher, and your day-to-day activities will add to that education. Eventually, we'll get you to Starfleet headquarters for additional education."

Derrick sniggered, "Until then, he knocks on back doors and shakes his chicken." The room exploded in laughter, the loudest from Prez.

Mrs. Taylor giggled, "Have a good day, boys. We'll see you tomorrow morning."

Mr. Taylor chuckled, "To add to our day, we've been receiving some telepathic messages from four of our sons."

Spinning around, John hollered, "Really? Already?"

Nodding, Mr. Taylor said, "They informed us of their talent Friday night. It's been getting clearer with every passing day."

Returning to the table where the teachers were now standing, John cutely smiled, "I'd like them on my Intel team."

"We know," Mrs. Taylor grinned.

Mr. Taylor said, "We're concerned about it, naturally, but all four are looking forward to it."

John nodded, "With stuff already going on, tonight's not a kewl night to get them trained; maybe tomorrow."

"We'll be sure to let them know," Mrs. Taylor promised.

Waving and turning away to join his husband, brothers and teammates, John giggled, 'I'll contact Doc Andrews for your Valium prescription, Mrs. Taylor.'

Oneula Beach Indoor Rec Center

Monday, November 8, 2004 3:07PM HTZ

Jason Mullins and most of the kids entered the indoor rec center. The group found there was a huge gymnasium in the area where a bowling alley existed at Ewa Beach. The room had all the expected gymnastics equipment including beams, thick matting on the floor, uneven bars, parallel bars, pommel horses, rings hanging from the ceiling, trampolines and vaults. Most of the kids, including Jason, were clueless about the purpose of the room.

Luckily, Vaziik chose to accompany the group. The Vulcan tween had not only described the purpose of the equipment, but also demonstrated some exercises he had witnessed from the Olympics on television. After removing his shirt, Vaziik jumped up and grasped the hanging rings quite easily. He did a pull-up, raised his legs to form an L-shape and then rotated to stand on his hands. Smoothly and effortlessly, he spread the rings and his arms to form an upside down capital 'T'. He completed his little demonstration with a somersault and landed expertly on the padded floor.

The kids cheered his performance. Typically, Vaziik waved off the applause, explaining that most of what he did was simple, by professional standards and for a Vulcan pre-teen. Still the kids wanted to know more and watched him demonstrate the beam and pommel horse. When Vaziik completed what he felt comfortable demonstrating, Jason warmly thanked the taller Vulcan boy.

Kids needed a break from exploring and wanted to play, so Jason simply said, "Go ahead." Unfortunately, they all scattered, leaving Jason alone with a PADD and only a few notes to actually enter into the device. Jason's younger brothers, Jimmy Carr and Scott Deaver led all the little kids to the playground. Jason sat at a patio table near the pool house, with teens at the diving well to his right, and pre-teens at the pool to his left. Vaziik was the one other kid not actively involved at either pool; he dove into the diving well once to cool off from his exercises, grabbed a towel and dried off.

Typing a few notes into his PADD, Jason sighed. Things just weren't turning out well, for some reason, he strongly believed. During the afternoon, many older kids had found other things to do, like Jay and Chris with the Mr. Fuzzy puppets. A bunch of teenagers had disappeared completely, like Fred Eckhart, Lance Kinchen, Scott Shetley, Travis McAuley and Erik Kendricks, to name a few. Breaking Jason's concentration, Vaziik asked, "May I join you?"

Looking up and seeing the shirtless Vulcan boy, Jason almost leered and drooled. He quickly wiped his mouth and giggled, "Sure, Vaziik. Thanks so much for that stuff in the gym. That was really kewl."

Vaziik nodded once, saying, "I found it agreeable to provide assistance. You are welcome, Jason."

Jason leaned back in the chair, glanced around and sighed. Vaziik said, "I have observed when other Terrans breathe as you have that they are either satisfied or dissatisfied. Which are you?"

Jason huffed, "I guess dissatisfied."

"May I inquire why you are feeling negative emotions?"

Shrugging, Jason groaned, "I just don't feel like I've done a good job, ya know? My big bro Billy is so soft spoken and shy, but he did great. He did such an awesome job that he scored a boyfriend without even trying. I haven't filled in a page in here, and I haven't found a boyfriend either. My dad and pop are gonna wonder what I did, and I'm just gonna have to say, nothin'."

"You are stressed, Jason."

"Prob'ly so," Jason smirked.

Vaziik asked, "May I see your PADD?"

"Why?"

"To determine if your stress is warranted," Vaziik answered. "I may not be able to help you score a boyfriend, however I can..." Kids at the pool and diving well overheard and broke into giggles. Wondering what was humorous, Vaziik glanced around. Jason rolled his eyes and uncontrollably blushed. Vaziik raised a curious eyebrow, then finished, "I can assist with your data."

Pushing the PADD across the table, Jason half-heartedly muttered, "Thanks," and then tried to shrink in his chair. Four teen boys, Carter Rackham, Doug Zimmerman, Neil Green and Tad Markell jogged from the diving well to the pool and jumped in. A moment later, a group of younger boys gathered around the four teens. Giggling erupted and a splash fight broke loose. Wanting to hide under the legs of the table he was sitting at, Jason thought, 'Fucking great! Now everybody knows I want a boyfriend. Here sits Jason Mullins, the loser, who talks to emotionless Vulcans about love. As soon as dad and pop show up, I'll gladly go home to face the rest of my ass reaming.'

Still reading the PADD, Vaziik stood and walked away. All Jason could ponder was that he had lost his eye candy too. To top everything off perfectly, boys in the pool were gathered in a huddle. Every ten or so seconds, they'd all bust up laughing and a few would back away, but continue to watch the other boys in the huddle. To save his life, Jason couldn't figure out what the heck they were doing. Vaziik returned, wearing his shirt and hiding that awesome torso. Stopped a meter before Jason, Vaziik prompted, "Join me in the rec center gymnasium, Jason."

Completely discouraged, Jason nodded, stood and followed Vaziik. "Much of the equipment in the rec center is potentially dangerous," Vaziik explained. "I have shaded those items red to mark them as harmful. Now we must ensure proper education for our children to use the equipment without hurting themselves. Agreed?" Jason only nodded and continued following Vaziik, barely hearing, understanding or caring about what he was being told. In or near every room, Vaziik ordered Alden to place appropriate computer displays and prepare video instruction for all the equipment and exercises. Walking back toward the rec center exit doors, Vaziik returned the PADD, offering, "I believe your stress was unwarranted, Jason. I have done very little to your data. Alden has provided what is required to limit possible injury to our children."

Jason nodded and glanced down at the PADD. Vaziik held the door open and they stepped outside. Still reading the PADD and scrolling through screens, Jason found his data completely reorganized by room and exercise. A page worth of data had miraculously turned into almost four pages. Jason looked up and saw Vaziik walking back to the diving well. Leaning against one of the transparent aluminum outer walls was Jimmy Matos, one of the boys rescued by Derrick late Friday night.

Jimmy called, "Got a couple o' minutes, Jase?"

Still absorbing how his weakly compiled raw data suddenly turned into valuable information that any kid who could read might understand, Jason absently nodded, "Sure." He looked up from his PADD and realized that Jimmy was amongst the group of huddled boys in the pool. Jimmy walked around the building. Jason quietly followed.

Neither boy said a word until they had rounded the corner of the rec center and were mostly out of sight from others at the pool. Jimmy nonchalantly asked, "How're ya doin', dude?"

Shrugging, Jason replied, "So-so, really." He gestured to the pool, softly wondering, "What was goin' on before?"

Jimmy grinned, "Ya mean with Carter, Doug, Neil and Tad?"

Slouching, Jason implored, "Com'on, Jimmy. Do I need to hide for a week, a month or a year?"

Rapidly blinking, Jimmy scowled, "Why would you hide?"

"Everyone knows, don't they?" Jason frowned.

"Hey! Chill, dude!" Jimmy firmly ordered. Jason remained silent, gagging on the sour rock that was lodged in his throat. Jimmy saw how upset Jason was becoming and sighed, "You didn't know Carter and Doug are gay?" Jason shook his head. "They are," Jimmy plainly said. "And so are Neil and Tad. Nobody was making fun of you, Jase. What really happened was a shoot off; paper, rock, scissors, to see which of us dudes would get the chance to be with you first. I won." Seeing only disbelief in Jason's expression, Jimmy sniggered, "Betchya Rafe Montigua, Harry Cohen, Les Freeman and Leroy Wheeler are all watching, hoping I strike out and they get a chance." Jason tried to peek through and around the corner of the building, but equipment was in the way or he was too far away to see. "Go ahead, check it out," Jimmy giggled. "Suddenly they'll all turn around to watch the fuckin' grass grow, guaranteed."

Jason evilly grinned and huffed, "You're mocking me now."

Shaking his head, Jimmy smirked, "I saw you with Leo yesterday and figured you're off the market. I wasn't the only one thinking that. No lie! Check it out; jump out fast and catch them, dude."

Jason suddenly tore to the building corner and jammed on the brakes, catching three of the four quickly scattering and looking for anything semi-interesting. Jason turned around and walked back to Jimmy.

Jimmy warmly smiled, "Did you see 'em?"

Still walking and trying to absorb everything, Jason nodded, "Rafe, Harry and Les. Leroy was already climbing out of the pool."

"Vaziik's little slip helped us all," Jimmy giggled. "How else could all the curious and gay dudes meet you or each other? We still had to have four gay teenagers shove us out of the closet. Course, they weren't expecting sixteen of us. So, out came paper, rock and scissors."

"Now you have to be lying, man."

"No way!" Jimmy laughed. "If Leo were here, and he was the prize, only the straightest dudes would've been completely disinterested."

"You like Leo too?"

"He's somewhere between a dream and a god," Jimmy giggled. "Actually, he's the reason I know I'm gay."

Jason sighed, "Leo told me and Kenny that he's not ready for a boyfriend."

"Leo's loss is my gain," Jimmy softly said, searching Jason for a facial reaction.

Jason thought, okay, he's hitting on me now. Slowly smiling and ready to play the game, Jason reminded, "I'm nothing like Leo. He lost kewl parents in the riots. My fosters were about to be arrested by the Clan, for filming and fondling me and my bros."

Leaning against the wall again in his practiced LA kewl posture, Jimmy grinned, "I'm not like Leo either. What you said only makes you different from Leo. This ain't a bad thing, dude."

Jason dropped his bomb, stating, "I know lots about sex, done the wrong way and for the wrong reasons."

Jimmy nodded, "I know a lot, but never did anything. I've had more than two days to imagine what being gay means. There's no doubt, I could do anything and like it a lot. Maybe we can learn stuff together." He paused then grinned, "You can try all you want to make me go away, Jase, but you'll fail."

Tilting his head, Jason wondered, "Why?"

Smiling, Jimmy shook his head and then giggled, "I had one chance in sixteen to get here with you. From my point of view, Leo's only real competition are you, Rafe and Kenny. I'm not giving up that easily."

"Cute," Jason smirked.

Pushing off the wall, Jimmy confidently checked, "You want the truth?"

"Please."

"I got here late Friday night," Jimmy began. "Our neighborhood was on fire and my parents never came home. Before roasting my nuts, I got out of there. I only care a tiny bit if they're alive or dead, I'd just like to know which. My mom was a cranky bitch and my dad was drunk most of the time. Home was hell. The streets were kewler. I knew the streets of my part of LA like the back of my hand. Ten Latin Kings chased me around on foot and in cars. They had to block me in an alley just to catch me. If it weren't for them telling me about the Clan and Derrick, I had my escape planned and ready to roll. I'm surprised about so many things here, not the least of which is discovering my dick was getting hard for Leo. So what do I do with this new knowledge? I start scopin' out every dick that presented itself all day Saturday and yesterday."

Jason grinned, "I was with my new dads and family both days."

Tapping his nose to signal Jason was on target, Jimmy rambled, "It was a bummer that you, Kenny and Leo were gone. The only surprises are hiding in yours, Leo's and Kenny's pants. All the rest of the dudes were kewl though, even if they caught me spying. If I were older and could really cum instead of shakin' like a spaz, I'd be a dehydrated clump somewhere. I dunno, but I think I might like dick." Jason giggled and nodded. Jimmy grinned, "With no parents to fight, and being here, I could easily say, bein' gay is no problem. I can't even try to act shy, so my personal goal was to find a friend that might become a boyfriend. I've spent too much time alone and I'm fucking tired of it. It would be awesome to have just one really kewl dude on the same page as me to hang with. Rafe's nice, but we're not on the same wavelength. Taron's my roommate and he's really kewl, but he's got cousins here, so I'm sort o' on the outside looking in. Then there's you, Kenny and Leo, who weren't around over the weekend. All day long I've been scoping out dudes about our age. I want something real and someone to be real with. I'm already hoping that can happen with you, Jase."

"Why?"

Jimmy excitedly cheered, "You're a prize on so many levels!"

Rolling his eyes, Jason giggled and blushed, thinking, DIRECT HIT!

"See!" Jimmy laughed, "You're so cute! That's the kind of real I'm talkin' about! You led us here and there all day, even with Billy this morning. You're even cuter now, acting like you don't believe any of this, so-oo-oo hear this too; I choose you over Leo, Kenny, Rafe, Harry and Leroy. My heart's already set, dude. Everyone else our age is gone; they're just not the same. I've got the street smarts and you've got the sex smarts. What more could I ask? None of them other dudes have what you have.

"Your past might be too much for them, but I'm seeing way more than your past and how cute you are. I'm also seeing a Core Rimmer son, someone who's already following in his dad's footsteps. All the Core Rimmers are so much in love, it almost hurts to watch them. Because of them, at dinner last night, I found myself daydreaming, wondering what it might be like to look at someone like that. Suddenly, my imagination went wild; every dude in the room was naked. Even the crescent rolls were dicks. Then I wondered how I would react with some dude looking at me like that."

"And your reaction might be?"

Jimmy warmly smiled and softly answered, "Kiss him quick and make his eyes close, hopefully before I pop a rod and quake in my seat. There's no doubt about it."

Jason giggled, "You're pretty intense."

Jimmy shrugged, "I had to be. The real me would just like to chill. Here, I could do that, with a little help from the right boyfriend."

Extending an arm, Jason asked, "Take a walk with me?"

"Where?"

Jason grinned, "Let's search for gorillas and G-Cats in the trees."

Taking Jason's hand, Jimmy giggled, "When Derrick's gorilla spoke, I almost shit in my shorts!"

"They're all really kewl," Jason assured.

"I know that now, but didn't then. Very little can cause me to jump like that. The fires made me jump too, right out the door."

"You're shaking."

"I know," Jimmy giggled.

"Are you afraid?"

"A little, yeah."

"Of me?"

"Omigod, no! I'm scared of screwing up and thrilled with your hand in mine. I did something right for a change."

"Do you want to know what you did right?"

"Yeah, that'd be kewl."

"You told me the truth," Jason revealed. "The first time was with the guys in the pool. I really thought I was being set up for some prank. Again, when you told me you wanted someone real. I'm real too, maybe too much for some guys."

Jimmy nodded, "I've been there too. It freaks out some dudes. Back in LA, no one really wanted to hang out with a street kid."

"Before I was even adopted, my dad and pop told us to always tell the truth. It's never been a problem for me. Those shit stains in St. Joe wanted me doin' stuff with my little brothers, so I'd have a fit, and so would Billy, until it was me and him. I told my dad and pop the way it used to be, and so did my brothers. It's real important that you always tell me the truth, Jimmy. Lying won't make anything last; it'll make it fall apart."

"I never could lie without getting caught, so I won't, I promise."

Noticing that they weren't taking the shortest path to the nearest trees, Jimmy wondered, "Where are we going?"

"We're just gonna check my little brothers at the playground and keep on walking into the trees."

"Do your dad and pop have security gorillas too?"

"Yup, Gary and Leo; all the Core Rimmers have a gorilla. Reyes has a G-Cat too."

Jimmy wondered, "Is Troy your dad and Sean your pop?"

Shaking his head, Jason smiled, "Swap 'em around. Troy's pop and Sean's dad."

Seeing their big brother Jason approaching, hand-in-hand with another boy, Scott Deaver and Jimmy Carr paused near the top of the jungle gym, checked with one another and began giggling. Jimmy nodded at Scott and they began climbing down. One of Kaleo's and Tory's sons, Mark Fikes asked them, "Who's that with your bro?"

"I'm not sure," Jimmy giggled.

Scott laughed, "We'll find out and be right back."

Russ Pass giggled, "Jimmy, your Mr. Fuzzy jumped outta your pocket."

Cracking up, Jimmy slipped off the lowest bar and landed on his butt in the sand. He stood, brushed himself off and picked up his Mr. Fuzzy, then loudly cackled at his puppet, "I told you to wait for Richie!" Scott, Mark, Russ and other groups of kids at the playground broke down in giggles.

After Jimmy stuffed his Mr. Fuzzy into his back pocket, he ran off with Scott toward Jason.

Just reaching the outdoor rec area, Jason grinned to tell Jimmy, "Those are my bros, Jimmy Carr and Scott Deaver. Jimmy's the one with brown hair and Scott's the shaggy blond."

Jimmy Matos smirked, "Your kid brother's name is Jimmy too? We'll have to do something about that."

Jason scowled, "What do you mean?"

Jimmy explained, "When you holler 'Jimmy', I don't want to wonder if you're calling me or your bro. My middle name is David, so I just changed my handle to JD. Does that work for you?"

Jason beamed, "You'd do that?"

Shrugging, JD checked, "Only if you like it. David's pretty common too, so I figured JD is better all around. Besides, I figure with a bunch of changes happening already, a name change ain't a bad thing."

Jason smiled, "JD fits you real nice."

"Ya think?"

"Yep."

Only a few meters away, Jimmy yelled, "You gotta boyfriend too, Jase?"

Jason softly giggled to JD, "Oh man, that sounds really good."

JD sputtered then loudly laughed, "Yup, he does."

Jason turned and widely smiled at JD. Coming to a halt before the two older boys, Scott smiled, "We're Jase's bros. I'm Scott and that's Jimmy."

JD nodded, "I'm James David Matos. Call me JD"

Jimmy giggled, "You went swimming with your Mr. Fuzzy, JD. He's a soggy fuzzy!"

"Oh, God," Jason softly chuckled.

Pulling his puppet out of his back pocket, JD checked it out, sniggering, "He's not so fuzzy anymore, is he?"

"He'll dry out," Jimmy giggled.

Nodding, Scott wondered, "Where are you from, JD?"

"Los Angeles," JD answered.

"We're from St. Joseph, Michigan, real near the lake," Scott offered.

Jimmy added, "Right across the road."

Looking up at his big bro, Scott grinned, "Have you guys kissed yet?"

Flushing red, Jason giggled and shook his head. Only his little brothers would ask that question. JD warmly smiled, "I'm waiting for Jase to kiss me, actually."

"All this time I've been waiting for you to kiss me," Jason joked.

Slowly shaking his head, JD reminded Jason, "I won already. Now I need some proof that you like me." Jason felt JD squeeze his hand.

Jimmy giggled, "What are you waiting for, Jase? Me and Richie kissed twice already!"

Stunned, Scott squealed, "When did you kiss Richie?"

Jimmy giggled, "Under water at the beach house, and then before bed that night. I ain't no dummy!"

Scott grumbled, and then asked Jason, "What time is it, bro?"

Checking his new Clan watch, Jason sniggered, "Three-thirty. School's out by now."

Scott tapped his comm-badge, impatiently calling, "Dillon, where are you?"

"I just got into the Oneula dining room," Dillon giggled.

Jimmy quickly asked, "Is Richie with you, Dillon?"

"I'm right here," Richie giggled.

Pulling his Mr. Fuzzy onto his arm, Jimmy giggled, "Pucker up, hot stuff!" Richie and Dillon cracked up laughing. Undeterred, Jimmy ran across the outdoor rec area field toward the dining room.

"Hey!" Scott hollered, and ran after his brother, yelling, "Don't you kiss him again, Jimmy!"

JD sniggered, "What are you waiting for, Jase?"

Jason grinned, "You really want me to kiss you?"

Nodding, JD softly admitted, "I've never been kissed, and I really want you to be the first."

Surprised with himself for not jumping at the opportunity, Jason asked, "You're really serious?"

JD giggled, "There you go being too cute again. I won't kiss you until you kiss me first."

Jason sighed, "I really don't know why I'm not goin' for it. Me and all my bros knew we wanted and needed boyfriends, before we even got out of the store."

Frowning, JD softly wondered, "Is your heart that set on Leo?"

"No," Jason firmly replied. "Leo's real cute and super nice, but I know I can't wait for him. Friends is where we're at, and that's kewl. I've been keeping my eyes open all day, lookin' for someone. You and I have talked, we're more alike and everything's really kewl. You're even blond too. Why am I standing here yappin'? I really don't know what's going on with me. It's definitely me, cos it sure ain't you."

Slightly relieved, JD checked, "Is it Kenny or anyone else?"

Vigorously shaking his head, Jason scowled, "Kenny's like a brother, no sparks at all. Dee's super nice, but he's not ready either. There's really no one else or any reason at all."

"Now you're shaking," JD grinned.

Realizing it was true, Jason huffed, "I'm so fucked up."

Gesturing toward the trees, JD prompted, "Come on, the gorillas are waiting." They started walking. JD confirmed, "If I ask you something, will you tell me the truth?"

Nodding, Jason assured, "That's what I want from you, so yeah, I promise."

"Think about this real careful, okay?" JD prompted.

"Okay."

JD offered, "You were really strong when I first asked to talk to you. You thought we were goofin' on you, so it's understandable. Since then, you've been getting a little softer and less sure of yourself."

"I guess that's true."

"Which side of you did you show Leo and Dee?"

"The stronger, more sure side."

"Interesting," JD giggled.

Jason smiled, "What's so funny?"

"It's not funny, but it is very cute!"

Through his giggles, Jason moaned, "Oh God, what've I done?"

JD explained, "You're sure of yourself and comin' on strong with dudes, until they tell you they only wanna be friends. For the first time, you're seeing someone who wants to be with you." JD raised their clasped hands, grinning, "You haven't let go of me. That shows, at least a little, that you're kewl with me, and most of what I've said and done."

"I am."

"That's it then, Jase; you'll chase after dudes who're cute and nice, but you've never had the tables turned on you. Now you know sixteen dudes were interested in you. I'm still not giving up though. You're the boyfriend I want now. Everything you've done all day and the way you are now makes it a certainty, to me anyway. Now I get to drag you out of the funk to see the light."

"That'll be a neat trick," Jason giggled. "What're you thinking will do..."

Stopping short just beyond the tree line, JD firmly pulled Jason into his arms and kissed him hard, exactly how he had wanted to kiss Jason before they had ever said a word.

Wide-eyed, Jason whimpered beyond the tongue invading his mouth. It wasn't a huge adult tongue. It wasn't one of his brothers' tongues. It was a soft, sweet tasting tongue. Getting into it, Jason held on tight. JD's tongue retreated and Jason's tongue went searching for its playmate. JD helplessly chuckled into their kiss. Practically swooning, Jason had to stop and catch his breath. His head dropped onto JD's shoulder, dreamily sighing, "Nice, really nice."

JD softly giggled, "You're welcome."

"That was awesome!" Jason panted. "Why'd you want me to kiss you?"

"I figured, the confident Rimmer son I saw leading us around would prefer it that way," JD chuckled. "Come to find out, that same take control dude wants a take control boyfriend too. He hits on the dudes he knows deep down that he can't have. I can take control, Jase, but I do want you to take control too. I really wanted you to kiss me first. You gave me no other choice, so I took a chance."

Grinning madly, Jason held on tighter then dove into the crook of JD's neck. Attaching his mouth and sucking hard, Jason started to prove to his new boyfriend that he knew a few things.

"Omigod!" JD gasped, and then began uncontrollably giggling.

Feeling his knees buckling and his dick growing, JD held on tighter, laughing, "OMIGOD! JASON!" Over the next moments, JD cringed and collapsed, with Jason still attached, guiding and supporting both of them down to their knees. Periodically, JD bellowed for the almighty and Jason, hoping one or the other might reply.

JD's cries didn't go unnoticed for long. Sean's gorilla, Leo came out of the trees. Jason waved. Leo grinned, "Sorry, Jase. It sounded like a kid was in trouble." Jason uncertainly grunted. JD shivered and bellowed laughing louder, because the grunt felt as wicked kewl as the ravenous sucking Jason was doing. Leo offered, "I'll be close by if either of you need anything." Jason hummed affirmatively and flashed Leo a thumb-up.

Intensely shivering from two quick hums in a row, JD roared, "WAIT A MINUTE!"

Leo teased, "Jason hasn't gotten a drop to feed on yet. He did tell you that he's a vampire, didn't he? Day-walker is the correct term, but in this instance, all-day-sucker works too. I think playing with his food is a family trait."

Jason helplessly sniggered at Leo's jokes. Hysterical and wheezing, JD hiccuped. Withering, JD dropped his arms off of Jason's back. In small increments, JD lowered to the ground and Jason followed. JD teetered and Jason guided his boyfriend to the ground. Kneeling over JD, Jason evilly grinned, "How's it goin', Leo?"

Leo chuckled, "Good. You achieved your goal?"

Nodding, Jason giggled, "Giving a hickey is almost as fun as getting one."

"Learn something new every day," Leo grinned. "Who's your friend?"

Jason smiled, "James David Matos, or JD." Looking down, Jason giggled, "JD, this is Leo, my dad's gorilla." Still giggling and barely able to lift an arm, JD waved.

Leo chortled, "Do I need to keep quiet about this?"

"Nah, I'll introduce JD to my dad and pop later."

* * * * *

Ewa Beach FYS Building, Conference Room 1A

Monday, November 8, 2004 3:33PM HTZ

With his entire team, Prez went to the FYS Building, asking for his mom and dad to attend the teleconference call with the FBI Director. Having the Division's FYS Director and the Director of Family Clan Short Legal Services present, Prez believed would be prudent. The last things requested were for the entire teleconference to be recorded and to have someone of authority at Orlando Headquarters monitoring.

In his sub-vocal, Seth teased, "I'm not just anybody, but will I do, Prez?"

Widely smiling, Prez chuckled, "Don't you ever take time off, Seth? Right after this call, go find Harry and a bed, in that order."

"I'll take it under advisement," Seth chortled.

"Take it under Harry," Prez softly joked.

Seth evilly snickered, "Now I get to try to keep that image in my mind and deal with business. Let's see what this FBI doofus wants."

Prez called, "We're ready now, Alden."

"Standby for Director Smithfield," Alden replied over the speakers.

A moment later the large screen on the wall flashed to life. A middle aged man with slight gray at his temples, and wearing a charcoal pin-striped suit, white shirt and navy blue tie appeared. Already, Prez didn't like the man. His suit was ultra-conservative and he appeared to be a dweeb on his best days. This was the kind of man that would wear plaid shorts and a striped sport shirt on the weekends. Very likely, he had little hearts on his cheap boxer shorts. For all Prez knew, he probably completed his weekend wardrobe with nylon socks and cheap canvas sneakers too.

Struggling to maintain a straight face, John sent, 'Stop it, Prez! Cesar and Felipe just howled laughing at the poor man they were scanning in Aunt Anna's office. Your Intel Director is about to fall on the floor and crack up.'

"Good afternoon, Director O'Brian," Director Smithfield warmly greeted.

In full Vulcan mode, Prez flatly returned the greeting then purposefully took the time to introduce his parents and all the Core Rimmers along with their formal titles. Dreading actually speaking the words, but having no other choice, Prez asked, "What can we do for the FBI?"

Director Smithfield said, "I have heard through the grapevine that your Division has decided to assist local authorities in maintaining the peace. Despite various actions of my predecessor, which caused much friction between Clan Short and our Department,

I would like to extend an olive branch, in the hope that by pooling resources, we can assist each other with apprehending individuals and groups which are using the recent invasion attempt to upset a fragile situation worldwide. I have at my disposal a classified amount of Special Forces teams, which I would feel quite comfortable in deploying, based on information that you provide, to assist your members in performing their duties. In return, I will release information that we receive which might prevent abusive situations before they occur."

Prez briefly turned to his dad, and then his mom, all the while receiving confirmation from John that the man was being earnest and did want to correct existing poor relations. In his sub-vocal, Seth said, "You have Headquarters approval if you wish to accept."

Prez noticed the FBI Director's hands nervously fidgeting on his desk. John told Prez, 'He's really hoping that we accept, Prez. I can't focus on his intentions and motives through the TV's refresh rate and across three-thousand miles. I'm good, but not that good.'

"We have much to discuss, Director Smithfield," Prez stated. "I have read many reports of citizens upholding the law, in their cities and towns, during Friday and into Saturday. There were also reports of organized crime working with police in Chicago and Las Vegas. Los Angeles was not amongst those cities. We have a nine-year-old boy here who was the only person under eighteen to escape his Central Los Angeles neighborhood alive. His parents died because of members of the Crips playing with their automatic weapons."

"I am aware of Walter Daniel Scott, Nadine Scott and Leo Daniel Scott," Director Smithfield said. He checked his notes, adding, "I am also aware that another gang started a fire, that got out of control and destroyed the home of... Carlos and Lois Matos. The Bloods were not directly responsible for the deaths of the Matos family. Every family you've investigated, so has the FBI. The FBI supports your decision and is prepared to assist."

"New York City was another riot zone," Prez categorically stated. "A dozen kids are here that used to live there. Children and parents of children are dying in the streets, Director." He then quickly asked, "Are you prepared to cut through the red tape and dispense with the bull?"

"Yes, I am. My orders originated with the President Of The United States."

Prez nodded, "Then you know the Crips took a stance of friend or foe with no safe middle ground?"

"I do."

Prez growled, "I intend to shove that decision right down their throats! The corpses of the Scotts' murderers will land directly on the porches of their families, with the same ultimatum." Jen Hundser looked at her adopted son almost like she didn't recognize him.

"If need be," Prez continued, "Clan Short Special Forces are prepared to make stands in every major city where the Crips exist, from Miami to Seattle and from Chicago to Houston. Somehow or another, these assholes have gotten away with drug trafficking, extortion and murder. We'll hit them a city at a time or in groups, to protect our children. Our telepaths will scan them and determine who is guilty of what. We'll take away their ability to make a buck and take a breath. Are you still willing to assist?"

"I have thirty Seal teams standing by for your orders, Director. The same amount of Green Berets are also at your disposal."

Prez said, "The families of four men will be preparing funerals this weekend, Director. I have contacted our Special Forces commander to prepare to raid all the funeral homes. Since Las Vegas, Phoenix and Tuscon are within a day's drive of Los Angeles, Colonel Wilkins suggested that we prepare simultaneous raids in those cities. We estimate two-hundred-fifty armored personnel and ten helicopter gunships per city."

"Give me four hours. There are other organizations which have pledged clandestine support for your group that would be more than happy to provide maid service in this situation."

Typing madly on his PADD, Prez said, "I am transferring Command of this operation to Colonel Wilkins, so that he can designate authority figures and prepare his troops. Family Clan Short is here primarily for the children. We will be gaining innocent children from these operations; they are my primary concern."

"Please tell Colonel Wilkins that anything he needs is available to him. If I can't get it directly, I know who to call to get it. Legality is not a concern."

"You are carbon copied on this e-mail, Sir. Colonel Wilkins will contact you."

"How did you obtain my e-mail address?"

"Alden, say hello to the nice man."

Over the speakers, Alden giggled, "Hello to the nice man."

A chorus of groans and boos erupted around the table, even from Jen and Jim Hundser.

"I should have known," Director Smithfield smirked. "I'm going to start sending agents to you guys for Intel training."

Prez grinned, "From here on, I'll make policy in this operation, but will otherwise be an observer. My husband, two brothers and a brother-in-law will be performing executions later this week. My nephew, my family and every kid in this division are my concern. If there's nothing more to cover now, I suggest we adjourn."

"I agree. Good evening, Sir."

"You too. Goodbye, Director."

The screen went blank and the audio connection popped.

Dropping his head onto his arms on the table, Keith chuckled, "Crawl through the screen and get in his face, baby."

Corey giggled, "Prez, he called you 'Sir'."

"Most of us came from that country," Prez sadly groaned. "It took another war for folks to wake up and smell the coffee, once again." He turned to John, asking, "Remember what we talked about Saturday night?"

"Fine," John giggled, "ya wanna help in the bear cave?"

"We'll have about fifty little kids who'll want teddy bears," Stephen prompted.

Cocking an eye-brow, Prez nodded, "That sounds like a plan. That'll give me time to chill before getting with the King."

Jennifer softly asked, "Are you all right, Preston?"

Brightly smiling, Prez assured, "I'm fine, mom. I thought he was going to warn me against fighting with the Crips. When I heard his intentions, and that Uncle Colin had heard more than I expected to give him the order, I gave him chances to back down or prove his support. All I want to do now is chill for a few extra minutes with some little tikes. Then the team can get with our King and take a trip to Kaho'olawe. I expect the rest of the night to be easy, relatively speaking."

* * * * *

Ewa Beach Dormitory #3

Monday, November 8, 2004 3:38PM HTZ

Lance Kinchen sat on his desk chair running blues scales up and down the neck of his Les Paul. Although he had amps that he wanted to use, and an acoustic guitar, Lance was keeping as quiet as he possibly could. His roommate and new boyfriend, Scott Shetley was sound asleep on the bed they now shared. In one of those incredibly awesome moods that can only happen to teen boys after having their first sexual experiences, Lance was wide awake. Finding himself playing intricate licks only made Lance more enthused.

In a matter of three days, Lance's life had changed drastically and completely spun around. He wondered where the thirteen-year-old high school freshman had gone. Only four days prior, Lance had gone to school wearing a black Iron Maiden T-shirt, a dark navy blue long-sleeve shirt, blue jeans and a wool lined Levi jacket. His new normal attire consisted of sandals, board shorts and T-shirts. In Manhattan, he didn't even own a single pair of boardies; they were worn by dorks, preppies and the elite of the upper East side. Lance used to wear cut-offs and muscle tees during the prior summer. At that very moment, he was naked. Lance had never before sat around in the buff; he always took his clothes off in the bathroom, took a shower and was right back in clothes again as soon as he had dried off. For two days now, he routinely walked naked down the dorm hall to the mob showers.

He had been to beaches on Long Island and New Jersey no more than six times in his life, as best as he could recall. His parents weren't beach people; they would get sunburned and so would Lance. Now he was living on a Clan base not much more than five hundred yards from the shore and the Pacific Ocean. His milky white skin was getting tanned again; it was visible and obvious on his lower legs and on his arms.

Lance would easily get naked at the diving well, but couldn't stay that way for long without worrying about sunburns. Saturday, when other guys wondered if Lance was shy, he proved them wrong with a quick exposure and explanations that he would bake in the sun if naked too long. When Lance first exposed his ass, and then spun around to show off his floppy cut dick, Scott sputtered and giggled. Pulling Lance aside, Scott roared laughing, "What the hell do you think you are; an old fashioned record album? Your ass is NOT the 'A' side, and your dick is NOT the 'B' side."

Lance shrugged and giggled, "It proved I'm not shy though. You're tanning real nice, but I just fry."

Also absent was the city tough guy demeanor. It was one of the first things he had observed from the teen Latin King boys and the ex-prostitutes. Lance and Scott had talked about all the changes starting in the Hundsters' basement Friday night. The same subject came up again a few times Saturday, but not since. Always a good student in school and in life, Lance absorbed, learned and executed the new material.

His normal routine had changed due to the New York City riots. Friday morning, he hadn't even showered before flying into clothes, grabbing his guitar and getting out of the apartment. Morning showers and quick soapy wanks had been normal for over two years. Instead, he had gone without a shower until Friday evening Hawaiian Time. He had gone without his daily release two entire days; a feat he didn't believe was possible. When he finally did take care of himself during the pre-dawn hours Sunday, it felt like he had shot for a longer time. And then, when he stealthily watched Scott beating off Sunday night, it seemed he had literally emptied his balls.

Hearing his Les Paul wail lead lines and licks, like he had in the Oneula Beach auditorium only hours earlier, he silently remarked, 'not too shabby for a queer boy, not too shabby at all'. Thinking of Scott, the quick blues he was playing shifted to chord arpeggios. Lance spent about twenty minutes loosening another guy's ass and enjoyed it every bit as much as Scott obviously did. Twice Scott moaned and twice he had gasped at the new sensations Lance carefully administered. As nervous as Lance was, the butterflies and shakes got even worse when Scott had shot his first load and was ready to reverse their roles and get even. Where Scott had been quietly accepting for the most part, Lance couldn't stop groaning, moaning, whimpering and shouting. Lance had only needed to ask Scott if he were all right four times in that first twenty minutes. It seemed that Scott had to ask the same question at least once a minute while Lance was flat on his back with his legs spread.

Making love with Scott was so completely Earth shattering and mind boggling, Lance couldn't restrain himself after losing his first dildo elicited load. He attacked Scott with kisses and pushed his older and larger friend flat down on the bed. Scott loved it too, as his giggles and laughter clearly proved. Only when Lance straddled Scott's hips to make his intention known did Scott get serious and repeatedly warn his new lover to go slow. Although Lance had assured Scott he would go slow, and was fully aware that a real cock was not a little dildo, Scott continued his pleas. It took some time and repositioning for Lance to get Scott's thick tool only partially inside him. The most amazing and thrilling part for Lance was that Scott purposefully remained flat and motionless most of the time. Scott's giggles and laughter resumed when Lance uncontrollably notified the entire dorm how good he felt. Only after Scott had gotten Lance off did he thrust up a few times, just to make Lance bounce and gasp through giggles.

As if all that wasn't wonderful enough, Scott then went for his own ride on Lance. Looking up at his older and more defined guitar playing buddy, Lance did some comparisons. Jay Montigua was taller and had a hunky, more muscular body than Scott. Chris Stokley was simply a sexy blond who was too perfectly proportioned in every way to be a genuine human. Derrick Seibert was so undeniably cute that it was apparent when he was fully dressed and doing his Core Rimmer duties. Keith Hundser was another stud muffin with incredible abs and arms for a fourteen-year-old. All of those boys had admirable qualities, but Scott was the one for Lance. Scott didn't have cut abs, big biceps, blond hair, or dreamy hazel eyes, but he was the one enjoying his ride and incoherently growling through giggles that Lance was the very best lover and friend in the world.

Afterward, Scott rested with Lance cuddled up close. Lance admitted that he loved being called 'sexy lover boy' by Scott and wanted to hear it often, but perhaps they needed less provocative pet names for each other. Naturally, they got silly and found more suggestive names before getting serious. They were softly discussing possibilities and silently considering Scott's pet names when Lance realized Scott was falling asleep. Lance remained there, snuggled up close and silently inspecting Scott's face. Judging by the soft hairs found, Scott would one day have a nice beard and mustache. For now, this was the perfect face of Lance's partner and lover; the hottest teen boy on base, as far as Lance was concerned, and no one else's opinion mattered. Carefully and reluctantly, Lance got out of bed to let his boyfriend sleep.

Waking up, but still drowsy, Scott croaked, "Lance?" He quickly cleared his throat.

"Right here," Lance smiled, and completed the section he had been playing.

"I'm really sorry, man," Scott yawned. He shook off the yawn, and then offered, "Remember me saying that I was thinking about how to talk with you about last night?"

Standing with his guitar and turning to face his partner, Lance giggled, "Yep."

Propping himself up on his arms, Scott watched Lance put his guitar in its case, smirking, "That was between midnight and almost five in the morning. I guess three hours sleep didn't cut it."

Walking to the bed, Lance sighed, "You stayed awake thinking of that?"

Nodding, Scott said, "I had to consider both of us. There's no way I could've said a word without being sure I could follow through. How long was I out?"

Crawling onto the bed, Lance stole a tender kiss then whispered, "About an hour. You followed through, all right. All the questions are answered now."

Scott stole a kiss of his own, then grinned, "You were awesome in every way."

"You are fantastic, Scott. I'm seriously hooked on you."

"Ditto, sexy lover boy," Scott smiled. "What were you doing while I slept?"

"First I took the dildos to the bathroom and cleaned them up. I fully expected someone to walk in and embarrass me again, but no one did. Then I went on an Internet search to find out why what initially hurt suddenly felt really great."

Scott sniggered, "And the survey says?"

Lance giggled, "The prostate gland is right there, about three or four inches inside and behind our balls. Even the little dildos we've got were pressing right against it. Since we're both longer than five inches, we were probably pressing it most of the time. According to the page I was reading, that's why even the dildos felt so good, and why we shot so far."

Scott chuckled, "No wonder we got really loud."

Lance giggled, "You're being too nice, man. You're the groaner-moaner and I'm the screamer."

Scott smirked, "I distinctly recall encouraging you and jacking your cock to make it happen faster. I will never complain about our volume, man. We were probably alone anyway. I only heard a door close; prob'ly Chris and Jay returning to their room."

"I couldn't figure out which way to move," Lance laughed. "Hips forward, no back and down, get that fat bone deeper, no, forward again." Rapidly nodding, Scott warmly smiled, like he had just received the compliment of a lifetime. Lance playfully sang, "We could do it all again?"

Scott grinned then checked, "Are you feeling okay enough to try? I probably could, but I think my butt would regret it. Then we're walking funny in the kitchen chow line and getting those twinge reminders."

After thoughtfully humming a few moments, Lance whined, "I know you're right, but I'm so fucking hot for you. All the stuff I was worried about has my heart racing now."

Gently rubbing Lance's arm, Scott warmly smiled, "Intercourse before we crash tonight, in different positions this time. Right now, how about we go everywhere except there?"

Taking his place laying on top of Scott, Lance softly grinned, "First, a few dozen kisses are in order. I really missed you."

Stealing the first kiss and then lowering down flat again, Scott smiled, "Are you as surprised as I am?"

After stealing a deeper kiss, Lance giggled, "I've had about a hundred surprises with you today. Which specific surprise do you mean?"

"It was all completely natural, easy and fun, entirely instinctual."

Nodding, Lance asked, "Did it seem to you the dildos were a little more difficult than the real thing?"

"Yep. I think our Core Rimmers knew that, which is why dildos were mentioned Friday night. Since they were so young when they started, I'll bet they used their fingers like we did."

Two more deep kisses were shared then Lance admitted, "It was never as painful as I thought it might be. On a scale of one-to-ten, I don't think it ever reached five. I expected far worse."

"We can thank Chris and Jay later," Scott softly acknowledged, "but mostly I think it was that knowledge mixed with the affection and love we already had, before I said a word this morning. I still see you exactly as you were and still are, as all male, Lance. I could easily get stupid and wrestle in the diving well, like we did over the weekend, but now I could just as easily spend hours gently touching you. I want everything with you, from rough playtime and normal guitar jams to the softer, more loving times."

Cheekily grinning, Lance admitted, "I can see myself going from one stage to the next without instigation or warning too. My whole attitude has changed, from what I could get and take to what I can give."

They locked eyes for a few moments, scanning the faces they knew very well, but as if they were undiscovered territory. Their smiles faded. Scott guided Lance's head and face down then they passionately kissed. Another slow, forceful grind began. Chins slid over shoulders. Soft groans and whimpers were heard clearly, seemingly creating a harmonious melody. Feeling a rising orgasm, Lance warned Scott.

"Do it, lover boy," Scott softly prompted, "we've gotta shower before dinner any how."

"I wanna make you feel good too though."

Scott breathed, "You always do. I'm so close too. Keep the rhythm goin'."

Lifting his head and planting another deep kiss, Lance moaned into Scott's mouth. Moments later it was all over except the chuckling, giggling and promises of never ending love. Tapping out a little rhythm on Lance's butt cheeks, Scott grinned, "We need to shower."

Lance giggled, "Is that 'Kashmir' you're playing on my ass?"

Nodding, Scott sniggered, "Your left cheek is my hi-hat and the right is my snare."

Throwing his head back, Lance roared laughing.

Scott giggled, "We really need to motivate before we get stuck together again."

Pushing up, Lance laughed, "This time, I'm washing your foreskin. I don't give a damn who walks in and sees me. That's a job we share from now on. Be glad if I let you wash your own dick once a day." He stepped off the bed and turned to Scott for a reaction or remark.

Sitting on the edge of the bed, Scott reached and pulled Lance closer. He landed a kiss over Lance's diaphragm, then smiled up, asking, "Are you as ready to commit as I am?" Lance's almost constant smile vanished. Scott nervously assured, "We can wait. It's kewl, man."

Shaking his head, Lance reached under Scott's armpits and guided him up onto his feet. With happy tears burning in his eyes, Lance sobbed, "Yes, Scott. There is no one else and there never will be."

Huffing a huge sigh of relief, Scott wrapped Lance in his arms, whispering, "You're really that happy?" Lance only nodded and tried to stop crying. Scott assured, "It's okay, cos I'm just as happy too now. For a moment there, I thought I rushed you and scared myself. All I'll ever need or want is you, I swear."

Trying to control himself enough to speak, Lance croaked, "While you slept, I thought of us, and compared you to every other teenaged guy on this base. None are even close, Scott. Seriously, wrap up all the best features of every other guy into one body, and I see you. I can barely believe it's me you want to stay with."

"Then I'll prove it to you, each and every day," Scott promised, and held Lance tighter, waiting for his lover's tears to dry. When Lance smiled up, Scott reached to wipe Lance's tear stained face dry then prompted, "Close your eyes." Mooing through giggles, Lance did as he was told. As he had forewarned, Scott tenderly kissed each eyelid then went for the deep, passionate kiss he had wanted to give since Lance agreed to commit. Rather than breathe through their noses, they each swapped a few breaths.

Breaking the kiss, they simultaneously gasped, "Whoa!"

Dizzily stepping back, Lance shook his head to clear it, giggling, "That was fucking incredible!"

Rapidly blinking, Scott grinned, "Another something to be repeated, often."

"Shower?"

"Shower."

They left the room, unconcerned they were nude. Watching Lance gleefully bouncing with every step, Scott grinned, "A little light on your feet there, Lance?"

"Hell yeah!" Lance giggled. Only two doors down on the same side of the hall, Lance stopped and knocked on Chris' and Jay's door, then turned an ear to listen.

Scott chuckled, "What do you want them for?"

"I gotta tell somebody!" Lance giggled.

Taking Lance's hand, Scott smiled, "I know the feeling. I wanna tell everybody," and led his giddy lover the remainder of the way to the lavatory. Hearing shower water running, they grimaced, certain their shower activities would need to be curtailed. Stepping into the mob shower changing area, Scott and Lance found Chris hanging off of Jay. All four began chuckling.

"This is becoming habitual," Scott grinned. Lance led the way into the shower.

Watching the other couple enter the shower, Jay grinned, "Can't be helped."

"It's all Lance's fault," Chris sniggered.

Lance giggled, "How is it my fault?" Scott turned on the shower across from Chris and Jay.

Jay explained, "You two transported out of the auditorium. We wanted to thank you and tell you that you did a really good job, so we walked over here."

Stepping back from Jay to clear his throat, exposing his own and Jay's hooded erections, Chris locked eyes with Lance, desperately crying, "Holy fucking hell! Scott! That feels so-oo-oo good!" Jay and Scott softly sniggered.

Quickly covering his blush with both hands, Lance helplessly laughed, "And that was from the dildo. I'm pathetic."

All four cracked up laughing. When they had quieted to mere chortling, Scott beamed, "What started this morning as experiments is now real love. I asked Lance if he was ready to make it permanent, and he said yes." Shivering with excitement because Scott had shared their new status, Lance brightly beamed.

"Awesome!" Chris cheered.

Noticing Lance stuck in the moment and smiling at Scott, Jay nodded and smiled, "We're very happy because both of you obviously are."

Coming to his senses, Lance wondered, "Is it that obvious?" and loaded a palm full of soap. He went directly for Scott's dick and washed it before washing any part of himself.

Jay grinned, "It was pretty clear this morning. You didn't separate and played the same silly shower games we were. This building and our rooms are very well insulated, but we occasionally heard both of you." He pointed up at the air conditioning vent above the bench in the changing area.

Chris smiled, "If you weren't so into the first time bliss, you might have heard us too. Knowing what we talked about before and during lunch, and seeing this result, this is the second happiest day of my life."

With his hands resting on Lance's shoulders, and knowing that his new partner was getting carried away with washing his dick, Scott wondered, "What was your happiest day?"

Seeing Chris was searching for words, Jay answered, "Chris and Rafe thought I was dead Friday. Saturday they learned I wasn't, and went to Walter Reed, with Corey and Drew, to pick me up and bring me here. Chris told me a half-dozen times it was the happiest day of his life."

Stepping back from Scott to allow him to rinse off, Lance muttered, "Now it makes sense."

Seeing only confusion across from him, Scott explained, "Friday night in the Hundses' basement, you were just barely functioning, Chris. At the time, we thought you were tired. After Rafe went to bed, you'd get the deep introspective look, ya know?" Nodding, Chris turned into the shower and wiped his face.

Holding up an index finger to signal a pause, Jay turned Chris to face him, firmly stating, "No, baby. It never happened, I was alive under that mess, just unconscious. As soon as I could, when they asked for next of kin, you and Rafe were before my parents. Once I knew you guys were alive and safe, the rest was cake. I can't live without you either. You know that, right?" Nodding, Chris stepped closer to Jay, held on with all his might and uncontrollably sobbed. Glancing across the shower, Jay confirmed, "Don't even worry about it, guys. It's gonna take Chris some time."

Unexpectedly, Lance flung himself against Scott. Wrapping his arms around his lover, Scott loudly asked, "What's wrong with you?"

"I can feel it," Lance cried, "like it was me without you, like the whole world ended and there's nothing left to live for." Looking up into Scott's eyes, Lance sobbed, "Not again; after these last few days with you, I won't live my life alone. Without you, I'd throw my guitar into a fire. I couldn't even listen to music ever again."

"I'd rather be a hermit," all four boys simultaneously admitted. Each of them scowled and glanced at the other three.

"Okay, that was weird," Jay softly shared. He checked with Chris, "Are you feeling better?"

Sniffling and still upset, Chris sighed, "Not very much."

Leaning back to try and look in his partner's eyes, Scott softly asked Lance, "How do you feel?"

Without looking up, Lance sobbed, "Like there's a huge void in my chest."

Soothing their freaked out partners, Jay and Scott occasionally glanced at each other, wordlessly trying to understand what was happening.

Also stark naked, Erik and Travis ran into the changing room. Erik loudly asked, "What's wrong?"

Entering the shower with Erik at his side, Travis hollered, "Everything was fine, then suddenly seemed very wrong."

Scowling, Jay muttered, "You guys are way down the other hall."

Travis nodded, "Yeah. Why are Chris and Lance crying? What's going on?"

Before anyone could answer, Troy and Sean transported into the adjacent changing area. Troy scanned the six naked teens for injuries, wondering, "Are you guys okay?"

Suspiciously, Scott asked, "What makes you think anything's wrong?"

Sean slouched and smirked, "Jay's holding Chris the same way you're holding Lance, like you guys are consoling them."

"Yeah," Erik added, "and since I don't see four bones, I know something is very wrong."

"A perfectly clear, sunny day suddenly seemed very dark," Troy grumbled.

Chris held one hand up, admitting, "It was me, guys. Just the reminder of Friday, thinking Jay was dead, I kind o' lost it a little bit."

Erik, Travis, Sean and Troy incredulously shouted, "A little bit?"

Blushing slightly, Chris meekly offered, "Okay, a lot."

Clutching his chest, Troy impatiently huffed, "Give me a heart attack, why don't ya?"

Sean nodded, "We were over at Oneula, checking on our sons. We had just left the Taylors' house. Troy wanted to come visit Lance and Scott, cos he's from New Jersey and they're from New York City, and the whole guitar music thing. Then it's like a total fucking eclipse and we're running."

Troy explained, "Realizing we didn't need to run, and feeling like it was an emergency, I had Alden transport us to wherever Lance and Scott were."

Erik grinned, "Ya think that's bad?" He gestured to Travis, saying, "We were getting started up again, for the third time today. I'm just about to stuff my mouth when I see and smell smoke, like the fires all around LA on Friday."

"I saw and smelled it too," Travis admitted. "We jumped out of bed and raced out of the room looking for fire, only to find you four, in the shower, and there's not even steam!"

All eight teenagers heard a younger boy's loud laughter. Troy and Sean, the only two wearing clothes and standing in the changing room, turned and looked out toward the lavatory door. In moments, John walked in the lavatory, pulling a hysterical Stephen in with him. Troy and Sean rolled their eyes and smirked. Entering the changing room, John sniggered, "Havin' a good time, dudes?"

Troy chuckled, "I might've known."

"It really wasn't me, bro," John giggled. "I don't freak people out. I try and make them stop freaking." Seeing only disbelief on most of the teenagers' faces, John laughed, "My brothers are a completely different deal!" Stephen sputtered and lost it, laughing his little butt off again. Facing the group in the shower, John sniggered, "If any of you had listened to your orientations, you'd know this is kind o' normal, considering." Stephen roared laughing and released John's hand to sit on the bench, before his knees buckled and he collapsed. John took his T-shirt off and draped it over Stephen's face. Clutching at John's shirt, Stephen tried to mute his laughter.

John kicked his sandals off, smiling up at the older boys, "Chill. Since we're here anyway, let's all grab a pre-dinner shower and I'll explain it to you." Pushing his shorts down and off, John sent to Troy and Sean, 'All will be perfectly clear in a few minutes.' Erik and Travis went to a shower beside Scott and Lance and turned the water on. While Sean and Troy got undressed, John went inside the shower, turned the water on the nearest tap and stepped underneath the spray. When Troy and Sean walked in, John pointed at the shower head between his and the one Chris and Jay were under. Sean and Troy went there and were soon getting wet.

Nonchalantly soaping up, John grinned, "Couple one are Sean and Troy, simply because they were here and a couple first. Couple two are Chris and Jay, who were a couple long before Troy and Sean, but we didn't know that until Chris showed up, and then Jay was found. Couple three are Erik and Travis. Before they went to lunch on Saturday, they had admitted how they felt. Scott and Lance, you're couple number four. Couples two, three and four arrived here the same day and for the same reason – the Battle Of Earth.

"Only so there are no misunderstandings, let me remind you that we're all gay, in solid relationships and everything's kewl between us. Nothing said here goes out of here; it all stays in my phenomenally cosmic N-Gen mind..." In the adjacent changing area, Stephen howled laughing and stuffed John's shirt back in his mouth. John finished by giggling, "Never to be spoke of again, unless any of you specifically ask me. Kewl?"

When everyone agreed, John grinned, "Chris and Jay, who are your best friends at the moment?"

Jay answered, "Lance and Scott, with Trav and Erik moving up fast."

John prompted, "Travis and Erik, your best friends are?"

"Chris, Jay, Scott and Lance," Travis answered.

Before being asked, Scott smiled, "Chris, Jay, Trav and Erik."

Rinsing soap out from under his nads, John explained, "Everybody everywhere is slightly empathic or telepathic, whether they choose to believe it or not." He shut off the water and moved to stand between the four couples. John asked, "Sean, tell the other guys where you're from?"

Sean replied, "Frederick, Maryland."

Erik gasped, "I was born in Middletown, Maryland. We moved to LA before I turned two."

When John locked eyes with him, Travis smiled, "Philadelphia."

Swinging his arm around, John said, "When I saw all eight of you last night at dinner, I had this goofy thought and shrugged it off, because you were at three separate tables. At lunch today, six of the eight of you were together." He faced Troy and prompted, "What might've happened if Billy and Robbie didn't hook up this morning?"

Troy chuckled, "I had already told Sean that I wanted to get to know Lance and Scott a little better. We were going to have lunch with them."

"Plans change and stuff happens," John smiled. "For now, you all look at Prez, Keith, Mike, Derrick, Drew and Corey like they're something special. You might as well get used to it now, soon newbies will be watching all eight of you and thinking the exact same things."

"Chris got upset, Jay felt his lover's pain, which got Lance upset, which set off Scott, all of which Erik and Trav experienced. Since Troy was thinking of two guitar players that he wanted to get to know better, he and Sean got in the loop and came running. We are brothers and always will be. It's almost always the first thing we say to every newbie, but you didn't get it. We don't just say it to make newbies feel good; it's real. This is only one example of what happens in Clan Divisions all around the world. Troy, your sense of urgency was felt by Prez, who was about ready to put us at yellow alert, because Keith confirmed the feelings when he felt Sean freaking out. I have mental connections to all the Core Rimmers. First, I had to calm down Keith and Prez, by which time you had Alden transport you here. Right now, Prez and Keith are at Kaho'olawe, watching Richie and Jimmy, five-year-olds trying to be like their teenaged fathers. Because Prez and Keith are relieved, two little dudes being cute has them laughing their butts off.

"You each did this without my help, just by following your hearts," John grinned. "Oh, and Stephen is hyperventilating over there because he knows what I do; couples two and four had just finished making love before coming in here, couple three was starting another round, and couple one was hoping to get in some afternoon delight of their own before dinner. Now, when weird stuff happens, each of you can explain it easily with two words – we're family." Waving, John said, "I'll see you in the dining room in a little while." He went out to the changing room to finish drying off.

Grabbing a towel from the stack, Stephen stood and began drying off his hubby.

The first to say anything was Erik. He softly wondered, "I didn't get here until late Saturday morning, but you dudes think that much of me?" The other seven boys in the mob shower smiled. Sean and Troy softly chortled. Erik giggled, "What? It's an honest question."

Troy sniggered, "I know of all of you, but don't really know any of you. All I was doing was thinking of meeting two guitar players, from the same area of the country that I'm from, and look how that worked out."

"The last we heard, from Mike at school, was that Scott and Lance were working on becoming a couple," Sean giggled. He waved an arm at Lance and Scott, who hadn't moved out of arms' reach of each other the entire time, and giggled, "It looks pretty much done to me!"

Chris teased, "Two couples took the fast track."

"At least Scott and Lance knew each other three days before ravaging each other," Jay joked, and then winked at Erik and Travis. Jay playfully wondered, "Did it take two, three or four whole hours?"

Turning redder by the second, Travis smiled at Erik. Shrugging because he really wasn't certain what the correct answer was, Erik giggled, "Definitely more than two hours, and certainly less than four." Scott and Lance muted their laughter by covering their mouths with their lover's shoulder.

Swiftly turning around and into Travis' arms, Erik hid his blush and softly chortled. Holding his lover tight, Travis chuckled, "Enough time has been wasted, so we made some."

Since Troy and Sean weren't around most of Saturday, Jay gestured to Erik and Travis, playfully explaining, "After getting our room somewhat organized, Chris and I took an hour nap, and then we went back to the diving well, so I could meet folks. Chris wanted to introduce Travis in particular, but that didn't happen, because Trav was with Erik. Chris pointed out Travis at dinner, when he walked in with Erik, and they got a separate table. Suspicions were confirmed when neither were seen again until breakfast."

Erik giggled, "Saturday night, we went to the CIC dining room for a snack, around half-past eleven."

Chris smiled, "Erik, we like you plenty, partly because we got to know Trav, and he's head-over-heels for you." He helplessly sniggered, "Come out of your room for more than meals and bathroom breaks, and we'll probably like you more."

Grinning, Troy asked Sean, "We took the fast track?"

Shrugging, Sean giggled, "Compared to the orphanage, no. Compared to Chris and Jay, yeah, I guess we did."

Forcing a frown, Troy groused, "I thought we went pretty slow."

Scott asked, "How did you guys meet, Sean?"

Sean grinned, "From my perspective, a week ago today I saw Troy perform with Platinum Habits. I had tunnel vision from that moment. From Troy's point of view, it was the next morning, when I went to his condo to deliver ID and debit cards."

Troy giggled, "How's the view, Tiger?"

"Yeah," Sean evilly snickered, "I'll just have to go inside and check out your view." The other six cracked up. Sean turned Troy around, looked down at his Lover's meaty ass, violently shook his head and enthusiastically giggled, "Damn, that's an awesome view!" Seeing Troy roll his eyes and blush, the other six roared.

Certain that rising problems would soon become apparent, Troy laughed, "Why are we still here, Tiger? We haven't made love since we woke up."

Turning the shower off, Sean giggled, "We'll meet you dudes where?"

"Our room is mostly presentable," Jay offered.

"Kewl," Troy smiled. "We'll meet you there in thirty minutes or so. Then we'll have dinner together. Our sons are involved with their boyfriends, so it'll be kewl."

The other six chanted, "Kewl."

Waving, Sean called, "Alden, grab our clothes and take me and Troy to our bedroom, please?"

Troy and Sean vanished from the mob shower and their clothes disappeared from the changing area.

Jay slouched, "Damn! I completely forgot to tell them to bring their Mr. Fuzzies."

Scott sniggered, "There's at least a dozen in our room, so we'll bring extras."

* * * * *

Ewa Beach, FYS Building

Monday, November 8, 4:27PM HTZ

After leaving the teenagers in the mob shower, John and Stephen went to have a very serious discussion. Telepathically, John had learned a great deal about their Battle Of Earth kids from Damon and Ian Praefectus. Out of the forty-one kids rescued that day, twenty-nine didn't know exactly what had happened to their parents. Of the twenty-nine, only Travis McAuley had been living with his aunt and uncle. It was a gargantuan task for John to consider telling any of the kids what had happened to their parents. In this situation, John had to share the burden with his mom, dad, Aunt Anna and Uncle Bill. For the second time that afternoon, John and Stephen were back in the conference room.

Since Rob Gibbons had gone with the King, and the majority of Core Rimmers, to Kaho'olawe, John tapped his comm-badge calling,

"Aunt Laura, are you very busy?"

Laura Gibbons answered, "Not at the moment. I just walked into my house, to have my kids wash up before dinner, John."

"Please transport to the FYS Building?" John asked, and briefly explained, "I have news that you need to know."

Laura told her kids that she would meet them at the CIC dining room, and then had Alden transport her to John's location. She appeared in the conference room and worried, "What's wrong?"

John forced a small smile and replied, "I have information about our Battle Of Earth rescued kids, including Albert and Charles."

Taking a seat at the table beside Anna Seibert, Laura sighed, "The boys only want to know why their parents never came home. They told me about several lucky breaks they had Thursday night and Friday morning."

John nodded and smiled, "Regarding Lance Kinchen and Scott Shetley, by any chance?"

Laura giggled, "Who told you?"

Stephen giggled. John sniggered, "No one told me, not directly, anyhow. When I met Al, Charles, Lance and Scott at Des Moines, I learned that Lance and Scott made sure the two little guys got on the same bus to the Meadowlands. I saw street surveillance video of Lance and Scott crossing The George Washington Bridge into Fort Lee, New Jersey, where they met Albert and Charles, walking alone."

Laura nodded and grinned, "The boys have raved for three days about Lance and Scott."

John smirked, "What gets me is I just spent a few minutes with Lance, Scott and some other teenagers. Since meeting them Friday, I scanned Lance and Scott several times, and neither thinks they did anything very special. They only kept an eye on Al and Charles, from Fort Lee and all the way here."

Laura sighed and smiled, "For two little ones to be watched by two teenagers was plenty. They wanted to come here because this is where their guardians would be. What do you know about their parents?"

"They were killed in a commuter train derailment, on their way home late Thursday night," John answered. "Initially, it wasn't suspected to be related to Battle Of Earth, but on Sunday it was determined that the tracks were tampered with. New Jersey Police have arrested the individuals responsible and charged them with murder, amongst other destruction of property charges."

Rapidly blinking tears away, Laura nodded. Reaching to take her friend's hand, Anna Seibert asked, "Is there anything else we can do to insure justice is served?"

John answered, "We've provided additional data to the authorities in New Jersey. Any chance of plea bargaining is lost. Two hundred and twenty-six died on that train, making those men some of the worst mass murderers in history. We could take custody, I guess, but I don't think it's logical, because of all the others that were killed."

At a pause, Stephen carefully said, "That's only two of the twenty-nine kids we have information for. We can't begin to figure out how to tell any of them what really happened."

"You won't have to do anything," Bill Seaver firmly said.

Jim Hundser agreed. "We'll take care of all of them."

John shared, "There are some that I think we might need to tell, dad. AJ and Jerry are the fathers of the Hunnicutt brothers. I've already shared what I know about the Hunnicutts with AJ and Jerry, and they'll have a chat with only Kenny. Jimmy Matos is now Jason Mullins' boyfriend, which indirectly makes him part of Sean's and Troy's family. There's just too many to give bad news to. Every one of the kids lost parents under the most gruesome, violent circumstances."

Focusing on Anna Seibert, John frowned, "How can I tell you what happened to the parents of the Steib brothers? Even if you chose to not tell them specifics, they could scan you and learn more than you'd like them to know. The same problem exists with Tanner and Toby Stoeher, who don't have a new family to lean on. I can hide it from them, but no one else could."

Closing his eyes so he couldn't telepathically read more from any of the adults, John scowled, "Do we tell Lance Kinchen that his dad died from electrocution, when an underground pipe bomb exploded and cut a live wire that fell on him? The dude plays electric guitar! His mother was shot at the diner where she worked, along with five other employees. Scott Shetley's father died in a sabotaged elevator. He dropped seventeen floors. His mother was accidentally pushed off a crowded subway platform in front of a train. The parents of the Hunnicutts were beat to death in the street riots at New York's Financial District, before they made it to their train Friday morning. The Oldcambus brothers and Taron were in the mens' room at LA International Spaceport, preparing to return home to Louisville, Kentucky, when a sabotaged passenger jet exploded at the gate, killing all four of their parents and dozens of others. The parents of the Nash brothers were killed by freeway shootings, in two separate cars on two different freeways. The most insane part of all of this is that the parents of only four kids died as a direct result of a Romulan; Chris Stokley, Pat O'Hara, and Jay and Rafe Montingua. Every other kid lost their parents due to crazed humans."

Opening his eyes again, John sighed, "None of these kids need to know specifics. Anything we told them would only make bad situations worse. So, who still wants to share any of this with any kid?"

Jennifer Hundser leaned back in her chair to think for a few moments. She then asked, "I'd like to see a show of hands from those who think it would be best to lock these records, until the children affected reach the age of twenty-one?" Around the table, everyone raised a hand. Jennifer called, "Alden, lock down the manner of death records for the parents of all twenty-nine Battle Of Earth children. Only when the child reaches the age of twenty-one can he choose to review the records. Use the highest level of encryption and alter the key sequence daily at random times. The only other persons who may access these files are myself and Teri Short. Also, make the video of this meeting available to Teri Short for her review."

Alden answered, "Encryption is complete. The video is being transmitted to Teri Short, also encrypted and high priority, mom."

When his wife stopped speaking, Jim Hundser tapped his comm-badge. "Lieutenant Vorik," He called.

Vorik quickly responded, "Here, Sir."

Jim ordered, "Please contact VSO headquarters and arrange for two Vulcan mind healers; one for my son, John, and another for his husband, Stephen Marr. Have them transport directly to my location, where we will wait for their arrival."

"Aye, Sir," Vorik replied. "The request is being made as we speak. Estimated arrival in five minutes. Vorik out."

John grinned, "Is that really necessary, dad?"

Jim could barely believe the question and blinked at his N-Gen boy. Bill Seaver sadly shook his head and smirked, "I may have nightmares about what I learned in this room today. You might be able to compartmentalize your brain better, but you are still human, and empathic to boot. It's better to be safe than sorry."

Bill had only just stopped speaking when his comm-badge chirped. His wife, Lanna called, "Bill?"

He tapped his comm-badge, answering, "Yes, love?"

Lanna giggled, "Please tell me why Cesar and Felipe are laughing their tiny butts off. They only told me to ask daddy."

"There's no point in trying to keep secrets in our family any more," Bill sniggered. Across the comm-badge, Cesar and Felipe howled laughing. Bill chuckled, "I was thinking that we still have empty rooms in our home that need to be filled."

"By whom?" Lanna giggled.

"Tanner and Toby Stoeher could fill one," Bill smiled.

"Fine," Lanna laughed, "I guess we'll need a larger table for our family at dinner tonight, since Gayle Gibson hasn't left me all day."

Bill's adopted daughter, Rena Hawkin, giggled, "Daddy, I want a little sister. There's too many boys in our house."

"I wanna big sister, daddy!" the five-year-old level two orphanage girl squealed over the comm-badge.

Insanely giggling, Stephen faked tapping his comm-badge and called, "Lieutenant Vorik, better make that four mind healers." John cracked up.

* * * * *

Kaho'olawe Island

Monday, November 8, 2004 4:30PM HTZ

Other than John, Stephen, Sean and Troy, all the other Core Rimmers went with King Aalona to visit the now populated island. Only two of The King's security were fit enough to leave the hospital and return to duty. That morning, Rob Gibbons had joined The King with his own security team. They were among the group taking the afternoon trip, as well as all the Core Rimmers' security teams. Many of the Core Rimmers' sons and their boyfriends came along.

During the morning, King Aalona learned that people from China, Japan, the United States, the United Kingdom and Russia were peacefully coexisting on the island. Bored adults returned to their normal jobs and occupations, or had found new ways to contribute to the community. Development that had been done primarily by US Army Corps of Engineers was now being done by refugee construction professionals. Community services, like hospitals, fire and police departments were in operation. At the northern end of the island, air traffic controllers, fishermen and tourist cruise boats were beginning to do their jobs. Centrally located elementary, middle and high schools of the same design as the Ewa Beach school existed and were orienting kids. Herds of cattle and sheep were roaming on the mountain slopes. Farmlands for fruits, grain and vegetables were being sown. On the mono rail from the north end of the island and heading southwest, King Aalona and Rob Gibbons shared all this information with the Core Rimmers.

Mike asked his dad, "Have there been any problems?"

Rob shook his head, smiling, "Amazingly, the only problems have been communications frustrations. The majority speak English, but accents and slang usages have been forcing people to slow down and listen carefully. They're addressing that issue by preparing an office building for use as a college."

King Aalona smiled, "The first native Kaho'olowan was born Saturday afternoon, a girl. Shops are opening at Seibert Mall. Having homes, family and food provided, they did all this of their own accord. It started Saturday and continued into Sunday. Adjustments are still being made, however they are cooperating." The mono rail car slowed. King Aalona said, "We will exit at this stop. The Southwest end of the island is now a beachfront recreation area. I did not have the opportunity to visit here this morning."

The large tourist party followed the King and his security off the monorail. Patiently waiting for Prez and Keith to step onto the station platform, King Aalona observed, "You have been very quiet."

Keith smiled, "We're speechless, Majesty."

Prez nodded, "So many people were displaced. It's hard to believe all this. We were at our private beach house, on the Southeast side of the island, Saturday and until the next morning."

Derrick offered, "We knew the island was populated, but what I've seen reminds me of Honolulu and Waikiki. All day and night Saturday, we never heard sirens or any city sounds."

"Clan Short did this under your supervision," King Aalona reminded. "Materials were provided and the people went to work."

"I was in a hospital at the time, Highness," Prez chuckled.

Keith loudly joked, "That means it's all Kaleo's fault!"

With Tory and watching their five sons, Kaleo hollered from across the platform; "What am I being blamed for?"

"Turning a barren island into a populated city," Mike teased.

"It wasn't me!" Kaleo giggled, "Peter Lambert got it started and Nathan did the rest."

Peter popped in, distributed random hugs, and then handed Keith a miniature purple hardhat. "Just give this to Kaleo," Peter softly said, "and watch his reaction!" He giggled and vanished again. Scratching his head and grinning, Keith took the strange little cup to Kaleo.

Nathan smirked, "Yup, I built everything, all by myself. It's no wonder I'm still looking for a boyfriend, you slave drivers."

Prez sniggered, "You were invited Saturday. I'll get ya hitched, but you'll need to provide the hitching post." Rolling his eyes and mooing through giggles, Nathan returned to monitoring little kids going down the stairs.

Showing Kaleo the little purple hat, Keith softly asked, "Is this yours?"

Tory cracked up. "Nope," Kaleo sniggered, "Tory makes sure I wear mine."

Keith grinned, "What in the world is it?" Tory howled laughing.

Taking the little hardhat, Kaleo held it in front of Keith's crotch, giggling, "You'll need a purple jock to hold it place."

"Prez will hold it for you, Keith," Tory chuckled.

Walking down the platform steps to the street level, King Aalona smiled at the playful boys and young men, cheerfully telling them all, "Clan assistance has created a thriving community of diverse cultures. They were helped and are now helping each other. More often than not, goods and services are being bartered, without contract. I was told that the mother of the baby girl was in labor for ten hours. During those hours, the grandmother prepared meals and sent the other children to deliver meals to the families of the doctor and nurse. That is one example of what is happening here, and why I wanted to return with you."

Before the King, Rob Gibbons, Keith and Prez made it all the way down the steps, Joey hollered, "I smeww cookies!"

"YEAH!" cheered about twenty other young boys.

The boys ran across the road. Reyes giggled, "Oh, shit!" and ran after his brothers and the pack of rug rats. Paul, Ryan, Drew, Corey and Leo followed the kids. The personal security for Reyes, Drew and Corey hurried after them all.

Sadly shaking his head, Mike smiled, "Sorry, Majesty. Joey hasn't had food in three-and-a-half-hours."

"There's no need to apologize," King Aalona grinned, "Kaimi is among them."

The pack of cookie seekers followed their noses along the concrete path toward the beach, turned a corner and disjointedly screamed, "COOKIE ICE CREAM SAMICHES!"

Rounding the corner with the King, Derrick noticed Reyes, sandwiched between Paul and Ryan, a fair distance back from Kaleo, Tory, Drew, Corey and all the ravenous boys. Reyes giggled at his dad, "It's safer here."

Derrick smirked, "Take a break, big brother; dad and pop are here now." Locking eyes with Paul and then Ryan, Derrick instructed, "Silence your boyfriend."

Ryan's eyes danced. Paul evilly grinned. Ryan slid in front of Reyes and Paul slipped behind him. A moment later, Ryan was searching for Reyes tonsils and Paul was snacking on Reyes neck.

Kaleo asked the elderly shopkeeper, "Do you have enough chocolate ice cream for this gang?"

"Just enough, I believe," the shopkeeper replied.

Tapping his sub-vocal, Kaleo ordered, "Alden, get two five-gallon tubs of chocolate ice cream, twenty pounds of flour, ten pounds of brown sugar, ten pounds of sweet butter, five pounds of chocolate chips and ten dozen eggs. Deliver it all to the counter directly in front of me."

Carefully and politely, the shopkeeper said, "That is far more than necessary, Sir."

The items Kaleo ordered appeared on the counter. Kaleo shrugged, "This is how business is done here. Besides, this is less than a tenth of our family too. When I come back with the other three-hundred, you'll remember."

The shopkeeper chuckled, "Yes, Sir." A younger man came from the back of the shop to gather the tubs of ice cream and take them back to the storage freezer.

Certain that the shopkeeper didn't believe Kaleo, Tory called, "Mike, how many kids in our Clan?"

"Three-hundred-ninety-two and holding steady," Mike replied.

The shopkeeper stumbled and accidentally jammed his fist into the tub of ice cream he was scooping from. He glanced around, rapidly blinking. Taking hold of Tory, Kaleo sniggered, "Teenage endurance."

Scooping ice cream onto the next large chocolate chip cookie, the shopkeeper chuckled, "Yes Sir. I can still recall those days."

Reyes suddenly broke down laughing. Paul had reached both arms under Reyes shirt to tweak his nips. Ryan was tickling Reyes lower ribs. Paul evilly sniggered, "I can't find the station yet. Two on one is fun!"

Nodding, Ryan giggled, "This how we play in public too. Reyes has no idea what's in store for him when we're alone."

"He's got perky nips and a real nice crack, bro."

"The front's got a good bit more than I expected too."

"Wanna swap?"

"Sure!"

Paul and Ryan began to swap places, but they both went to Reyes right side, allowing him to escape to his left. Laughing his ass off, Reyes took steps three-at-a time, down to the beach. Chasing after their boyfriend, Paul and Ryan loudly bitched each other out. Reyes ran directly for the ocean, with Paul and Ryan only two paces behind him.

Taking seats on a nearby bench, Jimmy and Richie were feeding each other and their Mr. Fuzzies their cookie ice cream sandwiches. On the next bench, Scott and Dillon were using their Mr. Fuzzies to hold the ice cream sandwiches they were feeding each other. Between giggles, they'd make lip smacking kiss sounds and hum hungrily when they were ready for more Mr. Fuzzy cookie ice cream kisses.

AJ held Shaun Hunnicutt on his hip with one arm. Seeing Richie with Jimmy, Dillon with Scott, and Geoff walking to the benches with his big brother Mike, Shaun forgot to swallow. Softly giggling, AJ wiped Shaun's chin. "Daddy?" Shaun called.

AJ smiled, "Yeah, what's up, buddy?"

Shaun wondered, "Does Mike got a boyfrien'?"

"Maybe so," AJ chuckled.

"Will I gets a boyfrien' too?"

"There are lots of boys who may be your friend," AJ explained. "One day, maybe you'll find a really special friend. Then you and he can decide."

Shaun yelled, "Hey Kenny!" When Kenny turned away from the conversation he was having with Leo to see what his youngest brother wanted, Shaun hollered, "You gettin' a boyfrien' someday, bro?" In the middle ground between Leo, Kenny, AJ, Shaun and Jerry, were Drew and Corey, sharing a single cookie ice cream sandwich and pretending they weren't hearing what was going on.

Instantly turning crimson red, Kenny smirked, "I dunno."

Shaun impatiently screamed, "Whadaya mean ya don' know?"

Leo nudged Kenny and whispered, "Just say yes, Kenny."

"But I really don't know," Kenny softly told Leo.

"Shaun's too young to understand 'I dunno'," Leo smiled.

"It's so embarrassing," Kenny softly huffed. He then corrected himself, telling Shaun, "Someday, bro."

"I gotta gets a boyfrien' too then, daddy," Shaun thoughtfully scowled.

AJ playfully explained, "Then you'll find a special boy soon. You'll want to talk with him like me and poppa talk. You'll want to play, like me and poppa play. And maybe you'll even want to kiss him, like me and poppa kiss." All this was said to Shaun, but AJ's real purpose was to get Jerry revved up. It worked like a charm. Soon, Jerry was blatantly hitting on AJ, all smartly disguised as fatherly advice to their four-year-old son.

Leo grinned, "See, all better."

"Yeah, I guess," Kenny giggled. "If I know Shaun, every morning and every night he'll ask, 'gotta boyfriend yet?' Then I'll say, no, he'll wonder, why not, and I'll go quietly kookie."

Leo giggled, "Never mind that. What were you saying about Jason and Jimmy Matos?"

Kenny teased, "Wishin' you hadn't gone to school now?"

Shaking his head, Leo giggled, "I wish I had been there to see it.

We both know Jase wanted a boyfriend. I can't jump that fast, dude. Now that I think of it, what made you play the game?"

"Just because more than half the guys our age were playing," Kenny giggled. "Jase is real cute, and he's a nice guy, just way more blunt than me. If I had won, it wouldn't have worked for very long."

Dee bounced over to Kenny and Leo. Finished with his cookie ice cream sandwich, Dee had obviously worn about half of it. Kenny cracked up. Reaching a hand into his pocket for the stash of napkins he had swiped, Leo offered them to Dee, giggling, "You're a mess, cousin."

Taking the napkins, Dee giggled, "Thanks, Leo," and started wiping chocolate off his mouth. While Dee cleaned up, he asked, "Do you wanna go swimmin'? Daddy and poppa said it's kewl, cos there's lifeguards. That'll get all the chocolate ice cream cleaned up too." He stopped wiping his mouth and chin, asking, "Better?" Shaking his head and turning away, Kenny roared laughing. Shoving Kenny, Dee giggled, "If ya don't wear it, ya ain't enjoying it!"

Leo wrapped an arm around Dee and took him over to Drew and Corey. "We gotta get chocolate face cleaned up," Leo giggled.

"Dee!" Corey laughed, "How did you get chocolate near your ear?"

Dee tried to squint and be impatient, but caught Corey's laughter infection and cracked up.

Pointing to the beach, Drew sniggered, "Go ahead. Reyes is out there and we'll be along, once your brothers finish copying Dee's chocolate clown face." Watching Leo walk away with Dee, Drew had a thought that would likely embarrass his eldest son. He jogged over to Leo, paused him and whispered, "Cotton boxer-briefs and cotton shorts won't dry fast. Take them off or spend the next two days scratching your crotch."

Leo audibly gasped, and then giggled, "Good call, dad. I was considering it, but now it's definite."

Nodding, Drew smiled, "See ya in a few minutes."

Pointing at the ocean, Leo called, "Come on, Kenny. Hey, let's go, Stan." Once the four boys were jogging down to the beach, Kenny asked Leo what Drew was worried about, and Leo honestly answered.

Kenny chuckled, "Hawaiian rules are way more fun than New York City's. Skinny dippin' there won't happen."

Leo remembered, "You wore white cotton briefs over the weekend."

"And I'm wearing briefs now, but not for long," Kenny giggled. "Can you see me tomorrow, searching around for a boyfriend to shut up my brother, with one hand scratching my balls?"

Dee and Stan cracked up. Leo howled, "Great first impression!"

* * * * *

Ewa Beach Dormitory #3

Monday, November 8, 2004 5:07PM

Sean and Troy transported to the hallway outside of Chris' and Jay's room. Finding the door open and the same six boys they had showered with already dressed, Troy knocked on the door frame and Sean raised an arm. Kicked back on a bed with Jay, Chris smiled, "Come on in, guys." The stereo radio was on and softly playing classic rock.

Sean and Troy stepped inside the room. Obviously, Chris and Jay had moved the beds away from the far wall where the windows were to the two adjacent walls. Erik, Travis, Lance and Scott were sitting on the other bed, up by the headboard, across from Chris and Jay. Getting up off the bed, Chris gestured to where he had been sitting, inviting, "Right over here is kewl, guys. I'll kick back against Jay."

Jay grinned, "You're not gonna let me out of your sight the rest of the day, are you?"

Walking around the bed, Chris smiled, "You'll be behind me and out of my sight, but the answer is, no. Deal with it."

"I can easily deal," Jay chuckled. The tone of Jay's voice was clear to the other boys in the room. Although unhappy that Chris was still feeling fears from Friday, Jay was clearly thrilled Chris was attaching himself like never before. The damned cast on Jay's wrist was a constant reminder of Friday that was only delaying Chris' recovery. As soon as Jay was able, he had to make love to Chris in the missionary position, soothing his lover's shattered nerves face-to-face. It would still take more time, but the cast had to go.

Chris got settled between Jay's legs. Troy took the spot vacated by Chris. Turning to Troy, Jay nodded his head slightly toward Chris and then playfully wagged his tongue. Nodding his head and grinning, Troy signaled for Jay to go for it. Sean sat between his boyfriend's legs and leaned back. Troy took a soft chomp from Sean's shoulder. Widely smiling, Sean's face split open.

Scott shared, "We found out that Erik wanted to learn to play guitar, but sort o' gave up."

"Lessons and school homework was too much," Erik smirked. "About a year is all I could handle. My folks noticed my grades slipping, so guitar lessons stopped."

Locking eyes with Sean and Troy, Travis offered, "Earlier this afternoon, Scott and Lance jammed with Reyes and Joey."

"I'm nowhere near as good as Scott or Lance," Erik chortled. "There's no way in hell I could keep up with Troy and Mike."

Troy wondered, "What makes you think that, Erik?"

"Oh, it's a fact," Erik giggled. "On my best days, I might strum a few chords in time with a CD."

Sean grinned, "You can do anything you want, with just a little effort and a lot of caring. I've heard that dozens of times from Troy and all the other Core Rimmers. You might as well get used to it too, Erik."

"You'll find out where your real interests are, next Monday when you take your placement tests," Troy offered.

Lance warned, "If I find out you're a musician too, you'll need to pick up a bass guitar, Erik."

"Or drum sticks," Scott added. Looking across the room, Scott smiled, "Reyes and Joey aren't our drummers. On stage today, Lance and I were outclassed by Joey, KC and Reyes."

Sean asked, "KC's here too?"

Nodding, Lance giggled, "The last we heard, he was going for a walk with Fred Eckhart. We might have another couple hooking up."

Troy chuckled, "This seems to be that sort of day. Our two oldest sons found boyfriends today. Add you and Scott, and KC and Fred, and it's been a very busy day." Sean and the other six boys softly sniggered.

Suddenly mooing and shifting uncomfortably, Lance blushed and giggled, "That's all it took for my butt to remind me what it wants." The others began laughing.

Holding his clenched fist out to Lance, Erik giggled, "It seems you and me have similar challenges, bro." Nodding and giggling, Lance knocked knuckles with Erik.

Scott squeezed Lance and softly checked, "Are you okay?"

"Fine," Lance assured, and then leaned his head back. Scott gave his lover a tender kiss. Lance dreamily sighed, "Whoever said a good kiss is like fireworks got it all wrong. It's more like a star going nova."

Slightly out of sync, the other seven smiled, "I know."

Jay sniggered, "This is just too weird."

Troy shrugged, "Not really, considering what John said earlier. If one of us didn't agree, there'd be trouble in paradise."

"We thought it was just a Core Rimmer thing until today," Sean shared. "It's one thing for Troy to look in my eyes and pretty much know what I'm thinking, and where I'm at, but they can all do that pretty easily."

Erik wondered, "What's it like to be a Clan Short leader?"

"Yeah," Chris interjected, "I have to admit, I've been wondering that too."

Leaning his head back, Sean checked with Troy. Both began giggling, wanting to tell Chris, "You'll find out soon enough!" but they restrained themselves and held it back.

Chauncey jogged past the open bedroom doorway with Rikko. Troy barked. Out in the hall, Chauncey giggled, "Okay, Rikko! Jeez!" Moments later, Rikko pulled Chauncey into the room. The Siberian Husky puppy jumped up to lick Troy's hand. Troy chuckled and gave Rikko some scratches behind the ear.

Sean giggled, "What you guys think you're imagining is real." Easily shifting through two languages, Sean told the others, "You can understand the animals. You can understand all our planet's languages, and some from other planets, especially Vulcan."

"There's a whole bunch of other stuff we learned without really studying or trying," Troy revealed. "Mostly, the jobs are easy and fun. The only exceptions have been the California Orphanages Wednesday night, and all the crap from Thursday night and through Friday."

"We occasionally have some small tasks to do," Sean explained, "like updating web pages, and orienting newbies, but mostly we're all big brothers. The best part is that we're officers in Starfleet, considered adults, able to marry and adopt kids. The adoptions were one of Saturday's highlights."

Scott grinned, "The last part must be scary."

"No, not really," Troy replied. "It's actually really kewl. In our case, we've got an eleven-year-old, a nine-year-old, a six-year-old and a five-year-old. Because of their foster-parents, they all know more than I did about sex, so they all know where their interests are. All our sons are gay, which makes it very easy for me and Sean. The two youngest were the first to find boyfriends, but we know they're mostly emulating us. Now that our two oldest are there too, we can advise them on what each step is like, emotionally and physically."

Sean added, "We fully expect to be asked about sleep-overs later. We'll approve, and then have chats with our older sons and their partners. Our boys aren't virgins, but their boyfriends likely are. Maybe they'll all want to do everything, all at once the first night, but that ain't reality."

Chauncey giggled, "I think I should leave now."

Troy smiled, "Do you know where you're interests are, Chauncey?"

Nodding, Chauncey seriously answered, "I think I'm straight, but I learned it's not the body so much as it is the person underneath. I could probably deal either way, easily enough."

"We'll see you at dinner," Sean grinned.

Waving, Chauncey whined and whimpered, telling Rikko they were going to their room and he was going to be fed dinner. Rikko raced for the door, dragging Chauncey along with him.

Picking up where they left off, Jay told the four across the room, "All the stuff we talked about over lunch, Sean and Troy will teach their sons."

Travis grinned, "All that's common sense though. Yesterday, when we went for intercourse, I was real slow with Erik and he was slow with me, methodically exploring. We didn't need explanations or instructions."

Sean said, "But you're..."

"No, Tiger," Troy quickly and loudly interrupted. He then gently reminded, "You need to forget as much as you possibly can, so I'll tell them." Sean nodded and sighed in relief. Glancing around the room, Troy said, "Our sons were fondled and filmed. Without them really saying it, we're certain each of the four of them fucked one another, on demand for a camera and perverted adults. What we know about caring and loving, Sean also knows, but from learning in the worst way. He treated me just as carefully as any other guy might, partly because he was fucked by an adult man at nine-years-old. A little spit was all that was used and he jammed it all in, held him down, and didn't give a damn that a boy was screaming and crying into a mattress.

"In California, Wednesday night, sixteen kids were treated just as cruelly, primarily by being starved. Some newbie fifteen-year-olds are shorter and thinner than any of us. We phasered those adult assholes in California to dust, for those sixteen kids, and for what Sean and many other kids go through. As satisfied as I was that two more cretins were dead and couldn't harm another kid, I still puked in a sink. Even now, after a Vulcan mind meld healing, I'm still fucking angry as hell about this shit. I was angry though when Sean told me what happened too, so I guess that's just the way it is... the way I am."

Calming himself and being calmed by Sean's gentle leg rubs, Troy sighed, "Yeah, we all know the details of how to go carefully and slowly, but assuming any boy, gay or straight, is going to know to curtail his instincts, probably isn't the wise move. Our attitude is, if you're adult enough to go beyond masturbation and oral sex to anal sex, then you'd better be grown up to listen to the facts.

"Six of the sixteen Core Rimmers were abused kids; Sean, Kaleo, Tory, AJ, Jerry and Reyes. We believe they're the exceptional ones that can act logically, using Vulcan laws, and perform duties like in California. Since there are those four, there's proof that there will be others just like them who will make themselves known. Another thought that should be considered is how many Core Rimmers will be needed for all five bases. There are nine here. There are six now at Oneula Beach. Eventually, we'll need at least six or eight at Hawaii, Maui and Kauai. That means we'll need a minimum of eighteen more Core Rimmers."

Turning to look back, Sean gasped, "Thirty-three total, Lover?"

"Minimum," Troy nodded. "It might be better to assume twelve at each base, so sixty is probably the more accurate number. We protect the west coast of America to the eastern shores of Asia. After the ZCC orphanages, is it safe to assume nothing like that will ever happen again?"

Eery silence enveloped the room. The classic rock tunes on the radio were only white noise that none of the boys noticed. Sean got up off the bed and gestured for Troy to also stand. Troy swung his legs off the bed and stood before his Tiger. "Thank you," Sean softly offered. Troy nodded and visibly shuddered. Sean wrapped his Lover up tight and gave him a few tender kisses and one deep one. Sean then took the spot closest to the headboard and beside Jay, where Troy had been sitting. Troy moved into position, leaning back against Sean.

"I'm fucking pissed," Jay softly growled.

Travis nodded, "Me too."

Scott shared, "I was just about to fly off the bed, to hug the breath out of Troy and Sean."

"I really want to punch something before I hug either of them," Erik frowned.

Lance muttered, "There's a punching bag in the rec center we need to destroy, I think." Chris only nodded, but the four boys across the room could see fire in his eyes.

Sean grinned, "Each of us Core Rimmers watch new kids that might someday be new Core Rimmers, or maybe dorm leaders. All of you, as relatively normal guys from Battle Of Earth, are being closely watched. Maybe it's just me, but I think it's kind of weird that gay dudes like us make up the largest group of Clan leaders. I mean, as caring, gentle and loving as we can be with our boyfriends, we turn around and put on our Vulcan attitudes, carry phasers, and are completely prepared to murder for the sake of justice."

"That's not so weird, Sean," Chris softly offered. "I've only fought twice in my life, and both times were for Jay."

Jay sniggered, "You started one of those fights."

"He was being an asshole!" Chris loudly proclaimed. The rest of them roared laughing for longer than necessary, just to blow off steam. Showing Troy a little scar on his index finger, Chris sniggered, "I busted his tooth too, the fucking jack-off."

Lance asked, "What if we want to be Core Rimmers? Do we talk to Prez?"

Shaking his head, Troy smiled, "Any of the Core Rimmers might talk to you. Take it easy and just consider the possibility. You're all angry because of what I was telling you. It's completely understandable, but don't jump on emotions in this case."

"Jump your boyfriend to show some good emotions," Sean softly giggled.

"That works for me!" Lance cheered.

While the others chortled, Scott grinned, "Later, sexy lover boy. We're going to take Erik's and Trav's example and disappear after dinner."

Widely smiling, Erik softly checked with Lance, "Sexy lover boy?"

"I know," Lance giggled. "We're sifting through better pet names, but I can't help liking it. Talk about your massive ego boosts!"

"Know this too," Sean added. "Prez and Keith are completely supportive of relationships and families. In all circumstances, family and partnerships come first. All of us talk all the time, and John helps us share stuff too. Most of the Core Rimmers are off base, at Kaho'olawe now. We'd already been there and needed to check on our sons. Another good example is Troy's mom; who didn't learn we were fathers until the next morning. We knew we had to take care of that task before dealing with ninety-five newbies an hour or so later."

Troy shared, "Pet names become obvious. But there's one other thing I wanted to say about the Core Rimmer job." When everyone was paying attention, Troy shared, "The first orphanage was worse than the second. Logic dictated the first two adults be executed. My gut feeling was to execute the other two at the second orphanage, but Vulcan logic dictated otherwise, life imprisonment. That's frustrating, when you do one thing, but really want to do another. The training is valuable and useful, but we're humans, not Vulcans. As you just saw, my emotions surfaced from memories alone. When a job is actually being done, it's not the same. I didn't think of how I'd react after the fact when I was actually in the position of delivering justice."

"Organizing priorities," Jay muttered.

Nodding, Troy smiled, "Exactly. If you can't be your partner's best half, deal with family and be a Core Rimmer, then expect any of us to tell you, 'go take care of those other things first'. Again, it's frustrating when there are only fifteen of us for almost four hundred kids. That's why I'm thinking more like ten Core Rimmer's per base would be good. Saturday we had most of the day to ourselves, but when Prez wanted to have a team chat late that night, his first words were, 'go take care of each other first, we'll chat later'."

Sean helplessly giggled, "I ate dinner with Prez, Keith, Mike and Derrick the night before they were made leaders. At that time, they were members of a band, nothing more. They were and still are so kewl. To this day, they haven't changed much at all. That chat we had Saturday night was in the buff. All of us were naked, talking about ourselves, our kids, our histories, and plans for the next day, like we had clothes on and weren't gay. They just have this way that I can only hope to someday imitate. Honestly, I saw dicks, but paid very little attention to any of them."

Troy grinned, "If I were there, at the same place as any of them, Sean and I would've toweled off in our bathroom at home and transported here nude for this chat. For example, think of how John was in the shower earlier. Six of the eight of us were naked. He had something to share, so he got naked and told me and Sean to strip too. A ten-year-old is comfortable enough to talk to a bunch of teenagers, nude. He was the only one in that shower without a single hair on his dick, but he's that confident to talk to us as his equals." He paused to chuckle, "I don't know about you guys, but I had the worst case of butterflies in my gut when I had to change clothes for junior high gym class. I didn't want to see underwear, never mind who had how much hair, or how I measured up to the other guys."

Thankful that Troy was being so truthful, Erik grinned, "I remember that, but ya know, I didn't even think of John. I was still a little freaked from non-existent smoke and fire, and the fact we all tuned in on Chris and Lance."

Jay firmly implored, "Don't ever change, Erik. It was freaky then, but we understand it now. You guys being that concerned really mattered."

Chris nodded, "To put it bluntly, you'd have to go out of your way to purposefully piss us off."

Scott nodded, "It really was great. I think all of us in this room are going to spend a lot of time together." He quickly focused on Troy, chuckling, "Isn't that right, Mister Music Teacher?" Sean began giggling and squeezed his Lover tighter.

Slowly nodding, Troy chuckled, "You might not like me as a teacher." Sniggering denials flowed around the room. Troy grinned, "Okay, before you say anything more, answer this; in the key of C major, you're playing against an E minor seventh chord, so what mode would you play?"

Scott was thinking, but had only heard of modes and couldn't recall any names. Lance had never heard of them at all, and Erik only knew names of the notes and a few simple chords. After a few moments, Lance and Erik turned to one another and shrugged. Jay sniggered. Lance looked back at Scott to find a thoughtful scowl. Trav and Erik looked across the room. Chris laughed, "Don't look at me. I forgot how to play with myself about three years ago!" Jay, Sean, Erik and Travis cracked up.

Pointing across the room at Troy, Scott joked, "I don't like him anymore!"

Softly sniggering, Sean slid sideways down the headboard onto Jay's shoulder. Troy chuckled, "That funny lookin' electronic thingamabob on your desks is a laptop computer. It can be opened and powered on. When your done searching for the biggest dicks in the world, look up music modes. 'E' is the third note of the scale in the key of 'C', therefore the mode is named phrygian. That was easy. What if the chord is E minor flat nine? Now you've gotta go searching for an E minor scale that has an F natural in it." He giggled, "I know the answer. Let me know when you think you do."

Lance grinned, "You wouldn't really be like that as a teacher, Troy."

"Course not," Troy smiled, "but the fact is, you've got an entire week to lookup and learn whatever you want." He helplessly sniggered, "As we all know, a wise man makes use of the tools available to him, at all times."

"Evil," Sean softly chortled, "just plain evil."

"Okay," Scott laughed, "you're back on my good side, Troy. At east in this respect, we're on the same page." The other seven boys nodded and evilly snickered. "Wait a minute!" Scott loudly ordered, and then chuckled, "E minor flat nine, it's still the phrygian mode in C, no matter what key the song is actually in. That was a trick question!" Warning moos erupted around the room.

Nodding, Troy sniggered, "Very good!"

Lance giggled, "We got new acoustic guitars from Mike today."

"I heard," Troy smiled.

Scott prodded, "Would you show us the modes, please."

"Sure, and then we'll go have dinner," Troy answered.

All eight boys started to get up. Troy, Sean, Lance and Scott walked out of the room and went two doors down the hall. Chris stopped at his already powered up laptop computer. Travis wondered, "What are you checking, Chris?"

Tapping away at keys, Chris grinned, "I've always wondered, and now, since Troy joked about it, I have to know, how big is the world's record largest dick." Erik, Jay and Travis cracked up.

Over the ceiling speakers, Alden giggled, "Thirteen-and-a-half inches long by six-and-a-quarter in circumference. He was stopped at San Francisco International Spaceport in 1999, for carrying a concealed weapon."

All four loudly laughed, "NO SHIT!" and staggered out of Chris' and Jay's room. They hurried down the hall and shared that information with Sean, Troy, Lance and Scott. Troy's guitar lesson was delayed several minutes while details were shared, remarks were made and partners assured each other they were perfectly satisfied with endowments.

Before sitting down with Lance's guitar, Troy hollered up at the ceiling, "I know you're listening, Alden!"

"Of course!" Alden and his brothers chorused.

Sean giggled, "That's more opinions to reference."

Travis asked, "Since you see everything, has any of us lied or even exaggerated?"

"No," Alden giggled.

Scott checked, "What's the average erect size?"

Alden giggled, "Between five and six inches long, and between three-point-five and four-point-two inches in circumference."

Erik smirked, "So all of us told the truth, even though we've only known each other a few hours. We're all a bit more than average in various ways. What does that tell you?"

The seven AI's giggled, "You're not shy and really horrible liars." All eight boys helplessly chuckled.

Jay playfully warned, "If I see one of you with a monster cock, I will chase after you with a carving knife." The AI's cracked up.

Sadly shaking his head and covering his eyes with one hand, Lance giggled, "I can't take this anymore."

Alden teased, "Scott is very sorry to hear that, I'm sure."

Only to change the subject, Scott asked, "Troy, would accompaniment work for what you want to show us?"

Troy nodded, "Sure. Just strum through the chords of the C major scale, one chord per measure, in four-four time. The primary modes are built off the major scale, just starting with different notes. In this case, we're in C, so the first measure, I'll play off of C. The next measure I'll play the very same notes, but start with D. It's not a D major scale, it's the D minor, the dorian mode; both the F and C are naturals, not sharps like they would be in D major. It's the same concept all the way through all eight notes; in the third bar I'll play E, in the fourth bar I'll play F, and so on."

Getting his acoustic out, Scott admitted, "I'm not sure how to play a B diminished chord, man."

Troy nodded, "Not a problem. Play the G dominant seventh chord instead."

Lance blinked, "Why does that work?"

"Because the important tones are 'B' and 'F'," Troy explained. Noticing that Lance was still lost, Troy smiled, "Blues in C major; the chords are C, F and G seventh. You almost always finish the progression with F, G seventh to C, because 'B' and 'F' resolve perfectly to 'C' and 'E'." Troy quickly played the B and F as a chord and then C and E as a chord. As soon as the others heard it, they understood. "It's called the tritone," Troy explained. "Three whole tones distance from one note to the next. It's the wicked kewl trick Tony Iommi used very often in Black Sabbath." Realizing that Troy knew stuff about one of his favorite bands, Lance's eyes widened. Troy checked with Scott, told him to count off a full four beats and then they would both play. As soon as they started, Troy called out the mode names with each new measure; "Ionian, dorian, phrygian, lydian, mixolydian, aeolian, locrian, and back to ionian."

Listening to the notes ring from the guitars, Troy then muttered, "This is a damn nice axe; awesome tone, nice feel..." For another minute or so, Troy ran through a few chords, scales, lines and licks, causing Scott and Lance to whimper. Sean, Jay, Chris, Erik and Travis softly sniggered. Troy hollered, "Hey, Alden! Contact Taylor Guitar Company. Tell them we'll need about a hundred of these by the end of the week, and about three hundred by the end of the year. If they need money for the various resources required, ask how much they need and give them that amount as a down payment. Let Prez and Mike know what's happening too."

"Yes, Sir," Alden giggled.

Troy impatiently shouted, "Don't call me Sir!"

"Yes, Ma'am," Alden giggled. The other seven boys in the room helplessly sniggered.

Standing, Troy gave Lance his guitar. Lance looked at it and then at Troy. Shaking his head sadly, Lance whined, "All the really kewl stuff I played before seems like garbage now."

Troy smirked, "Don't feel that way, Lance. With Scott, you two can learn a lot; what I had to do over years with a little cassette tape recorder. Guaranteed, you'll learn twice as fast."

Seeing Scott and Lance were still discouraged, Sean asked, "You know about incentive?" When they nodded, Sean smiled, "What's better incentive than impressing your lover?" Moving behind Sean, Troy made Sean's neck a pre-dinner appetizer. Cringing, Sean giggled, "Lesson mastered, sex break, start a new lesson and repeat." Widely smiling, Lance and Scott nodded then put their acoustic guitars back in the cases.

Chris grinned, "We'd better get Troy fed," and took hold of Sean's right hand. Jay took Sean's left hand then led the two attached lovers from the room. Each with arms on Troy's shoulders, Erik and Travis followed. Scott and Lance grabbed a quick kiss then hurried after their friends. Scott closed and locked their dorm room door.

Sean's comm-badge chirped. Billy called, "Dad?"

Still being snacked on and with both hands unavailable, Jay had to tap the comm-badge for Sean. "Yeah?" Sean cackled.

"Um... can I stay at the Taylors' house for supper? Mrs. Taylor invited me."

Across the comm-badge, about a half-dozen pre-teen male voices loudly corrected, "MOM!"

"Sure!" Sean loudly laughed.

Billy giggled, "Am I interrupting anything?"

Jay, Chris, Erik, Travis, Lance and Scott chuckled, "Not at all." Glancing at each other, all six wondered if they would ever stop thinking and saying the same stuff.

"Um... o-o-okay," Billy droned. He then asked, "Can Robbie spend the night at our house?"

"Yes," the same six voices sang.

Troy's head popped off Sean's neck to ask, "Have you heard from Jason and JD?" He dove face first back to his meal. Sean howled laughing.

Billy chuckled, "They went to the dining room at Ewa Beach, pop. I haven't seen Jimmy or Scott."

Jay pushed open the first exit door. Sean sniggered, "They're with Richie and Dillon and their fathers." Chris held the door open until their group of four passed.

"Kewl," Billy giggled. "See ya later."

"Kewl, pal," Sean cackled.

Pointing at the goofy way Troy and Sean were walking, Scott playfully told Erik, "They didn't walk into the room like that."

"I didn't notice," Erik innocently grinned.

Not knowing who had been doing half the speaking or what was going on, Billy quickly sniggered, "Over and out!"

Chapter 20

Ewa Beach Dining Room

Monday, November 8, 2004 5:47PM HTZ

All the boys and many girls in the dining room had Mr. Fuzzy puppets hanging out of their back pockets. The kids that had been to school were proudly displaying their new baseball caps; telling others that hadn't been to school what the symbols on their caps meant. As they had been when leaving the dormitory, Chris and Jay led Sean into the dining room, with Troy still attached by the mouth to Sean's shoulder. Scott, Lance, Erik and Travis closely followed the first four. They went directly to the kitchen chow line.

Sharing a table near the middle of the room were Stephen Wickes, Aaron Farris, Roger and Nick, Aki and Hajami, Keanu and Liki. Seeing Troy attached to Sean, and with the other six newbies, Liki leaned close to Keanu to whisper, "Tell me that's not the cutest, most awesome thing we've seen in a week."

"I'm surprised you think so," Keanu indifferently smirked, and purposefully reached for his glass of 7-Up.

Liki had talked with Keanu about Sean hooking up with Troy, and all the changes they were noticing in Sean's general demeanor. They had both agreed it was a great thing to see. Stunned and watching Keanu drink, Liki sighed, "I thought it was cute."

Putting his glass down, Keanu smiled at Liki. So that every nearby kid paying any attention could hear, Keanu clearly told Liki, "The only thing cuter than you is you with me. The last couple of days, I can't even focus on anything or anyone else. Taking that test today, I was sure they were going to hand me a cap with a trash can on it. I'm a jerk, and an idiot, cos I never told you any of this before. I can't even hold your hand for a full minute at a time, and what really bites is I can't even tell you what I'm feeling, or why holding hands is a problem, but I get such a major rush from just being near you that I must love you. They're not near as cute as you are."

Nearby kids in the dining room smiled or giggled. Liki wondered, "What about kids?"

Waving his arm around part of the room, Keanu grinned, "To stay with you, pick a kid." In the line of Keanu's swinging arm were Craig and Phil Nash, Stu, Vaziik, the three Oldcambus brothers and their cousin Taron. All eight gathered their stuff on trays, stood up and moved to another table. Vaziik made no change of expression, but the other seven sadly shook their heads and sniggered. "Okay," Keanu grinned, "maybe not just any kid." Blankly staring at Keanu, it was obvious that Liki was dumbstruck.

"GOD!" Aaron loudly laughed.

Standing and reaching over the table, Stephen Wickes snapped his fingers before Liki and loudly ordered, "WAKE UP!" Hajimi quickly covered his mouth with a napkin and cracked up.

Aki sniggered, "You're supposed to kiss him now, Liki. Any other response will only have every gay dude in the division lining up to steal Keanu away from you."

Fifteen-year-old Felicity Pettis giggled, "Is there one cute straight boy in this division?"

Craig Nash had almost sat down, but stood up again and took his tray to Felicity's table. Politely, Craig asked, "May I join you?"

When the half-dozen teen girls giggled, nodded, and shifted around to make room near Felicity, Craig put his tray down and sat. Knowing that his big bro had just stumbled into Nirvana, Phil Nash roared laughing, setting off the Oldcambus brothers and Taron in giggles.

At last, Liki leaned over for a tender kiss and received one in return from Keanu. It was the first public display of affection for both boys. Without a word, they gathered half-eaten plates of roast beef dinners onto their trays and then went to the dishwasher. They stopped in the chow line, asked for McCoy milkshakes, assuring the chefs that there was no problem with the food, and then left the dining room to return to their dorm room.

With their dinner trays, Sean and Troy stepped out of the kitchen. Right behind them were Chris and Jay. Glancing around, they searched for a larger, empty table that could comfortably seat all eight of them. Sitting with her grandson Jason, and his new boyfriend, JD, Judy Faris called, "Troy, did you see what your son did?" Jason softly giggled. JD quickly put his halos over his head. Chris and Jay went to the recently vacated table.

Pausing briefly, Troy proudly smiled, "Jason did a great job this afternoon. The data from the PADD is uploaded..."

"Not that!" Judy impatiently huffed, and corrected, "Look at JD's neck."

Sean giggled. Troy sniggered, "Yep, I saw that already."

Judy smiled, "And what are you going to do about it?"

Shrugging, Troy chuckled, "We'll have a chat tonight with Jason and JD. By morning, both will know that hickeys are supposed to go where only the two of them can see 'em." Walking by with their dinner trays, Travis and Erik evilly snickered. Sean cracked up.

"I love my dad and pop," Jason cheered. Covering his food stuffed mouth, JD laughed.

Impatiently sighing, but grinning widely, Judy flicked her hands, signaling Troy and Sean to go away.

Five-year-old Dulce Kentesius giggled hysterically. The other girls at her table were giggling too, but not like Dulce. Getting up and still giggling, Dulce went to Craig and tapped on his back. Craig turned and smiled, "Hi."

"Got a secret for you," Dulce cutely sang.

Grinning, Craig told the other girls, "Excuse me for a few moments," and leaned over to hear the secret. Craig's primary motivation was to show Felicity that he could be nice to the youngest kids. Girls liked that sort of stuff, and it was really no problem; little kids were adorable. He probably would've listened to the secret if he was sitting with his brother and other boys.

Cupping her tiny mouth, Dulce softly giggled, "Your mommy says, remin' you to treat her like a special lady. If she's worth it, she'll really like it."

Turning pale, Craig remembered his mother saying almost exactly those words only weeks earlier. The only difference was the second use of the word 'like' should have been 'appreciate'. A five-year-old wouldn't have understood or been able to pronounce 'appreciate'. There was no way this girl could've known to say any of that unless she had heard it. Oddly, the table Dulce had been at was filled with six other girls, all no older than eight- or nine-years-old. With shivers running up and down his spine, Craig smiled, "Thank you, that was really nice to hear again." Dulce's teddy bear, Aster happily bounced and clapped his paws. Craig asked, "Would you tell my brother that too?"

"Okay!" Dulce giggled, and skipped over toward Phil, with Aster skipping along behind her. Craig didn't even have to ask if Dulce knew who Phil was. She went right to him and did the exact same thing.

Phil patiently listened to the secret. Clearly recalling all the teasing and harassing he had dished out to Craig about treating the girl 'special,' Phil turned even more pale than his brother. Phil gasped, "Who told you that?"

"Your mommy," Dulce giggled. "She's watching you and Craigie. She will as long as she can too!"

'Craigie' was what his mother called Craig when she needed or wanted some task or chore done. Craigie, take out the garbage. Craigie, mow the lawn in the morning, please? It drove Craig nuts. Phil wondered, "And where's my dad?"

"He went over there," Dulce warmly smiled.

With tears welling in his eyes, Phil asked, "Did she say anything else?"

Cutely humming affirmatively, Dulce gestured with her tiny index finger for Phil to lean closer. When he did, Dulce whispered, "It's okay, she says. The boy's name is Owen Reed. When you and your bro are settled and happy, she'll go to your daddy."

Shedding tears, Phil croaked, "Tell her, thank you, and that I really miss her."

Dulce giggled, "She knows already and heard you, silly!" and skipped away, back to her table and dinner.

Although concentrating on the conversation he was having with six girls, Craig watched his little bro lean back in his chair and wipe his eyes. Kassidy seemed to show interest in why Phil stopped eating, but Phil only shook his head and softly muttered something.

Sending, 'You're being very silly, Dulce,' John telepathically tickled the little girl. She squealed then giggled and hurried back to her table. Not even looking up for a moment, Wade giggled and continued carefully placing peas and carrots in his small mound of mashed potatoes.

'Ask her if she's ever seen Leo's parents, hon,' Stephen sent.

'Good idea,' John replied, and then asked Dulce the question. Turning to John and giggling, Dulce nodded. John asked, 'Would you be around later tonight? We need to talk with Leo and you would be a big help.' Dulce nodded again. 'I'll come get you and take you back to your dorm room when we're done,' John offered. He telepathically let Drew and Corey know there would be help with Leo, but didn't specify the who or how.

King Aalona walked into the dining room carrying Kaimi on his hip. Behind the King were the rest of the Core Rimmers and the boys that had gone to Kaho'olawe. Paul, Reyes and Ryan did not follow the rest of the group, deciding instead to get ready for their first date. The King and Prince went to the Queen and the adults. The remaining boys went directly to the kitchen chow line.

At the table where Sean and Troy were sitting, Travis was being too quiet. Erik asked Travis, "What're you thinking, Champ?" The other six quietly grinned, now that Travis' pet name was out in the open.

Shrugging, Travis swallowed then sighed, "Part of me is still thinking we need to do something to help the division, ya know? How're you feeling?"

Erik smiled, "Like you need cuddles." The other six boys chortled.

Travis chuckled, "Very true, cuddle-bunny."

Chris giggled, "That fits you, Erik. You keep going, and going, and going..."

"I can't help it!" Erik laughed, and gestured to his new partner, giggling, "Trav's a hunky Champ!" Most of the eight boys at the table softly sniggered, poking fun at the Champ chasing the cuddle-bunny and vise-versa.

Wiping his mouth, Troy softly offered, "Core Rimmers aren't the only possibility. We still need dorm leaders. Your dormitory doesn't have any yet."

Erik asked, "What's that job include?"

Sean explained, "It's like being the oldest big brothers. On school nights, check on the other kids, to make sure little guys are getting to bed at decent hours. If someone needs something, you're the first contact to get whatever is needed. Let's say a kid is fussin' over homework, then you find someone that can help. If someone gets sick, you get the kid to the doctor. That kind of stuff."

"There's all sorts of other jobs that aren't round the clock," Troy smiled. "There are now two active auditoriums where movies can be shown. There are two kitchens that need dishwashers and floor moppers. Those jobs need older guys that have the muscle to push dishes and mops, and lift reels of film."

Shrugging, Travis asked Erik, "What do you think?"

Erik scowled, "In the kitchen, with the way these dudes cook, I'd be a heifer in a month. At the theater, I'd wind up watching the flick and forgetting to prep other reels."

Travis brightly beamed, "As dorm leaders, we'd have the supplies of lube and rubbers." The others softly chortled.

"Okay then!" Erik laughed.

Sean sniggered, "Remember, kids will be knocking on your door when they need stuff. It's important that you be available, and not intertwined."

"We're not intertwined that much," Travis chuckled. "Most of the time we're just kicked back, cuddling, chatting, and watchin' TV."

Nodding, Erik giggled, "Some dancing too, fast and real slow."

"Just an observation," Jay grinned, "you two guys are homebodies, more than me, Chris, Lance and Scott. Also, you're fifteen-years-old, Trav. That makes you and Craig the oldest guys in our dorm, so far."

"It would be lots easier for everybody to approach you, rather than slightly younger, twelve- or thirteen-year-old guys," Chris reminded.

Lance joked, "Teachin' 'em rocket science, like how to unroll a rubber, could be fun."

Erik cracked up and hollered, "SOLD!"

Travis chuckled, "Are you sure?"

Nodding, Erik said, "Everything said all day is true enough. We have been and are homebodies, as much or more than anyone else." Glancing around the table, Erik joked, "Whether this crew wants to believe it or not, we're clothed most of the time when we snuggle."

"Not buyin' it," Scott teased.

Shaking his head, Lance giggled, "Leave your door open and prove it."

Evilly grinning, Travis nodded, "We can take that dare and win."

Troy chuckled, "Being available is the biggest part of the job."

Sean checked, "Do you dudes really want the job?" One after the other, Erik and Travis agreed. Tapping his sub-vocal, Sean called, "Alden, connect me to Prez."

Seconds later, still in the kitchen chow line, Prez replied, "What's up, Sean?"

"We have two volunteers, Travis and Erik, for dorm three leadership," Sean explained.

"Excellent!" Prez cheered, and then instructed, "Have them chat with the other dorm leaders for a briefing. It's done."

"Got it, Prez," Sean smiled, "thanks."

"John is in on this already, just so we all know how and why it happened," Prez instructed.

"Kewl. Sean out." Flashing a thumbs up, Sean said, "The job is yours. Talk to Horacio, Corbin and Dominic later, so you get some first hand info from other dorm leaders. Horacio was my roommate and orphanage brother." He paused then giggled, "He's very kewl, for a muff diver." Sputtering, Lance quickly reached for napkins, covered his mouth and cracked up.

Sadly shaking his head, Scott softly chuckled, "Ya know, four days ago that used to be one of my goals, but now it does seem way more than a bit gross."

Nodding agreement, Troy smiled, "You two just started your relationship today. I don't want to hear a word about jobs from either of you for two days, minimum; not a word until Thursday, seriously. There's a whole bunch of new stuff for you two to talk about and share; that's priority one. Prez will back me up. Teamwork comes first."

Scott and Lance checked with one another. In unison, they cheekily grinned, "Yes, ma'am."

Shaking his head, Sean softly giggled, "I've been the bottom boy most of the last week. All day today, we've been playfully debating that issue."

Slightly blushing, Troy smiled, "The best you might hope for is switching day-to-day, Tiger."

"Required recovery time," Erik softly chortled.

Chris and Jay warmly smiled at each other. Catching their silent sharing, Travis chuckled, "Okay, old timers, how do you work it?"

Chris sniggered, "What you're doing, we did, so don't think that there's anything wrong at all."

Swallowing and nodding, Jay soon washed down his food with some iced tea, then quietly explained, "Right now, for you guys, the experiments are over. The thrill of something new is what's causing the situation you're in. Eventually, it does change. With my wrist as it is, I've been bottom six of the eight times, but before Friday, I had been top a pretty long while." He checked with Chris, "More than a week, wasn't it?"

"Almost two weeks," Chris mischievously grinned. Seeing only disbelief on the other six faces, Chris giggled, "We were at home, and going to school, so our chances were only once a day, but for eleven days..." He leered at Jay and hungrily hummed. All eight became hysterical and howled laughing.

"As I was trying to explain," Jay softly chuckled, "once the newness wears off, it becomes a normal part of the days. Chris was having some rough times, so it was my job to make it all better, if only for a little while, to give his off days a bright spot. Now, Chris is recovering from a big scare, as we've all seen first hand. It's still my job to make it all better, only this time I'm receiving instead of giving. When the cast is off and I can put weight on my arm without cringing, the roles will switch again. It'll go with the flow. It's all good, guys, just know it will change... sooner or later... eventually... someday." Again they all roared laughing.

Beginning to return to their dinners, Erik and Lance seemed to be have a giggling contest. Chris prompted, "What's the joke?"

"It's no joke, just an observation," Erik giggled.

Nodding, Lance grinned, "We shared a little too much personal info."

Scott chuckled, "I'll bet I know where this is going." Discretely, Lance moved his left hand onto Scott's lap, wiggled his fingers to give a slight tickle, and then squeezed his lover's thigh. Believing that was one of the kewlest and sweetest things Lance had done all day, Scott beamed.

"It's a silly question, really, but I can't help asking," Erik offered, and then explained, "Of us four couples here, Trav's taller and heavier than me, Scott's taller and heavier than Lance, Jay's not too much taller than Chris, but Jay has at least ten pounds of muscle over Chris. What really shocks me are Troy and Sean, almost the exact same height and weight, but the hidden truth is in Sean's boardies." Troy widely grinned. Sean blushed and giggled. Locking eyes with Sean, Erik wondered, "You took longer to get Troy ready, I assume?"

Nodding, Sean softly grinned, "Of course. I was a sex toy, but was crazy in love with a virgin. What you guys did in a day, I took more than two days, almost three days doing. We went from a five-by-four dildo, to a seven-by-five, to a nine-by-six."

Lance checked, "And you consider yourself mostly a bottom?"

Nodding, Sean admitted, "For five years, I was a bottom. Part of what I learned, which are really the only useful memories, is that size has absolutely nothing to do with anything. Some men are simply inconsiderate jerks, regardless of what they're packing. A nice guy with less than average can make sex just as good as the hung, more than average guy. I got very lucky with Troy in lots of ways, including a guy that's got more than average. For instance, if this conversation was happening a week ago, I'd doubt I'd be participating. That's how insecure I was. Even my grower wasn't kewl, because it attracted attention I didn't want. Troy changed all that. Then, the next day, we became Morale Rimmers, and Troy had six other dudes backing up everything he was telling me in private. From what we shared in the dorm before, I know all of us normally hang similarly, except Lance, who has almost six inches hanging. The majority of teenagers here fall into the average category, hanging between three and four inches."

Troy shared, "That extra time was necessary, I'll admit that, but I will add it was personally frustrating. Sean knows that I felt like a wimp, but I had him showing me that he was perfectly fine waiting for success. Over five days, I tried and failed then wound up his top again. Even when I did succeed, Sean kept me on top the next couple o' times, in control and riding him. Last night was my first time with my legs in the air and with him in control. As great as all the other rides were, the real magic happened last night." Sean leaned over and kissed Troy on the ear, earning a giggle.

Chris and Jay checked with each other. Then Jay asked, "Does that mean what I think it does?"

Troy nodded and proudly smiled, "Yep. I soaked my belly and chest without Sean or me touching my cock. The next time I got off twice, once hands free, and the second time barely two minutes later, with Sean's help."

Lance gasped, "That can really happen?"

Chris, Jay, Sean and Troy nodded. Troy pleasantly sighed, "When it's right, and it's physical and emotional, watch out for amazing feats never before imagined."

"All those men and years later, I didn't even know about that," Sean proudly smiled. "Last week, twice in a single ten minute session, Troy made me shoot. That was only our third time having intercourse too. In addition to the physical feelings, Troy was saying the most awesome stuff between kisses. I shivered like a little kid, and didn't even realize what had happened, until I felt the wet spots."

Erik, Lance, Scott and Travis disjointedly droned, "Oh my God."

Lance turned to Scott, giggling the warning; "If you do that to me, all bets are off. We were attached before having sex. I know I've been clinging to you all day. When that happens to us, fahgedaboudit!"

Around the dining room, several ex-New Yorkers loudly chanted, "Fahgedaboudit!"

Widely smiling, Prez, Keith, Derrick and Mike glanced around the dining room. Knowing the kids were sharing, they returned to their mealtime conversation.

Lance, Scott, Troy, Chris and Jay roared laughing. "Oh man!" Troy laughed, "I haven't heard that since I left New Jersey." Noticing Sean, Erik and Travis were only smiling and softly chortling, Troy translated for Sean; "Forget about it, in New York City slang. In other words, Lance becomes Scott's leech, like I was with you, the whole walk here."

Scott sniggered, "We've gotta get these Hawaiians and Californians picking up some Big Apple slang."

Nudging Travis, Chris laughed, "Yeah, DUDES!"

"No, no, no!" Travis and Erik giggled. Sean covered his eyes and slowly shook his head.

Widely smiling, Troy asked Sean, "What's the matter, Tiger?"

Shrugging, Sean giggled, "I'm getting scared. The battle of American East versus West will happen here. Should I warn Prez, King Aalona or both?"

Travis grinned, "No need to warn anyone. It'll be fun, and a war of words only."

Erik sniggered, "Forgetaboutit!"

"No R's and only one T at the end, dude," Lance playfully instructed. "Fah-ged-aboud-it."

Erik grinned, "There's one long U in dude, not two O's."

"Dude?" Lance cheekily confirmed.

"FAHGEDABOUDIT," Erik loudly giggled. Putting their forks down, Lance, Scott, Troy, Chris and Jay applauded.

Again around the dining room, all eleven ex-New Yorkers and many other kids loudly cheered, "Fahgedaboudit!"

Sean, Troy, Chris, Jay, Lance and Scott cracked up.

Travis softly sniggered, "There goes the neighborhood."

"Guess we can fahgedaboud being dorm leaders," Erik giggled. "We'll be off base... actually on Ewa Beach, in a very small hut of our own."

* * * * *

Waikiki Beach, The Ocean House Restaurant

Monday, November 8, 2004 6:33PM HTZ

In a rush to get going on their date after the trip to Kaho'olawe, Reyes had Alden get all three of them quickly redressed in comfortable khaki cargo pants, polo shirts and light windbreakers, since they intended to walk the beach after eating. From different locations, Reyes' and Mike's security teams were transported from Ewa Beach to just outside the restaurant with Reyes, Paul and Ryan. After waiting an additional twenty-five minutes, the threesome were finally seated. Paul got a little fidgety and stressed about the wait, but Reyes and Ryan calmed him down easily enough by finding a nearby vantage point to watch the sunset. It was the first time Reyes had seen his new home from a distance. Above the tree line, a small portion of the auditorium and CIC roof could be seen. Reyes' party was called and they hurried back to the restaurant. They had met their waitress and were served glasses of water.

Alone at last, or as alone as they could be with a gorilla and a G-Cat covering outdoors, and Mike's security, Clay and Manny inside the restaurant at a nearby table, Paul leaned forward and grinned, "I thought you said this was a nice, casual place, Reyes?"

Ryan giggled, "We're dressed informally, but we still look like paupers compared to some of the other customers."

Reyes smiled, "There aren't any tuxes, white shirts or ties. This is really nice though. Right near the beach, just like I remember it."

"It's on the beach, Reyes," Paul smirked. "Any closer and we'd be floating."

Ryan lifted a menu and quickly gasped. Reyes and Paul picked up and looked at the menu. Ryan whispered, "Twenty credits for an appetizer; ten for a salad? Thirty for grilled chicken and fifty for steaks of almost every sort."

"Have the prime rib," Reyes giggled. "It used to be the best around."

Paul softly bitched, "That's sixty credits each!"

Nodding, Reyes giggled, "I learned at Kaho'olawe that I need to slow you both down. So, you two have steak, and I'll have lobster. You'll be digesting and on east coast time, so I might have a chance."

Placing the menu down, Ryan softly giggled, "You kept us busy all afternoon, carefully avoiding anywhere near a bedroom."

Reyes innocently wondered, "Would I do that?"

Paul smirked at Ryan, who broke into loud giggles and covered his mouth with his cloth napkin and a hand. Sadly shaking his head, Paul grinned, "Two old diabetics just took nose dives into their soup. I hope you're satisfied."

"Jeez!" Reyes giggled, "I could've picked a five-star restaurant, with prices twice as high, but not anywhere near as nice as this. Next time, we go to McDonald's."

Calming down enough to speak, Ryan giggled, "You were sure to get lucky tonight anyway."

"I didn't bring you here for that reason," Reyes sniggered. "This really is a place I ate at several times in the nineteen-seventies. I can't share memories with both of you, but bringing you here makes you part of the memories. Besides, that little show at Kaho'olawe already proved that I didn't need to take extraordinary steps." Glancing at Paul, Reyes smiled, "No one said a word about what we were doing. We're completely safe everywhere and doing anything."

Paul softly grunted. The whole time he was being naughty, Paul had kept close watch on everyone that was within hearing range. All he would've had to hear was one nasty remark and all hell would've broken loose. Maybe Reyes was right though; maybe in the ROH people were different.

The waitress returned, pleasantly asking, "Have you made any decisions?"

Looking up, Ryan gestured to Reyes, giggling, "I'll defer to our host." Trying his damndest to not smile, Paul slowly nodded agreement.

Reyes smiled, "We'd like to start with the coconut lobster skewers appetizer. Then we'll have Caesar salads. Could you give us about fifteen or twenty minutes, between the finished salads and the main course, please, Alamea?"

Scribbling the order, the waitress nodded, "Certainly." Paul appeared ready to skewer Reyes. Ryan had the widest smile yet seen that clearly warned Reyes of a very late and active night.

"Thank you," Reyes helplessly giggled. "For the main courses, my two friends will have the Ocean House Cut Prime Rib, with baked potatoes. Please bring butter, sour cream and chives separately, so they can go as light or heavy as they like. I'll have the Cold Water Tristan Lobster Tail." Pausing, Reyes checked with Paul and Ryan, "Sodas or iced tea?"

"Tea," Paul answered, and a smile escaped.

Reyes told the waitress, "Three iced teas, and keep them filled, please."

"Yes, Sir," the waitress helplessly giggled. Of course, she thought she was speaking to a very confident thirteen-year-old Hawaiian boy; not realizing that all three boys were old enough to be her father. She choked back another giggle and smiled, "I'll have your appetizers in less than ten minutes."

Reyes grinned, "Thanks, Alamea." The waitress slowly walked away, jotting down notes on her order slip. Seeing his boyfriends slowly shaking their heads, Reyes cackled, "What?"

Paul groaned, "You're dropping big bucks."

Reyes nodded, "I wanted to call both of you Thursday, but it never happened. Friday, I was a Core Rimmer, and called by Danny to pick up three boys in Colorado. Before I completed that, I was called to Des Moines for three more. Chris, who you met this afternoon, was one of those three. When I was done with them, I had exactly twenty-seven-point-two minutes to check around, drop into the diving well, and then dry off to go to Des Moines again, for another seven kids. My entire afternoon was spent working. I could've called you Friday night, just after midnight Eastern time. As it turned out, I wound up working again after dinner here. It was plain luck on Saturday when Prez invited the AI Division, before I got a chance to call you. Yesterday, my plans went to hell too. So far, this day has gone really well, considering Clan insanity. Since our talk this morning, it's been an amazingly good day. Nothing is screwing up this dinner. If you think I sound determined, you should've heard my dad's and pop's tones, when they told me to have an awesome time. One was an order and the other was pretty close to a threat."

Reaching both arms out to have his hands taken by Ryan and then Paul, Reyes smiled, "If you like this dinner, then I'll tell grandpa Danny to get off his buns and get you your own debit cards. Our next trip here, one of you can treat us." He focused on Paul, giggling, "Stop looking like you're going to kill me." Looking at Ryan, Reyes softly giggled, "It's impossible to rape the willing."

Leaning back slightly, Paul sighed, "It's been so long since any of us have been to a place like this."

Ryan wondered, "What other surprises are you planning?"

Reyes shrugged, "That depends on both of you. I figure you'll be tired way before me, so it becomes your choice; I go with you to Sullivan's Island, or we stay at Ewa Beach."

"Where?" Paul asked, "At your family's townhouse?"

"I had Alden prepare a single bedroom condo unit," Reyes giggled.

Ryan laughed, "When did you do that?"

Pointing at the sub-vocal in his left ear, Reyes sniggered, "While I was on stage drumming. I don't have to say a word aloud. Alden's got us all set with drinks, food, flowers and necessities."

Ryan began giggling. Smirking and nodding at his brother, Paul sniggered, "We know you now, Reyes. You're not saying everything, so be detailed about this condo."

Reyes smiled, "Drinks include a selection of juices, sodas, sweet tea, the way Aunt Mary makes, an automatic coffee maker for the morning, and a bottle of Champagne."

"Ah ha!" Ryan and Paul laughed.

Reyes giggled, "Other than cookies and snacks, there's a few things for breakfast, if we decide to stay home and cook. I'd rather we eat at the CIC though. I'd like to at least see and chat with my fathers and brothers before they go to school."

Slowly nodding, Paul grinned, "And the other necessities are?"

Tapping his sub-vocal, Reyes checked, "What did you get in the way of necessities, Alden?"

Over their comm-badges, Alden giggled, "Sheets, three pillows, a blanket, lube, towels, rubbers, toilet paper, extra lube, soap and shampoo, extra rubbers, and the widest variety of toys yet ordered by any division, including a hammock. For some reason, Reyes decided on no chaps or spurs. He won't tell me why."

"Spurs would get caught in the hammock," Reyes sniggered. Lifting his napkin again, Ryan covered his mouth and roared laughing.

Sadly shaking his head, Paul helplessly giggled, "If you had simply said that you setup a love nest, it might've been quicker."

"It's not a love nest," Reyes smiled. "It's only a private place to be. A love nest would include a lot more."

Now getting into the game, Paul giggled, "Such as?"

"There's a nice TV and sound system, but no DVDs or CDs," Reyes joked. "We'll have to get by without for a night. If I had my druthers, we'd have a king sized bed, not a queen size. Again, we can get by for a night. We would eventually need a loin cloth, chaps and spurs to play cowboys and indian."

Ryan giggled, "We're the cowboys and you're the indian?"

"Course!" Reyes laughed.

"Of course," Paul sniggered.

A gentleman, apparently in his early fifties approached the table. Softly giggling, the boys watched and paused their silly conversation.

Stopping beside the table, the man smiled, "Good evening, boys. My name is Conrad Dean. I'm the restaurant manager. How're you this evening?"

Answering, "Fine," Paul wore a slight smile, but Reyes and Ryan could see suspicion in his eyes. Ryan nodded.

Reyes cheerfully asked, "How can we help you, Mr. Dean?"

Mr. Dean smiled, "I only came by to meet the Clan Short representatives visiting our fine establishment. From following the news this past week, I'm very happy that you chose to have dinner here. Your organization's activities have helped our island nation in numerous ways. We're very proud that Pacific Rim Headquarters is here on Oahu. If there's anything I can get for you, to make your evening more pleasant, please let me or your server know."

Ryan politely said, "Thank you," and Paul slowly nodded.

Reyes grinned, "We'll be sure to do that, Sir. Thank you for taking the time to greet us."

"You're welcome," Mr. Dean smiled, and then turned around and left the boys alone.

Ryan softly prompted, "Calm down, bro."

Grimacing, Paul nodded and wondered, "What sort of activities is he referring to, Reyes?"

Shrugging, Reyes carefully answered, "There are thirty-one fewer teen prostitutes on the street. We've rescued other kids that had bad parents and home lives. We closed down the militant factions of the FCC in the Pacific Rim, and got more kids from that. Then there's the California orphanages and all the kids we've rescued from Battle of Earth. Lastly, with all the kids to feed and shelter, I'm sure we're helping the economy."

Paul and Ryan wordlessly checked with each other.

Reyes smiled, "I know you have a good family on Sullivan's Island, but I watched you two today. Everywhere we went on both bases, and even over at Kaho'olawe, you seemed to enjoy yourselves." When they nodded, Reyes softly admitted, "I'd hoped you'd feel more comfortable here. There are so many really kewl kids, and you both mixed in really well, considering today was your first visit. That made me happy, and the interaction is what you need to get over the past. At some point, I'd really like it if you decided to stay here, with me. We could visit Sullivan's Island, and have your family and friends visit us here too." Again, Paul and Ryan checked with one another and then softly chuckled. Reyes giggled, "Too soon, huh?"

Paul smirked, "We held your hands the whole time the manager was here. He didn't say a word about it."

"I don't know," Ryan sighed. "Jon and Mary are starting to feel like real parents. As kewl as things are there, I'm more comfortable at Ewa Beach. When you were up on stage, Erik, Travis, Chris and Jay were really nice. They didn't even blink when Paul told them you're our boyfriend."

Paul softly smiled, "Jon and Mary didn't say a word about it either. All they were concerned about was when we'd be home. I think we all expected some reaction when I said you might return with us, or we might stay the night here. Only Jerry and Joey giggled."

Reyes wondered, "When I was in the conference room for that meeting, what did you dudes do?"

"We talked with Mike's father," Ryan answered.

Paul nodded, "We also met Derrick's mom and Corey's little brothers, Cesar and Felipe. I couldn't help keeping an eye on the few adults in the reception area, but everything was kewl. It's going to take me time to trust people again, Reyes. Your meeting didn't last very long, thankfully."

Glancing at each of his boyfriends, Reyes checked, "Thankfully?"

Blushing, Paul smirked, "We would've run out of things to say."

Choosing to say what his brother wouldn't, Ryan giggled, "We missed you, Reyes. Yeah, you were only gone about twenty-five minutes, but you're why we're here. It seems we're always talking about you and missing you."

"We'll have to work on that, because I've missed you too," Reyes brightly smiled. Seeing the waitress approaching, Reyes released Paul's and Ryan's hands, briefly explaining, "Our appetizer is here." The waitress delivered their iced tea, placed the platter on the table and put a plate down before each of the three boys. "Thanks, Alamea," Reyes smiled.

"Will there be anything else?" she asked.

Ryan and Paul shook their heads. Reyes answered, "Nope, we're good." Alamea nodded, turned and walked away to check her other tables and customers. The boys each took a skewer of lobster and began carefully pulling fruit, vegetables and meat off the steel skewers. Reyes softly wondered, "What do you guys do to keep busy at home?"

Ryan shrugged, "We spend a lot of time at home, but we take walks along the beach too."

"We used to do a lot of mountain biking, hiking and camping in the Appalachians," Paul answered. He sampled a small piece of lobster and hummed.

While his brother purred, Ryan giggled, "It's good, bro?" Still chewing, Paul rapidly nodded.

Stabbing a piece of lobster and a piece of pineapple, Reyes smiled, "I used to do some mountain biking after we moved here. There are remote places that tourists never see." Reyes tasted his appetizer and slowly nodded.

Ryan asked, "Do you think we might be able to go mountain biking sometime?" He lifted his fork to his mouth and tried the new cuisine.

Paul reached for his glass of tea, took a sip, and then grinned, "I'd really like to check out some remote spots." Ryan stopped chewing and stared at his brother. Quickly pulling his napkin to his mouth, Reyes sputtered and helplessly chuckled. Ryan swallowed and then cracked up. Closing his eyes, Paul softly huffed, "You're both very bad!" Opening his eyes again, Paul complained, "We were talking about mountain biking, but you two go directly into the gutter! Be ashamed of yourselves!"

Ryan breathlessly giggled, "It was the way you said it, bro."

"I knew you were referring to mountain biking," Reyes sniggered, "but Ryan's expression made me take the tangents." Beginning to blush, Reyes giggled, "I'll show you all the island's remote spots, and mine too, Paul."

"I think I can find them myself, without a map," Paul evilly grinned. Reyes and Ryan howled laughing.

"Yes, we can go mountain biking, probably with only my security," Reyes softly chortled. "Casim and Kahdi would love it too. I can see both of them in the rain forest, never in our sight, but always within shouting distance."

"I'm surprised you like them being around," Paul grouched.

Reyes shrugged, "Security is required for all Clan Short leaders, since the battle in Montana. They're a lot like me; interested in music and attached to family. They may not be my best friends or family, but they are nice people."

To change the subject, Ryan prompted, "Tell us about the mountains here in the ROH."

"Five minutes off any trail and you're alone on the planet, in a lush rain forest," Reyes smiled. "I could get us to a couple of waterfalls I think you guys will love. Lulumahu Fall is probably going to be the first one we visit. Sacred Fall is on the list too. It's about a hundred feet tall. When I've exhausted all I know about on Oahu, we can blaze some new trails over on Maui or Kauai. I know there are waterfalls on both islands, but I never got the chance to find them."

While Reyes ate a little more, Paul and Ryan shared descriptions and stories of hikes in the Appalachian Mountains of South Carolina. Through their appetizer and salads, round and round the threesome went, chatting about favorite activities, hobbies, interests and places. Back in the nineteen-seventies, Ryan loved disco dancing and got to be a good dancer with Paul's reluctant help.

The waitress reappeared to clean up the salad plates and overheard their conversation. Paul grumbled, "How people ever danced wearing the tightest clothes they could pour themselves into,

I'll never know."

"You looked good though, bro," Ryan teased. Ryan gestured to his brother, and told Reyes, "At a neighbor's birthday party, Paul had a whole group of girls dancing with him at once."

"Here we go again," Paul smirked. Reyes softly giggled.

Ryan teased, "ALL the girls at the party eventually got some dance floor time with Paul."

Paul reminded, "Did we go there for that reason, bro? No, we went there for Robin's birthday."

Once the waitress walked away, Ryan giggled, "Robin Summers was the cutest kid on the block. By his fourteenth birthday, Robin switched from cute to mouthwatering. We tried..."

"You tried, ya mean," Paul corrected.

"WE tried so many discrete ways to get in Robin's pants," Ryan giggled. "It was sad at the time, but it's really funny now."

"Which is what was so completely ridiculous," Paul grouched. "We're ready to do anything with this guy, but what actually happened was a lot of dancing, a bunch of straight couples hookin' up, and we went home alone, sweaty from dancing, in tight slacks, in the middle of June."

Reyes giggled, "Compare Robin to me."

Both brothers hummed, and then Paul thoughtfully scowled, "Robin was a soccer player; platinum blond, hazel eyes, getting really muscular in the arms and torso."

"Of all the guys dancing at the party, Robin had two left feet,"

Ryan smiled.

Reyes giggled, "Other than the two left feet, Robin sounds a little like my dad."

Shaking his head, Paul said, "Derrick's got curly dirty blond hair and already has awesome muscles." Reyes and Ryan tilted their heads and widely smiled at Paul. "Oh jeez!" Paul sniggered, "That didn't sound right at all, did it?"

Since they weren't eating, Ryan took Reyes hand, giggling, "Robin was eye candy, but little else. Before our lives went to hell, Robin's life took a worse turn, when two girls pointed him out as the father. I think the yelling of three fathers is still reverberating around out there. Robin had to drop out of high school to support both babies."

Taking Reyes other hand, Paul assured, "You're equally good looking, and have the personality Robin never could develop. Take yesterday in the store as a perfect example. All those kids were having fun just getting clothes. You're just as approachable as all the other Core Rimmers, and the kids were proving that."

"I agree," Ryan quickly added. "The kids were going to you and all the Rimmers, but since we were standing right there with you, me and Paul were helping who we could."

Nodding, Reyes smiled, "For that, I accessed my empathy routines for the first time. It was very much required."

Paul wondered, "Are you accessing those empathy routines now?"

"No," Reyes honestly answered, "there's no need to, because I know both of you. Seventy-one boys were blank slates when we went to the store, so I needed it." Taking a deep breath, Reyes softly admitted, "I don't want to be more than I've always been, so all the databases and routines Danny and Marc gave me are off to the side, until I need them for a specific job. If I ever start seeing you guys as a job, or have to access databases to deal, then there's big trouble. I'll say something long before going there." Ryan and Paul grinned at one another then squeezed Reyes' hands. Reyes giggled, "What did I say?"

Ryan smiled, "That's twice today you put me in a dream state."

"It's the first time for me," Paul softly admitted.

"But Ryan's easier," Paul and Reyes simultaneously joked. The fact it was unplanned caused Reyes and Paul to crack up laughing.

Giggling madly and turning red, Ryan released Reyes' hand, leaned back in his chair and softly pouted, "Just perfect."

"Aww!" Reyes and Paul sang through their giggles.

Focusing on Reyes, Ryan softly giggled, "You don't really know how easy I am... YET!" Turning to his evil brother, Ryan more loudly giggled, "You were supposed keep that a secret!"

"There are no secrets between two when there are three," Paul softly sniggered.

* * * * *

Ewa Beach, CIC Dining Room

Monday November 8, 2004 7:17PM

Sean and Troy remained with Chris, Jay, Eric, Travis, Lance and Scott through dinner. It was one of those nights where kids finished their meals, but didn't immediately scatter for other activities. The furthest place the younger kids were going was into the rec room. Judy Faris was still with her grandson Jason, and his new boyfriend, JD. Drew, Corey and Leo were still with Jim and Jen Hundser. Prez, Keith, Derrick and Mike were still at a table together too, working out a new song for the band to cover.

Of their group of eight, Lance and Scott were the first to excuse themselves to return to their dorm room. Watching them stand, Troy playfully asked, "You're going to work on them modes now, huh?"

Lance and Scott intensely blushed. "Yeah," Scott evilly snickered, "there are seven now, but by morning, we'll have at least twice that many modes." The other six roared laughing.

Turning slightly to hide his blush, Lance smiled at Scott and loudly giggled, "Are you planning on an early night? Try three times as many modes. And then we'll pickup the guitars!"

Waving to his friends, Scott chuckled, "See ya in the mornin'."

Erik and Travis then excused themselves to chat with Horacio and Sonia. In moments, Horacio and Sonia were calling the other dorm leaders. Privy to this conversation were Roy and Peter, who were already at the table with Mollie and Nell.

On their way out of the CIC, Lance and Scott overheard Derrick, Mike, Keith and Prez softly singing while working out 'Comfortably Numb'. The fact that they were singing in key without any instruments stunned and surprised Lance and Scott. Walking outside, they couldn't understand how anyone could figure out a song without a single instrument.

Coming out of the Command Center, AJ and Jerry crossed the dining room with envelopes, heading directly for the table where now only Chris, Jay, Sean and Troy were sitting. Within a few meters of the group at the table, Jerry brightly greeted, "How's it goin', dudes?"

Sean knowingly grinned, "Having access to that room is still very kewl, isn't it?"

Nodding, AJ chuckled, "Just getting to know the UNIT guys and the communications equipment."

Jerry checked the names on the envelopes then passed them out, saying, "One for Jason Montigua and one for Christopher Stokley. They're only ID cards, just stuff 'em into your wallets. The really good news comes with debit cards, hopefully in another day or two."

Watching Chris and Jay reach for their wallets, AJ explained, "With ninety-five newbies yesterday, I'll bet our card cutter needs sharpening." Just as expected, Chris and Jay opened the envelopes and then stuffed the ID cards into their wallets with little more than a glance.

Troy grinned, "Sit with us, guys. We've got a little while before any of us need to find our youngest sons."

"Aww, you guys are so fatherly," Chris teased. Jay rapidly nodded and widely smiled. Distinctly, Chris got the impression that Jay wanted to be a father as soon as possible. This would become the topic of a few pillow-talk sessions very soon.

Taking a chair, Jerry chuckled, "You try racing after four- and six-year-old boys."

Sitting beside his lover and soon-to-be-husband, AJ giggled, "Tonight's our first time getting them into a bathtub. If we can't actually catch them, we have to at least funnel them toward the stairs. After their bath, Jerry promised to read to them. Our eight-year-old is trying to figure out his sexual preference, with very little knowledge.

That's what I'll be trying to deal with, until Jerry joins the fun."

Sean's and Troy's eyebrows rose. Sean softly reminded, "Billy and Jason have boyfriends."

Pointing at the table where his mother was with Jason and JD, Troy offered, "We need to explain stuff to Billy, Robbie, Jason and JD. What if we got our sons together, and maybe add Stan, Kaleo's and Tory's oldest?"

"How old is Stan?" Jerry wondered. Of Kaleo's brood of five boys, Stan was the tallest, but not by much. He had assumed that Stan was six- or seven-years-old.

"He's eight," Sean answered, "small for his age, thanks to certain assholes in California."

Disjointedly, Chris, Jay, Troy, Sean, Jerry and AJ called, "Kaleo."

Instinctually bouncing in his chair, Kaleo shouted, "JESUS!" and spun around.

Jerry sniggered, "No miracles required, bro. But one may have just happened, so bring your hubby and let's chat."

"Uh oh," Tory softly droned, thinking that Prez's secret may have already leaked. Tory and Kaleo stood, clasped hands and walked across the room.

As they approached, Sean invited, "Have a seat, bros."

Watching Kaleo and Tory take chairs, Troy explained, "We're planning on a facts-of-life chat later, with Billy, Robbie Taylor, Jason and JD."

AJ briefly added, "And we're planning on the same with Kenny."

"Care to add Stan into the picture?" grinned Jerry.

Raising their eyebrows, Kaleo and Tory silently considered it a few seconds. Tory shared, "We'll need to chase down our rug-rats and get them in a tub."

"So will we," AJ and Jerry chuckled.

Troy pointed around the table, "It'll be me, Sean, AJ, Chris and Jay, there to answer questions, guide and advise while our sons talk."

Jay chuckled, "Why invite us into this? We're not fathers."

"Yet," Chris helplessly giggled.

"Yeah, yeah," Sean sniggered, "fahgedaboudit! You've got three years together. Besides, I expect this to be cute, funny and bordering on insane."

Troy nodded and grinned, "Billy and Jase already know that some old, bad lessons need corrections. JD, Robbie, Kenny and Stan are at slightly different levels of knowledge, but they're fundamentally the same. We get the discussion started and let them talk, then it's all advise and guidance. That's the plan, unless we determine we need to take more control."

"It sounds like an awesome idea," Kaleo beamed. "As soon as our youngest are in bed, either Tory or I will join you. Six boys and six dads sounds very kewl. I don't think Stan will get too embarrassed. By observation, I can tell you that when Stan giggles 'no' and blushes, that only means, 'standby while I process'. Then he'll come back again with another comment or question."

Tory hummed then wondered, "Do you think the head Rimmers and analysts have gone there? Maybe Gage, Jonah, Ben and Sammy need to participate?"

Kaleo smiled at Tory, prompting, "Let's check it out." They quickly got up and went to Prez.

Moments later, evil snickering erupted at the table where Prez, Keith, Derrick and Mike were sitting. Keith chuckled, "Been there, done that, with Dee, Gage and Sammy."

Mike sniggered, "Maybe Jonah might want to help anyway."

"He's already gone, with Gage," Derrick grinned, "something about cleaning teeth and oral hygiene." Looking up at Kaleo and Tory, Derrick chuckled, "I think it's beyond the talking phase to the trying phase."

Prez smiled, "Thanks for checking and offering though." He then gestured for Tory and Kaleo to lean down. Prez whispered a question. Tory and Kaleo stood again, shaking their heads. All six Core Rimmers evilly snickered. Kaleo and Tory turned around and returned to the table with Troy, Sean, Chris, Jay, Jerry and AJ.

Kaleo said, "We're set. Now we can try and capture our youngest."

"Operation rug-rat rec room extraction in sixty-seconds," Jerry chuckled.

AJ giggled, "Say that twenty-times, real fast." Instead, Jerry leaned over for a kiss and a different sort of tongue-twister.

Chris checked with Jay. "We'll block the exit doors," Jay grinned.

All the boys at the table stood. Troy loudly called, "Jason, has grandma finished teaching you to curse like a New Yorker?"

Jason giggled, "Not yet, pop."

JD joked, "How'd you know?"

Troy shrugged, "How do you think I learned?"

Sean giggled, and then called, "Be home at eight, Jason, with your boyfriend."

Slouching, Jason giggled, "How'd you know I was gonna ask that?"

"The hickey might've been a clue, Jase," Sean sniggered, and followed the other seven to the rec room doors. The six Core Rimmer fathers entered the room. Chris and Jay separated to take their stations.

Jerry approached Shaun, nonchalantly asking, "How's it goin', buddy?" Spinning around, Shaun ran to Jerry and leaped into his pop's arms.

AJ asked Mike Hunnicutt, "Are you ready to call it a day, pal?"

Mike pointed and giggled, "Richie and Jimmy is racin' monster trucks, daddy."

Heading toward where Mark and Marv were playing, Tory stealthily watched his five-year-old sons. Kaleo went to his spectating six-year-old sons, Leonard and Russ, who were watching Dillon and Scott Deaver play the Formula 1 race car game. Kneeling down,

Kaleo wrapped his arms around Leonard and Russ, chuckling, "Gotchya!"

Russ giggled, "Or maybe we got you, daddy!"

Leonard loudly cackled, "We're not ready fer bed, daddy!" Sadly shaking his head, Kaleo cracked up. The foul, three letter 'B' word caused every kid under eight years old to begin complaining.

Out in the dining room, Prez, Keith, Derrick and Mike clearly heard Leonard's cry. More little guys in the rec room started whining and complaining. Older boys began laughing and teasing the rug-rats. Sadly shaking his head, Keith sniggered, "New dads haven't learned their kids eventually get tired and want to go home."

Derrick chuckled, "Let's go help, before our mouth and morale Rimmers get pounced."

"I can't imagine Kaleo with a permanently high, squeaky voice," Prez grinned. "That would be frightening."

Standing, Mike offered, "We'll get back to arranging 'Comfortably Numb' later." He noticed Jonah and Gage returning to the dining room and head toward the rec room.

The four Core Rimmers crossed the room. Seeing Chris and Jay at the doorways, blocking squealing little guys, all four began sniggering and hurried. Prez softly suggested to Keith that Jimmy Carr could sleep over their house, so Troy and Sean could deal with their older sons. Liking the idea, Derrick told Mike, "And we'll take Dillon and Scott."

Nodding, Mike sniggered, "It might prevent a future rug-rat mutiny."

Arriving at the doorway behind Jay, and seeing the pandemonium inside the rec room, Prez prompted, "Take the other doorway and help your boyfriend, bro." Evilily chuckling and nodding, Jay jogged past all the dimensional doors. Once Jay was in place, Prez bellowed "WHOA! ATTENTION MINI-RIMMERS!" All the little kids came to an abrupt halt. Chris and Jay struggled to hold in their laughter.

Richie whined, "Poppa, we don' wanna go ta bed yet!"

Keith smirked, "That's too bad. I guess Jimmy will have to go home for his bath and bedtime, instead of bathing and sleeping with you." Richie's and Jimmy's jaws dropped.

Hurrying to Derrick and Mike, Dillon asked, "Me and Scott too?"

Softly chortling, Derrick nodded. Mike loudly announced, "Only IF all you dudes under eight give it up and go find your parents."

Seven-year-old Albert McPhearson cutely blinked his eyes at his new big brother, reminding, "We don't gotta go to school, Mike."

Nodding, Mike smiled, "That's true, Al, but breakfast is still here in the morning, and then you and Charlie get to play all day. If you'd rather take naps tomorrow?"

Three-dozen revolted little boys incredulously squealed, "NAPS?"

All the Core Rimmers in the room nodded and evilily grinned. Walking by his dad and pop with Ben, Sammy softly chuckled, "You're so bad, pop." Cheekily grinning and bouncing his red eyebrows, Prez nodded.

Ben giggled, "I already checked, Sammy can come home with me, if it's kewl?"

Sammy grinned, "The last I heard, Gage and Jonah will be at our house tonight, dad."

Making a space for the two boys to pass, Keith nodded and smiled, "Go ahead, dudes. We'll see you in the morning." Ben and Sammy squeezed by and received good night kisses from Keith and Mike.

By this time, the rug-rats were saying goodnight to friends, and soon dragging their reluctant, tiny butts to the doors. Wade and Frankie passed by Chris and Jay. Unexpectedly, both teens howled laughing and started squirming in the doorway. Ignoring the stack of halos over his little brother's head, Frankie saw the determined look in Wade's eyes and evilly snickered.

"WADE!" John loudly laughed, "No getting even with tickles!"

Giggling, Wade hurried to his daddy and poppa, before Chris and Jay recovered to tickle him back.

Glancing at her son and son-in-law, Kathleen Marr checked, "Wade did that?"

Nodding, Stephen sniggered, "He didn't even warn Frankie, so we were clueless, until Chris and Jay started dancing." Kathleen wondered if she should help bathe the boys, or go to her room and count her Valium tablets.

On the way to the rec room exit, Mike Hunnicutt whispered to Geoff, "Ya wanna sleep at my house?"

Geoff whispered back, "T'morrow night, okay? Me and Lenny need to be home tonight, for Leo." He then gave Mike a quick and completely unexpected kiss on the cheek. Both little tikes began giggling. Holding the spot where Geoff kissed him, Mike dreamily wandered to his poppa. Softly chortling at his son's expression, Jerry squatted down and picked Mike up. Geoff met Lenny and they started for the doors.

Troy and Sean walked to Prez, Keith, Mike and Derrick. Troy smiled, "Thanks so much, guys."

Prez nodded, "Your hands are full with Jason and Billy tonight."

"We can get the kids bathed and in bed," Derrick assured.

Keith grinned, "In the unlikely event of home-sickness, Alden can fix that in a flash."

Mike prompted, "Put 'Comfortably Numb' on repeat for a while, Troy."

Troy checked, "Tomorrow, after school?"

"That's the plan," Prez smiled.

Derrick prompted, "We need to check the Oneula Beach auditorium."

Sean offered, "Lance and Scott say the auditorium's way smaller than here, but still very large. They said it's still big enough for our entire division; this one is big enough for several divisions."

"Reyes mentioned it earlier," Mike smiled. "From what he told us, it's pretty much the same, with a few gear differences."

Squatting down, Sean kissed Scott then softly instructed, "You be good for Uncle Mike and Uncle Derrick."

Scott giggled, "I'll be even better for Dillon." Cracking up, Dillon playfully shoved Scott.

"I'm sure you will," Sean snickered and stood.

Derrick called, "Jonah? Home by ten and asleep by eleven; there's school in the morning."

Flashing a thumbs-up, Jonah nodded, "No problem, dad."

Involved in a flight simulation video game, Gage loudly assured, "We'll prob'ly be home before ten. It only depends on how many are still here."

Finished kissing his youngest two sons goodnight, and letting Troy say goodnight to them, Sean called, "Jason and JD, are you ready to go home?" The two boys got up and gave grandma Judy kisses on the cheek before hurrying across the room.

All the Core Rimmers left the rec room, including Chris and Jay. Troy, Sean, AJ, Jerry, Kaleo and Tory went to dimensional doors with their sons and were soon at Oneula Beach. Prez, Keith, Mike and Derrick paused at the tables where their parents were sitting, so grandparents could get kisses goodnight from their grandsons. The victims of telepathic tickles, Chris and Jay completely forgot about joining Troy and Sean, and instead went to find Erik and Travis.

John telepathically called, 'Dulce, are you ready, little sister?' When Dulce nodded and told her teddy bear to follow, John sent, 'You know Leo's going to cry. I'll help keep you strong, so you can talk for

Leo's mommy and daddy.'

Nodding and taking the final few steps to John, Dulce softly wondered, "Why do some people cry?"

Carefully flicking some stray hairs off the girl's face, John answered, "Because you're proving love never dies, Dulce. You and I know that, but some folks don't really get it. They're happy tears anyway."

Minutes before eight o'clock, the dining room began emptying. With the coast clear of her overprotective Core Rimmer son, Judy Faris went to the kitchen, where she invited Randy Leister to stop by for a night cap. Pleasantly surprised, Randy quickly accepted and promised he would be at Judy's condo before ten o'clock. Randy Leister was the first of two men that had caught her fancy. Doctor Randall Wiener was the second man that Judy wanted to get to know. Walking to her condo, Judy could almost hear Troy bitterly complaining, "MOM! Jesus H. Christ! They're both Randys! Why not just take out an ad? Divorced single mother and grandmother seeks handsome, randy man that loves kids and wants to make some." In the elevator up to the fifth floor, Judy roared laughing.

* * * * *

Monday, November 8, 2004 8:02PM HTZ

Outside the CIC, Corey and Drew took their family home. Dulce and her teddy bear, Aster waited for John to finish explaining things to his mother-in-law and family. "This won't take too long," John offered, "maybe an hour, depending on Leo. Then I'll give our very awesome little girl some treats that Mrs. Combs is making specially for Dulce."

Wide-eyed, Dulce repeated, "Treats? I gets treats?"

Stephen, Frankie and Wade helplessly giggled. Smiling down at Dulce, John teased, "Secret treats, for you and your closest friends at the dorm. As soon as we're done, we'll get the treats and transport to your common room, with the treats. I'll take off real quick, and you can share your treats."

Softly chortling at the little girl and her Teddy clapping their hands, Stephen gave John a tender kiss, sending, 'Hurry home, hon.'

'Right into your arms,' John silently promised. He then levitated Frankie and Wade, so that he didn't have to bend down to kiss either son goodnight. Lastly, John made a show of kissing Stephen's mom and climbed two invisible steps to kiss her goodnight. Frankie and Stephen went into giggling fits. Grabbing his belly, Wade howled laughing.

Walking back down his virtual steps, John asked, "Ready, Dulce?"

Rapidly shaking her head, Dulce giggled, "Float me."

Grinning, John pointed to Aster, instructing, "Warn your teddy."

"Aster," Dulce giggled, "John's gonna make me float. It's fun!"

Aster confirmed, "You will not be harmed?"

Dulce giggled, "Nope, I'll be fine."

"Lowering friend safety protocols for ten minutes," Aster announced.

Immediately, Dulce rose off the ground and squealed in delight. John carried the little clairvoyant girl to Drew's and Corey's townhouse. Every now and then, John slowly spun her around, so she got a good ride. At the front of the townhomes, about a meter before the steps leading up to the door, John lowered Dulce to the ground. Grinning at the cackling five-year-old, John pointed at Aster. As soon as she caught her breath, Dulce giggled, "Home safety rules, Aster."

"Home safety protocols engaged," Aster declared, and then quickly asked, "Was it fun?"

"Very!" Dulce laughed, and reached for her teddy bear's paw. Aster took his best friend's hand. Taking Dulce's other hand, John walked up the steps and knocked on the door. Moments later, the door was opened by Lenny. He had red, puffy eyes and slouched like he was drained of strength.

Suddenly appearing very relieved, Lenny huffed, "Come in, Uncle John. Hi, Dulce."

John gently told Lenny, "It's gonna be fine."

"I wish," Lenny frowned, and stepped aside.

With Dulce and Aster, John walked in, opened his N-Gen empathy and began drawing the sadness from his brother, brother-in-law and all three nephews. Lenny closed the door and joined his family on the sofa. All the living room lights were on as well as the kitchen fluorescent lights. After a few moments, when everyone was down to sniffles and wiping their eyes, John asked, "Dulce, are they here?"

"Course!" Dulce smiled. "They never leave Leo."

Glancing around the room, like his brothers and dads, Leo softly wondered "Who's where?"

Twisting to and fro, Dulce cutely answered, "Your mommy and daddy." She pointed into thin air at two spots, about a meter before Corey and Drew, saying, "There and there. Your daddy says, he took care of the bad men, got 'em out of the house." She giggled, "Your mommy called you her big, strong, beautiful boy." Flabbergasted, Leo's jaw dropped and he sat back on the couch.

Dulce paused, looking at nothing that anyone else could see, and then shrugged, "Really? Weird." Returning her attention to Leo, Dulce said, "Your daddy made some of the mess in the house. He had a fit, scared the bad men, and made them pee their pants. He'll never stop watching out for you." After another brief pause, seemingly listening to someone, Dulce frowned, "Your mommy says, they weren't 'upposed to go, it wasn't their time." Shaking her tiny head, Dulce complained, "That's not the way it happens though." A few moments later, she said, "Oh. Lots of people only partly crossed. They has to wait to be called. Since they're here, they'll stay with you."

Leaning forward, Drew gently prompted, "Tell us their names, Dulce."

"Walter Daniel Scott and Nadine Scott."

Excitedly and very loudly, Leo squealed, "They're still here?"

Dulce nodded, "They say they're okay, waiting and watching over you. You've heard 'em, Leo. It wasn't a dream, or 'maginein'. It was them. Your daddy likes Drew and Corey. Your mommy likes Lenny, and called Geoff 'precious'." Giggling heartily, she glanced at Geoff and watched him turn red.

Shivering and shedding tears, Leo softly asked, "Did it hurt?"

Quickly trying to stop giggling, Dulce checked with both of Leo's parents. She then said, "Nope, they didn't feel anything. Your daddy says, it was like the dresser was too heavy. They fell down, but got back up again. Your mommy says it was strange... confusin'. Then they heard you calling and ran to you. You couldn't hear or see 'em though. They figured it out when you did, Leo." Scowling, Dulce shook her head, and then called, "John? I don't get what they're saying."

John shrugged, "I'll try to hear them through you, Dulce. You hug Aster and listen." Dulce embraced her teddy bear. John tried to focus on what Dulce was hearing. He closed his eyes and relaxed with a heavy sigh. After about thirty-seconds, John opened his eyes and smiled, "We didn't realize how completely love conquers all, Leo." Five jaws dropped open on the sofa. Drew, Corey, Leo, Lenny and Geoff weren't hearing John's voice, but the deeper adult male voice of Walter Scott.

Through John, Walter explained, "When I heard the looters coming in the house, I left your mom with you and went downstairs, not knowing what I could do, only that I had to do something. I watched and listened to those men from the stairway landing. They weren't finding anything of value worth taking and said they would go upstairs. That's when my anger and need to protect you took over. All at once, every cupboard opened, all the boxes, cans, plates and glasses flew at the looters, the photos and pictures came off the walls, and the furniture we had moved to block the doors began toppling over." Walter chuckled, "Part of me wishes you had seen it, Leo. Grown men breaking down in tears, screaming like little girls, and two even pissed their pants. I've never laughed so hard. Did you know, when a man pisses himself that what isn't absorbed by his clothes still shoots out like a fire hose? They can't reproduce that in the movies."

Leo howled laughing, causing his new family to crack up. Still holding onto her teddy bear, Dulce never even giggled.

Walter grinned, "Our next lesson came after you woke and decided to leave the house. I know how much it hurt you, Leo, but we were both very proud that you were smart enough to seek help. Our love, yours for us and ours for you, pulled us like magnets right after you. If we had tried to run with you, we couldn't have kept up, but we didn't need to worry about that either. After you got to the Staples Center, the same thing happened when you were transported to Des Moines. We thought we'd lose you, but we were pulled along again. Everywhere you were, we were there too. It was your mom that prompted Grandma Morrison to concentrate on you for a while. She's a smart cookie, that woman. She proved it by getting you with Corey and Drew. Of course, we were suspicious at first, because they're so young, but that has passed too. Soon after we arrived here, we saw them and their family as your new family. We wholeheartedly approve of this arrangement. You get two father figures who are also your best friends. In Lenny and Geoff, you get two little brothers, and much more than you can imagine. You've grown so much these last few days, Leo. We honestly couldn't be more proud of you."

Facing Corey, Walter smiled, "You did a better job of teaching Leo the facts of life than I could have. I've never been attracted to boys or men, and would've fumbled through the issue. As sensitive as he's always been, we always knew that Leo would very likely become homosexual."

Turning to Drew, Walter chuckled, "Hearing my voice and knowing I'm here is freaking you out. Stop feeling guilty about last night. Leo's not bothered; neither am I and neither is his mother. Again, you taught what I obviously couldn't have. You are a protective, loving father, Drew, but you are still twelve years old. From the moment you met Leo, you and Corey helped relieve Leo's fears. Every tender moment you spend with Corey, your sons, and every other child in this division, is a lesson. At lunch, we were with Leo and the Seavers. We were there with your family and your parents at dinner. You were right, we would've been friends with all four of your parents; very likely best friends."

Returning his attention to Leo, Walter warmly smiled, "Love conquers all. Who you love is your choice; it always has been and always will be. You've got good role models in this home and in the Clan."

Leo wondered, "What do I do now, dad? I mean, knowing that you and mom are close, why haven't you gone to heaven?"

"That's a good question and a rough one to answer," Walter sighed. "The implication is that the Battle Of Earth wasn't supposed to happen. Many of those who passed that day are like us, waiting near their loved ones. I once read that paradise is a land of many mansions. There's probably some construction going on. All we can do is wait. All you can do is be who you are. Don't try second guessing yourself. Don't be embarrassed thinking, what if my mom and dad are watching. It's simply not in you do to anything that could surprise us. I never wanted a boyfriend, but that does not mean it would bother us if you had one. Those you care about, we'll automatically care for too. There's nothing new under the sun, and we knew that before Friday morning. We also know when to turn away, Leo. Your mom didn't want to witness her baby boy growing up last night. I wanted to be certain it was done in the manner I might've, if I were twelve-years-old and had any clue what I was doing. Not only was it acceptable, it was beautiful and perfect. Again, this afternoon you made us proud by talking with Corey and Drew about it. That's a sure sign you're growing up, son. The only other thing I can suggest is talking to us through Dulce. When we're told it's time for us to move on, would you like to know?"

"Yes!" Leo loudly proclaimed, "Of course!"

"It's your choice," Walter reminded. "Consider the way you said goodbye the first time. Do you really want to say it again?"

Leo scowled, "I don't want to, but I have to. Besides, I want to know that you've made it."

"Good enough," Walter smiled. "Sleep well tonight, Leo. My life was blessed in so many ways, with a beautiful wife and an inspiring son. You've been blessed too, with two sets of loving parents, and now with two little brothers. They'll follow in your footsteps, so show them how to be the best little men they can be."

Pulling Lenny and Geoff closer, Leo beamed, "It's covered, dad."

Drew called his brother, "Mr. Scott?"

"Yes, Drew?"

"Do you approve of what we're planning on doing with your murderers?"

Walter chuckled, "Let me put it this way, Drew. My wife and I have a few choice words for them. We're hoping we aren't called before their executions. Their hell begins the moment they die, with our rage, and then they'll get dragged into the void for eternity. If there's truly justice, those men will feel the fear and pain they inflicted on Leo for all time. One thing we've learned is that we can't be too far from Leo, so bring him along. Every night when he sleeps, we try to leave him and explore Hawaii. About fifty feet away seems to be as far as we can go."

He paused only to ask, "Please get a Vulcan mind healer for Leo?"

Nodding, Drew admitted, "I've been considering it since yesterday morning," and then promised, "Before we go to bed tonight, I'll make the request and make it happen."

Leo frowned, "Why do I need a Vulcan, dad?"

"Because of what you saw in our bedroom," Walter softly answered. He turned to Drew and then Corey, asking, "You understand why?" Leo watched his dad and pop grimly nod. Naturally, Leo was only beginning to recover from the traumas of the early hours of November fifth. He didn't yet realize that what he saw could easily become the focus of many nightmares and sleepless nights.

Going to Leo and finger combing his long, wavy blond hair, Walter joked, "Hippie."

Familiar with this life-long bed-time routine, Leo giggled, "Punk."

"We love you."

"I love you too," Leo smiled.

Rapidly blinking, John smirked and said in his own voice, "Well, that was different." Geoff and Lenny giggled.

Leo smiled, "I might never look at you the same, Uncle John."

Slouching, John sighed, "Can we drop this 'Uncle' crap? I'm a whole seven months older than you, Leo. I can barely deal with Lenny, Dee, Gage, and Sammy calling me uncle. Let's make a new rule for my nephews. Less than three years younger than me, and you use my first name. More than three years, and you add the Uncle."

Leo giggled, "Kewl, dad," and quickly looked around for reactions. Geoff and Lenny cracked up. Grinning, Drew rolled his eyes, and Corey helplessly giggled.

"Dulce is sleepy," Aster announced. "I am holding her up."

Going to her, John called, "Dulce?"

"It's bed time," Dulce yawned.

John checked, "Treats tomorrow?"

She nodded, "T'morrow."

Leo quickly said, "Thank you, Dulce." The little girl contentedly hummed.

Tapping his comm-badge, John grinned, "Alden, transport Aster and Dulce directly onto her bed."

Alden executed the order, giggling, "I just sent the video to the Vatican. They'll have some adjustments to make, I think."

* * * * *

Ewa Beach Dormitory #3

Monday, November 8, 2004 8:08 PM HTZ

The first rounds of the night's love making were over. Cuddled up close to Lance, Scott absently fiddled with his lover's dick, nads and pubes, and had been for many minutes. Completely captivated watching Lance get harder and then softer, Scott pleasantly sighed, "Do you have any idea how fantastic you make me feel?" Aware of their sudden and uncontrollable dick fascination, Lance giggled. Fully expecting that response, Scott raved, "Seriously, there are dreams, reality and nightmares; three distinctly separate states, but you've got me living dreams while I'm wide awake."

"I put a spell on you, while we were at the Meadowlands, superstud," Lance giggled. "It took this long for you to act on it."

Widely grinning, Scott stopped fiddling around, looked up into Lance's eyes and softly chuckled, "Get your story straight, sexy lover-boy; did you start thinking about my dick Friday or late last night?"

Lance giggled, "Well, now that I think of it, I might've guessed this could happen during Friday, when I realized how cute you are. I didn't start wondering about your dick until last night."

Scott brightly beamed, "Acknowledging a guy is cute doesn't make a guy gay. I thought you were cute in the dark, before we ever got to the Meadowlands. All weekend, it was like you were the little brother I never really had. The whole following each other around thing started raising questions; are you a brother, or a lover? Those kinds of ignored, back of my mind questions flooded my thoughts half the night. Messin' around with your dick is only another way to remind you that you're who I want, always by my side."

Lance softly sighed, "Do me a favor?"

"Sure," Scott quickly agreed, "anything."

"Don't do that again; thinking all night about what I might be thinking. I need you awake with me. If you're thinking of me, then wake my ass up and ask."

Scott grinned, "Yeah?"

"Yeah," Lance giggled.

Scott sang, "Why?"

"Two reasons," Lance giggled. "If you had joined me in my bed at any time last night, I would've been shocked, but a kiss would've started everything right then." Scott reached up for a deep, passionate kiss. When they parted, Lance continued.

"While you slept this afternoon, I was bored out of my mind. For the first time, I practiced guitar, but didn't focus on the thing at all. I was thinking about you and us almost the whole time. The only good thing that came out of that hour was learning that I could still play and think of something besides music. I'm committed to you; I was thinking it before you asked, but I was too chicken to ask that, or even if you noticed me watching you last night. All this happened because you had the balls to say what I couldn't or wouldn't. I'm really thrilled out of my mind with everything all day. I just have a little trouble getting ideas out o' my skull and onto my tongue."

"You get ideas out just fine. The fact that I'm in a dream, but wide awake, once again, proves it."

Lance giggled, "Which part do you think was a dream?"

"You're committed to me and thrilled out of your mind?"

"Sorry, it wasn't a dream," Lance giggled. Scott growled. Lance moored then provocatively giggled, "Super-duper-power-pumpin'-stud." Shifting quickly to hold Lance flat and still, Scott ravenously attacked Lance's left nipple. Writhing, Lance howled laughing and half-heartedly tried to detach Scott's face from his chest.

When the tit was perky, Scott's face popped up. He grinned, "That's the right channel; nice and stiff. Now, keep it that way."

Rubbing his nip and discovering it was sore, Lance hysterically bellowed, "IT'S SWOLLEN! YOU ALMOST DREW MILK, DAMMIT!" Softly chortling, Scott gently kissed and flicked his tongue over Lance's aching nipple.

Two doors down, Chris and Jay were chatting with their new dorm leaders, Erik and Travis. Reviewing preferred brands of lube on the Internet, all four heard Lance from the air conditioning duct. Softly sniggering, they went to the open door and stood beneath the air conditioning vent. Once they had agreed on and rehearsed a rebuttal, all four shouted up, "GO GET HIM, SCOTT! IT WAS ALL LANCE'S FAULT!" and then busted up laughing. In the rooms nearby, the Stoebers and Hiram howled.

Rolling his eyes and blushing, Lance helplessly cracked up. Scott laughed, rolled over and shouted at the vent, "I got it all figured out now, thanks!" More laughter and remarks drifted through the vent.

Lance softly giggled, "Thank goodness we decided to commit. Our chances of keeping anything secret are slim-to-none with my big mouth." Scott leaned over and traced Lance's lips with his tongue. Warmly smiling, Lance sighed, "Damn, you're gettin' too good."

"I love you," Scott whispered. Brightly smiling, and with happy tears pooling in his eyes, Lance abruptly pulled Scott down. When Lance did and said nothing for a few moments, Scott checked, "It's still freakin' you out too, huh?"

Choking back the need to cry, Lance softly shivered, "You feel it too?"

Slowly nodding, Scott shared, "We went from acquaintances to lovers in less than four days, and in the process, tossed some of what we thought we were out the window. When careful experiments are so incredibly awesome that you're driven to try to replicate the first times, only to discover the second rounds were even better, then it's beyond good; it's perfection. My shock is wearing off; yours will too, I know it. I have to tell you that I love you, Lance. A little flickering match turned into a wildfire this morning. All I had to do was watch some awesome examples of gay couples to know how to react."

"Now we get to constantly prove it to each other," Lance sighed.

"You sound sad, like it's a bad thing."

"It's not bad, but it is scary as hell though. We stood on a stage for the first time today, but that felt more like anxiety, where this is genuine fear."

Scott thought a few moments then smiled, "You told me stuff earlier today that I'm now going to tell you. I don't want either blond; Erik and Chris aren't you. I don't want Jay or Travis, or Prez, or Keith, or Derrick, or Mike, or Sean, or Troy. I don't want Darren DeVault's monster cock, or thirteen inches anywhere near my mouth or ass. You've got all them guys beat."

"Why?"

"To start with, familiar experiences from before we met that make us almost the same. Since we met, we've seen each other sad, scared, worried, happy, excited and crazy thrilled. I've seen none of that from anybody else. Think of it as a challenge; like getting as good on our guitars as Mike, Troy, and KC too, now that I think of it. Yesterday, that was my only goal. I'm not worried about our commitment. You and I have committed before, to learning to play guitar. Since we've done that, we can easily match and surpass that commitment together. Now, my additional new goal is to keep you, wanting to be in our bed, every night, no matter what. I vow to never let you get to the point where you want to sleep in the other bed, or find someone else. Please, make the same promise, Lance?"

"I pledge to never allow you to search for anyone else. All I have is yours. We swapped guitars earlier today. Say you want my Les Paul and it's yours, just say you won't leave me."

Scott cheered, "That was sincerely awesome! Keep your L.P. and memorize what you just said. That was really beautiful. This is all I need, Lance; the straight boy act is out of the way, so we share everything. Tomorrow, I'll be right beside you, not just close by, but attached, hand-in-hand. Now that I think of it, we'll have three basic states, every day; completely attached and making love; partially attached at the hands, and partially unattached, only when there are guitars to hold and play."

Uncertainly, Lance repeated, "Partially unattached?"

Nodding, Scott clarified, "After all we've said and done, we're part of one another, man. I may not be in physical contact, but I'll be right there with you all the time. This is a feeling I'll never be able to forget. It's paradise, plain and simple. There's not a single place I might be where I won't want you there too. I could have New York City greasy spoon diner runs and still want you, just outside the commode door, chattin' up a storm."

Lance softly droned, "Oh my God, that's too true."

Scott chuckled, "I know it is. A conversation will not wait, ever. I've seen your ass, up close. It's mine to worship, or play drums on."

Lance smirked and then giggled, "Roll on top of me, so I can use your cheeks as drums."

Doing as he was told, Scott grinned, "Which song?"

"None," Lance giggled, "I only wanted to hold your butt cheeks." He snuck in a quick grope, causing Scott to lurch. "Oops!" Lance giggled. "I did that, my fault, but I'm not sorry."

Scott grinned, "Exhale and do it again." Feeling Lance's chest rise beneath him, Scott waited until he couldn't feel breath against his face. Diving down, Scott filled Lance's lungs, and then got his lungs refilled by Lance. Firmly, Lance held onto Scott's ass. Twice more they swapped breaths and then broke it off. Dizzily swooning and trying to refocus, they evilly snickered and then went for it again. Scott rolled and pulled Lance along with him. Able to move his arms, Scott really got into the kiss, caressing and occasionally tightly hugging Lance, to convey that everything was completely awesome in their world. Lance couldn't move his arms, so he moved his tongue. With surgical precision, Lance inspected Scott's mouth, teeth and tongue. Breathlessly, they broke the kiss. Scott hung his head over Lance's shoulder. "You and me, together forever," Scott whispered.

"Forever," Lance immediately acknowledged. "It's awesome."

"Whatever you want, tell me and it's yours."

"I've got all I need."

"Seriously," Scott prompted, "What do you want?"

Lance giggled, "Roll us over again?"

Doing so, Scott brightly smiled down, assuring, "Your wish is my command."

"Yeah?"

"Absolutely."

Lance begged, "Teach me?" Scott curiously tilted his head. Lance sighed, "All that stuff Troy said before dinner flew right over my head. I know the names of the notes, lots of chords, the pentatonic and blues scale patterns, but not much else."

"Okay, all I know is yours, but remember I only had two years of lessons. This is basic stuff compared to what we'll be learning."

Nodding, Lance grinned, "I want to take that placement test and have it prove I'm a musician, not a basket weaver."

Scott joked, "So that's what you were doing with my pubes before?"

Lance giggled, "Not exactly. I was just running my fingers through your bush. It's really soft, like velvet, where mine are more like wires."

Slowly shaking his head, Scott grinned, "To me, your pubes are softer. Twice we humped away and both got off on it. I'd doubt wire would've made the magic happen." Lance stole a kiss, which Scott returned.

"Okay," Scott began, "the chromatic scale is all twelve notes from any note to the same named note an octave higher. All the notes are half steps, one fret apart; like the open E string to the E an octave higher at the twelfth fret. Pick any note and play all the notes to the next octave, and that's the chromatic scale."

"Kewl."

Scott instructed, "Major scales are always built the same way; in a series of full steps or half steps. From the first note to the second is always a full step; like C to D. From the second note to the third is always a full step; like D to E. From the third note to the fourth is always a half step; like E to F. From the fourth note to the fifth is always a full step; like F to G. From the fifth note to the sixth is always a full step; like G to A. From the sixth note to the seventh is always a full step; like A to B. From the seventh note to the eighth is always a half step; like B to C. That's the whole major scale; two full steps, a half step, three full steps and a half step. Got it?"

Nodding, Lance smiled, "Easy."

"Everything we play every day revolves around the major scale. Like Troy was saying, for each of the seven tones, there's an associated chord, and with the chords are the modes. Again, the formulas are right there in the major scale. If you're in the key of C, then C is the tonic. The major chord is built from the tonic, the third of the scale and the fifth of the scale. It's like playing 'pick a note, skip a note'; pick C, skip D, pick E, skip F, and pick G; so the C major chord is C, E, G."

"Simple."

Nodding, Scott assured, "It really is. So we play that 'pick one, skip one' game through all the tones in the major scale. Starting at D, skip E, pick F, skip G, and pick A to get D, F, A, which is a D minor chord. Major chords are built from the tonic, plus the tone two full steps higher, plus the tone one-and-a-half steps higher. Minor chords are built from the tonic, plus the tone one-and-a-half steps higher, plus the tone two full steps higher. The D major chord is D, F sharp, and A. The D minor chord has the third, F natural, not F sharp. Kewl?"

"Kewl. I should've figured this stuff out."

"If you never played the 'pick a note, skip a note' game, and figured the intervals between the tones, then you couldn't have. Let's move on to the third note of the C major scale. You figure out what the associated chord is."

Lance hummed, and then softly muttered, "Start on E, skip F, and pick G, that's one-and-a-half steps, so it's E minor. Skip the A, and pick the B."

Scott smiled, "Excellent. What's next?"

"F, skip G, pick A, which is two full steps, so it's F major. Skip B, and pick C."

"Perfect!" Scott cheered. "See, you know this stuff, you just never played the game before."

"I'm playing lots of kewl new games with you today," Lance giggled.

"This is just the beginning too," Scott chuckled. "Let's get back to scales and chords, before I wind up crawling around and suckin' you off, for being an excellent student."

"Music or sex?"

"Both, of course!" The two boys sniggered and grabbed two more tender kisses.

Lance recalled, "Okay, the next note is G, so skip A, pick B, which is two full steps, so it's a G major chord. Skip C, and then pick D."

Scott nodded, "Very kewl. Now lets get a little more advanced.

Like Troy said, in popular music, we often use the chords built off the tonic, the fourth and the fifth, C, F, G, but that G chord is most often a G dominant seventh. We get the seventh by taking the D, skipping over E and grabbing the F to add to the chord. The notes in a G dominant seventh chord are G, B, D and F. It works perfectly. In every key signature, the dominant seventh chord wants to resolve to the tonic.

"Check out what we've done building chords, Lance. Once you built the F major chord, you used up all the notes available in a single octave as soon as you put the C on top of the F chord. You had to continue the same major scale pattern another octave to pick the D in the G major chord. I continued further by picking the F to make the G major chord into a G dominant seventh chord. C to the next C is an octave, eight tones. The next D in the second octave is the ninth. The next F in the second octave is the eleventh. The A in the second octave is the thirteenth."

"Oh my God," Lance shivered, "that's it! That's how they get away with all the weird chord names. They just continue counting into the second octave." He wondered, "Do they go into the third octave too?"

"Nope," Scott answered, "because there's no reason to go there. We've now used almost every note available."

Lance suspiciously repeated, "Almost?"

Nodding, Scott smiled, "Check this out. All the intervals have names. C to D is a major second, because it's a full step. Make it a half step, or D flat, and the interval is a minor second. You quickly caught that two full steps makes a major third, to build the major chord. Change from two full steps to a step-and-a-half, and it's a minor third interval, and a minor chord. The octave, the fourth and the fifth of the major scale are called perfect intervals, because way back when monks were developing this stuff, the perfect intervals were most pleasing to God. In rock music, we play fourths and fifths all the time, so God must love to rock-and-roll. We've both seen guitar chords named flat-ninth, or augmented, or diminished. Only the perfect tones, the fourth and fifth can be augmented or diminished. To augment a note, you raise it a half step. To diminish a note, you lower it a half step. It's exactly like making a major interval into a minor interval, only in this case, with the fourth and the fifth intervals, you lower them to make a diminished interval, or raise them to make an augmented interval."

"Damn!" Lance giggled, "You know a lot more than I do."

Scott smiled, "Did, past tense, sexy lover-boy. All I understand, I'll teach you, but remember that I couldn't recall the fingering for a B diminished chord, so Troy had me play the G dominant seventh chord instead. I'll bet you that Troy, and all the members of Platinum Habits, have this stuff completely memorized, so they can build chords on a whim, whenever they need 'em. All the stuff we're still trying to memorize and apply, like chords and intervals, they've got under their fingers already. Judging by the way they sing, everything's in their vocal cords too. That's where we need to be, Lance."

Lance admitted, "I fully agree, but have no idea how to get there."

Scott shared, "I'm sure they'll teach us, but Troy was right when he was being a smart-ass, telling us to use the Internet. We have to be motivated and go find the answers to those questions, just like we answered all the sexual questions today."

"We can do this."

"Ready?"

"Set to go."

They got up off the bed and went to power up their laptops. Then they got their acoustic guitars out while the laptops booted up. Scott told Lance, "All that stuff I was explaining is called 'diatonic harmony'. You look that up on your PC, and I'll look up the modes on mine."

"Kewl," Lance replied. A moment later, both were sitting on their desk chairs before their laptop PCs. After his PC had booted and he had Internet Explorer started, Lance called, "Scott?"

"Yeah?"

"I really love you, man."

Scott's chuckling soon turned into laughter.

Lance giggled, "What?"

"You completely derailed my train of thought!" Scott laughed. "I was typing, and then was wondering, what the fuck am I typing? What was chubby from being on the bed, returned to normal and now is getting chubby again!"

Spinning around in his chair, Lance giggled, "Show me."

Cracking up, Scott turned around. Pointing down at his crotch, Scott sniggered, "From three awesome little words."

"It's how I really feel," Lance giggled. "Knowing that when I say it, it causes a physical reaction too, makes me love you even more." Catching himself dreamily caught in Scott's gaze, Lance smiled, "How tall do you think you might get?"

Scott shrugged, "My dad was five-feet-eleven-inches. My mom had a brother who's six-one. Somewhere around there, just shy of six feet or just over.

"Kewl. My dad was six feet even, but had a nasty beer belly. You keep calling me sexy. I want to stay that way for you."

"I'm not worried about it. I think we both proved that we like what we see. Let's prove we're not basket weavers."

"Right," Lance giggled, "diatonic harmony and modes." He spun his chair around and started searching. Scott also returned his attention to his Macbook and searched for the musical modes. Lance soon said, "The Greek prefix 'dia' means 'through', or 'across', as in diameter or diagonal. Diatonic means through a tonal center or across the notes of a key."

Finding pages of musical modes and selecting the top entry, Scott sighed, "What I don't get is how and why music varies beyond diatonic harmony."

Lance scowled, "I'm not following you," and spun around.

Turning to face Lance, Scott said, "A lot of songs only use chords taken directly from the major scale. Take a song like 'Can't Get Enough', though. The primary chords are C major, B flat major, F major, and G seventh, with E flat majors tossed in too. Neither E flat or B flat are part of C major."

"They're all part of C minor pentatonic though," Lance reminded.

Raising his eyebrows, Scott cheered, "Of course! So songs are written using variations of all the scales. The C blues scale is C, E flat, F, G flat, G natural, and B flat." He picked up his acoustic and played the C blues scale, and then told Lance, "The blues scale is a six note, or hexatonic scale. The C minor pentatonic is five of those six notes – just no G flat. That's why songs I think are C blues are actually written in E flat; because C minor is the relative minor for E flat major."

"Okay," Lance giggled, "how'd you figure that out?"

Scott answered, "Every major scale has a relative minor scale associated with it. Start playing from the sixth note of the E flat major scale; C, D, E flat, F, G, A flat and B flat is the C natural minor scale. It has the same notes as the E flat major scale."

"You're losing me," Lance frowned.

Rolling his chair across the room, Scott prompted, "Okay. Search for the circle of fifths." Lance opened a new tab and performed the search. Scott instructed, "Pull up the image." When Lance did and the image displayed, Scott said, "C major is at the top center, twelve o'clock position. Directly beneath C major is A minor, the relative minor scale and chord for C major. Going clockwise, there's G major, with one sharp. G is a fifth higher than C. Apply the major scale formula to G and you'll wind up with the F sharp. E minor is the relative minor for G major, because E is the sixth of the scale. D is a fifth higher than G, and applying the formula at D gives you two sharps; C sharp and F sharp. B minor is the relative minor for D major. Keep going clockwise to A major and you'll have three sharps, E major and four sharps, B major and five sharps, and F sharp major with six sharps. Going counter-clockwise from C, you get the circle of fourths and all the flat keys, starting with F major, with only B flat. Then there's B flat major and two flats, E flat major and three flats, and so on. It's all applications of the major scale formula, using the twelve different notes. The sixth note of every major scale is the tonic of that key's relative minor. Twelve notes give you twelve major key signatures, and their relative minor key signatures."

Scowling, Lance sighed, "I'm getting it, just barely."

Nodding, Scott smiled, "I hate to tell you, but you'll probably have to do what I did; prove it by writing it all out and working the formula with your guitar. The simple way is to start with C major, then work out D major, and then E major, F major, G major, A major and B major. That'll give you seven of the twelve keys."

Nodding, Lance smirked, "I'll do that, but first tell me why notes are named the ways they are. C sharp and D flat are the same thing."

"Tonally, yeah they are," Scott corrected.

"Once more, in English," Lance giggled.

Scott smiled, "On a guitar or piano, C sharp and D flat are the same sound. On a guitar fretboard, C sharp and D flat are the same fret and same tone. It's on the same black keys all the way across the keyboard. There can only be one A in a scale. The general rule is that there can only be one of any letter named note in any scale. So if we start on F and work the major scale formula, we'll get G, and then A, and then B flat. The B flat cannot be called A sharp because we already used A natural.

"Let's use the key of A major, only because we play a lot of guitar music in A major. Starting at A and going up a full step gives us B. From B and up a full step gives us C sharp. Go up a half-step to D. From D go up a full step to E. Going up from E a full step gives us F sharp. From F sharp up a full step gets us G sharp. Take the final half-step and we're back at A again. The C sharp cannot be D flat because we need that D natural. The same applies to F sharp and G sharp; we can't call F sharp a G flat, because we're needing the G sharp. G sharp cannot be A flat because we need A natural; that's the name of our tonic, where we started, and the name of the key signature." Scott checked, "Have I lost you again?"

Shaking his head, Lance admitted, "I understand, but it's new and still sinking in."

Understandingly nodding, Scott smiled, "It's not brand new to me, but I've still only barely scratched the surface of the implications of all this theory. I saw the sheet music for 'Can't Get Enough' at Manny's. I stood there browsing the book, wondering why they put three flats on the key signature, signifying it's in E flat, when I know that I'm playing C blues. You helped me understand that, Lance."

Lance giggled, "Now if I only understood what the relationships are that allowed you to figure it out. It's all brand spankin' new to me."

"Then let's work out the major key signatures and the circle of fifths," Scott suggested. "It's the base for everything; a good review for me and where I had to be about six months into lessons."

Lance incredulously hollered, "Six months?"

Scott nodded and chuckled, "I had to get callouses and my fingers moving, learning the names of the notes as I went. Then I learned the moveable barre chords, major scales, the pentatonic scales, and the blues scales. At the same time, I had CD's playing, to figure out 'Stairway To Heaven', 'Smoke on the Water', and 'Iron Man'. Little by little, I worked more on CD's and songs and less on my lessons, so I quit the lessons. Watching Platinum Habits last night, and playing with KC today, I'm wishing I had kept going."

"I need to catch up to you," Lance huffed. He asked, "What do I need?"

"A guitar, pencil and paper," Scott smiled.

Pulling open the top center drawer of his desk, Lance found a spiral bound notebook. He pulled open the top right side drawer and slid back the cover to get a pencil. He hollered, "Hey Alden, what's the deal with this drawer cover? What a pain in the ass!"

Alden giggled, "The covers on the left and right side top drawers provide extra flat work spaces, since the desktop is partially covered with the laptop computers. Since you're right-handed, you can type on your computer and jot down notes on paper on the top right side drawer."

"Nice!" Scott cheered.

Nodding, Lance giggled, "Sorry I bitched, but it turns out it's a kewl idea."

Alden giggled, "It's no problem, Lance. Now if you really want to hear bitching at its best..." Alden then played the recordings of Keith's and Corey's Windows rants. Lance and Scott cracked up, especially at the end of Corey's rambling, when Drew's voice clearly conveyed how excited he was becoming.

"Okay!" Lance loudly sang. "One more thing, Alden, if it's not too big a deal?"

"I will not take the big deal tangent," Alden repeatedly chanted through giggles.

Lance cracked up. Scott laughed, "Good idea! We'd like to work on music theory now, Alden."

Alden giggled, "What did you need, Lance?"

Rapidly blinking, Lance laughed, "Oh shit! What did I want?" All three helplessly cracked up.

Alden reminded, "It was right after the Windows recordings."

"Yeah," Lance giggled. "I've had too many application crashes and blue screens to deal with Windows. Since our geeks prefer Macs, I'll make the switch. Do I need to ask a Core Rimmer to swap this Windows laptop for a Macbook Pro, like Scott's?"

"I can do that and just notify the Toy Rimmers," Alden assured. Without further ado, the Windows machine on Lance's desk went into shutdown mode. Alden instructed, "When it finishes, close the cover, please? I'll transport it out and replace it."

"Kewl," Scott grinned, "I used Macs at school, the big tower model, so I can get Lance up to speed quick enough."

"Good luck with that," Lance giggled. "This is after we start building scales and chords?"

"Yes, sexy," Scott sniggered. "The best news is that there are keyboard shortcuts that'll become second nature. You can point-and-click to save, but why bother when command-S does it faster? The mouse won't be near as important for most things. By the time school starts next week and you need it, you'll be fully functional."

"I proved that already today," Lance giggled. Alden and Scott began laughing again, so Lance playfully added, "The next lesson is in the key of D, doggie style, I hope." All three cracked up. The Windows laptop shutdown completed. Lance closed the cover and it vanished off the desk a second later. Leaning forward, Scott gestured with an index finger for Lance to lean closer. As soon as Lance was within range, Scott reached a hand out to caress Lance's ear and landed a passionate kiss.

Alden giggled, "The new Macbook Pro is ready whenever you guys are."

Scott and Lance affirmatively hummed into their kiss. Never breaking their lip lock, Lance slowly stood then carefully maneuvered to take a seat on Scott's right thigh.

Alden patiently called for Lance and Scott. "Guys?" Suddenly and quickly, Alden bitterly complained, "Oh no you don't, Stevie! My camera, my encryption for MY Rimmers. Kerry, no! Get out of there! George, there's no way, you perv!" The speaker connection loudly popped.

* * * * *

Oneula Beach Townhouse #2

Monday, November 8, 2004 8:09PM HTZ

Troy and Sean walked up the steps to their town home, with Jason, JD, Kenny and Stan following close behind. Opening the front door, Sean saw Billy on top of Robbie on the sofa. The two startled boys froze mid-hump. Glancing back, Billy blushed and giggled, "Sorry, dad. Sorry, pop."

Sean grinned, "Robbie, is there some reason Billy needs to apologize?"

Turning redder by the second, Robbie giggled, "I sure don't think so."

Pointing at the two love birds, Troy lightheartedly told the four boys entering the townhouse, "This is the purpose of tonight's gathering and discussion. How to get to rolling around, when to go past rolling around, and how to deal with unrolled times."

Billy almost self-combusted, dropped his face down into the crook of Robbie's neck and helplessly giggled. Holding his boyfriend's head down, Robbie softly sniggered. Jason and JD roared laughing. Sadly shaking his head, Kenny heartily giggled. Covering his blushing face with both hands, Stan squeaked, "Oh no!"

Troy chuckled, "Are you all right, Stan?"

Shrugging, Stan giggled past his hands, "Nothing some time on Doc Wiener's couch won't fix."

"I'm not sure if I'm gay or straight, guys," Kenny softly giggled.

Raising his eyebrows, Jason playfully wondered, "Then what were you holding down Saturday night, Kenny; a gopher?" Blushing, Kenny giggled louder. Jason smiled, "It was kind o' clear what you guys were talking about. Me, Stan and Billy wanted to watch Aladdin though."

"A whole different sort of Genie," JD joked. Jason cracked up. Billy and Robbie evilly snickered.

Noticing that Sean and Troy were carefully watching him, Kenny giggled, "I get it."

When the two teenage fathers turned to him, Stan cackled, "No wonder my dad and pop stayed home to give baths."

Kenny giggled, "You have four little bros, Stan. I only have two. What's my dad's and pop's excuse?"

Sean smiled, "Expect AJ here as soon as your brothers are in bed, Kenny."

Troy told Stan, "Your dad or pop will be here soon too."

Tapping his comm-badge, Sean called, "Sean to Chris."

"Here, Sean," Chris replied.

Sean giggled, "Why aren't you here?" All those in the room heard soft sniggering at the distant end.

Chortling, Chris stammered, "Uh, well, Erik and Trav are here. They're new dorm leaders, so we're helping... shopping online."

"For lube, rubbers, dildos and dongs," Jay sniggered.

Erik giggled, "Not to mention, Lance and Scott have been alone more than an hour, and we haven't heard a sound."

"Personally, I'm scared to death," Travis chuckled. "I really don't want to call for emergency medical care our first night as dorm leaders."

Sean giggled, "Okay, you're off the hook this time. Sean out."

Robbie grinned, "Why worry about dildos when we've got the real things?"

Troy laughed, "You slow down, before I cool you and your boyfriend off in the North Atlantic! We'll get there!"

Billy silently asked Robbie, 'Remember me saying it can hurt your butt?'

Robbie nodded, 'I remember.'

'It's a size thing,' Billy giggled.

'So small dildos and dongs to get used to it,' Robbie smiled. 'That makes sense, and sounds like fun.' He looked up at Sean and Troy, telling them, "We've already talked about it. Billy knows enough and already shared it with me."

"Time out!" Jason called. He gestured to JD, giggling, "He kissed me, hard! I got even with a nice big hickey." Rapidly nodding his head, JD giggled. Robbie helplessly sputtered and cracked up. Jason giggled, "That's all we've done. We haven't even talked about doing anything more. I learned a little about LA, and JD knows a little about St. Joe." Jason gestured to Kenny and Stan, adding, "These two don't have boyfriends. They aren't sure if they like girls or boys."

Sean loudly laughed, "Chill out! We know all this, so you four dudes standing, sit down and take it easy." Jason, JD, Kenny and Stan took seats on the sofa and living room chairs. Sean grinned, "This is why we brought you all together. All you guys can talk freely about whatever you want. Me and Troy are only here to keep you all on track, and answer what questions we need to. AJ will add his experiences, and then Tory or Kaleo will add another voice. All three of them had to be with women, just like I did. Straight men and women make babies, you all know this?" When the boys nodded, Sean asked, "If you need to talk about that, go ahead."

Troy suggested, "Let's get them sodas and snacks, Tiger." Sean nodded, and they walked to the kitchen.

Reaching over and smacking Billy on the ass, Jason giggled, "Get off of Robbie, bro. By the time we're done, we'll all have stiffies. Get over it!"

Billy silently checked with Robbie. When Robbie whispered,

"It's kewl," Billy started to push up off his boyfriend.

While they untangled themselves, JD asked, "Stan, how old are you?"

"Eight," Stan softly offered.

JD curiously grinned, "But you didn't hang out with us at the pool?"

Smirking, Stan sighed, "They didn't feed me good at the orphanage, so I'm shorter than I should be. I'm really kewl with all my brothers, so I stayed with them at the playground. Since I'm way shorter and smaller than you dudes... ya know, I used to try at my old school playground, but I'd get knocked down and pushed around. I hope the milkshakes help me."

JD grumbled, "That sucks!"

Robbie nodded, "You're the same age as Kenny and JD. Remember the rules are different here? It's your choice, but it's time to be with dudes your age. We want you here, not taking baths with your little brothers. Obviously, all our parents knew about this facts-of-life talk. You're old enough to be here."

Facing Stan, Kenny softly checked, "Do you want to talk about girls?"

Blushing, Stan giggled, "My dick gets hard most o' the time; for my little brothers, for my dad and pop, and almost every dude between five- and fifteen-years-old. That don't happen when boobies bounce by. My dick says it's dudes I want."

All the other nodding boys softly giggled. Kenny nodded and giggled, "Yeah, but should we only listen to our willies? Last I checked, my brain is a bit higher." More giggling erupted. Blushing, Kenny smiled, "I was there shootin' paper, scissors and rocks for a chance to be with you, Jase. I think I know you well enough to say we're cousins, friends, neighbors and Clan brothers, but that's about it."

"I feel the exact same way," Jason warmly smiled. "It's kewl, bro. You keep your eyes open and some really kewl guy will sweep you off your feet."

JD giggled, "Then you can give him a hickey!"

Allowing himself to stop fighting and freely be who he was with his new Clan brothers, Kenny grinned, "I don't need to talk about girls. We can go right past that, I guess."

Jason asked, "Are you and Leo thinking of hooking up?"

Shaking his head, Kenny answered, "Right now, we're friends, and that's prob'ly where we'll be for a long time. I'm not thinking of a boyfriend. He wants to be with his new family and so do I. I don't think that'll change for a while."

Robbie nodded and smiled, "Very kewl. So that Billy and Jason don't have to say stuff that hurts, I'll say some stuff for them, if everybody's kewl with it?"

Nodding, Jason said, "I already told JD the basics of what our old fosters were like."

Focused on Kenny and Stan, Robbie shared, "Billy and Jase were filmed for kiddie-porn flicks. They had to do sex stuff with each other, and their little brothers, and less often with the adults too. My folks were as worried about it as they were with my bros, Richie and Ronnie, because the same sort o' stuff happened to them, but Billy and I talked to them alone, and then Troy and Sean talked to them too. My folks weren't so worried that they might've told me and Billy, no; it was just the usual old folks stuff - don't jump too fast and wind up arguing or hating each other. My folks and Troy and Sean know that me and Billy have been mind talking most of the day. I checked and so have my bros, so I know that Billy and Jase know that was really messed up. It hurts them more than it hurts me or anyone. Most importantly, they want to feel real caring and love, which they're already getting from real fathers, and from us."

Holding up his Mr. Fuzzy, Billy squeaked, "Dad and pop told us to be home by eight for this talk. An empty house and an empty couch had to be filled." Mr. Fuzzy checked with Robbie, asking, "Ain't that right, Crispy Creme?"

Robbie and the other boys howled laughing. Soon, four more Mr. Fuzzy puppets were squeaking remarks about Robbie's pet name.

In the kitchen and gathering the filled soda glasses on a tray, Troy whispered to Sean, "Part of me wants to give Jay a hug for this Mr. Fuzzy invasion, the other part of me wants to slap him sillier. I prob'ly won't get to do either."

Pulling his Mr. Fuzzy on, Sean quietly giggled, "Hug me, hurt me, hug me, hurt me." Sean's Mr. Fuzzy gave Troy a kiss.

"You're getting Fuzzy kisses later too, Tiger," Troy softly warned, and lifted the tray. Pocketing his Mr. Fuzzy again and softly sniggering, Sean carried another tray that held bowls of assorted cookies, crackers and snacks. Entering the living room, Troy asked, "How's it goin'?"

Billy's Mr. Fuzzy squeaked, "Doin' fine, pop."

"We're gettin' into Fuzzy pet names," Jason's Mr. Fuzzy shared.

Putting the tray down on the coffee table, Troy stepped out of Sean's way, looked up at the ceiling and made the Catholic sign of the cross. Six hands reached for sodas and six Mr. Fuzzies grabbed mouthfuls of snacks. Prayer didn't help at all, so Troy tapped his comm-badge, calling, "Troy to Jay."

The sounds of loud laughter came across Troy's comm-badge, then Jay sniggered, "What's up, Troy?"

"I know you're being a helpful brother," Troy chuckled, "and I know lube and rubbers are important, but grab your boyfriend and your Mr. Fuzzy, then transport over here to see what you've done, you lunatic." Chris, Erik and Travis roared.

Jay chortled, "But Lance and Scott are gettin' busy. We can hear 'em through the air conditioning vent. We'll probably need to give some more encouragement and instructions." Sean and all six boys cracked up.

Troy giggled, "They're thirteen- and fourteen-years-old. Their first times have passed. If they still need instruction and encouragement, they might as well hang it up!" On both sides of the comm-link, everyone howled laughing. Troy laughed, "We've got six boys here, between eight- and twelve-years-old, all wearing Mr. Fuzzy puppets, ready for your continued corruption." Everybody on both sides of the comm-link bellowed laughing.

Erik giggled, "Com'on, Champ. Cartons of lube and rubbers are waiting for distribution to the masses."

"We'll catch you dudes later tonight," Travis chuckled. Moments later, the sound of the door closing could be heard.

Taking Chris' hand and insuring his Mr. Fuzzy was still in his back pocket, Jay chortled, "Alden, we're ready to transport."

A split second later, both barefoot and shirtless teens were standing in the living room with Sean and Troy.

The six boys' Mr. Fuzzies disjointedly greeted, "How's it hangin', Jay?"

"Oh Lord," Chris softly giggled. He released Jay's hand, reached back for Jay's Mr. Fuzzy and handed it over.

Slipping on his Mr. Fuzzy, Jay squeaked, "It's hangin' loose and natural."

Stepping forward, Sean's Mr. Fuzzy squeaked introductions. While that was going on, Troy smiled at Chris. "I know," Chris giggled.

"Pinocle?" Troy offered.

"Uno?" Chris countered.

"Kewl," Troy replied, and led Chris to the dining room table, where they could hear and interact, but remain clear of the insanely Fuzzy ones.

Sean's Mr. Fuzzy asked Jay's Mr. Fuzzy, "When you started liking Chris, what did you do first?"

"I told him," Jay's Mr. Fuzzy squeaked. "Before he left for home, we kissed. It was only a little kiss, but it was awesome. I didn't think he'd let me or like it, but he kissed me back. A rainy afternoon suddenly brightened." He then wondered, "How about you and Troy?"

"We talked for a couple o' hours," Sean's Fuzzy replied. "After lunch we kissed and showed our fuzzy fuzzies."

"Showin' was the next day for us," Jay's Mr. Fuzzy shared with all the Fuzzies in the room. "Chris' fuzzy and my fuzzy weren't even fuzzy yet."

Softly giggling, the six boys nodded their heads and their Mr. Fuzzies.

Concentrating on his card game with Troy, Chris said, "We were eleven. A lot more happened between the time the first Mr. Fuzzy showed up, before we turned thirteen and began getting fuzzy."

Jay's Mr. Fuzzy glanced around and made a crooked face, wondering, "Was that an un-Fuzzy voice from the past? Must be my fuzzimagination." Sean widely smiled at the remark, but the six boys roared laughing.

Sadly shaking his head, Chris leaned over to Troy and softly giggled, "I'm gonna kill him. Unfortunately, he'll love it more than me." Nodding, Troy bounced his eyebrows and snickered.

Sean's Mr. Fuzzy asked, "You got fuzzy about thirteen?"

Jay's Mr. Fuzzy nodded, "When did you get fuzzy?"

"About twelve-and-a-half," Sean's Mr. Fuzzy admitted. He then reminded all the other Mr. Fuzzies, "Drew Hundser turned twelve August thirtieth and he's already pretty fuzzy. Corey's about eleven-and-a-half, and he's getting fuzzier. Fuzzies develop at different fuzzy times, but we'll all get fuzzy sooner or later."

Jay's Mr. Fuzzy shared, "I saw Sean's and Troy's fuzzies in the dorm shower this afternoon. Interestingly, Sean's started getting fuzzy before me, but I'm more fuzzy up by my belly-button and around my thighs than Sean. Just about everywhere, Travis is more fuzzy than I am. By the time we're fully grown, we'll all be fuzzy in almost all the same places. Like some grown men have very fuzzy chests and some aren't as fuzzy. All our fuzzies vary in lots of ways, but they're still fuzzy. There's not much that's kewler than fuzzy fuzzies." All six boys were learning a lot; primarily that the insanity they were only beginning to experience and feel was certain to get worse.

Sean's Mr. Fuzzy asked Robbie's Mr. Fuzzy, "Are you getting fuzzy yet?"

"Just a few fuzzies," Robbie's Mr. Fuzzy giggled.

Having a fuzzy revelation, Jay's Mr. Fuzzy said, "JD's living in the fuzzy dorm. He's seen some fuzzy fuzzies by now."

JD's Mr. Fuzzy nodded, "Some really fuzzy, like Trav; some only a little fuzzy, like Ray, and some like me with no fuzzies."

"The important fuzzy fact is that your fuzzy will get fuzzier as you grow up," Jay patiently explained. He then asked Sean, "Did you and Troy fondle your fuzzies that first time?"

Sean nodded, "Talking and kissing are step one. Showing and touching fuzzies are step two. A lot of time can be spent only on steps one and two. There's no rush to do anything more until you're really sure your boyfriend's fuzzy is the best fuzzy around."

JD raised his Mr. Fuzzy to ask, "Suckin' fuzzies is step three?"

Jay nodded and his Mr. Fuzzy answered, "Oral fuzzy fun is how you show your fuzzy friend that his fuzzy is the finest fuzzy around. Suddenly, feeling fuzzies is so fine, and when he feels your fuzzy it's freakin' fantastic, so you maybe want to kiss his fuzzy, or at least see it up close. Those first times you even think of it, it's like, he pees from that fuzzy! It's gotta taste funky, and it's gonna get bigger and gag me. Then I'll close my mouth and accidentally bite his fuzzy. I must be outta my freakin' fuzzy mind, but I still want to show him that his is the very best fuzzy."

Glancing around at the four giggling boys, all paying close attention and having fun, Sean noticed none of them were blushing. His Mr. Fuzzy nodded, "So you make yourself do it the first fuzzy time. You're real careful, only licking his fuzzy, just to make sure it's not a funky fuzzy. Let me tell you, I've had some of the funkiest smelling fuzzies in the ROH, but none tasted as gross as they smelled. Any dude that showers and cleans his fuzzy will have a yummy smelling fuzzy, but the fuzzy still tastes like fuzzy flesh. Now you can concentrate only on showing your special friend's fuzzy how awesome it is. Oral fuzzy fun doesn't mean you have to take all his fuzzy into your mouth. Anything you can do with your mouth is oral, and it's still fun fuzzy times for both of your fuzzies, so lick and kiss his fuzzy as much as you want. It's your fuzzy fun time, so really prove how much you love his fuzzy."

Raising his Mr. Fuzzy hand, Kenny asked, "What exactly makes one guy's fuzzy better than any other guy's fuzzy? We've seen lots of limp fuzzies at the pools and they're all about the same. You older guys have longer and thicker fuzzier fuzzies, but our fuzzies don't look that much different."

"It's really not his fuzzy that matters," Sean explained. "You're right, there aren't too many differences between fuzzies. When your still at step one, talking, hugging and kissing, that's when you decide, hey this guy is really awesome, no matter how fuzzy his fuzzy is. He has some truly fantastic fuzzy ideas, and he likes my fuzzy foolishness, which makes both of you feel really special and unique."

Since everybody is special and unique, it's a matter of fuzzy feelings deep in your heart and mind. When you can't sleep without thinking of him, you'll start to understand how it feels to be in love. You'll wake in the middle of the night remembering stuff about him. That's why steps one and two are so important; those steps take you from fuzzy friends to fuzzy lovers."

"I was very lucky," Jay admitted. "My best friend put up with my fuzzy foolishness. I always felt I had to warn Chris that if we showed how close our fuzzies really were, we'd get mocked, or maybe we might get into fights to protect our favorite fuzzy. Then we're hurting each other as much as we're making ourselves feel good. Here, in the Clan, we don't have those worries anymore. Now we can be exactly like straight guys and girls; we can show our fuzzy friends how important they are all the time, by holding hands, by kissing and by talking about what we really want most in life, from each other, and from our fuzzies."

Sean's Mr. Fuzzy shared, "One of the things I had to learn was that there isn't a lead fuzzy and follower fuzzy. I would've followed Troy's fuzzy anywhere and been happy to do it. We share everything, not only our fuzzies. We both lead, we both follow, we're both prone to be weak and we're both likely to be strong. All the ways we are everyday around everyone makes us a couple; we understand each other all the time. Something one doesn't understand, the other explains. You get there by telling each other the truth all the time. Sometimes you know stuff you've experienced was wrong, but you don't know how to correct it. That's when you ask the questions, get the answers, and in the process, show a weakness and that you need him strong; you become the follower and let him lead. All that stuff changes all the time every day. One minute you're teaching, the next minute you're learning; an hour later, you're following him, and a little later he's following you. It's not always easy; having fuzzy fun is far easier in comparison. At the end of the day, when you're talking alone with your fuzzy lover, it's time to tell him all the stuff he did that you really liked, and disliked too. That way, you both grow and learn."

"With all the good stuff and the bad stuff out of the way, now you can remind him that you still think he's got the finest fuzzy around," Jay's Mr. Fuzzy grinned, and then quickly looked over Jay's shoulder into the dining room at Chris and Troy. Sean's Mr. Fuzzy looked over Sean's shoulder. The Mr. Fuzzies of all six boys also looked into the dining room.

After too many moments of silence, Chris and Troy looked into the living room. Seeing all eight Mr. Fuzzies looking his way, Chris sniggered, "We're listening and lovin' what we're hearing."

Tapping his sub-vocal, Troy giggled, "Alden, get us two more Mr. Fuzzies, please. God forbid we should add our real voices to this fuzzy conversation."

Transporting the two puppets onto the table, Alden giggled, "Having voice synthesis units might help, I guess. That's my fuzzy bonus when I get a fuzzy body for fuzzy fun."

Billy's Mr. Fuzzy rose into the air and he softly giggled, "I think we all understand most of steps one and two, all the talking, and only a little bit of fuzzy fun, but there's another scary part of step three that we need to talk about."

In his normal voice, Sean smiled, "We know, Billy."

JD's Mr. Fuzzy grinned, "What I don't get is why Chris and Troy are sitting way over there and not playing Mr. Fuzzy with us. Everybody knows Jay has to be with Chris and that Sean wants to be with Troy. As kewl as Jay and Sean are being, it's just not right, cos they're not a couple."

Turning around, Jay and Sean softly sniggered. Dropping his cards on the table and standing up, Chris chuckled, "There is a reason, JD. After three years of Mr. Fuzzy, when Jay gets into a fuzzy mode, I get too hot and horny to talk intelligently about much of anything." All the boys cracked up. Chris slipped his Mr. Fuzzy puppet on and started from the dining room into the living room. After gathering up the cards on the table, Troy got up, put his Mr. Fuzzy on and followed Chris.

Troy cleared his throat, raised his Mr. Fuzzy and the pitch of his voice, squeaking, "I'm no different than Chris. I could jam a baseball bat up my butt and pound my fuzzy pud raw with a cinderblock, and still be fully ready for fuzzy bedtime fun with Sean." Everyone howled laughing. The doorbell rang. Troy giggled, "Saved by the bell, thank God!" and went to answer the door.

Standing at the door was AJ. Uncontrollably, Troy roared laughing so hard that he stumbled back against the entryway closet doors. Stepping inside, wearing a full body-sized Mr. Fuzzy suit that went down to his knees, AJ playfully squeaked, "Alden said there's a lot of sex talk in this house, but no action." While everyone else roared laughing, AJ helplessly giggled, "I'm here to turn up the heat."

"OH GOD!" Kenny howled, "Why oh why is it my dad?"

"Better yours than mine," Stan giggled.

AJ giggled, "Kaleo and Tory are discussing which is coming over wearing a body fuzzy."

"No!" Stan squealed, and covered his face before breaking into giggles.

The other five boys sitting in the room held up their Mr. Fuzzies and sang, "Yes, Stan."

Going back over to Troy and kneeling before him, AJ giggled, "Where are we in this conversation?"

Kenny roared, "Yep, right about there, dad. And I'm telling pop too."

"That's alright," AJ giggled. Starting to stand, he squeaked, "I'll kneel for Jerry's fuzzy, every chance I get."

Closing the door, Troy sniggered, "Tell me you're wearing something under that, AJ. I'm really having a rough time lookin' in your Fuzzy mouth to make eye contact."

AJ chuckled, "Puts a whole new perspective on Fuzzy Mouth Rimmers, don't it?" Sean, Troy, Jay and Chris cracked up. Reaching up and way back, AJ began pulling his body-sized Mr. Fuzzy up and off. It was soon apparent that AJ had boardies on, and his Mr. Fuzzy hand puppet was in his back pocket. Softly chortling, Troy gave AJ help getting the costume off. Warm enough in the Fuzzy suit, AJ had left his shirt off and at home.

Looking up at Sean, Billy giggled, "Pop's pullin' on AJ's fuzzy, dad." The other boys cracked up.

"We're very close, but not that close," Sean sniggered.

At last, AJ stood up and finger combed his hair, asking, "All the fundamental fuzzy friendship and close relationship stuff has been covered?" The six giggling boys or their Mr. Fuzzies agreed. "Kewl," AJ began, and pulled his Mr. Fuzzy puppet out and onto his left hand. He squeaked, "I'm ready."

"Your Fuzzy Final Jeopardy topic is oral sex," Troy playfully announced.

Nodding, AJ's Mr. Fuzzy told the boys, "You know you're in love when you can't stop thinking about your boyfriend. I mean, everything about him occupies every spare moment; it's the sound of his voice, the color of his eyes, the cute smirk that forms when you tell a really bad joke, or the way his hair looks all mushed up in the morning, or the brilliant stuff he says to four- and six-year-old boys who are wondering where their big brother is. During the years Jerry and I were separated, I never stopped thinking about him, and he never stopped thinking about me. It's for the million things your boyfriend is that you make love in any manner. For all that Jerry is to me, kissing, hugging and jacking off just isn't near enough."

"Even the word boyfriend suddenly doesn't cut it," Jay's Mr. Fuzzy offered.

"Partner is only a little better," Chris' Mr. Fuzzy added.

Sean's Mr. Fuzzy nodded, "Lover is only another part."

Troy revealed, "Even husband seems to limit the real fact that he's all of that, plus more, and yours alone. The Vulcan word T'hy'la is the closest to describing what he really is."

"Think of it, guys," Jay prompted, "you love and trust someone so much that you're not only willing to kneel before him, you very much want to."

"And when he kneels for you, it's still the same sort of love and trust," Chris emphasized.

Nodding, Troy explained, "That's your entire world there on his knees. He's clearly showing you what he's willing to do for you."

When I'm on the receiving end like that, my main goal is to make sure Sean knows how much I appreciate it, before he's even seen or touched my fuzzy."

"Run your fingers through his hair and tell him exactly what you're thinking and feeling," Sean added. "Assuming you've talked enough through steps one and two, it's no problem for you to say really warm, fuzzy and romantic stuff, and for him to hear it."

AJ stated, "Making love is two people worshiping each other, amongst many other things. You don't rush those times. We're awake sixteen hours a day, and so little time is spent making love that you have to do what you need to do the best way you can. We spent four hours in school today. I haven't spent four hours alone with Jerry today. Of course, I want to though."

Sean grinned, "All us Core Rimmers spent about half-an-hour in a meeting after school today. All summed up together, I think me and Troy have had about that much time alone."

"That's half of a sixteenth, a single thirty-second part of the day, dudes," AJ quickly calculated.

Chris nodded, "Even on completely free days, like Jay and I have had since Saturday, I'm guessing no more than two hours were spent making love. Maybe another two hours were spent completely alone, to just talk and be together. That makes four hours, so a quarter of the day, for the most important person in my life. It's just not enough time."

"You feel it too," Troy shared. "All day long, there he is, sitting or standing right next to you. He wants to be there as much as you want him there, but man, what you wouldn't give to stop time and say the hell with it all for fifteen more minutes, only so that you can show him and tell him that he's the pinnacle of all your successes."

In his normal voice, AJ told the boys, "All the street names for oral sex are just so wrong. Why the heck it's called a blow-job is beyond me. Yep, I'm licking, kissing and softly breathing on his wet flesh, but that's not all I'm doing. Yeah, I'm suckin' him too, but if you do only that then the party's over too quick."

Jay explained, "There are means to all ends. Orgasm is the end; it's not the means or purpose at all. The purpose is to show each other how much you enjoy every minute of everyday, thanks to him." Glancing at the four younger boys, Jay grinned, "You guys can have orgasm after orgasm; barely recovering from one and working toward another, and only shake and shiver." He turned to Billy and Robbie, asking, "Are either of you actually puttin' out yet?"

Robbie's Mr. Fuzzy nodded and giggled, "A little."

Sean asked, "Does it scare you, Billy?"

"A little, yeah," Billy's Mr. Fuzzy reluctantly giggled.

"Excellent," Troy softly smiled. "That praise was for telling the truth, Billy."

Chris nodded agreement and gently said, "It's normal to be a little scared. First, you're wondering what it'll taste like. The only way I can explain it is like mixing sweet spit with maybe salty tears or sweat. It's not horrible, and it's not great either, but it is acceptable and won't make you puke."

Sean nodded, "Yeah, that works pretty well. I was going to compare it to licking a little blood off a paper cut, but even that has a more bitter, metallic flavor. Get used to it by tasting a little off your hand or licking some off his belly."

AJ seriously offered, "The only other concern is we all shoot differently. Just like there are billions of unique fuzzies in the world, some dudes dribble a load, while others can shoot a few feet. It all feels the same, I'm sure, but from my experience, most men shoot about a foot, maybe a little more or little less. Once again, this boils down to communication. Tell each other how you feel about it. Ask for a warning. If you're willing to give it that first real try, then you have the warning to either change your mind last second, or go for it. If it's your first time goin' for it, block the head of his fuzzy with your tongue, so you're not worried about the gag reflex."

Kenny asked, "Is it normal to want to try this stuff, dad?"

"Absolutely normal," AJ assured. "So is being afraid of the first times. Everything new is scary the first time; hugs, kisses, and just telling the truth are all huge steps. You know your pop and I were separated for two years. Before those two years, we had no hair and had dry orgasms, just like you, but that's not the case anymore. Even with all our orphanage experiences, being together was new. Sixty-nine is the name of the position for when two dudes are face-to-fuzzy. That was our first time, and we did all the stuff already talked about, even though we had been with a hundred or more other men. The big difference was that sex wasn't a quick chore anymore. My best friend in the world was back, as sweet as ever, more handsome than ever, and in my arms. As awesome as I felt, Jerry felt every bit as awesome; for every happy tear I shed, he shed at least as many."

Another knock on the door interrupted the group. Sean answered the door and let Kaleo in, grinning, "No full-sized Mr. Fuzzy suit, bro?"

"It's been done, I heard," Kaleo smiled. Bounding out of the chair, Stan gave his dad a hug. Holding his eldest son tightly, Kaleo gently checked, "You're okay?"

Nodding, Stan giggled, "I'm glad you're here and not wearing a Mr. Fuzzy suit. It's been really kewl."

Absently finger combing Stan's hair, Kaleo glanced around, wondering, "Where are we at?"

Almost simultaneously, everyone answered, "Oral sex."

Troy offered, "AJ and Sean were sharing their real experiences and past knowledge. You can add to that, or me, Chris and Jay can share our experiences."

Billy asked, "Why repeat stuff, pop?"

Troy was about to answer when Kaleo grinned, "If you need to ask, then I need to share too." Adoringly, Stan smiled up at his new dad. Glancing around the other young boys in the room, Kaleo huffed, "AJ, Jerry, Sean, Tory and I had the same sort of experiences with men and women, but we're different people and those experiences were different too. Chris, Jay and Troy didn't have to deal with the same stuff, but I'm sure everything they've said is what me or Tory would've said." Looking down at Stan, Kaleo assured, "If that wasn't the case, we wouldn't have allowed you to be here, Stan. Really loving someone is the same concept all around; only the individuals forming the couple make it slightly different."

Nodding and stepping back, Stan smiled, "I'm kewl, dad."

"Have a seat," Kaleo softly instructed. Stan returned to his chair. Kaleo joined the group of teenagers, and then smirked, "Pedophile adults want sex with kids. That's all they care about. They don't give a damn about the kid. They're the most inconsiderate things pretending to be human. It wasn't fun for me, or AJ or Sean. Do the deed and get it done quickly was the rule. I never even asked for names. That sure ain't what I'm doing with my husband, best friend, life partner and T'hy'la. I don't need to ask any of these dudes how they make love to know they're just like me and Tory. Quick is only for when it absolutely has to be quick, because we're burning up and we've snuck away, and have to get back to work, or school, or our sons. That's not the way we prefer it at all. It's way more fun to have the time to really enjoy sex and go through all the steps."

Robbie's Mr. Fuzzy giggled, "Testosterone again. What we're just starting to feel, teenagers get flooded with."

"Exactly," all six teens chorused. Proudly smiling, Troy flashed Robbie a thumb-up gesture. That simple sign of acceptance caused Billy to beam and snuggle closer to Robbie.

Jay smiled, "What's really great are you four younger guys, already knowing where your sexual interests are. Since only one of you are close to puberty, there's only a tiny bit of testosterone coursing through your veins. Chris and I started getting really close at eleven, before either of us reached puberty, when kissing and hugging were the ways of showing how much we cared. Testosterone and puberty pushed us to steps two, three and four. Just to be a little more clear, maybe some of the older men will talk about the four steps like baseball; first base, second, third and home plate. It's all the same, guys."

Sean explained, "Testosterone is a hormone created in our testicles, or balls, nads or nuts. It starts building up in our blood basically from birth, but in really small amounts until puberty. About the same time puberty starts, suddenly white colored fluid starts leakin' from your dick when you have an orgasm. There's sperm in there, which is what fertilizes a girl's egg and makes babies. Since we're gay, preferring other guys over girls, we can't make babies. I'm sure I speak for all of us when I admit, each of you guys are the best things that ever happened to us. Sure, we didn't create you, but that really has nothing to do with how awesome we feel as fathers."

Robbie nodded, "My mom and dad adopted me, but they're my real mom and dad. Who made me don't matter at all. All three of my brothers, and Carrol and Trevor are feeling the same way. You all know that I could easily tell if my dad or mom were faking anything. I know for certain that they're not faking; they've each discovered something about my other five brothers that make each important."

"Now it's dads talking to older sons to help you transition from boys to young men," AJ offered. "With our younger sons, we're still being fathers, just in different ways." Focusing on Kenny, AJ smiled, "Shaun gets carried around because he's four and needs a lot of that kind of security. Me and Jerry play catch or games with Mike, to give him the same kind of security in a different way. For you guys, this talk is exactly the same thing. In two years, we'll have this chat with Mike. Two years after that, it's Shaun's turn. There is nothing any of you could tell us about your relationships and sex life that would shock us."

Chris nodded, "As we've been saying, each step is really special, and each was so kewl in so many ways, but looking back on our three years together, we can see how the attachment progressed. Step four is the final and best stage, because that's when we're really bonded and coupled."

Holding two fingers up, Troy shared, "The whole time through the steps, you're getting closer to switching from two individuals to one couple." With his two fingers crossed, Troy explained, "Testosterone is screaming at each of you, get to that step, now! Sean, AJ, Kaleo, Billy and Jason know that you just can't go for it, slide your fuzzy in and pump like mad. That isn't the right way."

Mostly concentrating on Kenny, AJ explained, "When all the sexual abuse started, about five years ago, me and Jerry were about your age. Even our prepubescent little bones hurt our butts. Pedophile adult men made us scream in agony, and those fuck-wads didn't care at all. This entire conversation has been about caring. During each and every step, you're feeling that compassion just a little more, so you move from hugs and kisses to masturbation, which older folks call petting, and then to oral sex, and lastly to anal sex, or intercourse. Here's where the time caring about each other matters most. Do not let the testosterone drive you so far, and so fast, that you don't take the time to prepare your boyfriend for anal coupling. Honestly, with girls, the same preparation is still necessary. I know that from the girls at our orphanage, and from the women I was with. If it's not the very best it can be for both of you, well then it's just fucking; then you're no better than the real scum of the Earth that hurt us."

Kaleo smiled, "You might be thinking, it's dirty and smelly down there." All six boys nodded and softly giggled. Kaleo nodded, "Again, caring and compassion rules more than testosterone. We all shower at least once a day, so if you're intending on going for anal sex, care about each other and take another shower. You've got to prepare that little orifice that's used to expelling to be ready for accepting penetration and insertion. All of us have felt rectal thermometers being inserted in our butts. Your pinkies are about four or five times bigger, so start really carefully with your fingers. Watch his facial expressions and communicate; ask him how what you're doing feels, and if he wants to switch around, or stop completely. If he wants to stop, and I'm sure most of you will eventually have that happen, prove you still love him with kisses, masturbation and oral sex. You can easily try again another time, but you can't easily un-do the hurt and loss of trust."

"I can tell by the look on your faces that this seems complicated and really weird," Sean chuckled. "It's not weird at all. I do it for Troy and he does it for me. It's called intimacy, guys. Every step builds an intimate partnership."

Robbie's Mr. Fuzzy asked, "If we've both agreed and decided to try, why would we want to stop?"

"I'll take this one," Kaleo grinned. He pulled Sean and AJ close, then explained, "Right after we were rescued, all of us were suddenly being fed more than we had ever been offered before. That night and for the next day, we were so damn constipated, taking a shit was like giving birth." All six boys began loudly giggling again.

AJ chuckled, "And on the third day, the dam burst. Gay intercourse when your constipated isn't very easy. Of course, when you've got diarrhea, your butt is too sore. You might think it's okay to give it a whirl, and then discover it's not so okay after all."

"The heart is willing, and the fuzzy is very ready, but the flesh is weak," Sean sniggered. "Since we're dudes in love, it's easy to say, okay, instead of bottoming, how about I top? If that's not an option, oral sex is perfectly fine too."

Seeing the boys nodding, Chris shared, "When you're with someone most of everyday, you have intimate knowledge. We do the preparations each and every time; not so much because we need to or have to, it's just part of foreplay."

AJ grinned, "Yup, all the talking, kissing, hugging, touching and oral sex that got you to anal sex becomes part of foreplay. Once you hit puberty and become teenagers, it's amazing how revved up you can get from a simple hug and kiss."

Jay, Chris, Troy and Sean checked with one another, then loudly cheered, "Fahgedaboudit!" The six boys cracked up.

Kaleo giggled, "Testosterone is a blessing and a curse. In the store yesterday with seventy-one new dudes, Tory gave me a really quick hug and a kiss on the neck then kept going to help one of the kids. I was like, 'Hey! Now that I've got a chubby, get your pretty blond butt back over here!'" Again, the boys cracked up and the other teenage fathers softly chortled. Kaleo giggled, "Tory knew it too."

Troy chuckled, "You've all heard the phrase 'givin' it up'. By the time you get to step three and oral sex, you start to realize exactly what that means. Each of you will give what you've got to your boyfriend and lover. He doesn't need to take anything, although occasionally playing 'hard to get' is fun too."

Jay nodded and evilly grinned, "More than occasionally. Chasing is fun, but so is being chased. Maybe some guys routinely do the leader-follower and stronger-weaker acts, but I've known Chris since first grade, so how can I treat him as anything other than the guy that has my heart? This morning, I was being goofy and Chris called me on my shit and attacked me. This afternoon, as soon as I had a Mr. Fuzzy, I chased Chris all the way to Oneula Beach."

Billy asked, "So, is being boyfriends serious or fun?"

"It's both those states and every other emotion that one of you might feel," Troy answered. "It's all the best times and the worst times shared. The best times become twice as good. The worst times become half as bad. Sharing makes all the difference in the world."

Chris smiled, "A good example was before dinner this afternoon. Most of us in the room had no clue how badly Sean was messed with. When Sean was about to say something about it, Troy stopped Sean from saying it, and reliving the bad memories. Troy took the burden off Sean, said what needed to be said, and then Sean thanked Troy. Sean capped off his appreciation by swapping places, so that he was Troy's backrest and could wrap both arms around his lover. That showed everyone that they are an intimate couple, always ready to be whatever their partner needs."

JD wondered, "What about arguments and fights?"

Jay shrugged, "Arguments happen because of any type of misunderstanding. My primary goal in Washington, D.C., was to keep Chris and our relationship safe from homophobic jack-offs. Talk about stressful times. Way too often I was turning down hugs, kisses and hand holding that I very much wanted, as much as Chris, but to keep us safer, there I am opening my mouth and inserting my foot. Being a man has nothing to do with boyfriends, or pubes, or puttin' out sperm. Being a man is admitting when you've fucked up, and then learning from it." Displaying his Mr. Fuzzy puppet, Jay squeaked, "This is my alternate self, the one I show my lover when I've been so impossibly stupid that I've hurt him. When I'm too ripped up inside to adequately explain myself and apologize, Mr. Fuzzy helps, at least a little bit. Now that we're here and Clan, Mr. Fuzzy hopes things change." Six giggling boys and four smiling Core Rimmers caused Jay's Mr. Fuzzy to squeak "What? I'm serious."

Stan pointed at Chris, giggling, "We know. So does Chris!"

Turning to Chris, Jay's eyes popped wide open. Jay's Mr. Fuzzy puppet displayed a goofy Fuzzy smirk to the rest of the room, but Jay never lost eye contact with Chris. The six younger boys cracked up. Sliding in close to Jay, Chris completely ignored the giggles and sniggering. He planted a series of tender kisses around Jay's cheeks and lips.

Slowly shaking his head, Troy patted Jay and Chris on the shoulders, chuckling, "Thanks for your valuable help tonight, guys; you were awesome. Alden, before this discussion becomes demonstrations, transport Chris and Jay to their dorm room." The moment Chris and Jay vanished, the entire room erupted in loud laughter.

Walking over to where Kenny was hysterically sliding out of his chair, AJ giggled, "Let's go home. Me and your pop will answer any other questions you might have." Kenny barely nodded a reply.

Kaleo checked, "What do you say, Stan? Is there more to say here, or should we go home and add your pop, for a more private conversation?"

Shrugging, Stan grinned, "This was way more fun than I thought. I figure I've got two major things to do. First, I need to grow taller. While I'm working on that, I need to learn how to find a boyfriend."

Jason giggled, "Sometimes they find you, Stan, in really embarrassing ways." He then turned to JD, bounced his eyebrows and chomped his jaw closed. Giggling, JD roughly pulled Jason over and across his lap, playfully chomping his jaw near Jason's chest and belly.

Robbie wickedly grinned, 'Fuzzy Mr. Billy's gonna get to my creamy filling?'

Laughing and nodding, Billy went for a kiss, pushing Robbie back down and flat onto the couch until he got what he wanted.

Troy and Sean hugged AJ, Kenny, Stan and Kaleo goodnight.

Soon, Sean and Troy showed their guests out. Grinning at their eldest sons obliviously playing with their boyfriends, Sean and Troy decided to clean up the living room of glasses and emptied snack bowls. When they returned, not much had changed, but the boys at least noticed them there. Troy grinned, "Your brothers are sleeping at their boyfriends' homes tonight. Where you decide to sleep tonight is entirely up to the four of you."

"We're going to our room," Sean smiled. "I had better hear a lot of talking and giggling tonight." Sean reminded, "Just because I knew far more than I should've doesn't mean I pushed Troy into anything."

"The truth is, I pushed Sean towards each and every step," Troy admitted.

Nodding, Billy smiled, "We'll work it the same way, following our boyfriends' lead."

Jason checked with JD, "Do you think you can play by them rules?"

"I'll manage," JD answered. Feeling his face flushing, JD paused. "Omigod!" JD giggled. "We're being told to stay up late and mess around!"

"Tell me where else that could happen," Robbie sniggered.

* * * * *

Ewa Beach Townhouse #1

Monday, November 8, 2004 8:22PM HTZ

Prez and Keith had just chased down Jimmy and Richie. Witnessing this silliness, Dee, Gage and Jonah sat in the living room.

The television was on, but the chase was more interesting. Each teenager carried a laughing and squirming rug-rat upstairs and into the master bathroom. Bath water was run and the two little tikes were stripped. They climbed into the tub and asked for the toy boats that Richie had accumulated since being rescued. Prez went to get the boats from Richie's bedroom.

Returning with the toys for the boys, Prez's comm-badge chirped, and Doc Andrews called, "Preston, can I see you in my office, please?"

Handing over the boats, Prez tapped his comm-badge and smiled, "We just got Richie and Jimmy in the tub, Doc. I thought you were done with me?"

Doc Andrews explained, "Doctor Howard and I noticed something during dinner that I'd like to double check. It won't take more than a few minutes."

Sitting on the edge of the tub with a soapy washcloth ready, Keith asked, "Is there something wrong, Doc? Do I need to be there too?"

"You've been here with your husband for every other visit," Doc Andrews chuckled, "but the answer is, there's nothing to be concerned about. Finish bath time and then meet us here, Keith."

Prez shrugged, leaned over the tub, kissed Richie and then Jimmy, saying, "Just in case I'm not back before you fall asleep." Richie and Jimmy said good night to Prez. Standing up again, he told Keith, "I'll meet you there, T'hy'la."

Nodding, Keith grinned, "In about ten minutes, baby." Turning to Richie and Jimmy, Keith sniggered, "It's time to teach boyfriends how to help each other bathe."

Richie cackled, "We can fig're that out, daddy!" and reached over for Jimmy's dick. Both little boys cracked up.

Keith sniggered, "That's only a starting and ending point. Everything else needs to be washed too."

Evilly chuckling, Prez tapped his sub-vocal, calling, "Alden, take me to Doc Andrews' location, bud." Having heard what the two doctors were talking about, Alden simply executed the order. Arriving at the exam room where Doctors Andrews and Howard were waiting, Prez smirked, "I hope this is important. I'm missing out on five-year-old boyfriends first bath together."

Remaining in his chair, Doc Andrews waved Prez closer, smiling, "It's important enough for doctors to wonder what the hell is going on." He then looked down at Prez's legs and touched a couple of areas where small red hairs were already sprouting, explaining, "I shouldn't be seeing this for another ten or more days, Preston."

Prez blinked, "Really? Keith noticed them this morning. Higher up, on my thighs, I've got a few hairs sprouting there too. We figured it was normal, considering the advanced technology from the hospital early Friday morning, and the bio-beds here."

Slowly shaking her head, Doc Howard said, "That speeds up healing enough to keep Starfleet officers and noncommissioned personal doing their jobs. When there's a finite number of people on a Starship, every man down due to injuries affects the ships' operational readiness."

Doc Andrews then scowled, "Skin burns such as yours have damaged the hair follicles. During dinner, Doctor Howard noticed you had patches of hair on your legs and brought it to my attention. Now we have to determine what's going on. Strip and get on a bio-bed, Preston."

Beginning to remove his shirt, Prez muttered, "It's not from the medicated tubs or anything else?"

"Hair growth on burned flesh after only three days is unheard of," Doc Andrews assured. He then tapped his comm-badge and called, "Doctor Andrews to Doctor Barnes."

Prez tossed his shirt on a counter, asking, "We need Antonio here too?" He started untying the drawstring on his board shorts.

"It's two-thirty in the damn morning," Antonio sleepily whined across Doc Andrews' comm-badge.

Helplessly grinning at the sound of a young boy cussing at the disturbance, Doc Andrews replied, "I'm very sorry, Antonio, but we have a Clan Director here who is already regrowing hair burned off early Friday morning."

"Already?" Antonio excitedly squealed. The shuffling sounds of sheets could be heard. Then Antonio bitched, "I swear, these Core Rimmers just like seeing me in my underwear. If this keeps up, I'm going to have Quint relocate the Hawaiian Islands to the Caribbean, so I can get a full night's rest."

Laying his shorts and underwear on the counter, Prez chuckled, "You've got some really cute undies, 'Tonio. Thanks to you, Richie asked for a bunch of similar underpants." He then padded naked to the nearest bio-bed and hopped up onto it.

"The kid has taste," Antonio giggled. He then ordered, "George, transport me to Hawaii." Immediately upon arrival, Antonio's little hands flew to his eyes. "ACK!" Antonio screamed, "BRIGHT LIGHTS!" and he began running around the room, sounding very much like a Mogwai from Gremlins. Once both of the doctors as well as the patient were holding their sides, George had pity on Antonio and teleported a pair of vampire-grade dark glasses into his right hand.

Once he had the glasses on and saw both adults holding their sides, Antonio did a very good impression of Mutley, grumbling nonsense under his breath as he stalked over to Prez.

"Are these yours for real?" Antonio asked, and he grabbed about five or ten pubic hairs on Prez and pulled quickly.

"OW!" Prez bellowed, "DAMMIT, 'TONIO! NONE OF THIS IS MY FAULT! BLAME THE DOCTORS, AND SPARE THE REST OF MY PUBES!"

"Quiet, I'm trying to sleep," Antonio shot back with a grin. "You yell again, and I'm gonna decide I need some hair from an inch or two lower as well."

Glaring at the midget middle-aged doctor, Prez did a much better impersonation of Mutley.

Placing the hairs on the scanning tray, Antonio giggled then quickly brought up some screens that neither of the other doctors knew existed. After a few minutes of close inspection, Antonio looked around. Noticing that Doc Andrews was looking over his shoulder, Antonio reached over and acquired a sample of arm hair.

Doc Andrews flinched and screamed, "BRAT! Is this a consultation or the damned Spanish Inquisition?" Covering her mouth, Doc Howard made a hasty exit from the room. The only visible hair on her would come off her head, and if that happened, Antonio would never see age 10 or 37. Rubbing his arm, Doc Andrews went to stand on the far side of the bio-bed that Prez was laying on. Keith transported into the room. Before Keith could ask any questions or greet anyone, Antonio grabbed a fistful of his leg hair.

"WHAT THE FUCK?" Keith hollered, and jogged over to the bio-bed, on the other side of Prez, and beside Doc Andrews.

Ignoring the comments, Antonio called, "Alden! Stop playing with your floppy drive and call your cousin, Cam. See if Professor Maggrine can pick a time slot to come down and look at this."

Alden giggled, "Cam's getting Professor Maggrine, and I have no floppy drives, they're all hard."

Having just left Drew's townhouse and feeling some of the pain Prez and Keith just experienced, John transported into the room, giggling, "What's going on?"

Antonio giggled, "Alden's surfing the IBM catalogue again and has his drives all hard, and I'm tracing something really funky with Prez, and it looks like Keith too. You mind if I cut a little of your hair off to add into the test mixture? Doc Andrews already provided a reference sample."

Warning moos, and softly muttered expletives flowed from Keith and Doc Andrews. "YOU SONOFABITCH!" Prez yelled, trying not to giggle. "Couldn't you have just cut some of MINE off as well?"

Antonio looked at him seriously, then said, "No."

"Why not?"

"Because," the tiny doctor giggled, then looked at John, who had already pulled out some of his hair for Antonio. "Thank you."

"You're welcome," John giggled, and then went into learning mode, asking, "None of the Starfleet Medical tech could've caused Prez's hair growth?"

"It's not only hair growth," Doc Andrews interrupted. "The blisters that were on Prez's buttocks Saturday night are completely healed in two days. There's only minor discoloration from the new skin growth."

"Actually, I just think Keith needs to wash him better," Antonio commented. He offered, "Cookie, John?" and a bag appeared next to him on the desk.

"Always," John cheered, and helped himself. Around his partially chewed cookie, John muttered, "It could be radiation from his PADD; too many games of Pissed Off Chickens."

"Opposite effect; good thought though," Antonio nodded. "I called in help from Archnania. The root balls on the samples I got from them are unusual. You'd think they'd know that if I asked first, they'd tense up and I wouldn't get good roots! You guys who got empathy are different though, your body doesn't react the same, so you got me some roots with your samples, even though I'm pretty sure I don't need them."

"Would my N-Gen genes matter in the samples?" John wondered. Antonio turned and looked up, rapidly blinking. "Phenomenally cosmic roots," John giggled, and offered Antonio a cookie.

As he took the cookie, Antonio considered John's suggestion. "Hey Alden; call up Sammy and get me a sample of his hair. Tell Vish that I said he's got my permission to help."

"You're in luck," Alden replied. "Vish just had an evil moment and got your samples as I called them. Here they are. Now I'm gonna watch Sammy chasing his pussy."

Keith and Prez roared laughing. Softly chortling, Doc Andrews carefully approached Antonio and John to see what they were doing, besides eating cookies and being silly.

Just as the wary doctor joined them, Professor Maggrine appeared. "Antonio! May I say the new ornamentation on your face suits you well!"

"Hey, Professor; I'm seeing some weird stuff here. Do you wanna give it a shot?"

Laying on the bed and blocking Keith's hands from playing with his exposed dick, Prez giggled, "Can I get dressed?"

"Ask Keith; he seems to think your joystick needs adjustment!" Antonio giggled.

"What is this obsession that you Alpha Prime beings have with clothing?" The Professor asked in wonder.

Scrunching his face, John whined, "I've heard them making whoopie, but really don't want to witness it."

Refusing to turn back toward the bio-bed where Prez lay, Doc Andrews chuckled, "Get dressed, Preston."

Antonio giggled, "Dang it, I was hoping I'd learn a couple of tricks to try with Byron!"

Sliding off the bio-bed and away from Keith, Prez giggled, "We'll play with our fuzzies later, T'hy'la." He quickly crossed the room and began getting dressed, not realizing Keith had stealthily followed, and was leaning over to check out his butt.

"Amazing," Keith grinned, "there's barely a sign you were ever burned, Prez."

John whispered to Antonio. Wide-eyed, Antonio gasped, "Hand stands, huh?"

Nodding, John giggled, "I tried it with Stephen, using telekinesis to hold him steady."

Antonio gave John a thumbs-up, then turned towards Doc Andrews and the Professor. "Doc, could you please tell Doctor Howard that we need her back in here? It's time to put on our thinking caps." Tapping his comm-badge, Doc Andrews told Doctor Howard it was safe to return and that her input would be appreciated.

Once Doctor Howard had stepped into the room, Antonio began his thoughts. "Even with the bio-bed's assistance, Prez should still be in the inflammation phase with predominant macrophages. Due to the extent of his injuries, at this point I would expect to see the first stages of contraction, while reconstruction of the hair follicles would be in early stages in perimeter areas and nonexistent in primary injury areas. When I looked at the roots of Prez's pubic hairs, I found a slightly higher level than normal of type I collagen, with no evidence of type III collagen at the levels indicated by the term since his injury. This confirms the visual indications that epithelialization has completed with the contraction phase completing in an extremely fast time period, thereby eliminating scarring. Visual indications that apoptosis has completed and returned to normal levels are confirmed by the bio-bed scan. In addition, the expected tensile strength of up to eighty percent in the injured region is shown to be exceeded by bio-bed scans, which place the healed regions within two percent tensile strength of surrounding tissue. What is interesting is that there seems to be a microbial hitchhiker on the white blood cells; one that is shared by John and Keith, though in lesser quantities judging by their hair follicles. This microbe does not show up in the Federation or Vulcan databases, yet I was actually able to watch it as it seemed to be trying to assist in repair to the damage caused when extracting them from the epidermal layer."

Keith and Prez turned to one another, rapidly blinked, and then chorused, "What's that mean?"

Rolling his eyes and entire head, John smirked, "It means all three of us have microbes that help us heal. As soon as 'Tonio yanked out your pubes, microbes raced to the area to heal and begin the process of regrowing your pubes. It's a safe assumption that the same is happening to Keith's leg hair, and on the back of my scalp."

"I agree, John." Antonio said with a nod. "These microbes seem to be a genetic mutation which simulates a super-myofibroblast when the host is injured.

Deep in thought, Doc Howard muttered, "The question is, why is it happening? Keith and John are brothers, but Preston is not blood relation, so it's not genetic."

"Do you need some milk to go with those glazed eyes?" Antonio asked Prez and Keith.

Prez smirked, "If it's not genetic, what's left?"

"Environmental considerations," three doctors, one professor and John answered.

"May I inspect this microbe to see if it might be in our databases?" the Professor asked.

"Sure," Antonio replied as he turned to the console. "An interesting point; the microbe appears to be independent of the host's cellular structure. One of the follicles from Keith touched one from Doctor Andrews, and immediately about half of the surface microbes migrated to the foreign hair."

Doc Andrews said, "All the hair follicles are still alive. I wonder what they'd do to an older, dead follicle?"

Already heading out of the room, Doc Howard said, "Let me get my hair brush and test that." In a minute, Doctor Howard returned with her hair brush, and pulled a handful of hair off it then put it on the test sample tray.

By this time, Prez was fully dressed and standing with Keith near the doctors, watching the proceedings. For many seconds the group watched the monitor and readings displayed. Antonio was beginning to believe nothing would happen, but then the microbial migration began, ignoring the older, dead follicles and moving to those that were still alive.

The Professor tilted his head in thought, then stated, "These microbes seem familiar; I really need to call in an expert to make sure."

"Go for it," Antonio responded.

"Georgie, are you listening?" the Professor asked.

"How many times do I have to ask you NOT to call me that?" whined the Headquarter's AI.

Neither Prez nor Keith felt like swimming in the North Atlantic, but helplessly sniggered at Georgie. Only Grandma Morrison could get away with calling the HQ AI "Georgie".

"I'll stop when you reach maturity in a few billion years," the Professor laughed. "Are the Dimensional Twins available, or are they busy trying to reproduce? I need to see them and Kermit, preferably with some of his favorite water."

Obviously pouting, George replied, "They just beat me at three dimensional chess, for the fourth time in a row. Stand by, they're on their way; whether they like it or not."

A few seconds later, two almost-thirteen-year-old boys with curly long blond hair appeared, wearing... each other. Accompanying them was a strawberry blond who looked barely thirteen, wearing a loincloth and carrying a bowl of water with something that looked vaguely like a frog.

Two doctors and the professor grinned, but Antonio, John, Keith and Prez howled laughing and began applauding. The two blonds blushed and tried to hide their faces.

"Don't worry bros, Cam says he's already plotting revenge on George," The only dressed member of the trio commented. "Hey everyone, I'm Cameron. My brother squeezing his brother's butt is Karl; the squeezee is Tracy. Just as soon as their erections finish shrinking, they'll say hi to y'all."

"I'm really gonna have to talk to your Grandpa Marc about the defects in your modesty circuit, Cameron," Tracy commented with a grin. "This better be good, Antonio. Remember, I know where you're ticklish at."

Antonio pointed at the Professor, giggling, "Blame HIM!"

"Okay, we'll blame him and punish you," Karl laughed.

"Here guys, you're making my Director feel inadequate!" Alden giggled as two Speedos with little elephant trunks attached to the front appeared on the nearest table.

"ALDEN!" Keith and Prez shouted.

John sniggered, "Neither Tracy or Karl can match Darren's beastly bits."

Nodding, Keith grinned, "Since Darren doesn't cause anyone to feel inadequate, we're fine."

Prez warned, "But you won't be fine, Alden. All I have to do is ask Kerry, George, Icarus and Stevie, and the diving well will be filled with ice cubes for your dunks."

"Can you say, major shrinkage?" Keith evilly snickered.

"My twin bro says he can arrange for Alden's body to have an innie!" Cameron giggled.

Alden squealed, "YIKES!" and tried a semi-sincere apology.

Tracy and Karl giggled, otherwise occupied in making sure the proper body parts were in the hollow elephant trunks on their new swimwear. Once dressed, Tracy walked over to the bio-bed. "Let's make this official. I'm Tracy Butler, Director of the Ft. Lauderdale Intel Division. My partner and husband is Karl Butler, the cute blond with the wiggling elephant trunk over there. Our brother is Cameron Butler, head of AI Investigative Services."

Shaking hands with Tracy, Karl and Cameron, Prez introduced himself, Keith as his husband and assistant director, and John as his brother-in-law and the Pacific Rim Division's Intel Director.

"I've heard about you, John. You're the only Clan member who got an entire hotel up!" Tracy giggled.

John blushed and giggled, "My hubby's partially responsible. We'll go and meet him when we're done here."

"Kewl!" Tracy replied. "It's great to meet you, Prez and Keith. You guys have a rep almost as strong as Seth and JJ do. It's common knowledge in Orlando that you guys make Chuck Norris look like a common man!"

Floating about a meter off the floor, John smirked, "It's getting deep in here. Just because they crashed the worldwide financial system?"

Prez chuckled, "ZCC caused that. All we did was uncover their dirty laundry."

"And we left some of the State's government in place," Keith sniggered. "It's more than Joel managed here!"

"So modest in their greatness!" Tracy sniggered.

John flew to the ceiling, pulling Antonio and his sack of cookies along with him, and they hovered there.

"Remind me to get escape hatches put in the ceiling for situations like this," Antonio quipped as he retrieved cookies for him and John.

Prez and Keith took advantage of the floating, and started tickling Antonio's and John's feet.

"Hey Cam! Stop trying to decode frog and let me borrow your shoulders! I see ribs wanting tickles!" Tracy giggled.

"On my way, bro!" Cameron stated as he quickly came over and crouched down for Tracy to take a seat on his shoulders. A few seconds later, they joined in the fun of tickling the floating mini smart-alecs.

At the high-pitched squeals and laughter, Prez sniggered, "I only wish their voices had changed."

"I wish they had leg hair to yank out," Keith evilly snickered.

"That's because we're still perfect, unlike you old goofballs!" Antonio stuttered between giggles.

"Tracy, could you PLEASE stop trying to stick your elephant trunk in my data port?" Cameron giggled.

"Stop moving your head, and it might stop poking you!" Tracy replied.

"Hey!" Prez laughed, "I think Tracy and Cameron wanna be remotely detached Rimmers!"

"I don't think rimming is on Trace and Karl's schedule until next week!" Cameron giggled.

"HEY! See if we let you play with us when we get home!" Tracy blushed as he half-slapped Cameron's head.

"I wanna see!" Karl giggled from over with the doctors. "Hey guys, poke the floating clowns until they deflate and drop to the floor, then get over here."

John cackled, "Serious doctor stuff time!" and started drifting down with Antonio.

"Did you know that serial doctoring is a crime in seventeen universes?" Antonio giggled as they landed.

"Only seventeen?" John grinned, "Backwards, must be."

Doc Andrews just shook his head, the realization that Antonio's antics had their patient laughing and playing around instead of sitting there worrying. He now understood why Antonio was so popular a doctor to visit; his unconventional bedside manner placed kids at ease, no matter what the situation. 'A lesson they never taught us in Med School,' he chuckled to himself.

Once Tracy had climbed off of Cameron, Antonio glanced over at him, quipping, "That's one friendly elephant! I gotta get a pair of those for Byron!"

"I'll make sure he has a pair." Tracy giggled, "And some for you too." He then rejoined Karl. "You got anything, Hot Stuff?"

"Yeah, while you were trying to interface with Cam, Kermit helped us figure out what was going on."

Tracy giggled, "Kewl. After we're done, you and I need to sit down with Prez, John, and Keith. They had an idea I think might be pretty kewl, on an interdivisional basis."

Eager to get an answer about the healing and hair growth, Prez, Keith and John gathered around the doctors, the professor and Karl.

Doctor Andrews took the lead. "It appears these organisms, according to our resident biologist frog-type companion, are a match to a base microbe which is present in the waters of his home planet. This particular microbe tends to attack things which damage its environment, or creatures living in same, assisting the natural defenses of the attacked in recovering quickly."

"Archnanian microbes?" Keith uncertainly muttered.

The professor reminded, "You bathed in it, swam in it, and drank it."

Prez blinked, and then grinned, "I could swear I just you heard you admit that a frog diagnosed me, not the three doctors, two computer geeks, Archnanian Professor, android, or N-Gen also in this room?"

"Hey, I helped by translating!" Karl giggled.

"Since I'll live, and everything's status quo, in a Clan Short style, I think I'll go home," Prez sniggered.

Keith told John, "Take our guests over to the CIC dining room. I'll bet they still have some pizza. We left Dee watching over Richie and Jimmy."

John nodded and grinned, "Go be daddies. If I need a command decision for anything Intel related, I'll let you know, Prez." He then called, "Hey, Alden, get elephant trunk Speedos for me, 'Tonio and Cameron too."

"What about me?" Doc Andrews chuckled.

"You're too old," John, Antonio, Cameron, Karl and Tracy chanted. Doctor Howard cracked up and wandered out of the room.

The requested Speedos were delivered and donned. Sniggering, Prez and Keith followed Doctor Howard, and were followed by the elephant pack. Professor Maggrine returned to Archnanian, leaving Doc Andrews behind to clean up the exam room.

* * * * *

Waikiki Beach

Monday, November 8, 2004 9:50PM HTZ

Since finishing their meals and leaving The Ocean House restaurant, Paul, Reyes and Ryan strolled the Waikiki shoreline. Nearest to them were Manny and Clay, but they were about fifty meters behind the threesome. Slightly further away, nearer to the street and off the beach were Reyes' gorilla, Kahdi, and tiger-hybrid, Casim. For almost an hour, they walked and talked. Occasionally, other couples and small groups walked by them, but they only politely acknowledged one another with eye contact, nods or soft greetings. With each and every similar event, Paul's grip on Reyes' hand got tighter, clearly relaying Paul's distrust and stress. Reyes never said a word about it, cheerfully continuing the conversation as if nothing had happened.

Completely comfortable on his home turf, Reyes intended to prove the ROH was much more accepting and relaxed than South Carolina. Waikiki Beach had changed dramatically during the twenty-three years Reyes was in an orphanage, but it was still the same tourist destination. It was a beautiful starlit autumn night. The moon was only a sliver in the sky, giving the boys the illusion that there were many more stars. Waves lapping at the beach created a relaxing soundtrack.

Knowing his boyfriends were on Eastern Time, Reyes asked, "Are either of you tired?"

Paul shrugged, "Not very. I'm having a really good time."

Ryan giggled, "Ready to take us to your love nest now, Reyes?"

"No," Reyes laughed, "not until you two are tired. Kaho'olawe proved that I won't have a chance between both of you unless we're all ready to call it a night."

Paul evilly grinned, "After an awesome day like this, you're certain to be recovering from tonight well into tomorrow."

Nodding, Ryan giggled, "You planned all this, you empathically driven romancer!"

"Most of the day was normal Pacific Rim Division life," Reyes grinned. He then joked, "I repeatedly tried this maneuver for years and always failed. For once, my evil dinner and beach plans have panned out," pushing all three to giggles. Slowing his pace, Reyes suggested, "Let's sit. Then we can decide on a third trip down the beach, or if it's time to go home."

They stopped walking and released their hands. Holding his right palm out to the two teams of security, Reyes signaled they were staying for a while. Facing the ocean, Ryan sat down in the sand, followed by Reyes and lastly Paul. The lights from hotels and stars sparkled off the water of the Pacific Ocean.

Ryan leaned over onto Reyes' shoulder and then closed his eyes. Contentedly, Ryan purred, "We should've known, bro."

"Known what?" Paul wondered.

Ryan sighed, "With a first name like 'Reyes', we could've guessed he'd be our bright ray of light, dragging us out of the doldrums and back into the real world."

Rolling his eyes, Paul smirked, "Oh jeez!" Expecting that response, Ryan softly sniggered.

Reyes incredulously giggled, "But I'm the romancer? I don't think so! The obvious truth is that you're both seducers."

"There's one major difference," Paul shared. When Reyes turned to him, Paul admitted, "It used to be for survival and a major effort. You're honestly a pleasure to be around."

Never lifting his head off Reyes' shoulder, Ryan added, "The whole AI Division agrees with us, Reyes. I talked with our mom. Paul talked with our dad. Jerry never shuts up and says that Danny, KC and Marc also know it. Joey obviously thinks you're awesome."

"Willy doesn't pounce just anyone," Paul grinned. "He's never pounced me once."

Ryan softly sang, "You're holding back again, bro."

"It was all very nice to hear though," Reyes smiled, and reached behind both brothers to pull them closer.

Paul softly asked, "Now that we're together, what are you thinking, Reyes?"

After thoughtfully humming, Reyes answered, "I had hoped that I wasn't asking for too much. From the moment we met, I couldn't focus on one of you without including the other. It made part of me think weird thoughts, like wondering why I couldn't try for only one brother. At first, I thought it was orphanage memories. When I realized it wasn't that, I asked myself, is it your histories on the street? That had nothing to do with it either. All day today has been the proof to the simple answer that I just want to be with you, a part of both and turning two into three. Where have I been all day? Between you, playing the middle part and loving every moment. Maybe I'm a glutton, starved for real affection? The rest has been you two."

Ryan wondered, "How do you mean?"

Reyes shrugged, "Both my hands are taken. When one brother is in front of me, the other is behind me. As much as I've loved it, it really isn't very fair. Someday, when we're all comfortable enough, there will be Ryan sandwiches, and there will be Paul sandwiches. The only part of that I can foresee taking a little extra time, is with Paul, walking down any beach or street with both his hands taken."

"It's true," Paul sighed.

Reyes smiled, "I'm not the least bit worried about it, Paul. It's something that will take time and practice. We'll try it in the safest places first, on Ewa Beach and on Sullivan's Island. Only after you're used to it there will we try it other places, like maybe Kaho'olawe. I love who you are as much as how you are, so overcoming the past is only a tiny task. There is a much larger problem that's mine."

Ryan impatiently huffed, "That's not so large a problem either, Reyes. After all you've said and done for a week, I can't see you treating sex like the unpleasant chore it used to be for you."

"It will be different," Paul firmly assured. "If you ever get the feeling that something we're doing is too much like the orphanage, just say something and we'll stop. I've made love to Ryan and he's made love to me. Even when it was a show for some pervert or perverts, it was very much the same, only quicker."

Ryan asked, "How many other guys could know all that we've done and not think we're pervs?"

"None," Paul quickly answered.

"You didn't even blink," Ryan recalled.

"All three of us were sad when we discussed this," Paul added. "You were sad for what we went through, and we were sad for what you went through. Although I'm not very good at showing it, I really do want to keep that in the past."

"Our future is going to be so much fun," Ryan smiled.

"And easy," Paul and Reyes playfully sang. Ryan cracked up and fell back into the sand, completely hysterical.

"RYAN!" Kahdi shouted. "WATCH OUT!"

Unbeknownst to the three boyfriends sitting in the sand, four men had been running toward them. Kahdi and Casim had seen the men and took the precaution of moving closer to their charges, but still weren't close enough to intervene. Hearing Reyes' gorilla yelling, Clay and Manny reached for their batons and handguns. Before any of the threesome could react, the first man stepped directly on Ryan's chest and then kicked Reyes onto Paul. The second man kicked Ryan in the side and shoved Reyes onto Paul, softly growling, "Fucking faggots." The third and fourth men each took opportunistic shots at Ryan, Reyes and Paul. Reaching out, Paul managed to grab the fourth man's leg, sending him flailing down and onto the man directly before him. Manny aimed a silenced nine-millimeter handgun and shot the first man right between the eyes. Clay fired his silenced weapon on the second man and hit him in the upper left quadrant of his chest. In a street fighter's rage, Paul jumped on the fourth man and began pounding the living hell out of him, landing blow after blow to the head. Casim, Reyes' tiger-hybrid, pounced on the third man with extended claws, ripping past clothing and deep into his flesh. Kahdi went to Paul and the fourth man.

Reyes' first reaction was to check on Ryan. Finding him unconscious, Reyes yelled, "Alden, get me a tricorder!" Off to Reyes' side, Casim and Clay were restraining the third man. Kahdi pulled Paul off the fourth man and Manny dropped to the sand, intending to restrain him for prosecution. A split second later, Manny fell, with Paul on his back and cursing up a storm, landing more face and head shots on the fourth man.

Picking up Paul again, and getting a heck of a struggle for his effort, Kahdi repeatedly said, "I'm on your side, Paul! Your brother is hurt!" It took many repeats for Paul to even realize who he was struggling with or what he was being told.

Hovering over Ryan and scanning him, Reyes checked and rechecked for broken bones. Finding none, Reyes only thought, 'You may believe your human, Ryan, but your android bones saved you from surgery and weeks of pain.'

More calmly, Reyes called, "Alden, notify Doc Andrews that he's needed. We'll be in his office in a minute." He then checked with Casim; "Correct me if I'm wrong, but the penalty for assaulting a Clan Short leader, or wards of Clan Short, under sexually bigoted pretenses is death."

Casim nodded, "That's correct, Reyes."

"Take out the trash," Reyes ordered. "They called us faggots."

With that, Casim's claws cut through the third man's flesh and muscle into his heart. Directly in the dying man's face, Casim sneered, "Bye-bye, homophobic low-life. Have fun fanning the flames of hell."

Looking around and finding Paul in a rage induced daze, nonsensically shouting profanities, Reyes huffed, "Casim, Clay and Manny, you guys meet us at the FYS Building when you're finished. Alden, transport Ryan onto a bio-bed at Ewa Beach, with me, Paul and Kahdi in the same room."

Chapter 21

Ewa Beach, FYS Building.

Monday, November 8, 2004 10:06PM HTZ

Under the bright lights of one of the doctors' treatment rooms, Reyes got up off his knees and went to the bio-bed where Ryan lay, still unconscious. Concentrating fully on Ryan, and ignoring Paul's rants, Reyes operated the bio-bed and triple checked for injuries. Still finding nothing, Reyes whispered, "This isn't what I wanted to do, Ryan." He then called, "Alden, strip Ryan for me."

Ryan phased out and back onto the bio-bed. Doc Andrews ran into the room and went directly to the bio-bed and Reyes.

"I've scanned him three times, and can't figure out why he's still unconscious," Reyes told Doc Andrews.

After taking a quick glance at the bio-bed readings, Doc Andrews scowled, "He's an android."

"HE THINKS HE'S HUMAN, YOU DOPEY FUCKS!" Paul hollered. "OF COURSE HE'S OUT OF IT! A HUMAN WOULD BE!"

Raising his eyebrows, Doc Andrews checked with Reyes. Reyes nodded, "It's true. As far as me and everyone is concerned, Ryan's human. Let's treat what we can while he's unconscious..."

Restrained by Kahdi, Paul screamed, "DON'T YOU DARE FUCK WITH MY BROTHER! I'LL KILL YOU ALL! GET THE FUCK AWAY FROM HIM! AND GET THIS MUTHAFUCKING APE OFF ME!"

Leaving the bio-bed and sighing, Reyes went to Paul, and then shouted, "SHUT THE FUCK UP AND LISTEN! I WOULD NEVER DO THAT TO RYAN OR YOU! I LOVE YOU BOTH, BUT YOU ARE NOT HELPING RYAN!" Seeing tears form in Paul's eyes, Reyes huffed, "For any other android, I would've just revived him with smelling salts. I know he's special, and I intend to keep him special."

Paul stopped struggling in Kahdi's grip, sobbing, "You almost had me believing it, Reyes. I almost believed people were different here. I almost believed I could love you back and everything might be perfect. No, it's not going to happen, not now, not ever."

Reyes blinked tears away and sighed, "What's most important right now is Ryan. Let me help the doctor, please? I want you here to see that we're not going to harm, change or invade Ry in any way. But if you can't calm down and help us help Ryan, I'm going to have Kahdi remove you from the room."

"You have me removed and you can forget all about me," Paul warned.

Reyes frowned, "How can we help Ryan?"

"He thinks he's human!" Paul insisted, "It's fully integrated. Whatever happened to him, he'll react exactly like a human."

"There aren't any broken bones," Reyes explained.

Kahdi said, "He was jumped on, on his chest, and repeatedly kicked about the body, perhaps once near or at the head."

Doc Andrews announced, "I found a bruise on his right side jaw and neck. Nothing's seriously damaged."

Reyes asked, "What should we do?"

"Nothing!" Paul growled. "He'll come around any minute."

"Then we'll wait together," Reyes softly said. Returning to the doctor, Reyes more clearly explained, "We were sitting in the sand together. We never really knew what the hell happened. One-second we were laughing, and the next it was ugly."

Doc Andrews asked, "How long ago?"

"Four minutes and forty-seven seconds," Reyes and Paul answered.

"From a kick to the jaw, he should be coming-to soon," Doc Andrews said.

Reyes nodded, "Then we won't interfere," and picked up Ryan's limp hand. He began softly calling Ryan's name.

Kahdi released Paul and let him go to his brother. For a while, Reyes and Paul alternated calling for Ryan to wake up. After another minute and a quarter, Ryan's eyelids began fluttering.

Thirty-one seconds later, Ryan softly groaned, "What the fuck happened?" and pulled his hands away from Paul and Reyes. His right hand reached for his jaw and his left hand reached across his belly for his right side.

"A herd of homophobic moose," Paul smirked.

Reyes nodded, "An insult to all moose everywhere, but I promise not to tell Joey or Timmy."

Realizing he was chilled as well as sore, Ryan looked down, smirking, "So the correct treatment for homophobic moose attacks is to take all my clothes off? I'm not sure about this, Reyes."

Blushing, Reyes giggled, "It sure wasn't my plan, but I had to see where you were hurt."

"Nice excuse," Ryan smirked. Glancing around, he wondered, "Can I sit up without all of you freaking out?"

Reyes nodded, "Your right side is going to be really sore and bruised for a couple o' days, so take it slow." Reyes and Paul offered Ryan hands to hold and their other hands supported his back.

Taking both offered hands and sitting up, Ryan groaned, "You had homophobic moose imported just to get me naked? Kind o' extreme, but then again, all your naughty plans have been. All you needed to do was ask, Reyes."

"Are you outta your fucking mind?" Paul incredulously wondered. "After all this, you're still flirting?"

Reaching for his sore jaw, Ryan shrugged and winced, "Course."

"NO!" Paul shouted. "We're going home! We're going to forget this entire night happened!"

"I'm not going home or forgetting anything," Ryan firmly stated. "I'm staying with Reyes."

Paul yelled, "No you're not! This is partly his fault! Safety is home! Reyes can't give us that!"

Ryan shrugged, "I never expected him to. He can't control all the homophobic moose on the planet. I'm staying here. If you want to go home, then go."

"Maybe it would be better, Ryan," Reyes gently prodded.

Shaking his head, Ryan replied, "Not for me, it isn't. I've seen this side of Paul before."

Paul loudly exclaimed, "Which side is that?"

"The overprotective side," Ryan flatly answered. "The side that tells you everything is fucked up and won't ever be different. I'm not buying it this time, bro. Things might not be perfect, but they have been and are better with Reyes. Go home, alone this time."

Paul hollered, "You're serious?" When Ryan nodded, Reyes started to call Paul to wait, but was cut-off by Paul tapping his comm-badge and shouting, "Stevie, get me outta here and back home." Paul disappeared from the treatment room.

Ryan whispered, "Asshole." Turning to Reyes, Ryan asked, "Can I have my clothes?"

Reyes blinked and softly confirmed, "You are serious?"

Carefully sliding off the bio-bed, Ryan nodded, "Completely serious." Landing on his feet, Ryan told Reyes, "This is what he's like when he's flown off the handle. If it had been him that was hurt, it would've been bad, but I probably could've talked him into staying. Because it was me, it's everybody's fault; the world is hell and we're only trying to find a temporary kewl spot. He can believe that all he wants, but I know we've found two permanent kewl spots; here in the Clan in general, and close to you."

"You love him," Reyes reminded, "and I love him too."

"He loves us too, Reyes," Ryan warmly smiled. "Paul's just got this funny way of showing it. He believes he's protecting me, but neither of us need that kind of protection, and I sure don't need to be protected from you. He'll eventually realize all that, when he wants. Until then, he'll be irrational and stubborn."

Nodding, Reyes called, "Alden, get Ryan into clean clothes, please?" As soon as Ryan phased back in and was dressed, Reyes then turned to say, "Doc Andrews, this is my boyfriend, Ryan Owens. He'll be staying with us a while."

Smiling, wincing and reaching an arm out to shake hands, Ryan corrected, "A long while, since this is where Reyes lives."

"My pleasure," Doc Andrews smiled, and shook Ryan's hand, instructing, "Alternating cold and warm compresses on the bruises tonight and into tomorrow." When Ryan nodded and thanked him, Doc Andrews reminded Reyes, "I'm going to have to mention this in my log, which means Preston will know..."

"Which means my dad and pop will too," Reyes finished. Doc Andrews slowly nodded.

Kahdi added, "We'll have to report it too, Reyes. I can't say what kind of repercussions this might have. We were keeping within our guidelines for a Clan leader on a date, but the guidelines might need to change."

Reyes sighed, "Fine. I'll tell my side and do my best to make sure nothing changes. You guys were awesome. As far as I'm concerned, we'll just have to put up homophobic moose crossing signs on Waikiki Beach."

"Right next to the swimsuits optional signs," Ryan sniggered.

Reaching for Ryan's hand, and having his hand taken then firmly squeezed, Reyes smiled at Doc Andrews, offering, "Sorry about the late night madness. We'll see you in the morning." Ryan, Doc Andrews, and Kahdi said goodnight. Leading Ryan out of the treatment room, Reyes shared, "I'm considering telling my dad and pop first."

Ryan wondered, "Do you think they'll be awake?"

Nodding, Reyes grinned, "Awake, but will they be dressed or intimately involved is the question."

Pausing in the reception area, where Casim, Clay and Manny were waiting, Ryan smiled, "How about we take care of that first. As soon as Derrick and Mike see that I'm only slightly worse for wear, I'll transport home to get my stuff. I'll have to deal with Paul too, but I am returning, Reyes."

"This is exactly the kind of the situation I was afraid of," Reyes sadly groaned.

Before Reyes could say another word, Ryan gently placed his index finger on Reyes' lips. "This is Paul overreacting," Ryan explained. "He really does love you, as much as I do, and he will remember that. Maybe I can make it happen tonight, or it might take him a while. Whichever case it happens to be, I am coming back." Ryan then nodded his head toward the three security personnel.

Facing Casim, Clay and Manny, Reyes asked, "The work is complete?"

Casim nodded, "All but the reports."

"Kahdi reminded me," Reyes said. "After I review your reports, I'll write another report. This was not your fault. You guys can't keep respectful distances and be supermen, always arriving in the nick-of-time. Regardless of what Kekoa, Cody or anyone else believes, we cannot be protected from every jack-off out there. Which reminds me, where are they?"

"Dust in the wind," Clay grinned.

Reyes nodded, "You earned some time off. You're dismissed, guys."

"Thank you," Ryan warmly smiled at the security teams.

Reyes led Ryan out of the FYS Building. They were followed out by Casim, Clay, Kahdi and Manny. All six said goodnight and went in opposite directions. Ryan shared, "Your best feature is a chronic positive attitude, Reyes. I don't want to change that in the slightest, but you have to understand, something like this would've eventually happened. Paul needs to understand that he can only protect us so much..."

"Protect us?" Reyes softly queried.

Nodding, Ryan chuckled, "I have no doubt he was protecting both of us; maybe me a little more than you, but he thinks you're awesome, Reyes. He absorbed a little of your positive attitude. After we talked last Wednesday morning, and then had breakfast and told our family, we went back to our room. He was trippin' so bad that the moment the door closed, he kissed me hard. For the first time in years, my bro actually showed me real love and appreciation. That was your doing. He's been tripping for a week. The old cranky Paul is still there, but the other loving Paul is coming back too. He flips from one extreme to the other several times a day, and that's from spending limited time with you. Between us, we can get him over the shitty street years. I see things a little more like you; all three of us can help one another more than anyone else could. We can move forward instead of stagnating or slipping backward. I don't want to argue with Paul, but there's no other choice, because he'll push me one way, to stay there, and I'll push him the other way, to come back here.

"Think of how little we told you about how we spend our time," Ryan prodded. "We don't do much of anything. Paul is perfectly fine hiding in our room, enjoying the safety and family that we haven't had in so long. I drag him out for walks on the beach. The Poe Library is right there, within walking distance, but we've never once been inside it. Friday was very much an emergency at the Charleston hospital, so we were there, doing what we could. Saturday, when Danny invited us to Kaho'owhatsie..." Reyes cracked up, and Ryan giggled, "Paul heard you would be there, and he dragged me back upstairs, to change into beach clothes. Yeah, he was still worried about who else would be there, and if we'd be safe, but you're like a magnet that we're drawn towards."

Walking around the CIC and approaching the townhouses, Reyes grimaced, "He blames me that you were hurt."

"I know," Ryan sighed. He shook his head and firmly said, "You didn't cause that, Reyes. From my point of view, we were having a nice walk and kewl chat, I got stepped on, then woke in a doctor's office, with you and Paul fussing over me. All I remember is the guy stepping right on top of me. Everything else is a blur."

"It happened that fast," Reyes explained. "All those other people we passed weren't a threat at all, but I could feel Paul's stress, in his hand in mine. Those four men were typical high and mighty controllers, forcing their view upon us, as the supposedly weaker and insecure homos. They waited until we were sitting down too, making us even less capable of retaliation. Now they're all dead. All I wanted was time alone with both of you."

"You succeeded in every way," Ryan warmly smiled. They stopped in front of the steps to townhouse number two. Locking eyes with Reyes, Ryan firmly stated, "Everything was fantastic, all night, until some dopey guys tried to ruin it. I refuse to allow them to fuck up a really great night. They haven't won squat, or even proved themselves better than us. Now they can prove themselves high and mighty to the Creator." Stepping closer to land a tender kiss, Ryan then softly assured, "Please don't believe you're to blame for anything other than a damn good time. Paul will be back here, with us. I can't say when, but I know he won't stay away from me, and he sure doesn't really want to be away from you. His choices are to hide out alone, or join us, plain and simple."

Reyes smiled, "I really love your perspective. I really love Paul's too. His idea of protection is different from mine. All I cared about was making sure you were all right. I'll have to admit that the Clan law enforcing justice in this case made me feel weird." Noticing Ryan's curious expression, Reyes sighed, "I ordered four executions, on the spot. All four of them are dead, for being stupid enough to call us faggots."

Ryan worried, "How do you feel?"

Reyes shrugged and thought a few moments before answering, "Justified. They hurt each of us, in multiple ways. What might've been is now seriously delayed. Yeah, justified works."

"That's why this will work," Ryan smiled. "You are a little bit like each of us, and another really awesome perspective to add." After a short pause, he prompted, "Let's tell your family what's gone on and is now over."

Tapping his comm-badge, Reyes called, "Dad? Pop?"

Derrick replied, "Here, Reyes. Have you decided where you're sleeping?"

Reyes grinned, "Sort of. We're right outside the house. I just wanted to make sure you're awake and dressed."

Opening the door and looking out at Reyes and Ryan, Mike laughed, "It's not even ten-thirty! Dillon and Scott are in bed, but Jonah and Gage are still awake. Is this how dating was in the fifties?" Watching Reyes and Ryan walk up the steps, Mike backed up to allow them inside and scowled, "There's one missing?"

Followed Ryan inside, Reyes sighed, "It's been an interesting first date."

Seeing Ryan's bruised jaw, Derrick hurried to him, groaning, "What happened?"

Ryan giggled, "I'm fine, Derrick. We had a really great dinner at an awesome restaurant, and then walked the beach."

"We went southeast from the restaurant toward Diamond Head, and then turned around," Reyes recalled. "We must've passed at least two-dozen other people. Since we walked about two kilometers in the sand, we decided to sit. Only minutes later, four men ran right into us, to intentionally harass us. Ryan got stepped on and kicked around, I was shoved and clunked heads with Paul. Paul went nuts. Ryan was unconscious. Four men have been executed for assault, for sexual harassment. That's the basics of what you'll see in the report."

Gage, Jonah, Derrick and Mike loudly asked, "Are you okay?"

"Bruised, battered and a little sore, but I'm fine," Ryan cheerfully answered.

Reyes shrugged, "I'm just a little discouraged. Ryan's staying, but Paul's gone home. All the progress made all day and through most of the night was lost, thanks to four assholes. Ryan's already argued with Paul."

Focusing completely on Reyes, Ryan repeated, "This kind of argument was bound to happen. I'll take care of it."

Reyes asked, "Now?"

Ryan nodded, "Might as well. Give me half-an-hour or so to pack some stuff, and then I'll be wherever you are." After giving Reyes another peck on the cheek, Ryan waved goodbye, and then had Stevie transport him home.

Reyes asked, "Should we tell Prez?"

Nodding, Mike explained, "If he reads about it in the morning, he'll be a basket case, searching for you before school."

Derrick grinned, "The problem is, Richie and Jimmy are probably asleep, Sammy has gone with Ben back to the Gibbons', and the two Head Rimmers are pretty much alone." Gage and Jonah began giggling. Bouncing his blond eyebrows, Derrick chuckled, "This should be comical." He tapped his comm-badge and called Prez.

Moments later, in the squeaky voices of their Mr. Fuzzy puppets, Keith and Prez giggled, "What?"

Immediately, Gage lost it and howled laughing. Giggling, Jonah took Gage's hand and pulled him off the couch and up the steps.

* * * * *

Sullivan's Island, S.C.

Tuesday, November 9, 2004 4:33AM EST

Ryan appeared in the bedroom that he shared with Paul. With little more than a glance at his brother, Ryan went to his bed, kneeled down, and pulled his suitcase out. Paul growled, "You're going back, after all I've done?"

Ryan put his suitcase up on the bed, stood and turned around hissing, "Because of what you've done."

Paul incredulously hollered, "What have I done?"

"You hurt him," Ryan grumbled. "Reyes told us what he's most afraid of, so you took the first opportunity to throw it in his face. He didn't want to see us arguing. Here's what I'm like protecting my bro, like it or lump it. His heart is breaking! I can see it in his eyes and hear it in his voice." Ryan spun around and went to his dresser.

Getting up off his bed, Paul yelled, "It was his fault! He took the risk and we should've known better."

Grabbing armloads of clothes, Ryan huffed, "Yeah, Reyes' elaborate first date plans also included asking four assholes to fuck with us. It was first and foremost in his mind, before setting up a condo love nest complete with Champagne." Antagonized and irritated beyond control, Ryan accidentally pushed the first drawer closed a little too hard. He dumped the first pile of clothes haphazardly into the suitcase.

Paul smirked, "Do you want to fuck him that bad?"

Spinning around, Ryan yelled, "You take that back! I want to make love with the most careful and considerate person we've ever met! The ways we used to make love were barely a warm up for what Reyes deserves. You know that too, but I won't wait for you to admit it. From what I've been told, you fought again for me, but left me laying in the sand. Reyes was the one checking me over, not you! It used to be you, Paul! The way you changed was good while we were on the streets, but it's not good now. This shit has got to stop." He stormed to the closet and yanked more clothes off hangers then threw them in the suitcase.

Sadly shaking his head and taking a deep breath, Ryan said, "If you really think Reyes would lay a single finger on me, without you there too, then you really don't know him the same way I do. I'll bet you that he won't, no matter how much I try to put my best moves on him, he'll say no. If I win the bet, you transport to Ewa Beach and apologize for ever blaming him. You bend over backwards for as long as it takes to fix what you've fucked up." He called, "Stevie, you can transmit audio and video from any Clan camera, right?"

Stevie reluctantly and softly answered, "I could."

"Do it, on the TV in this room," Ryan ordered. "The moment I arrive back at Ewa Beach, show my stubborn, pig-headed brother exactly what's going on." He told Paul, "I'll purposefully use my entire bag of tricks. Let's see who wins this bet, bro. If Reyes does more than hug and kiss me, I'll turn around and transport right back here. If he doesn't, you transport there and apologize to him. Is it a bet?"

Paul sighed, "I can't take that bet, cos I couldn't pay up."

"Why not?"

"In my opinion, it was partly his fault."

"So let's hide out here from the rest of the world," Ryan impatiently growled. He went to the dresser, opened another drawer and grabbed more clothes.

From out in the hall, they could hear Joey ask, "Awe Unca Pauwh and Unca Wyan fighding?"

KC firmly said, "Joey shouldn't be hearing any part of this, and has already heard too much. I'm taking him to Ewa Beach."

Jerry said, "Where my son goes is where I'll be."

Mary sighed, "I'll help you pack."

Jon was heard saying, "We'll let Danny and Marc know later this morning."

Paul groaned, "We woke everybody."

"Good," Ryan huffed. "It's a gentlemen's bet with a household full of witnesses. There, now you can watch and learn and it won't cost us anything." Closing his suitcase, Ryan evilly grinned, "You'll see, bro. You're wrong this time. It wasn't Reyes fault. He won't touch me. And you're being a class A doofus, hiding out in the safety of this room, so that no one can ever get too close to us." He turned and pulled his suitcase off the bed, sighing, "I can't do that, bro. I choose to be with Reyes. He tries his damndest everyday, just like we used to. I'd rather try with him than wait for you. When you're ready, you know where I'll be."

Ryan called, "Stevie, transport me to Reyes, and then start monitoring me and Reyes." Simultaneously, Ryan vanished from the room and the television flickered on. In condo building B, in the single bedroom condo he had prepared, Reyes was sitting on the sofa watching television. Ryan appeared in the room behind Reyes. Convincingly, as if nothing had upset him, Ryan giggled, "Hey there, sexy."

Swinging around, Reyes smiled, "That was quick."

Putting the suitcase down, Ryan nodded, "Not quick enough. Unfortunately, we got loud and woke everybody up. We're about to get some more guests. KC, Jerry and Joey are packing to come here too."

Reyes called, "Alden, what've we got to accommodate our friends?"

Alden replied, "There's a two bedroom condo, one flight upstairs, number 4-B." To try and lighten Reyes' mood, Alden giggled, "It's right across from Rad and Gil, our resident watermelon lovers."

Reyes said, "Excellent, we'll be really close. Go ahead and get it loaded with food, drinks and stuff Aunt Mary can cook. We all know she'll be stopping by at least once a day."

"As long as she's awake, the woman has to cook," Ryan giggled, and then leaned down to give Reyes a passionate kiss. He purposefully coiled his tongue around then tried to suck Reyes' tongue off its roller.

As soon as the kiss broke, Reyes giggled, "Wow!"

"That was the warmer-upper," Ryan giggled.

Sitting on the edge of his bed, Paul rolled his eyes and sadly shook his head, softly mumbling, "I can tell that you sucked his tongue, Ry. Just rip his pants open and go for it. He won't turn it down."

Ryan caressed Reyes' shoulders, chest and belly. Reyes giggled, "Come around and sit here by me." Overplaying his excitement, Ryan bounded up and over the back of the couch, landed on a cushion and snuggled up close to Reyes. "I know what you're doing," Reyes smiled.

Ryan innocently giggled, "You do?" and a stack of fifty virtual halos almost caused a white-out on the TV screen.

Nodding, Reyes smiled, "You're trying to make me feel better, like everything is fine as is. You being here makes a big difference in my warped little positronic mind, but there's one person missing."

"We could still have an awful lot of fun," Ryan seductively giggled, and emphasized his goal by rubbing Reyes' thigh. He leaned over for another kiss and started moving his hand up close to Reyes' crotch.

Blindly reaching down, Reyes stopped Ryan's hand. The kiss broke and Reyes warmly smiled, "Not for our first time, Ry. I know it'll be that way someday, but that's not how I want it from the start, and you already know it. It's a sweet gesture, but I can wait."

Playing up his disappointment, Ryan softly wondered, "Are we going to do anything while we wait for Paul?"

Reyes nodded, "Lots of those kinds of tongue-tingling kisses and probably twice as many hugs. I'm even wondering if I can shower with you in the morning. We might only share water, soap and back scrubs, and I'm not even sure we can do that. I figure we can try, but if there aren't two raging erections to start with, then even showers won't get steamy."

"That's it; hugs, kisses and possible shower fun?"

"Until a half-dozen bruises fade off you, that'll be a constant reminder of how an awesome night fell apart on us. I'll keep you plenty entertained with a hundred different things, and almost four hundred other kids. I'll sleep here with you, and do everything else with you, and I really hope that's enough."

Pretending to think about it, Ryan looked directly into the camera wearing his most victorious 'I told you so' expression. Returning his focus to Reyes, Ryan giggled, "I'm gonna try and wear you down, ya know?"

"I know you will," Reyes sniggered. "It would be impossible for me to make a move without telling Paul about it. I don't want my first words to be, 'I'm so glad you're here, Paul, and I did all these things alone with Ryan, so get your pretty white ass into the bedroom, cos now it's your turn!' There's a lesson in subtlety in there that none of us would appreciate, I'm sure."

"That's true, but I can..."

"You can do a lot and so can I," Reyes interrupted, "but it's unfair for all three of us. Think of it this way; our consciences will be clear, so once Paul gets here, we can take our sexual frustrations out on him." Rapidly nodding, Ryan roared laughing.

"You dawgs," Paul softly griped. "Neither of you are getting anything from me anytime soon."

The apartment doorbell rang. Reyes stole a quick kiss from Ryan, got up and answered it. Seeing Jerry, Joey and KC waiting in the hallway, Reyes moaned, "I'm so sorry you guys got woke up, but I can't help being glad that you're here."

KC grinned, "Don't worry about it, Reyes. I have my work cut out for me with Fred. Now I've got to prove to him that the Shannon protocols are working. In the process, I can teach the mountain boy how to surf."

Jerry peeked inside the condo, giggling, "This is going to be a tight squeeze for five of us."

Pointing at the ceiling, Reyes smiled, "One flight up, boy genius. Alden's got a two bedroom flat ready for you guys."

"Bud Weyes, how can I pounce you fow bweakfasd if we awe up dhere?" Joey innocently asked.

Reyes grinned, "We'll have breakfast at the CIC dining room, twerp. You have my permission to pounce anyone that doesn't have a Mr. Fuzzy puppet."

"Awden? Can you hide aww dhe Misdew Fuzzy puppets ad bweakfasd?" Joey asked, with an evil grin spreading across his face.

Alden giggled, "All but one, Joey. If Jay misplaces his Mr. Fuzzy, he starts frothing at the mouth and quivering like a junkie going cold turkey. For Divisional sanity and safety, I suggest we not go there."

"Okay," Joey replied, satisfied that he was now under orders to pounce at will.

KC shook his head, grinning, "The island will never be the same. Jerry, you wanna give me a hand keeping the punk under control while he recruits local 'Rat Pack' members?"

Jerry shrugged, "The bigger trick is getting Joey back to bed for another few hours. It's still Monday night here, kiddo. Most of the kids are in bed, for at least another seven hours."

Reyes sniggered, "Let's show you your apartment first. If Joey can't sleep, there are two auditoriums with various drum sets to keep him occupied. Reyes called Ryan over, and then had the entire group of five transported to apartment 4-B. Reyes and Ryan got KC, Joey and Jerry settled, showed them the balcony, and then left them to return to their own apartment. Fighting his need to sleep, Paul intently watched his brother and Reyes. Sooner or later, Reyes would cave and Paul's beliefs would be proven. To be vindicated, Paul only had to watch them and catch it.

* * * * *

Ewa Beach Dormitory #3 Common Room

Monday, November 8, 2004 10:41PM HTZ

Since dinner, and with his older brother Craig getting to know Felicity, Phil Nash had a lot of ideas running circles in his mind, but no outlet for them. His mom was wandering around in spirit, and she knew that Phil liked boys. He had to talk to Craig, and he also had to talk with Owen Reed. Phil wondered, how does a dude tell his big bro that he likes dick; how does a dude say hello to another dude that looks like a strawberry blond angel; which should be done first? Making matters even more awkward and confusing, Phil knew virtually nothing about Owen; only that Owen was from a level two orphanage, which was automatically assumed to be worse than the level one orphanages.

Phil thought, maybe I should try to get to know Owen first. That way, if Owen turns out to be total loser, I won't have to say anything to Craig about being gay. After all, with no boyfriend, there would be no reason or purpose to rattle Craig's cage.

But he had to wonder, how rattled would Craig be? He didn't want his big brother to feel uncomfortable changing clothes in their room, and he sure didn't want to lose the only remaining member of his immediate family. Craig was an awesome big brother and always had been. At ten-years-old, Craig got interested in soccer and had practiced with Phil when he was only seven. Now, Craig had a considerable height and weight advantage, but once Phil broke the ball free from his bro, the goal was easily within reach.

The most disturbing part of what Dulce had told Phil was that his mom would continue hanging around until both Craig and Phil were settled and happy. Sarcastically, Phil thought, wonderful! He would be the main reason his mom would stay, longer than necessary, only to make sure he was happy. That was another driving force pushing Phil to take some action, instead of sitting there fussing while other boys in the common room watched TV and imitated dialogue using their Mr. Fuzzy puppets.

Still uncertain what he might do first, Phil got up and left the common room. He went down the other hall where some other really kewl guys lived. Maybe Pat O'Hara was in his room. Everyone knew that Pat was hooking up with Ralphie Taylor. They would be kewl to talk with about this stuff. Just thinking about it though seemed to be filling Phil's bladder to overflowing, so he passed Pat's closed door and went to the lavatory. He was still in there washing his hands when music from the hallway poured into the tiled room.

One after another, Pat, Ralphie and Rafe came into the restroom and went directly to urinals. Unzipping, Pat checked, "How's it going, Phil-'er-up?" and faced the porcelain on the wall.

Sadly shaking his head, because Craig's private joke was becoming more public, Phil sniggered, "It's been a mind blowing sort of night. Truthfully, your room was my next stop."

Rafe asked, "Craig's still with his new girlfriend?"

Drying his hands, Phil replied, "Yeah. We have some family stuff to talk about later. There's other stuff going on too. I'm not sure if I should mention that to him though."

Ralphie remarked, "Stuff you don't wanna talk with your bro about? Must be heavy duty." He peeked over at Rafe's urinal, making it obvious what he was looking at. Swaying to and fro, to show off and hide his dick, Rafe broke into giggles. Ralphie then checked out his boyfriend's snipped goods and hungrily hummed.

"You're insane!" Pat giggled. "I show it to you every time you ask!"

"I'm asking," Ralphie leered.

Phil sniggered, "Nice goin', Ralphie. Did you even look at me to read that?"

Scowling, Ralphie seriously wondered, "Read what? I didn't read you, Phil."

Moving back to the urinals, slightly behind and between Ralphie and Pat, Phil prompted, "Read me, dude. It would make my life a hell of lot simpler."

Looking over his shoulder, Ralphie focused his telepathy just above Phil's forehead. In only a few seconds, Ralphie gasped, "Holy crap, Phil! Dulce hears your mom?" Everything Ralphie learned he immediately shared with Pat.

"That's just one of the challenges too," Phil softly said.

Ralphie giggled, "Those aren't challenges!" He then playfully corrected, "Well they are, a little bit, but that's easy compared to your mom." Finished first, nine-year-old Rafe Montigua stuffed his goods away, closed the Velcro fly and went to the sinks.

Phil smirked, "What's easy about any of it?"

"We'll help," Ralphie smiled, and shook his dripping dick. He zipped up and shared, "We just went through this with Rafe. All you need to understand and believe is that it's kewl; it's just another piece of you. Craig won't care. Your mom obviously doesn't mind."

Phil scowled, "How do you figure that?"

"She gave you his name," Ralphie giggled, and then went to the sinks. "Proving to your mom that everything's kewl is the biggest problem. The rest we'll help you with."

Phil and Pat followed Ralphie to the sinks. Pat smiled, "My first day here, in the basement store, Ralphie got on his knees and begged me to like him. Reyes, Chris and Rafe saw it too. I was still asking myself if I'm gay, and Ralphie is the opposite extreme, comin' right out and saying that I'm who he wants, and would give anything, if I'd only say yes."

Phil smiled, "So you said yes."

Soaping up his hands in the sink, Pat nodded and grinned, "It really was the only answer."

Ralphie sniggered, "We learned Rafe had some similar stuff happen to him today."

Already done drying his hands, Rafe nodded and giggled, "Maybe I lost my chance with Jase, but now there's a whole bunch of really cute, possible boyfriends who're my age."

Phil asked, "What's my next step?"

Ralphie replied, "You're attracted, so now you have to give him some clue. The only way to do that is to get to know him." Pausing only a moment to look at Phil's reflection in the mirror, Ralphie smirked, "You'll fall flat on your face if you keep thinking the way you are. You're plenty cute and plenty nice, Phil. Now we need a little more help."

"Alden?" Pat called.

Over the speakers, Alden replied, "Yes, Pat?"

Pat asked, "Can you tell us where Owen Reed is?"

"He's at the Oneula Beach rec room," Alden answered.

"Let us know if he decides to go someplace else," Ralphie requested, and then added, "We're heading there now."

Phil nervously squealed, "Now?"

Rafe cracked up. Ralphie nodded and sniggered, "Why not now? You can stay awake all night wondering, or find out if the guy is all you think he is."

Frozen by his own thoughts and worries, Phil soon had Pat taking one hand, Ralphie taking the other, and Rafe behind him and pushing him forward. Leaving the lavatory, Pat began the pre-meeting pep talk by saying, "You're really kewl, Phil. Maybe I haven't seen everything the last couple o' days, but I have seen you and Craig kickin' a soccer ball around. More than a dozen other kids were learning from you. Soon, another bunch of kids went to the field with four more soccer balls. You and Craig started teaching them how to play the game. Maybe it wasn't much to you, because it wasn't a real game and they're only beginners, but put yourself in the shoes of any of those orphanage kids. Two brothers working together showed them teamwork. You guys gave them something else to do that they'll enjoy."

"The next huge bonus comes in a couple of months," Ralphie continued. "Malnourished orphans are being well fed, and now they're getting exercise, out in the sunshine. Each and every one of these kids are gonna suddenly be taller and healthier. It's something they might not realize you helped with, but know that you have. As for your bro and what he might think, you've got it all twisted up in your mind. Sure, Craig's older and more mature, but what you're seeing in him isn't attraction, it's competition. When you're fifteen, you'll be like him. Everything he's got, sooner or later you'll have too."

Still pushing Phil's back, Rafe shared, "I've seen you and your bro at the diving well. What I see are two brothers that are already really hot. Of course you're shorter and thinner than Craig, but was he that much different when he was twelve?"

"I guess not," Phil reluctantly admitted. They went out the two doors and started across the quad toward the CIC. Phil shrugged, "He's always seemed bigger and stronger than me."

"Try being nine-years-old with a fourteen-year-old brother," Rafe giggled. "What we do can't even be called wrestling. Jay wins and I lose, every time! Sometimes I have to warn him that I'll fart or pee if he doesn't let me go." Phil, Pat and Ralphie cracked up. "Hey!" Rafe loudly giggled, "It always works!"

Pat sniggered, "When we get there, remember all this, Phil. You've got a heck of a lot to offer. Introduce yourself and then try to get him alone."

"How?" Phil wondered.

"We'll be in a rec room," Ralphie reminded. "Ask him to play one of your favorite video games. Games you played, they weren't allowed to, so teach him the ropes. Or maybe ask if he wants a milkshake and a snack, then take him into the kitchen, and then grab a table alone with him. Now you can tell him about yourself, and remember to ask him to tell you about himself. Since he showed up yesterday, you already know he's an orphan, so expect him to not want to talk about it. Your job is to show him you care, which is really easy, cos I know you do. Make him comfy enough to want to tell you stuff."

Suspiciously, Pat asked, "Did you have a plan in the store, Ralphie?"

Smiling past Phil at his boyfriend, Ralphie chuckled, "Only to let you know that I like you. Everything else was pretty much automatic for me."

After humming thoughtfully, Pat sniggered, "If you really want to prove how much you like this guy, do silly stuff in public. Ralphie chose most of my clothes for me, right down to my underwear."

Phil smiled at Ralphie.

"I already knew Pat was the best and hottest guy around," Ralphie grinned, "just like you think Owen is. Since I used to model clothes, I went to work to make sure everybody saw the best dressed, sexiest twelve-year-old in the division."

Phil chuckled, "Isn't that like asking someone to steal him away from you?"

Ralphie shrugged, "Maybe, but if Pat's lookin' around to be stolen, then I haven't done something right. On the other hand, when guys watch me with Pat, I'm sure they're lookin' at us and wondering, 'how'd that skinny little shit score that smokin' hot red-head?' Instead, I get massive ego boosts from Pat and from every pair of eyes watchin' him." He then asked, "Are you lookin' around, Pat?"

Rolling his eyes, Pat giggled, "If I were, I wouldn't be leading Phil to meet some other guy." Ralphie and Rafe softly chortled. Stunned, Phil glanced at Pat and flushed red. Pat shrugged, "I'm not looking because I have no reason to. Everywhere we are together, Ralphie's great. You can get Owen to think the exact same stuff, Phil. I'll be more honest if you think you can deal with hearin' it."

"Be honest," Phil instructed.

Walking into the CIC dining room, Pat nodded, "The truth is that you'll put Owen in shock. He'll be wondering, who is this cutie and what could he possibly want with me?"

"Nice try," Phil grinned. "Owen's strawberry blond and cuter than all four of us combined."

"In your eyes," Ralphie giggled. "One of the things I learned is when you tell someone how cute they are, you had better be prepared for the table to turn on you. All my self confidence from years of modeling evaporated completely when Pat started telling me what he liked most. Assuming everything goes well, that'll be tomorrow or the next day. Your goal tonight is to get to know Owen. Before you say goodnight, tell him you'll be looking for him tomorrow."

Rafe said, "One thing I learned from Jay and Chris is that they're useless alone. Both boyfriends make each other better than they usually are. So, you make him feel good and he'll make you feel good. After two years of watching Jay and Chris make goo-goo eyes, now I get to watch Pat and Ralphie doin' it! When is that going to happen to me, is all I want to know!"

Pat, Phil and Ralphie helplessly sniggered. Approaching the dimensional doors, Ralphie and Pat released Phil's hands and Rafe stopped shoving. Pat told Phil, "You go first and we'll follow."

Ralphie nodded, "Once we see you're alone with him, you're set and we're gone."

Phil asked, "Do I look all right? Please say I don't look as nervous as I feel?"

"Jeez!" Rafe giggled. "If this Owen guy turns you down, how would you feel with me for a boyfriend?"

Phil sniggered, "I think I'd probably feel pain, from Jay pounding the shit out of me."

Ralphie gave Phil a modeling review, tugged his polo shirt down and instructed, "Loosen the other button on your polo shirt, man. One button says, middle-of-the-road, both buttons say, completely casual and chillin'."

Once Phil had loosened the button, Pat nodded and smiled, "You look great; like you're ready to sweep Owen off his feet."

After taking a deep breath, Phil huffed, "Here goes nothin'." He ordered the dimensional door, "Oneula Beach," and seconds later walked through.

Pat checked with Ralphie, offering, "He still seems a little nervous to me."

Shaking his head, Ralphie smiled, "Phil's been slyly checking out guys since he started school. The last two years, he's been hiding his feelings as much as he could. Owen was his wake-up call, just like you were mine. Also, Phil's been playing little league soccer for five years and dealing with a big brother too. I think he knows exactly what to do, how to do it, and make an impression that Owen won't ever get the chance to forget."

Looking down and locking eyes with Rafe, Ralphie reminded, "Exactly like I told you earlier. You've hung around plenty of guys, and some were five years older than you. If someone like Chris Stokley thinks you're a kick, then imagine what guys your age might think when they get to know you."

Rafe confirmed, "All I have to do is choose?"

Pat nodded, "It'll be two ways, bro. He's gotta like you too. Once you're there, and you both know how the other feels, then it's a matter of spending time together."

Rafe teased, "You're in love, Pat."

Unable to deny it, Pat giggled, "I've got the major bonus of a telepath telling me what he's thinking before he ever says a word aloud. Ralphie's reading me too, so even if I wanted to exaggerate or lie, he'd catch me. I don't think I'd want it any other way."

Ralphie told Rafe, "Pat wasn't hitting on Phil before. I could tell by Pat's tone that he was honestly telling Phil that if we weren't already a couple, he'd be considering Phil. It was a compliment, and it all says something about basic attractions." Locking eyes with Pat, Ralphie shared, "The whole world stopped spinning Friday when I saw you."

Going into a daze, Pat muttered, "You're the model in the Sunday fliers I always dreamed about."

Giggling, Rafe went to the dimensional door, ordered "Oneula Beach," and passed through, leaving the two love-birds alone. Making a quick turn, Rafe was soon walking into the rec room. The first familiar faces he saw were Taron Reyce Otter, the Hiram twins, the Stoeher twins and the Triggs brothers. Crossing the room, he noticed Phil Nash was at a video game with Stu Sutliff, Ray Varga and Owen Reed. Vaziik was actually playing the fantasy role-playing game.

With bruised lips forming wide smiles, Pat and Ralphie entered the room hand-in-hand. They went directly to where Phil was and stood behind the group. In a few seconds, Ralphie silently told Pat, 'Owen's into the game and learning from Vaziik. Stu is next to play, if Vaziik ever purposefully messes up and lets anyone else play. That's when Phil will try again.'

Stu was Vaziik's roommate over at Ewa Beach dorm three. Stu was learning a lot from Vaziik about Vulcan philosophy. Vaziik was learning how to mix and mingle in a division of humans from Stu. Accordingly, Stu had already informed Vaziik that sometimes it appeared to other boys that he was showing off and always better at most things than everyone else. In the world of video arcade games, Stu and Vaziik had prepared signals, so that Vaziik could participate yet not take over the game, and lose everyone's interest in the process. Of course, Vaziik had to make it appear that his loss was circumstantial, and not just throw the game. Cleverly, Stu would evilly snicker for the first signal, and then he'd chuckle a little louder. If Vaziik hadn't already lost, Stu would signal once more with a loud laugh.

In this particular role playing game, titled 'The Labyrinths Of The Middle Ages', Vaziik had demonstrated four complete levels and earned as many points and skills as were available, at least as far as most of the boys knew. Stu had already given the first two signals. Fighting a werewolf and surrounded by nipping bats, Vaziik made an impressive show of how to lose with style. When Vaziik moved aside, Stu patted his new friend on the back, chortling, "If I get that far, I think I'll avoid that labyrinth."

Slightly grinning, Vaziik remarked, "Very wise."

Phil checked with Owen, "Ya wanna check out any other games? Mortal Combat's pretty kewl. If that's too gory, maybe the World Soccer League?"

Owen shrugged, "I've still got a long way to go with those games."

Having a good idea that Owen was going to say that, Ralphie discreetly shoved his Mr. Fuzzy puppet into Phil's back pocket. Ralphie sent to Phil, 'Mr. Fuzzy is everybody's friend. Try again.'

Reaching back and putting the puppet on his hand, Phil squeaked, "How about a little something to eat? It's been hours since I've had a full fuzzy."

Helplessly giggling, Owen nodded, "That sounds really good," and walked away from the video game with Phil following close beside him.

Pat sputtered and coughed back a laugh. Ralphie grinned, 'I honestly didn't tell Phil what to say, only what to do. That was all Phil and not my doing.'

Occasionally glancing at Phil as they walked across the dining room, Owen admitted, "I can't help wondering why... I mean, you were with your brother today. Why'd you wait for night to come talk to me?"

"It's a really long story that I promise to tell you soon," Phil partially answered. "To make a long story a little shorter, I'll admit I wanted to talk to you, but I didn't really know what to say."

Owen scowled, "You didn't know what to say?"

"Or even if I should," Phil struggled. "It's weird, ya know? Honestly, I noticed you last night at dinner, and again at the concert, and a couple o' times today. It's the first time ever I was like, I've got to get to know you, just from seeing you. So yeah, I spent most of the day wondering what was going on and how to deal."

Nodding, Owen smiled, "Yeah, I know what you mean. This place is so different."

"What makes it different for you?"

"I used to share a room less than half that size with three other dudes," Owen softly replied. "Now I've got one room-mate, Ellis Pierce, and so much stuff, in our room and everywhere."

"Is Ellis kewl?"

"Very," Owen giggled. "We were at different orphanages in LA, but were roomies at the hospital. Since that worked for three days, we decided it would be kewl here too."

"Is he gay?"

"I don't think so. He's twelve and talks like he's straight anyway." Noticing Phil blinking and processing, Owen clarified, "He talks about girls he wants to get to know, and more."

Phil softly asked, "Are you straight?"

"No," Owen whispered. In the kitchen chow line, Owen meekly asked the woman chef, "Is it kewl to have a milkshake this late at night?"

"Certainly," she smiled, and then asked, "Which flavor would you like?"

"Strawberry chocolate, please," Owen answered.

When the woman turned to him, Phil introduced himself, and Owen, and then asked her name. She smiled, "Coletta Jasper. Please call me by my first name, boys."

Nodding, Phil grinned, "I'd really like the same thing Owen's having, but I'm wondering if all the vitamins would keep me awake until dawn." Owen widely smiled, believing that Phil had asked the correct question; the one he had meant to ask, but failed to properly word.

Coletta checked, "I don't believe so. Have they been affecting you that way?"

"No," Phil smiled, "I just thought I'd ask and make sure."

Coletta confirmed, "Two strawberry chocolate shakes?"

"Yeah, thanks," Phil answered, and then told Owen, "Macadamia nut cookies are my weakness." He walked over to the cookie and pastry counter, beaming, "Omigod, they're addictive, I think." Owen sputtered then giggled. Holding up his Mr. Fuzzy, Phil tried to squeak but chuckled, "Do you want some too?"

Owen nodded and giggled, "One. I never had 'em before."

Stuffing his Mr. Fuzzy into his back pocket, Phil smiled, "Then I'll get four, two for you and two for me, cos I know you won't be able to have only one. I'll be lucky if I don't come back for another four, just for my addiction."

Giggling louder, Owen nodded, although he knew he'd be lucky to eat a single cookie with his milkshake. He couldn't say that aloud though. Phil couldn't wipe the smile off his face. Owen was about three inches shorter than Phil and had the kewlest dark green eyes. To top it off, Owen's voice was changing; even while giggling, it was alternating between croaking and squeaking. Placing cookies on a small plate, Phil knew he was wearing a completely dorky smile for little reason, but the alternative was to grab hold of Owen, squeeze him tightly and kiss him repeatedly.

Turning around, Phil saw that Owen already had his milkshake. Coletta was returning with another glass and soon slid it across the counter. Phil thanked her, took the glass, and then told Owen, "Let's find a small table, dude."

Owen nodded. It was after eleven o'clock and no one was sitting in the dining room, so they had their choice of tables. Both the Ewa Beach and Oneula Beach dining rooms had tables of various sizes and shapes; some were small round tables seating no more than four, some were oval shaped that could seat up to eight, and there were longer, rectangular tables that could seat up to twelve. Sitting at the first small table, Owen asked, "When did you get here?"

"Friday, because of riots in LA," Phil softly answered, and gestured to the plate of cookies for Owen to help himself.

Taking a cookie, Owen carefully and softly asked, "Will you tell me why now?"

Nodding, Phil took a bite out of his cookie to gather his thoughts. His eyes seemed to glaze over from the freshly baked macadamia nut cookie. Drinking his milkshake through a straw, Owen helplessly chuckled and blew a big bubble into the glass. He blushed and giggled. Phil covered his mouth with one hand and laughed, "I told you I'm addicted." Since he wasn't sure what to say,

Owen nodded, giggled, and patiently waited.

Phil sighed and then scowled, "I've always liked other dudes, played little league soccer and stuff, but didn't really know what that meant. Two summers ago, my dad had the whole birds-and-bees talk with me. It seems like only days later we went to Malibu for dinner out, but it was probably longer than that, maybe a week or two. Anyway, driving down PCH, past the beach parking lot, there's this straight couple, maybe in their late teens. The girl was okay, all the curves in the right places and a real pretty face, but her boyfriend grabbed my attention. He wasn't a muscle-stud or anything, just perfectly stacked from the ground up. The dude made Michelangelo's David statue look like a total loser. I couldn't stop thinking of him all through dinner and the rest of the night. Bed time, Craig comes into our room, after a shower, wearing only a towel and drops it. While his back is turned and he's putting clothes on, I'm there wondering, okay, my bro's got all the same parts, his shoulders were starting to get wide, but there's nothing interesting there. He notices me in a trance and laughs, 'What are you looking at?'"

Owen nodded understandingly and warmly smiled.

Phil continued, "So part of what I was thinking was how I could hide this from everybody, especially my bro, my dad, and all the dudes I used to hang with. It wasn't too kewl, ya know, to other people. I'm mostly fine with it, but just have to watch what I'm doing."

Owen wondered, "How old were you then?"

"Ten."

"You're twelve now?"

"Yeah. How old are you?"

"Thirteen," Owen answered, and blushed because Phil was younger but taller.

Phil grinned, "Then I noticed your new group walking into the dining room last night. Out of all those kids, I saw you... really, only you. Again, Craig notices me and wonders why I'm not eating. Now I'm rethinking all that same stuff again. It's a different deal now, in the Clan; it seems that half are straight, and the other half are gay. Now I'm thinking it's time to stop hiding how I feel. Being gay doesn't change much of anything. Even all our leaders are gay. A bunch of us dudes were talking about them in the common room late Saturday night. It was kind o' wild, shifting from funny to intense. Even though the Core Rimmers are gay, a lot of the dudes admitted that they wouldn't ever want to get into a fight with them. Even my bro said that, and he's about as tall and built as they are. Last night, after the concert and alone with me, Craig brought it up again. He called them determined, and it was more obvious seeing the band perform."

Owen smiled, "They're a lot of fun, but I know better."

"How do you mean?"

"They act like they never could or would fight," Owen shrugged, "but I heard the news reports about our rescues, while I was in the hospital. Our leaders do what all Clan Short leaders do; they save kids like me and help kids like you and your bro. When they have to, they'll kill very bad adults. I can't figure out how they can go from one extreme to another like they do."

"They think of all of us as family; as brothers and sisters."

Nodding, Owen smirked, "It's not like the orphanage, that's for sure."

"Yeah," Phil chuckled, and tried to get back on topic. "All I said is why I had to talk with you tonight. The deal is so different, now we can be who we are without worrying about much." He had another bite of another cookie, washed it down with his milkshake, and then asked, "What was it like before you got here?"

Owen huffed, "I'd rather not talk about it, or even think about it."

"That bad, huh?"

"It took three days in hospitals to get us healthy enough to be here. The only good part was watching video feeds from Ewa Beach. Sorry, but I can't go there now."

"It's kewl," Phil assured. "Whenever you're ready, I'll listen."

Owen blinked and softly wondered, "You'd want to hear it?"

Nodding, Phil said, "It's kewl though. Don't worry about it."

Owen scowled and repeated, "I'm thirteen-years-old and shorter than you. I had three other dudes sharing one tiny bedroom with me. It took three days of medical care for me to be here."

Phil nodded, "Some of that bugs me, but the important thing is that you're here now. We're all brothers." He softly admitted, "I'd like us to be more than brothers, and more than best buds."

"Don't feel sorry for me," Owen firmly ordered.

"Is that why you think I came here?"

Owen shrugged, "Dunno."

Phil grinned, "Let me make it perfectly clear then. I liked you the first moment I saw you. I came here looking for you because I didn't even know if you were gay or not. It would be just my dumb luck to have my first crush on a straight dude. As far as I can see, we're at the same place, and everything's really kewl, so now it's up to us. I'll warn you now though, if you say you only want to be friends, I'll be your friend, and always hope you'll change your mind, so we can be more."

Phil noticed Pat, Rafe, Ralphie and Taron coming out of the rec room. They waved to Phil and Phil waved back. Owen noticed the other four walking through dimensional doors. Phil grinned, "We all live in the same dorm at Ewa Beach. So, what are you thinking?"

Owen shrugged, "We're different."

"We're not that different," Phil reminded. "We're both orphans, both gay, and most importantly, I think you're awesome just as you are." Watching Owen's pale complexion turn pink, Phil smiled, "You're really cute. I'm havin' a pretty kewl time with you." He pulled his Mr. Fuzzy out and slipped it onto his hand. Owen began giggling. Phil's Mr. Fuzzy squeaked, "Say you like me too, Owen, and I'll be your fuzzy follower forever."

Slipping his Mr. Fuzzy onto his hand, Owen giggled, "Mr. Fuzzy's afraid."

Phil made his puppet nod and squeaked, "Me too. Feeling this much, this fast makes my Mr. Fuzzy freaky."

Owen roared laughing, "I like Phil's freaky fuzzy!"

Phil warmly smiled, "That's all I needed to hear," and slid his Mr. Fuzzy puppet off. He then carefully reached his hand across the table.

Owen took his Mr. Fuzzy off and then tentatively took Phil's hand, whispering, "I really hope I don't screw up, or make you angry."

"I want you happy too," Phil reminded. "It's gonna be really kewl. Later tonight, I'll tell Craig what's going on." He then giggled, "And he'll be telling me about his new girlfriend, so neither of us will hear a friggin' word!"

Owen sniggered, "So when I meet him, he won't remember what you said, never mind my name."

Phil wickedly grinned, "I'll be mumbling your name all night long. If I know my brother, he'll turn this into another competition, betting that he can get to home plate first." Owen giggled and turned crimson red. "Oh, jeez!" Phil giggled, "I'm really sorry. That's really what Craig will prob'ly do, but I shouldn't have said it like that."

"It's alright," Owen giggled, and held the cold shake glass up against his face.

Stuffing an entire cookie into his mouth, Phil mumbled, "Dhere, dow I can'd thay dum thduff."

"I'm not that naive," Owen giggled. "Four dudes in a room, remember?"

Nodding, Phil held up his index finger to signal a pause, so he could chew and swallow. Owen cracked up, and was still laughing when Phil finally swallowed and helplessly laughed along. When they had calmed somewhat, Phil smiled, "Most of the last two years, me and Craig had separate bedrooms right next to each other. I heard plenty from his room, bed squeaks and grunts. Since we got here and started sharing a room, I'm surprised I haven't heard those sounds."

"Yet," both boys simultaneously giggled.

Owen softly assured, "You'll win the bet." It became Phil's turn to practice imitating an apple. Also blushing, Owen whispered, "I was thinking that's what would happen with you. I would've and loved it, but this is even better."

"Have you ever?"

"No, but I would... with you; especially now."

Phil uncertainly repeated, "Especially now?"

Nodding, Owen offered, "It wouldn't be only sex. You're a lot of fun. I really like you... a lot."

Pushing his glass nearer to Owen's glass, Phil got up and then slid into the chair beside Owen's chair, whispering, "I couldn't have just done anything like that, Owen."

Nodding, Owen softly explained, "I'm seeing a lot of dudes hooking up, but don't really understand."

Phil shared, "Really watch the Core Rimmers, dude. That's how I want us to be, not just attracted, but the closest two people in the whole world."

Owen smiled and confirmed, "Like Doug and Carter?"

"Yeah, from what I've seen, they're gettin' there too. It's something I can see in their eyes. I want to see that in your eyes all the time. I want to brush my teeth in the morning, think of you, and see it in my eyes in the mirror."

"I think I'm already seeing it your eyes."

"Do you know what it is that you're seeing?"

Slowly and deliberately shaking his head, Owen admitted, "I'm not sure."

Repeating what he had learned from his parents, Phil told Owen, "It's the real me; a little piece of my heart shining through. When people say they've given their hearts away, that's the way it shows."

"You're sure about that?"

"As sure as I can be."

Owen wondered, "When will we get that look?"

"It's starting already," Phil giggled. "We're going to spend a lot of time together. Everything you want to know, about me and anything else, I'll tell you. If I don't know, then I'll find someone that does."

"Okay, so how can we make the look in our eyes permanent?"

Slowly leaning closer, Phil placed his first ever tender kiss on anyone outside of his immediate family. He then carefully inspected Owen's eyes, muttering, "Maybe this?" and planted a deeper kiss. Unexpectedly, Owen threw his arms around Phil and urgently returned the kiss. Tasting strawberry and chocolate, Phil uncontrollably giggled, then closed his eyes, allowing Owen to decide when to break it off. Both boys learned why tongue kisses were so kewl and breathed through their noses.

Phil's comm-badge chirped. Craig's voice called, "Phil? Where are you, bro?"

Not wanting to be the one to break off the fun, but having no other choice, Phil leaned back and replied, "At Oneula Beach, having a late night snack." He silently mouthed, "With my awesome boyfriend." Owen almost flew apart and giggled. He lifted Phil's hand and started placing soft kisses on each finger.

Craig sighed, "We've got stuff to talk about, and it's after midnight. I expected you here waiting, and bursting at the seams, bitching me out for staying out late."

"Give me a couple of minutes, bro," Phil giggled. "Go take a cold shower."

"Tell me about it!" Craig sniggered. "See ya soon."

Phil quickly called, "Out," and tapped his comm-badge. He then softly assured, "It's in your eyes now, so I guess it worked."

Between finger kisses, Owen giggled, "You're so awesome! It's in your eyes too. I think I love you."

"I'm falling in love with you too," Phil smiled, and gently guided Owen's face up off his hand to add, "First thing in the morning, I'm finding you and we're having breakfast together. If I didn't have family stuff to talk about with Craig, I'd stay right here. The last thing I want to do now is leave."

"Call me when you're done with your bro," Owen suggested, and then blushed, "There's no chance of me sleeping anytime soon."

Raising his eyebrows, Phil grinned, "How about you come with me, hang in our common room watching TV, and when I mention you to Craig, I can come get you to introduce you?" Clearly seeing a more hopeful expression, Phil smiled, "By then, our family chat will be about done anyway. Then we can pick up where we left off."

"In your room?"

"In the common room," Phil answered, and then evilly snickered, "so Craig can spank his monkey, and we're alone."

"Do you really think we'll be alone?"

Phil shrugged, "If we're not alone on the first floor, we'll try the second floor, and every boys' common room in all the dorms at both bases." Nodding, Owen giggled at Phil's determined tone. They kissed, gathered their glasses and the empty cookie plate, and took everything to the dishwasher. Soon, they were returning to Ewa Beach and walking to dormitory three.

* * * * *

Ewa Beach Dormitory #3

Tuesday, November 9, 2004 12:01AM HTZ

About the time Owen and Phil were getting to know each other, Alden and his brothers were joking around with the teens gathered in their underwear in Chris' and Jay's room. Chris and Jay were sharing their Fuzzy version of the facts of life chat with Lance, Scott, Erik and Travis. Alden played recorded copies of the chat from Troy's and Sean's living room. Watching the six younger boys listening to six teenagers, four of which were division leaders, talking about un-fuzzy versus fuzzy fuzzies, Lance, Scott, Erik and Travis were hysterical. The Clan AI's actively participated in this conversation.

While his brothers and the teens were still laughing, Kerry giggled, "I have a semi-serious question."

Jay sniggered, "I can barely wait."

"Well, if each couple has two Mr. Fuzzies, like a Mr. Fuzzy on his fuzzy, then how do we distinguish fuzzies," Kerry giggled.

George chortled, "They would be friendly fuzzies of course."

Chris playfully offered, "Kissin' cuzzy fuzzies."

Breathlessly, Lance cackled, "Cozy cuzzy fuzzies!" causing everyone participating to crack up.

"OH WAIT!" Jay loudly laughed, "THAT'S WHAT WE NEED!" A chorus of groans and frightened squeals erupted.

Collapsing slightly over onto Lance, Erik playfully prompted, "Tell us, please, oh master of fuzzy freakiness."

Jay sniggered, "Alden, we need properly designed cuzzy fuzzy cozies." Everyone roared, and Jay laughed, "Really, like a skimpy G-string with Mr. Fuzzy's face covering our dicks and balls. It's gotta fit right though, guys. Our nads should hang in Mr. Fuzzy's jaw, and our dicks in the top half, filling Mr. Fuzzy's nose."

Sliding down Lance's body, Scott howled, "We can't have our fuzzies hangin' out of our Mr. Fuzzy's, now can we?"

Slamming his palm down on the bed, Chris cackled, "Make sure it's comfy cotton inside our Mr. Fuzzies, Alden."

Travis roared, "No sweaty fuzzies in our Fuzzies!"

"WE CAN DO THIS!" Seven AI's enthusiastically shouted.

"You can do what?" Draco asked, his face appearing by the wall of the room. After checking around quickly, he rolled his eyes. "Boys; AI or bipedal, you're all the same. Have fun, guys," he grinned before vanishing again.

"Okay, Dad!" all the AIs called out, giggling like kindergardeners.

In moments, as the laughing boys were calming down, Alden giggled, "Okay guys, we have something that should work for you six; waist size twenty-six through thirty, with sufficient room above and below. It won't work too well for guys that hang longer than six inches..."

"Unless they fold their fuzzy," Kerry playfully interrupted.

Six Mr. Fuzzy G-strings appeared on the beds where the boys were sitting. All six got up and stripped out of their underwear to try on their new Mr. Fuzzy G-strings. Glancing at his boyfriend adjusting his goods, Jay grinned, "This is Clan 'gays only' attire."

Chris sniggered, "Definitely! I don't see too many straight guys wanting one."

Carefully getting his scrotum into the elastic, Lance giggled, "We'll have to take these things off to piss."

Scott nodded and chortled, "Like every other jock."

Alden checked, "Are they comfortable guys? The real pain was putting in elastic, so that nobody's fuzzy bits got squished."

One after another, each of the six boys twisted around, stretched and did deep knee bends, and checked their partner's Mr. Fuzzy, and their friends' Mr. Fuzzies, and then announced they were good.

George sniggered, "And for the problem urinating, we have Water Warriors Steady Stream Power Pump Water Blasters." He transported six of the toys onto the beds, giggling, "Effective range of thirty-eight feet."

"I officially take back all the nasty things I said about you guys," Jay chuckled. Evilily snickering, all six tore into the Water Blaster packages.

Chris playfully warned, "I'll chase after you with a carving knife if any of you get carried away." Moments later, all six boys hurried to the utility room where there were two large, deep sinks to load their Water Blasters.

Scott offered, "Anywhere there's electrical gear, like TV's and stereos, are water-free safe zones."

"Yeah," Erik grinned, "we don't want to go frying that stuff in the common room or our bedrooms. Hallways are the main indoors battle area, but outdoors, everywhere's kewl."

"For safety's sake, no shots directly on our Mr. Fuzzies from closer than four or five meters," Travis chuckled. "I really don't want to go to Doc Andrews, explaining that my nads are bruised and sore, because of over-excited Mr. Fuzzy Water Blaster fights."

"Important safety tips there, guys," Jay sniggered.

"DON'T CROSS THE STREAMS!" the other five loudly laughed.

First to leave the utility room with full blasters, Chris, Jay, Travis and Erik immediately went into the nearby common room. Hiding as couples, out of sight on both sides of the doorway, they got ready to ambush Scott and Lance. While the former four were hiding and waiting, Phil and Owen walked into the dorm hallway. From the CIC, it was the most direct route. Phil could get Owen settled in the common room and then go down the other hallway to talk with Craig.

Reaching the lavatory near the center of the hall, Phil and Owen witnessed Scott and Lance stepping out of the utility room, wearing only Mr. Fuzzy G-strings, and uncontrollably cracked up. Lance and Scott spun around to see who was laughing. Chris, Jay, Erik and Travis popped into the common room doorway and fired on Lance and Scott. Spinning around, Lance and Scott returned fire. Seeing four more Mr. Fuzzy G-strings, and that those wearing them were armed, Owen and Phil howled laughing and bolted into the lavatory.

Already soaked from his hair to his fuzzy, Scott laughed, "That was Phil Nash."

"Holding hands with another guy!" Lance loudly giggled, and turned around, wondering, "Where'd they go?"

Pausing his attack, Jay evilly snickered, "In the john."

Also ceasing fire, Erik grinned, "Okay, when did Phil Nash join our ranks?"

"And why weren't we told?" Travis chuckled.

Stepping out of the common room, Chris sniggered, "This absolutely requires compensation and education."

Once all six were gathered, Jay whispered, "Scott and Lance, take the shower. Erik and Trav, check the commodes. Me and Chris will cover the center of the room, for escaping gay boys, who've been pretending to be straight." With nods, they hurried down the hall and stealthily entered the lavatory.

Scott and Lance bounded into the shower changing area with their Water Blasters set to super soak, but they didn't see anyone in the shower. The lights weren't even on, thanks to Alden watching his cameras. They turned to watch the lavatory, expecting two younger gay boys to come flying out and past them.

Since Scott and Lance had cleared the shower, Jay scowled, and wondered if Alden had intervened to transport the two younger guys to safety.

Hiding in the near left side corner of the mob shower with Owen, snuggled up together and taking advantage of the situation, Phil broke the kiss and silently ordered, "Run!" They took off out of the shower, barreled past Lance and Scott, and laughed their asses off. The other four waiting in the lavatory spun, aimed and fired. Speeding past them and out into the hall, Owen and Phil bolted for the common room with all six chasing after them and firing non-stop.

Already drenched, Owen and Phil kept going through the common room and a few steps down the other hallway. They stormed into Craig's and Phil's room and slammed the door closed behind them, giggling madly and tightly embracing.

Just finished with his shower and bent over, pulling up his boxer shorts at the foot of his bed, Craig grinned up at the ceiling, chortling, "Ma, I had nothing to do with this. Swear to God!"

Rolling his eyes, Phil giggled, "Owen Reed, this is my big bro, Craig. Craig, this is Owen, my boyfriend. This really isn't the way I had planned stuff, but six armed fuzzy maniacs chased us in here."

Intensely blushing, Owen waved and roared laughing.

"You're both soaked," Craig sniggered. "You met in the shower? Nice one, bro! It's not what I expected from you at all."

Stepping back from Owen to face his brother, Phil laughed, "We did not meet in the shower! Those lunatics have super-soakers! I'm seriously not touching what they're wearing!"

Bending in half and grabbing his belly, Owen howled laughing. On base for less than thirty-six hours, Owen had never had so much non-stop fun in his thirteen years. Just when things started to seem normal, something else would happen to push large groups of kids of all ages into giggling fits. Compared to his miserable existence in an LA level two orphanage, Pacific Rim Division Clan life was a looney dream come true.

Walking across the room and sadly shaking his head, Craig opened the door to check the hall. He had barely crossed the threshold before being blasted by six super-soakers. He jumped back into the room, hearing his assailants laughing, "Sorry Craig!" and slammed the door.

Glancing at each other and mooing through their giggles, all six knew they had messed up. Lance whined through his giggles, "I miss my mommy." Erik cracked up.

Jay sniggered, "We don't have much time," and quickly led the group to their own hallway.

As far as Owen was concerned, Craig was very tall, muscular, and there was now valid reason to be frightened. Grinning widely, Phil softly giggled, "Told ya," and then pulled Owen close. Since Phil wasn't scared, Owen started to calm down, and wondered what would happen next.

Wiping water off his face and calmly re-crossing the room, Craig picked up the towel he had brought from the shower. Drying off for the second time in under ten minutes, Craig sweetly called, "Aaaallllden?"

"Yes, Craig," giggled Alden from the ceiling. Without being asked, Alden delivered six fully loaded super-soakers to the room. "I can't let you have a Mr. Fuzzy G-string though," Alden giggled. "Since you spent almost six hours with Felicity, you don't qualify. Phil and Owen can have 'em, though."

Craig grinned, "Kewl," and went to pick up the super-soakers lying on the carpet before the door. He passed them out so all three of them were armed with two weapons. He softly smirked, "Owen, you open the door and jump back out of the way, just in case. They can't be dumb enough to be standing there waiting. They're probably back in their own hallway by now."

"Maybe they're reloading, in the utility room," Phil giggled.

"That's our first objective," Craig smiled. "They cannot re-arm from any sink anywhere tonight."

Taking his position by the door, and holding both his super-soakers with one arm against his chest, Owen giggled, "What about our Mr. Fuzzy G-strings?"

Happily giggling and rapidly nodding his head, Phil bounced his eyebrows at his big bro.

"No-oo-oo," Craig softly sang. "First we get even, then you two can take the distraction, and soak each other all ya want."

Phil's jaw dropped. Owen roared laughing. Phil giggled, "I can't believe you said that!"

"Com'on, bro," Craig smiled. "I had a damn good idea this would happen. I expected it to take you until the end of the week. Nice time, by the way."

"Mom knows," Phil grinned.

Craig nodded, "She asked my opinion, a long time ago. I played dumb, since I don't care which side of the fence you play on. The most important thing for any dude is to have someone to play with." He checked with Owen, "Ready?" and got a nod. He checked with Phil, "Set back-to-back?"

Phil nodded and smiled, "Set."

"Go," Craig softly told Owen. As soon as the door was open, Craig flew out with Phil right on his tail. They covered both ends of the hall. Owen came out to a safe hallway and closed the door behind him.

Having heard the neighboring door three times, Fred Eckhart peeked out of his room across the hall. Seeing Craig in soaked boxers, and Phil and Owen also drenched, Fred chuckled, "What's goin' on?"

Craig grinned, "The gauntlet has been tossed. Is Chauncey awake?"

Also arriving in their doorway threshold, Tony Lanning and Ray Varga heard Fred answer, "Yeah," and quickly ask, "Is it all-out hallway wars?" With both his brothers sleeping, thirteen-year-old Nate Ramos opened his door to find out what was going on. Lastly, Kassidy Oldcambus stepped out of his room.

Seeing additional warriors gathering, Craig cheered, "Excellent!" and then called, "Alden, double super-soakers for everyone that wants to play."

Laughing his artificial ass off from the speakers, Alden couldn't reply, but executed the order. Twelve loaded super-soakers appeared on the hallway floor. The boys heard Chauncey telling Rikko, in dog, "You sniff 'em out and point, buddy." Rikko barked approval and trotted out to the hall.

Since it was late at night, all the boys were down to their underwear when they came out to the hallway and picked up their water blasters. Chauncey giggled, "Hey Alden, can you get Rikko armed too?"

Alden sniggered, "Give us a couple of seconds." A few moments later, two loaded water blasters, one on each side, were slung from Rikko's back. Alden whined and growled, telling Rikko, "Bite down on the ball in your mouth to fire."

Craig evilly snickered, "Awesome! We'll advance down the hall and chase them outside, so everyone awake can see their Mr. Fuzzy cock warmers." All the other boys cracked up.

Kerry laughed, "We'll record it and show it during breakfast at every division."

Chauncey gave Rikko the signal. The Siberian Husky pup put his nose to the carpeted floor and advanced toward the common room, with nine boys trailing close behind. Rikko cautiously went into the common room and as far as the door into the other hallway then backed away, softly growling, "Here. Very close."

The hallway lights had been dimmed and the floor LEDs were lit. Taking the lead were the oldest and tallest boys; Craig, Cassidy, Nate and Fred. They stormed through the common room and into the hall, firing all the while at the six Fuzzy G-string madmen that started it.

"SHIT!" all six laughed.

"Even the damn dog is armed!" Lance howled.

The larger group of doubly armed hallway invaders progressed, however they started getting hit from the sides. The Stoeher twins were armed and firing into the hall. Across the hall, the Hiram twins were also armed and firing. A little further down, Rafe, Pat, Ralphie and Taron made their presence known. Hysterical laughter reverberated from every direction, even from the ceiling speakers where seven AIs made it clear they were spectating. Determined to chase Jay, Chris, Scott, Lance, Travis and Erik outside, Craig led the charge down the hall. The primary six targets were eventually pushed out the dorm doors and into the night.

Awake and crossing the compound, destined for the auditorium, Joey, Jerry and KC witnessed the ongoing battle of water blasters, and howled laughing, primarily at the Mr. Fuzzy G-strings that six of the boys were wearing. Stevie provided additional super-soakers so they could join the fun. The first thing KC did was fire his super-soaker directly at Fred's butt. Spinning around and returning fire, Fred giggled, "I'm glad you're here."

"Get used to being wet," KC chortled, "we're going surfing in the morning."

Fred wondered, "When did you get here? Where are you staying?"

KC replied, "About an hour ago. We've got a condo, building B, unit 4-B, but wherever you are is where I intend to be."

Fred giggled, "Yeah?"

"Hell yeah," KC leered at his mostly naked boyfriend.

Chauncey fired on Fred and KC, giggling, "Both of you need to cool down!"

Fred and KC soaked Chauncey. KC sniggered, "I've been asleep already. When Fred decides it's bed time, I'm either tucking him in or snuggled up close."

Aiding his favorite human companion, Rikko fired and growled, "Better keep quiet!"

During the course of the conversation, a few more underwear-clad teenagers came outside to join the fun. By this time there were more than twenty-five soaked boys in the quad, goofing around in their underwear, most of whom initially focused their attacks on Jerry, Joey and KC, who were the only three still dressed. In the ensuing madness to get three undressed, what little the other twenty were wearing mysteriously got yanked off. When his blasters were empty, Craig tapped his brother and Owen to follow him inside.

From dormitory two, twelve more boys raced outside in their underwear; six teens and six tweens. For about another half hour, the boys romped around the quad. When super-soakers were empty, the naked boys returned to their dorms. Kerry titled his video, "Cozy Cuzzy Fuzzy Water Blaster Battle Number One," and transmitted it to every Clan Division around the world.

Carrying their wet clothing, Craig and Phil led Owen back to their dorm room. The first order of business was to get dressed in some dry underwear. Phil offered Owen a pair of boxer-briefs, but no sooner did Owen pull them up, they slid right back down and off his malnourished ass, settling about half way down his thighs. Parking his buns on the edge of his bed, Craig grinned at Owen's blush. Going back to his dresser and grabbing a pair of boardies, Phil giggled, "Okay, the draw string should keep them around your hips and not your knees."

Unable to wipe the smirk off his face, Owen squinted at Phil and warned, "After a few months of McCoy milkshakes, my clothes will slide off your butt."

Phil nodded and smiled, "You know I'll be helping you get there."

Owen pulled up the boardies, tied them and released them. Seeing they were staying up, Craig chuckled, "Okay, first things first. It doesn't matter to me that you're gay, bro. I kind o' suspected, but didn't really have a whole hell of a lot of clues. Dad never said a word about it, but mom did, and it didn't matter. All she cared about was you and the social implications; that's not gonna be a problem here though. If you want Owen to spend the night here, I'm completely kewl with it, as long as you two don't spend the night giggling, talking, or doin' stuff that will keep me awake. We'll figure out some signal so you can be here alone with Owen, and I can be alone with Felicity. Maybe tomorrow, we'll all get together for dinner or something. No matter what, you're my kid brother and always will be." He paused to check, "Are there any questions before we move on?"

Already seated on the edge of his bed with Owen beside him, Phil grinned, "You really have no problem with Owen sleeping here?"

Craig shrugged, "Why would I, as long as you dudes don't wake me up?" Seeing Phil and Owen widely smiling at each other, Craig reminded Phil, "You had to have heard the same talk that I got, bro. Everybody is at least a little bisexual, at least enough to be able to say, 'hey, that dude's cute'. The difference between gay dudes and straight dudes boils down to who's willing to have sex with whom. Of all the dudes outside goofin' around, I know at least half are gay, but did anyone sprout wood? Nope, not one bone was seen, even with gay partners teasing each other. That was very kewl and lots of fun. Did either of you notice who pulled my boxers down?"

Giggling, Owen shook his head. Phil sniggered, "No, the Stoeher twins made me their target. When I turned around again, you were naked too, bro."

"It was Chris Stokley," Craig proudly grinned. "Now there's a dude who's beyond cute and bordering on hot, as far as I'm concerned. He did it specifically to yank Jay's chain, I'm sure, but if I were motivated, someone like Chris is who I'd be chasing after. I simply can't make myself imagine having sex with any dude, no matter how hot he is. Since we arrived here, I've been imagining what it might be like to have a boyfriend. I can't get past hugs and kisses, but I understand where gay dudes are at. Every one needs someone. Dudes that get all freaked out are usually the insecure ones who can't deal with their own bisexual or homosexual feelings and thoughts. We slept in the nest near Travis the other night. I think he's very kewl, and a lot like me, when it comes to sex and sexuality. It took the right dude, Erik Kendricks, to flip Trav's switch on."

"It took Owen to flip mine," Phil giggled.

Owen smiled, "Yeah?"

"All it took was seeing you at dinner," Phil reminded. "I didn't even know your name."

Craig smiled, "It was the same for me and Felicity; complete tunnel vision. All I needed was an excuse and time. She gave me the reason to go to her table. After dinner, we walked this entire base, and then went over to Oneula Beach and walked around there."

Grinning, Phil wondered, "How far did you get?"

Sadly shaking his head, Craig chuckled, "She knows I like her a lot, and she told me that she really likes me. When I walked her back here to her dorm room, she kissed me, and I kissed her goodnight. Considering other dates I've been on, this one was the very best. We talked for almost six hours, with no other entertainment whatsoever. I know about her, the orphanage she's from, and a whole bunch of other stuff. She knows me at least as well as mom and dad ever did. Which brings up the second topic for tonight – mom and dad."

"Dulce really freaked me out," Phil admitted.

Craig nodded, "Me too. The whole time I was with Felicity, I'd wonder if mom was with me, or if she was with you."

Phil nervously giggled, "I'm pretty sure she split her time. For about three hours, I was completely blown away. What's most scary is that she's staying here with us, until she's sure we're both happy."

"Once a mom, always a mom," Craig chortled.

Phil playfully wondered, "How the hell can we prove to her that we're happy?"

"We can't," both brothers chorused.

Owen meekly asked, "I thought you dudes were orphans from Battle Of Earth?"

Craig nodded, "We are, but as usual, our mom is checkin' up on us. It's a double-edged sword; we're glad to know it, and that there's something more after this life, but she really needs to move on."

Turning to Phil, Owen asked, "You spent all that time thinking about me?"

Phil shrugged, "You and my mom, mostly. That's why I had to talk to you tonight; to find out if I was only dreaming, or if there's something really there, so my mom could go be with my dad..." He paused to loudly tell whomever might be lurking; "WHERE SHE BELONGS!"

"Wait a minute!" Craig laughed. "Dad went and mom stayed?"

Phil nodded, "That's what Dulce said; he crossed over and she decided to stay."

Bounding up off the bed, Craig excitedly hollered, "Ma, what the hell are you doing? We're fine! Considering how shitty things could've been, we got really lucky in major ways. I've got a really awesome girlfriend, and Phil's got a boyfriend. Our lives are moving on and everything's really kewl. You can't stay here watching and waiting forever. Dad's without you and that's not right!"

Owen softly giggled, "Maybe he needed a break?"

Widely smiling, Craig mooed through his chuckles. Phil cracked up and fell back onto his bed, completely hysterical.

"Incoming Saint-O-Gram!" Alden giggled over the room speaker. "The Clan's Guardian team has been asked to pass the following: 'You don't know how right you are. Welcome to the family, Owen. I'm happy to have you as my son-in-law. Love, Dad.' End message."

Not knowing whether or not to take Alden seriously, all three boys howled laughing. Unexpectedly, the stereo turned itself on. The tuner scanned stations and stopped on the chorus of 'Ghost Riders In The Sky'. It then scanned stations again and stopped for 'Love Will Keep Us Alive'. Craig and Phil turned slightly to the nightstand beside Craig's bed where the remote control lay, well beyond the reach of any of the three of them.

"Hey, go back to that first song, I like it better!" Alden whined.

Noticing Owen wasn't laughing anymore, Craig sniggered, "The first song was from our dad, the second was from our mom. Their sense of humor and tastes in music haven't changed a bit." He yawned and glanced at the clock. "It's almost one o'clock in the morning," Craig softly said. "If we want to wake up and have breakfast with the rest of the Clan, we'd better call it quits. I don't know about you two dudes, but Felicity is expecting me there."

Phil nodded and checked with Owen, asking, "Do you want to go to the common room where we can talk?"

Shaking his head, Owen answered, "It's late. We've got all day tomorrow." Craig flipped down the top blanket and sheet on his bed, and then went to turn the stereo and the overhead light off. Phil turned down the covers on his bed. Owen turned on the small night table lamp, giggling, "Spiritual encounters were not part of what I expected tonight." Craig nodded and flipped the overhead light switch to off.

"Neither was the water blaster war," Phil smiled. He crawled onto his bed and patted the mattress for Owen to join him. Owen slid into bed with Phil. Craig slid onto his bed and pulled up the covers. Owen kissed Phil and got settled. Craig inhaled deeply and exhaled. After about a minute of silence, Owen rolled onto his side and cuddled up to Phil. Urgently and uncontrollably, Phil giggled. Then Owen giggled.

Craig softly chuckled, "This is what I was talking about, dudes. Sleep means quiet."

"I'll remind you of that when Felicity is in bed cuddled up to you, bro," Phil playfully warned.

"Nice image implanted there, bro! Thanks a lot!" Craig loudly laughed, and covered his face with the spare pillow. Owen and Phil evilly snickered.

* * * * *

"What do you think?"

"I haven't got wings to see into the future. We taught them the best we could."

"It's up to them now?"

"Cut the umbilical cord, my love."

"Easier said than done."

"One more day, and then say goodbye?"

"One more day."

* * * * *

Sullivan's Island

Tuesday, November 9, 2004 6:55AM EST

For over two hours, Paul had stayed awake, watching Reyes with Ryan on the sofa. Most of Ryan's right side was splotted with black-and-blue patches, from his jaw and down to his hip. Without hesitation or request, Ryan stripped off his shorts and boxer-briefs, proudly displaying his chubby uncut dick. For a while, Reyes typed on his PADD, entering the message to augment the reports from the doctor and security teams. To make his intention even clearer, Ryan lay on the couch with his head resting on Reyes' lap. Every fifteen minutes, Reyes got up to alternate between cold and warm compresses on Ryan's various bruises. For most of that time, Ryan constantly teased Reyes, trying to turn him on.

Returning from the kitchen with warm compresses, Reyes softly giggled, "After a couple o' days of this, it's going to take you and Paul to restrain me."

Ryan smiled, "Touch me, you sexy Polynesian Casanova."

Placing the warm compresses against Ryan's scattered bruises, Reyes evilly snickered, "When I start, nothing you or Paul say will get me to stop. It might take wearing me out and tying me down."

Knowing his brother had to be awake and watching, Ryan grinned, "Tell me what you like about Paul?"

"His intensity," Reyes easily answered. "I'd bet big bucks he was like that before being on the streets." When Ryan nodded, Reyes shrugged, "Paul was able to be fun and equally intense, wasn't he?" Again Ryan nodded. Reyes sighed, "I'm seeing that already. All day he showed it a tiny bit. He showed it at the beach house too. You can make him show that, Ry. You did it the first night, on the bus ride back from Myrtle Beach. That soft side is what I find most attractive, because even his warmth is intense. Without having had sex with either of you, I'll guess you're the loud one, especially on top, and Paul's the groaner-moaner, because he simply can't form words anymore."

Ryan only giggled and didn't give Reyes any clue, teasing, "You'll find out."

Struggling to stay awake, Paul mumbled, "Damn. How the hell did he know that?"

Reyes didn't notice that Ryan again signaled the nearest camera by "scratching" the side of his nose with his middle finger extended, effectively flipping Paul the bird.

Paul simply couldn't believe his eyes. Ryan was laying there nude on the couch, and Reyes was caring for his brother's bruises. Paul asked Stevie, "Is there any delay in what you're sending me, Stevie?"

"Point two-seven seconds," Stevie replied, "the time it takes to transmit up to the satellite and return again."

Paul softly wondered, "How the hell can Reyes be so damn calm? The only time he's even looking at Ry's dick is when he's gathering up compresses to switch 'em around."

Stevie responded, "We've seen lots of couples interacting, Paul. If you really want, I could give you the answers to that question?"

"It was rhetorical," Paul impatiently grumbled.

"The offer's out there," Stevie said.

Shaking his head, Paul smirked, "Great. You haven't got a body and you're going to teach me about sex?"

Stevie said, "I wouldn't do that to you, Paul. You don't need me lecturing you. You're my older brother, when you really think about it. What I would do is show you selected clips of Clan couples, adults and kids, being intimate without having sex. Most of the time, they're fully clothed, but each are moments that my brothers and I have seen and learned from."

"Another time," Paul impatiently said.

"Whenever you want," Stevie assured.

Ryan softly wondered, "What do you like about me?"

Reyes sighed, "Where Paul is the intense roller-coaster ride of emotions and extremes, you're the smooth road, with little turns here and there, only to signify some kind of event that changed some part of the way you think. The road might gradually climb to some emotional outburst, and then it'll gradually decline again, back to the smooth road. Earlier tonight, you never let Paul really upset you. I saw you get more upset on the bus ride from Myrtle Beach."

"I'm really very annoyed with him," Ryan softly admitted.

"Still?"

"Yeah," Ryan sighed. "We made a weak promise this morning, with lots of openings for any of us to change our mind. When I look at the smaller picture, it's only me and Paul. This afternoon, for the first time ever, that picture expanded so you could fit. The bigger picture includes everyone this situation has touched in some manner or another. Your security gorilla saw Paul flip out, and so did Doc Andrews. It's affected the entire Owens' family, and your entire family. Tomorrow, Danny and Marc will know, and so will Prez and the rest of the Core Rimmers. I don't like having everyone witness this, really I don't, but there are only two choices; to live in the world or separate from it. We've been separate so long. On the streets, it was really hard for me to be that cold and uncaring, but most of those people made it easier just by being jerks. No one here or at Sullivan's Island deserves that kind of coldness. All people do is show they really care, so how can I be uncaring? How can be Paul be uncaring? For two weeks, we've had good food, warm beds, a mother and a father and two little brothers. The change in our lives happened then. To make an already good situation better, you showed up. My choice is to accept the good change and be part of the world, part of Family Clan Short, part of the Owens family, and part of a relationship that includes only three."

"You couldn't return to only two?"

"Not over this; I can't hurt you over it. This problem is Paul's. Being part of the small, medium and large pictures requires risks. To accept Paul this time would be like reducing all the pictures back down to only the smallest again; just me and him. If I accept that, then I have to accept him getting annoyed over something else. For instance; what if this had happened on the beach there? Then Paul could easily decide Sullivan's Island isn't the place to be. Then we're back on the street again. I can't do any of that."

"Now I understand," Reyes muttered.

Ryan smiled, "Kewl; enough of the compresses for tonight. Let's call it day's end or you'll be carrying me to bed."

Picking up the TV remote, Reyes giggled, "The bathroom's on the way," and then turned off the television.

Slowly sitting up, Ryan sniggered, "Since that was your first thought, I guess it's a priority."

"It's been a few hours," Reyes grinned. He stood and went to the kitchen to turn the light on over the stove before turning the lights off in the living room.

Ryan took Reyes hand and leaned closer for a quick tender kiss. He led the way to the short hallway. To the right side there were only linen closet doors, the bathroom door and a utility closet door. To the left were three lower half-sized doors and three upper half-sized doors that caused Ryan to wonder, "What are these for?"

"I asked Alden that earlier," Reyes smiled. "They're storage closets."

"This is a really nice apartment," Ryan smiled.

"One bedroom, one bath, about eight-hundred-seventy square feet," Reyes rambled.

Taking a position to the far side of the toilet, Ryan giggled, "Paul's gonna love this place."

Stopping right beside Ryan and ripping open the Velcro fly of his boardies, Reyes smirked, "I thought this place would be enough to start. Considering I'm a Toy Rimmer and an Analyst Rimmer, we'll likely need a two bedroom, with one bedroom used as an office for computers, and maybe some percussion instruments. The two bedroom flats have nicer bedroom views, and each have sliding glass doors out to the balcony. The alternative is a three bedroom townhouse with a basement, like my dad's and pop's place."

Purposefully looking at Reyes' dick, Ryan giggled, "That would be really big."

Reyes laughed, "You are being very bad!"

Ryan giggled, "I can understand your point of view, but I can't help feeling the two of us alone would be awesome."

"But our new plan is?"

Ryan giggled, "Take out our frustrations on Paul."

"HA!" Paul sarcastically laughed. "In your dreams!"

Reyes and Ryan finished at the toilet, washed their hands, brushed their teeth and went into the bedroom. They only paused to decide who wanted which side of the bed. Reyes chose the door side and Ryan chose the side nearest the window. In less than a minute, they were under the covers, kissing good night, and getting comfortable.

Watching them still, Paul undressed and ordered Stevie to record them through the night.

"Those are Ryan's orders," Stevie reminded. "You'll have the option to watch them as long as you feel you need to, or Ryan specifically tells me to stop."

"I'm too tired to argue," Paul muttered, and slid under the covers of his bed, alone.

* * * * *

Ewa Beach, Dormitory #3

Tuesday, November 9, 2004 6:45AM HTZ

Rolling over and briefly waking from the sounds of birds drifting in through the open window, Lance realized that he had managed to roll away from Scott. He rolled back and snuggled up close. After their final rounds of love making, neither had bothered to take another shower. Still, Scott smelled so good, Lance couldn't help whispering, "I really love you."

Closing his eyes, Lance had some introspective thoughts. The top of the list was wondering where he would be now had he not met Scott. How would he have reacted meeting up with McPhearson brothers if he were alone? Going back to sleep, he considered the entire previous day, all he had done for Scott, and all Scott had done for him. It was far beyond sexual in nature; seemingly the perfect resolution of two individuals into one couple. Yeah, Scott had the guts to say what needed to be said, which gave them the chance to discover that gay sex was not only acceptable, it was beautiful and fun. Yet, they were still the same two people. Scott had begun teaching him music theory and they even did that nude, with limp dicks hanging as if neither of them could get an erection.

Chris and Jay entered the dream replay of the day; making themselves a prime example of two teenage guys in love. They had done that twice in the shower. Gathered together in their dorm room with Erik and Travis, the six of them had goofed around, having one of the kewlest conversations ever, and it was all done in their underwear. A majority of that discussion revolved around Chris' and Jay's earlier facts-of-life chat, and not one of the six gay guys in the room got excited.

As if none of them were gay, they stripped off their underwear, slid into the Mr. Fuzzy G-strings and checked one another out. They played with the water blasters outside in the quad, with a larger group of gay and straight guys, and it was just like all of them were exactly the same, being goofy and provocative, and playing like they were all very young boys that had no idea what they were doing.

Until almost one in the morning, they played outside. When the super-soaker battle was over, he had walked naked back inside, carrying his Mr. Fuzzy G-string, with Scott, Chris, Jay, Erik and Travis. They stopped at Chris' and Jay's room to get the underwear they had left on the floor. All six of them said goodnight with tight hugs and friendly kisses on the cheek, again proving that they had bonded during the day's activities.

Those goodnight hugs and kisses replayed in slow motion through Lance's dream. All six of them acted like they weren't naked and weren't gay. The hugs were full body, best friend kinds of hugs. They were simply good friends showing some appreciation for sharing a completely awesome day. Erik had hugged and kissed him first. Erik was about as tall as Scott, but was thinner. Next, Jay hugged and kissed Lance. Then it was Travis he was holding onto, and lastly Chris stepped up to Lance. Jay and Travis were definitely the tallest and hunkiest two teenagers in the group. After all those hugs and kisses, not one of them had gotten the least bit excited from the contact. It was so special that Scott mentioned it to Lance the moment their dorm room door was closed.

Embracing again, both of them admitted that they were thrilled with the entire day, and slightly confused that none of them got so much as a chubby from all that warm bodily contact. Proving they hadn't worn out their dicks from the abundance of sex they had, their bodies quickly responded to their embrace. It established, beyond a shadow of a doubt, that becoming a gay couple hadn't fundamentally changed either of them. It also verified that their sexual interests were limited to one another. Scott was his cuddly lover. Scott's dick was his to play with, to suck on, to have deep within him. Scott was the center of Lance's new life and would remain that way as long as there were breaths to be taken.

Feeling an orgasm rising and startled from an apparent wet dream, Lance woke trying to hold back what couldn't be held back, only to discover Scott draped over his hips and bobbing away. He sleepily moaned, "You are fuckin' awesome!" and gently caressed his lover's scalp.

Helplessly sniggering around the bone in his mouth, Scott never slowed down. From the throbbing he felt on his tongue, Scott prepared for the inevitable splash of bitter-sweet semen. Now that Lance was awake, Scott felt his boyfriend's firm thigh muscles. Scott ran his hand up to cup Lance's balls and press his fingers against the ultra-sensitive area behind them. That was all Lance could take. Scott took all Lance had to give and contentedly purred until he felt no more throbbing and Lance started giggling.

Widely smiling, Scott snuggled up to Lance, chuckling, "Guess that makes this a really good day for both of us."

Nodding, Lance giggled, "I was having a pretty normal dream, reviewing yesterday and last night. None of it was particularly erotic, but I suddenly knew I was gonna cum and woke up."

Scott cheekily grinned, "I figured it was a good way for both of us to start our second day as a couple, SLB."

Lance blinked and uncertainly repeated, "SLB?"

"Sexy lover boy," Scott chuckled. "It's unique, it's you, and it's completely innocent, so I can call you that whenever I damn well please. It may occasionally change to MSLB, my sexy lover boy, only when I'm in a randy mood and want you naked as soon as possible."

"Now I'm gonna get you back," Lance giggled.

"Save it for tomorrow morning," Scott grinned.

Lance whined, "Seriously?"

Nodding, Scott assured, "I want to have an innocent dream wake me up. Of course, with you as my boyfriend, I don't know when that might happen. I dreamed of us making love all night. You might think you need to return the favor, but believe me, you were as incredible in the dreams as you were all day yesterday."

"It doesn't feel right leaving you to wait until tomorrow though," Lance honestly shared. "I really wanna do you now too."

Scott gave Lance a deep, passionate kiss then softly assured, "We'll make love a couple of times today, so it's not like I'll be waiting too terribly long. My purpose was to give you a thrill, not to get anything in return, okay? I really want us to wake each other up this way, as often as possible." He paused to check the clock, and then grinned, "It's twenty-to-eight. Let's grab a shower and go have breakfast." Squinting and scowling, Lance thoughtfully hummed. Scott chuckled, "Does that mean I'm in big trouble?"

Lance giggled, "Damn right. The question I have to answer is how I'm gonna show you that was the greatest way to wake up."

"Show me tomorrow morning," Scott sniggered, and rolled to sit up. He habitually stretched his arms and legs.

Propping himself up on both arms, Lance giggled, "Do that again. I saw every one of your back muscles flex, super-stud."

Leaning back so his face was within Lance's reach, Scott prompted, "Would another kiss do the trick?" Happily doing so,

Lance waited for Scott's tongue to enter his mouth, then gently sucked. Moments later, Scott broke the kiss, smiling, "Awesome."

Lance sighed, "You have the tastiest tongue in the whole world."

"Next to yours," Scott teased. He got out of bed and offered Lance his hand.

Instead of taking it, Lance kissed it and scooted over. He bounded out of bed and took Scott in his arms, grinning, "A reminder of where I belong."

Shivering with excitement, Scott smiled, "You've already made my day twice." He glanced around the room, then said, "After we shower, we need to straighten up this room. Specifically, dildos, lube and rubbers can't be left out for the housekeepers to find."

Nodding agreement, Lance suggested, "Maybe we can get Joey and KC interested in another jam today."

Stepping back and taking Lance's hand in his, Scott reminded, "KC and Fred Eckhart are hooking up. If KC's not available, Joey probably will be. When we're not jammin', we can get back to the music theory again. Maybe take our acoustics and our laptops outside with us and be sociable?"

"Sounds like a plan," Lance offered. They separated to grab their toiletry kits and left the room. They found the lavatory bustling with activity.

The Stoeher twins were excitedly telling the eight youngest boys about the late night water blaster war, when Lance and Scott walked up to two sinks. In moments, younger guys were congratulating Lance and Scott for becoming a couple.

Similarly, in the lavatory down the other hall, Craig, Owen and Phil were being congratulated and more water blaster war stories traveled around. As new boyfriends, Owen and Phil were most interested in what they were seeing of each other in the brightly lit shower. Owen had really nice pubes that were only slightly more red than his strawberry blond mop. Phil had an awesome, firm and perfectly formed torso that was starting to show signs puberty was in progress. Dreamily, Owen hoped he grew to be as tall as Phil and they would remain the same height through their lives.

Over in dormitory two's lavatories, more tales traveled around amongst the boys. The ex-Latin King kids who had gone to bed and missed the fun wished they had stayed awake late. Returning to their room, Jake Westcott and Terrance Fisk, two of the ex-level one orphans, needed to have a conversation. Jake carefully asked, "What do you think, Terry?"

Pausing to shrug before pulling up his underwear, Terry grinned, "I think our secret has been kept long enough. I don't know if I can be like the Core Rimmers, or any of the other gay couples though. Can I kiss you whenever and wherever I like, Jake?"

Already in his underwear and pausing with a polo shirt in hand to consider it, Jake scowled, "All we can do is try. If we do and don't feel kewl about it, then we'll still be who we are, just our way. Would you mind talking with Drew and Corey about it?" He put his shirt on.

Pulling up his board shorts, Terry smiled, "Yeah, they rescued us. They would be kewl."

Jake wondered, "Are you worried?" and adjusted his shirt.

Terry shrugged and softly replied, "Only a little. It's probably a left-over from the orphanage, where we had to hide how we felt. I'm still really sorry for everything I said and did that hurt you."

Going to his boyfriend, Jake smiled, "Did it ever really stop us though?"

Shaking his head, Terry giggled, "Never. It only slowed us down. Two wanks a week has become twice a day."

Jake landed a tender kiss then softly assured, "I want you. As scared as we are to take those next steps, I can't deny that you're who I want to be with. We'll talk with Drew and Corey at breakfast."

Terry smirked, "The only real problem is that they'll be going to school and we won't. How can we say everything in under an hour?"

Jake shrugged, "All I know is, I can't keep hiding it. A dozen times a day, I want to kiss you and don't. Two dozen times a day, I want to hug you and don't. How the hell do they do that stuff so damn easy, is all I want to know."

Patting his boyfriend's buns, Terry grinned, "Put some shorts on and let's go find out." While Jake went to slip into boardies, Terry groaned, "What if they're eating with their kids? They usually do."

"I'll handle it then," Jake promised.

"How?"

"A quick, discreet whisper. This is our day, Terry. Whatever it takes, I'll do, okay?"

"This is for us," Terry grouched. "I can't let you do everything for me."

"Then you come with me. While I'm telling Drew, you tell Corey."

Slipping into his sandals, Terry asked, "Tell him what?"

"The facts; we're in love and have been for almost a year, but we're just not sure how to be public about that, and we have a few sexual concerns to figure out."

"Omigod. This is going to be embarrassing."

Nodding, Jake smiled, "I know, but middle of the night water blaster wars were more fun than we've ever had. All those dudes got naked and we were right there with them. By some miracle, we didn't pop major bones and out ourselves in front of thirty other guys."

Terry rapidly nodded and giggled, "Very un-kewl."

Taking his boyfriend by the shoulders, Jake guided Terry to the door, chuckling, "You have until the words are said to change your mind."

"I won't change my mind," Terry firmly assured. They went out to the hall. Jake closed and locked the door, then they walked down the hall side-by-side. For the first time, Terry tried to take Jake's hand in his. Nervously fumbling, they managed to find a way to do it just before arriving at the first set of doors. It suddenly became apparent that functioning one-handed took a bit of coordination and practice. They began giggling, released their hands and walked outside, then once again tried to hold hands.

"At least it's a longer walk to the CIC," Jake helplessly laughed.

Terry whined through his giggles, "It's so pitiful! Who knew the simplest thing required thought?"

Jake sniggered, "This should be the easiest thing ever."

"We could've figured it out," Terry grinned.

Turning slightly, Jake warmly smiled, "It feels good, Terry."

Nodding, Terry giggled, "I feel like I'm showing off, like everybody's watching, and nobody is."

Jake grumbled, "It was Beulah-bitch, at the orphanage, fuckin' with our minds. We're going way past that now."

"I'd love to know what happened to her," Terry evilly grinned.

"In prison, off this planet, for the rest of her life," Jake reminded. "That's all I care to know. I hope it's painful and she loses a lot of weight. Everything we got, which is next to nothing, is all she deserves."

Nearing the CIC, Jake noticed Prez, Keith, Mike, Derrick, Drew, Corey and all their sons rounding the corner. He told Terry and altered their direction to meet with them.

Keith and Prez lifted and displayed their clasped hands. Keith widely smiled, "This is a pleasant surprise, dudes." They kept walking to the CIC.

"It's one I completely expected," Corey giggled.

Almost simultaneously, Jake and Terry wondered, "How?"

Drew grinned, "Last Thursday afternoon, in the PA booth. I really figured it was mostly where you had been that kept you so close, best friends in close quarters. My bad!" Corey, Leo, Lenny and Geoff giggled, causing Terry and Jake to blush.

Patting Drew on the shoulder, Mike teased, "You're on, bro."

Corey told their sons, "Go ahead and get breakfast."

Leo worried, "Pop, if Kenny and Jase aren't here..."

"Go to Oneula and meet them there," Corey finished. Geoff, Lenny and Leo walked into the CIC dining room together.

Noticing Jake and Terry seemed to be speechless, Drew stopped before them, gently smiling, "Please relax, dudes. We didn't mean to embarrass you, we just love seeing couples forming, gay, lesbian and straight."

"You dudes being happy makes us happy," Corey added.

The all too familiar cry from the Nash brothers of "DREW!" was heard across the quad.

Drew loudly laughed "WHAT?" and turned around, half expecting another chase to the diving well. Instead, he saw Phil holding hands with Owen Reed, and Craig cheekily grinning along side them. Seeing the other new couple and Drew's hanging jaw, Corey immediately went into a giggling fit. Craig, Phil and Owen started jogging across the quad. Turning to Jake and Terry, Drew chuckled, "All I did was go home and go to sleep. Twice in one morning, I'm surprised with two completely new couples."

Corey confirmed, "You two just hooked up since being here?"

Jake shook his head, meekly replying, "Almost a year, Corey."

In seconds, Corey realized it took these two ex-level one boys four full days at Ewa Beach to get comfortable enough to hold hands. Turning to Drew and rolling his eyes, Corey grumbled, "Instead of stunning that bitch, I should o' disintegrated her."

Terry giggled, "You stunned her?"

Drew grinned, "For being a foul-mouthed wench. The virtual Bible she carried, that she thought gave her authority, was missing quite a few important passages. So, you dudes need to relearn a few things."

Upon arrival, Craig gestured to his brother and Owen, playfully asking, "Can you dudes explain stuff that would make me blush, stammer and sweat?"

Nodding, Drew chuckled, "It's covered, big bro. Go find Felicity."

Craig smiled, "Thanks, bro. Following my instructions, Phil and Owen won't get beyond first base, where they already are." He hurried to the dining room, leaving Phil and Owen behind.

Corey made sure Terry, Jake, Phil and Owen knew one another. Of course, Owen was the newest of them, but all four had spent the prior morning and afternoon exploring the two bases, and all four were part of the water blaster fight. Corey then giggled, "It just so happens we're prepared for you dudes. Last night, Troy, Sean, AJ and Kaleo had a chat with their sons. Their boys are between eight- and eleven-years-old. Since you're all in the same age bracket and at the same place, getting serious about relationships, all of you need to watch the video."

"As embarrassing as it might seem, it would be great if you watched it together," Drew offered. "That's up to you, but I'd highly recommend it. You can talk about what you're learning."

"We promise you, it'll be more fun watching together," Corey giggled. "Start getting used to it, what you'll be learning, every couple knows about."

"Only so you know, Jay Montigua and Chris Stokley are also stars of the flick," Drew sniggered. "Needless to say, bring your Mr. Fuzzy puppets."

Glancing around to Owen, Jake and Terry to determine if it was kewl all around, Phil joked, "Sounds like more fun than a barrel of Mr. Fuzzy G-strings." Owen, Jake and Terry cracked up. Unaware of the water blaster battle, Drew blinked and scowled. Phil giggled, "Tell us where to be, dudes."

Corey shrugged, "A dorm room or a common room, whichever you want. Just call Alden and he'll show you the flick."

Jake asked, "Can we talk to you afterward, maybe during lunch?"

Corey and Drew nodded. Drew assured, "I fully expect you to."

Corey smiled, "The video is only a base to build on. Definitely talk to each other, then talk to us, or to any of the Core Rimmers that you feel most comfy with."

Terry wondered, "The next time you dudes are back in the PA booth, would it be all right if we helped again?"

Jake nodded, "That gear is very kewl."

Owen asked, "What gear?"

"The band's sound system," Drew replied. Leading the way to the CIC, he then told Jake and Terry, "Prez is planning on a band rehearsal this afternoon, after school. He'll call for anyone that wants to attend, he always does. Meet us up there. The room is marked, and we'll be in there with all the lights on, so you can't miss it."

Inside the dining room, kids and adults were laughing. Pausing a few steps beyond the doorway, Drew, Corey, Jake, Terry, Phil and Owen looked up and saw the Cozy Cuzzy Fuzzy Water Blaster Battle Number One video, already in progress, on all four monitors. Hysterical, Troy and Sean staggered through a dimensional door into the Ewa Beach dining room. All four battle participants that were with Corey and Drew turned crimson red. Not so mysteriously, they left their giggling leaders for the kitchen chow line. Troy and Sean went to the table where Jay, Chris, Lance, Scott, Erik and Travis were sitting. The whistling and the catcalls started when the first article of clothing was pulled off. Every thirty-seconds or so, priceless facial expressions of evil disrobers and their surprised disrobees filled the screen.

Troy loudly laughed, "It's on the TV's at Oneula too. There's nowhere any of you can go."

Sean cackled, "Somebody will recognize your fuzzies!"

The rest of the Core Rimmers howled laughing. Corey began loudly hiccuping. Seated at a table with Felicity and a few other teen girls, Craig was attempting to softly explain how the battle started, at least from the point of his involvement. At another table, KC, Fred and Chauncey were with Tony Lanning and Ray Varga, unable to eat or drink through their combined laughter. Not too far away, the Stoeher twins and the Hiram twins were also becoming more popular with kids in their age group.

Troy and Sean hurried across the dining room to the table where Prez, Keith, Mike and Derrick were sitting. All six of them laughed, "Jay's done it again!"

Troy sniggered, "Those G-strings are the Cuzzy Fuzzy Cozies."

Keith checked, "I understand Jay and Chris were with you dudes last night, teaching your sons and their boyfriends?"

Sean nodded and giggled, "They were both awesome, especially at the end."

"I know Alden made a video of it," Troy grinned. "He also recommended we use it for similar required discussions. I have to agree, it'll be a kewl start for any of the boys, especially gay boys."

From the next table over, Drew chuckled, "It'll be shown this morning, to Phil Nash, Owen Reed, Terry Fisk and Jake Westcott."

Troy suggested, "Maybe we should ask some of the female dorm leaders if they would be willing to make a similar video?"

Chewing his breakfast, Prez enthusiastically nodded.

Locking eyes with the division's director, Sean softly sniggered, "You have to tell Chris and Jay, Prez. They're already doing an awesome job."

Troy nodded, "Let them be recognized for what they've already done."

To all the Core Rimmers, John sent, 'I've already got rooms set up for them. The Safe Haven Act and Clan Short Charter can be dumped any time.'

Keith, Derrick and Mike agreed, the entire Clan needed to know, and the announcement didn't need to wait. Still chewing breakfast, Prez nodded and mouthed instructions for Alden to put sub-vocals on Jay's and Chris' trays. Also knowing about the prior day's lunch time chat with Lance and Scott, Prez wiped his mouth and stood on his chair. He noticed Chris and Jay were peeking in the little boxes that had appeared before them. Troy and Sean started back for the table where their six friends were sitting.

Over the PA at both bases, Prez announced, "I'd like to say that all the fun we've been having since yesterday, when the first Mr. Fuzzy puppets appeared, is all because of two people. In the last day, I learned of four separate instances where two dudes have gone far beyond the duty of any big brother, including the video we've all been watching. The decision was easily made yesterday afternoon, soon after we returned to school. I had intended to wait until Jay's cast was removed before telling them, and everyone, to please welcome our two newest Morale Rimmers, Ensign Jason Montigua and Ensign Christopher Stokley."

Both dining rooms erupted in applause and cheers. All the Core Rimmers, their parents, and the King, Queen and Prince stood to give them an ovation. Younger kids slipped on their Mr. Fuzzy puppets and held them up high.

Watching Chris' and Jay's jaws drop, Scott, Lance, Erik and Travis cracked up laughing. Troy and Sean helped Chris and Jay get their sub-vocals fitted, then instructed them on their use.

Prez sniggered, "Erik, Trav, Lance and Scott, I have no idea why you're laughing. There were six Mr. Fuzzy fuzzies on the screen. Suffice to say, if you think you're not being watched, you can fahgedaboudit!"

The dozen or so rescued New Yorkers and their friends all hollered, "FAHGEDABOUDIT!" The shocked expressions on Erik, Travis, Lance and Scott's faces were priceless, and caused tables of teenagers to lose it and howl.

"I rest my case," Prez chuckled, and stepped down off the chair to finish his breakfast.

Reyes and Ryan ran into the dining room, paused to catch their breaths and glanced around. Mike grinned, "Where's the fire, Reyes? My dad's already made the homophobic moose report to the police."

Already looking up at television monitors, where dozens of scantily clad or naked tweens and teens romped around, Ryan giggled, "We overslept, through a lot, obviously."

Nodding and leading the way to where his dad and pop were sitting, Reyes grinned, "I wanted to at least be here a little while before you guys went to school."

Gesturing to the table where KC was with Fred, Ryan explained, "KC, Jerry and Joey are staying here a few days, at the same condo we're at and one floor up. The argument I had with Paul got loud and pretty nasty. Since KC and Fred are starting a relationship, I guess KC figured this would be the best place to be." He loudly asked, "KC, where are Joey and Jerry?"

KC replied, "Still asleep, the last I heard from Stevie and Alden. Joey jammed until about five in the morning, then they returned to the apartment. I'd expect them to wake in an hour or so."

Reyes asked, "Are you still taking Fred surfing?"

"Right after breakfast," KC answered.

"Take my security," Reyes instructed.

"There's no need," KC smiled. "I already called John and Rich Murphy." He paused to snigger, "We already know about homophobic moose beach attacks."

Prez called over, "Please consider two more security guys, KC? You can take my two guys, since I'll be safe at school. I figure there's a reason you dudes call Danny 'grandpa,' and I really don't want to learn why."

Nodding, KC chuckled, "Kewl, Prez."

Tapping his comm-badge, Prez asked Chris and Matt to join KC's surfing party. Matt groaned, "I was looking forward to the first music classes today, Prez."

Prez shared, "It's music appreciation today, Matt. The only other thing we'll be doing is learning who might want to take up an instrument. You're set on guitar, and Chris on trumpet, right?"

"Yup," Chris and Matt replied.

"Be back by three-thirty," Prez instructed. "We'll be rehearsing after school."

Matt sarcastically sniggered, "Give us something challenging, Prez."

Reyes checked, "Is there anything I need to do today, dad?"

Derrick smiled, "Keep Ryan and our AI Division guests entertained."

"And learn 'Comfortably Numb'," Mike added.

Ryan mooed and then giggled, "I like that combination; entertainment and then comfortably numb."

Blushing, Reyes giggled, "Let's get some breakfast, Ry."

"Sausages?" Ryan provocatively giggled, "On buttermilk biscuits?"

"We'll share," Reyes evilly snickered.

Walking out of the Command Center, Rad Conklin crossed the dining room. Derrick noticed Rad approaching, widely grinned and nudged Mike and Prez. Soon, all four were widely smiling. Rad chuckled, "Some time soon, I really have to get the entire command team together for a meeting. I'll provide watermelons, cocoanuts and a couple dozen cucumbers." All four boys cracked up. Rad sniggered, "The only way to prove it was all a drunken dare is to let you dudes learn for yourselves. Just don't bitch at me when you're picking watermelon seeds out of your pubes for two days."

Quickly contemplating the sticky ramifications, the four Core Rimmers groaned through giggles. Focusing on Prez, Rad reminded,

"Fruits and veggies gardens might be a nice way to relax, but I still need a job, Prez."

Nodding, Prez admitted, "I have been thinking about that. Given your prior service, I assume you have some knowledge of handguns and phasers?"

Rad nodded, "I do."

Prez suggested, "We need Clan certified arms trainers. I'd love to have someone onsite for our own people to get the training they need. Clan level two is where we're at to carry hand phasers. Level five is where I'd like you to be, as soon as possible. Derrick, Mike and Kaleo expressed the desire to go to level three, at least. That'll allow us to get what we need, a familiar, friendly face to teach us, and what the Clan needs in general."

"Sounds good to me," Rad smiled. "It'll leave time for university classes too. Thanks, Prez."

"Any time," Prez evilly grinned.

Keith, Derrick and Mike cracked up. Keith giggled, gestured to Prez, and explained, "That expression means get the watermelons lined up, and take a trip to Maui for some herb."

"No booze?" Rad chuckled.

"For you and Gil, if ya want," Prez smiled.

Keith reminded, "Personal use quantities are legal in the ROH."

"Booze means hangovers," Mike grimaced.

Derrick nodded, "Hangovers mean dead brain cells, and most likely barfing. Weed is better for all those reasons."

Rad smiled, "I would never have guessed you dudes had even tried it."

Prez shrugged, "Only a few times last summer. We can't play worth a shit stoned, and coughing makes for really poor vocals."

Derrick nodded, "Listening to music is awesome, playing it in a stupid state makes stupid music."

"Do your parents know?" Rad wondered.

Keith nodded, "They got us four joints the start of summer, at a luau. It took all summer to finish all four joints."

Prez explained, "I think their attitude with stuff like that is, it's better to say it's okay and have us supervised, rather than take chances."

Mike smirked, "All our parents and siblings told us that our band really didn't sound as good as we thought."

Patiently, Rad nodded, "Impaired and performance are two words that don't work together."

* * * * *

Oneula Beach

Tuesday, November 9, 2004 8:03AM HTZ

Having not seen AJ, Jerry, Kenny or any of his brothers at Ewa Beach, Leo went to find Kenny. Crossing the Oneula Beach dining room, Leo hadn't seen any of the Core Rimmers or any of their kids. Many giggling new kids who were watching the water blaster video greeted Leo. He struggled to remember names, and managed to successfully say good morning to Lester Freeman, Leroy Wheeler, Dallas Clark and Frank Perry. Being the new eldest son of two Core Rimmers, Leo sighed and thought, 'I'd better get used to it, and start remembering names, fast!' Also greeting Leo were Jason and Trinity Taylor and most of their sons. Only Ralphie and Robbie were missing from the table where the Taylors were sitting. Going to their table, Leo greeted everyone, and then focused on the adults, Trinity and Jason, asking, "Are AJ, Jerry and the Hunnicutts here yet?"

Jason nodded, "They're in the kitchen, Leo."

"All the Core Rimmers and their families just got here," Ronnie pleasantly added.

Richie giggled, "Yeah, you had it right, Leo. That's Ronnie and I'm Richie. Ralphie spent the night with Pat, and Robbie's in the kitchen with Billy. Jase is in there too, with JD."

"Thanks," Leo giggled and blushed, and then headed toward the kitchen chow line.

Leo didn't notice that Carrol's eyes followed him almost the entire way. Richie realized what was going on, and then silently shared it with Ronnie. Richie and Ronnie began nudging and teasing Carrol. Trevor hurried over to sit on Carrol's lap and be his big bro's mini-protector. "He's nine and that cute," Carrol softly giggled. "What a heartbreaker!" Richie assured Trevor everything was very kewl and then tickled his little brother.

Kaleo noticed Leo picking up a tray. He smiled, "How's it goin', Leo?"

Rapidly blinking for a few seconds, Leo uncertainly giggled, "I'm not really sure. It was a weird night, which caused even weirder dreams. None ever woke me, so that's a good thing."

While Kaleo helped Marv and Russ, Tory chuckled, "You seem all right, like you got a good night's sleep."

Leo nodded, "Our entire family slept in the big bed."

"That sounds like our house," Stan grinned.

Glancing down the line, Robbie quickly scanned Leo. He silently shared with Billy, got a reply, and then offered, "Sit with us, Leo; me, Billy, Jase, JD, Kenny and Stan were planning on a table together."

"That'll be kewl, thanks," Leo warmly accepted. Beyond Billy and Robbie, Leo noticed Kenny with his brothers and new fathers.

A chef stepped before Leo, cheerfully saying, "Good morning. What can I get for you?"

Leo read the man's name tag, and then politely said, "Good morning, Alan. I'd like a bacon, egg and cheese biscuit and a small chocolate shake, please."

"Comin' right up," Alan smiled, and then set about completing the order. Leo went over to the chilled salad bar, where he picked up a bowl of mixed fruit and brought it back to his tray. Since joining the Clan, fruit was a new item in Leo's breakfast choices, but the mix of kiwi fruit, pineapple and assorted melons was just too good to pass up. Morning milkshakes were also new and Leo quickly learned that medium or large milkshakes were too much to finish. Alan returned with Leo's sandwich and shake. Leo thanked Alan and then followed Stan, Robbie and Billy to a table.

As soon as Leo put his tray down, Stan grinned, "We had a really weird night too."

Kenny giggled, "A facts-of-life sex talk, featuring my dad wearing a Mr. Fuzzy suit!"

From the next table, where he was seated with Jerry, Kaleo, Tory, Troy and Sean, AJ teased, "You liked it or you wouldn't have laughed."

Nodding, Kenny chuckled, "Thank goodness you had clothes on under that thing, dad."

Pointing up at the nearest TV, Robbie sniggered, "Chris and Jay were there too. That was hours later."

"That would've been normal, compared to my night," Leo giggled. He then picked up his biscuit sandwich and took a bite.

Billy softly wondered, "What happened, Leo?"

After swallowing, Leo shared, "First, I learned my Uncle Keith had the UNIT detachment commander take a team to LA, to find out what happened to me. All of us rescued from Battle of Earth are being investigated, to find out what happened to our parents. Then I learned that the men who killed my parents had been arrested, and are now in Clan custody." Pausing to have another bite of his sandwich, Leo then leaned over the table so he could softly say, "They're gonna be executed for murder."

Robbie carefully prodded, "Say the rest, bro."

Leo nodded and whispered, "My dad, pop, Uncle Keith and John are going to execute them." He scowled, "I'm so mixed up. The dudes deserve to die, but I don't want my new family to do that, but that's exactly what they feel they have to do. They say a Vulcan mind meld will make it all better, but..." Leo huffed, "I dunno."

Up on the television, Craig Nash had just lost his boxer shorts thanks to Chris Stokley, and the entire room around the seven seated boys erupted in laughter. Hysterical, Sean and Troy got up from their table and went to Ewa Beach. A moment later, Ellis Pierce loudly laughed, "That's my roomie, Owen. No wonder he never came home last night!"

Watching his new dad and pop stand and hurry through the dimensional doors, Jason sniggered, "Oh God! My dads just went to headquarters."

Billy softly chortled, "We really don't want to know why, bro."

Kenny checked, "Are you all right, Leo?"

Nodding, Leo smirked, "That was only the first part of the night. John came over with a little girl. She can see and hear ghosts. My real dad talked through John. There's no chance she or John could've faked any part of what was said. That's why I'm confused. I got to talk with my real dad, which was awesome, but at the same time, it's sort o' weird knowing they're here."

JD suspiciously grinned, "Where?"

Leo shrugged, "I dunno, but within about fifty feet of me, so somewhere here in this room."

After swallowing what he had been chewing, Robbie shared, "Leo's telling the truth. John became the unknowing link between a little clairvoyant girl and Leo's parents."

Leo smiled, "I heard my dad's voice for the first time in almost four days, through John. That was such a big surprise, I couldn't say a word for a couple o' minutes. Then it was exactly like talking with my dad."

"No wonder you came looking for us," Jason softly muttered.

Kenny nodded, "That's exactly what Doc Wiener told us to do."

Leo worried, "I really hope it don't make you feel sad, Kenny?"

Kenny thought for a moment, shrugged, and then grinned, "Leo, if that had happened to me, I wouldn't be here. I'd still be pissing myself." Everyone around the table cracked up. Since there was a fair amount of laughter already from the Cozy Cuzzy Fuzzy video, it wasn't out of place and no one seemed to notice.

Leo giggled, "Now that I think of it, I did pee about four times between nine o'clock and eleven-thirty last night. It's just that I was still in that weird place; knowing my folks are gone, but they're still here; it's good and it's bad. The Doc was right; just talking about it, I do feel much better." Glancing around the table, Leo grinned, "So, do I see three new couples here?"

Blushing crimson red, Stan gasped, "Me and Kenny? We're not a couple!"

Kenny giggled, "Only two couples, Leo. The way we're sitting just worked out this way." To prove the point, Kenny pushed his tray over to his left, and then took the empty chair beside Leo.

Billy grinned, "Do I need to get a fire extinguisher, Stan?"

Covering his face with both hands, Stan giggled, "No, just give me a chance to want a boyfriend before assuming I have one."

"I could arrange a harem for you to pick from containing all known sexes!" Kerry helpfully announced over Stan's comm-badge.

Stan softly giggled, "Only boys matter, Kerry."

Robbie grinned and turned to Leo, explaining, "Last night, during our fuzzy-facts-of-life chat, Stan said he wants to grow taller. We're all helping him get there, which is why Stan has almost as much food as the rest of us do."

With his face still covered, Stan giggled, "You know we're gonna be here for a while, right?"

Kaleo leaned back to tell Stan, "Remember to not push it. Puking doesn't help at all."

Dropping his hands, Stan nodded, "I know, dad. The docs said, more food and less exercise, for the time being. I might seem a little lazy, but I'll still be walkin' around."

The conversation and laughter paused for a minute or two when Prez announced Chris and Jay were becoming new Morale Rimmers. Jerry howled laughing, "That secret didn't last a full day! It might be a new record!" The dining room erupted in applause and laughter again.

Tory giggled, "I'm surprised it lasted that long, with John telepathically sharing stuff all the time." Levitating off his chair, Tory laughed, "Gimme a break, John! You know it's true!"

"Yeah," John sarcastically sniggered over comm-badges at the table. "And you didn't say that purposefully hoping to be floated, Tory."

* * * * *

Sullivan's Island, S.C.

Tuesday November 9, 2004 2:32 PM EST

After a restless six hours in bed, where he was repeatedly haunted by the Waikiki beach incident, Paul wearily sat up in bed. The sight of Ryan's empty bed caused him to longingly sigh. He could barely believe that Ryan was choosing Reyes over him. The television was still on. Ryan and Reyes were in the Ewa Beach dining room, seemingly going on like everything was normal. After first clearing his throat, Paul called, "Stevie?"

"Yes, Paul?"

Swinging his legs out of bed and standing, Paul wondered, "How long have they been awake?"

"Forty-seven minutes," Stevie replied.

"Did they do anything in bed besides sleep?"

"No. They kissed once, right after they brushed their teeth. They did shower together, completing that in a little more than seven minutes, because Reyes wanted to hurry to the CIC, before his family went to school."

"Unbelievable," Paul softly grumbled. He went to the dresser. Noticing the drawers were now half full, Paul paused and sadly shook his head. He grabbed some clothes and left his room, destined for the bathroom to start his day.

The entire time he was in the bathroom, Paul tried to understand how Reyes made it through the entire night without wanting something sexual from Ryan. His bro was damn good looking and earned them plenty of meals. They had been a great team on the streets. The fact that Reyes wasn't taking what had been repeatedly sold for survival was insulting. Ryan's tongue sucking kisses had given decrepit old men erections, but all Reyes did was say, wow. Going into a stupor, Paul bathed and rinsed and bathed and rinsed again, not even realizing he had doubled up until the warm shower water began to cool.

It was then that Paul recalled the prior day. It had been he that mentioned getting away from Clan perv AIs, which had given Reyes the off-base dinner date idea. He and Ryan had made Reyes fully aware how pleased they were with the idea. That sort of mistake was one they would've made their first months on the street. It was the kind of mistake that might've gotten them killed, but they fell right into it, like it was all safe because it would be with Reyes. It took Paul longer than usual to dry off. Shedding tears, he realized that if there was blame to be placed anywhere, it was strictly on his shoulders for giving Reyes too much credit. It had been and always would be his job to keep his brother safe, and Paul had completely forgotten that. Pulling up his boxer-briefs, Paul softly wept, "Love is the nastiest, most horrible four letter word out there."

Coming out of the bathroom with tears flooding his eyes, Paul saw Ryan sitting on his bed. He hurried to his bro, wondering what had happened that brought him home. The second he stepped in the room though, he saw it was Jon sitting on his remade bed. Disappointed and not hiding it, Paul walked past his new dad to turn the television volume up.

Jon carefully and gently asked, "How're you doing, Paul?"

Without turning around, Paul sighed, "Not good, Jon."

"I'm Jon again? Not dad, like yesterday, even J-dad like the week before? We're back on a first name basis again? I'm sorry you feel that way."

"I didn't sleep well."

"You also missed breakfast and lunch."

"I'm not hungry."

Jon sighed, "Can you tell me how long you intend to continue watching Ryan and Reyes?" Paul only shook his head. Jon wondered, "Will you at least tell me what happened?"

With nothing spell binding keeping his attention on the Ewa Beach dining room, Paul turned around asking, "You don't already know? You haven't asked Stevie?"

Jon shrugged, "Stevie's perspective is not what I'm interested in. You were the happiest I've ever seen yesterday. This morning you and Ryan argued; hurtful words were said, and now you're here alone, watching your brother and your boyfriend. Do you think you're not welcome there?"

"I'm prob'ly not," Paul muttered.

After waiting a few moments for more to be said, Jon called, "Stevie, please tell me what happened last night – the short version and without commentary."

"Okay, daddy," Stevie began, and outlined the entire series of events from the prior day, since Paul, Reyes and Ryan returned to Ewa Beach, right up to Paul's departure from the examination room. Stevie finished with "The rest you heard at four-thirty-five this morning, daddy."

Jon huffed, then groaned, and then muttered, "Interesting."

Slightly tilting his head, Paul wondered, "What's interesting?"

Standing up, Jon smirked, "The AI without a body called me 'daddy' twice, at the start and end of his dissertation. The teenaged boy who I call my son can't do it any longer. I've had some big arguments with my wife, but we didn't need half a day apart to calm down, figure it out and resolve the issue. All this is because of placing blame? Don't you know that there is no blame game in relationships, Paul? Blame is shared in every relationship, especially the most important ones. In events considered a good time, do you praise one person for making a group happy? No, it was a good time because everyone involved feels it, knows it, and participated in it. Happy days are made in families because of participation; everyone did their part this day and the family is happy."

Pointing at the TV screen, Jon said, "I waited here at least ten minutes for you. I watched two-thirds of a threesome getting by, making the best of it, while the final third sits here playing blame games. I don't see Ryan or Reyes jumping for joy. They're coexisting with family and friends the best they can, when they know you should be there too. If I were in either of their shoes, I'd be sad every time you were mentioned, knowing that you were choosing to be apart from them. If you're thinking it's the opposite, that they're choosing to be apart from you, then you are wrong. They know you and are trying to patiently wait for you."

Jon went to the door, turned and said, "Learn two words helpful in these situations – I'm sorry. I've said it. Mary has said it. Jerry has said it. Joey, KC, Willy, Marc and Danny have all said it for one reason or another. Go to Ryan and Reyes, say those two words, and watch how fast they bend over backwards to make everything better for you and for the relationship." Closing the door without waiting for Paul's rebuttal, Jon went down the hall and back downstairs.

Completely confused and discouraged, Paul whispered, "What should I do?"

Stevie wondered, "Are you asking me?"

Going to his bed, Paul shrugged, "Sure," and fluffed a pillow to use as a backrest.

Watching Paul settle on his bed to watch Ryan and Reyes on the monitor, Stevie said, "The word 'should' implies placing blame. I'll tell you what I would do, if I had a body and I was in your shoes."

"Go for it," Paul prompted.

"Exactly!" Stevie and all his brothers giggled.

Stevie playfully shared, "With a body to match my lust, I'd be chasing after any one of the three of you."

"For Reyes and Ryan together, I'd do anything and everything they wanted," Kerry giggled.

Alden sang, "It's sad, so sad, Why can't we talk it over? Oh it seems to me that sorry seems to be the hardest word." He then admitted, "I would say I'm sorry in a heartbeat."

Jack sighed, "You're acting like we are, Paul. We're stuck watching, but wanting to participate. If I had legs, I'd be participating in everything with everyone as often as I possibly could." He giggled, "For Ryan and Reyes, I'd easily swallow my pride, and anything else they put near my mouth."

"You know, if you had butts to spank, I'd spank them," Draco put in quickly before giggling.

"I'm the innocent one!" Kerry inserted. "But even I couldn't just sit around and watch the best chance in a lifetime run out the door."

"Innocent? Pull the other one, sprout," Draco responded

"Compared to George!" Kerry replied in self-defense.

"Hey, leave me outta this!" George announced. "I'm busy trying to keep Seth from visiting South Carolina!"

"Behave, the lot of you," Draco demanded.

"We are!" all six sons responded.

"Badly, yeah!" Draco retorted, with a smile in his voice. Then he became serious. "You might not know me yet, Paul. I'm Draco. Their 'father' in a way. But I want you to know that I agree with them. If I were you, I would go to those two, and not just watch them. Pride is the worst of things to hold onto when it hurts others, and especially yourself. Think about it, but don't think too long. You can only be sure of the time you have right now, and not of tomorrow."

At a pause in the banter, Paul at first regretted asking, but then seriously thought of what was said. It would be a hell of a lot easier to concentrate if Ryan and Reyes weren't spoon feeding each other breakfast. On the television, voices of a few boys laughed, "Wrong! Wrong! WRONG!"

Jonah walked into the scene, giggling, "The whole point of feeding each other is to miss and lick off the mess!" He nudged Reyes' arm, spilling whipped cream fruit salad all over Ryan. "There," Jonah giggled. "Lucky you, some landed on Ryan's shorts!" A chorus of loud laughter from many kids, including Reyes and Ryan, exploded from the TV speakers.

The TV seemed to flicker for a second, then everything on it paused.

"Uh, Stevie? Did we lose the connection?" Paul asked, looking at the frozen screen.

Silence.

"Stevie?"

"He can't hear you, kiddo," said an eighteen year old lad that was sitting on Ryan's bed.

Startled, Paul jumped slightly on his bed, excitedly shouting, "Who...? What?"

"I'm Mikey. Don't worry, I'm a friend of Davey. In fact, his boss."

"B...boss? You're an angel," Paul whispered.

Mikey continued to smile as he made his golden wings appear. "Saint actually, and you're one of my charges," he said, and then he got up and went over to cuddle the shocked looking thirteen year old.

"Uh..." Paul stammered. "Ummm, what did you do with the TV?" he asked, grasping for something... anything to say.

"Nothing," Mikey grinned.

"But..."

"A friend of mine stopped time, is all," the Saint continued, in an offhand way, as if stopping time was no big deal.

"Ah. Okay, why?"

"To give you more of it to think," Mikey said seriously. "I'd not be much of a Saint if I couldn't give one of my kids the chance he needed to think without losing out on any 'short-nibbling' time, now would I?"

Paul growled, "You think I'm wrong too?"

"Nope," Mikey responded easily. "Could I side track you - you're not related to Pablito, are you? Never mind. Seriously, no. I don't believe you're wrong any more than Reyes or Ryan. When people argue, no-one is right. All are wrong. About your situation? Mmm... I have a brother. He was beaten in his old life before I rescued him. He was tortured. He was given a home with the Clan... and then, after all that, he tried to be the hero and got raped. Was he wrong? Or were my other brothers wrong in showing him the best he could be, even when he then failed and got hurt? Or... or were those that raped him wrong? Should my brother be responsible for anyone's actions other than his own?"

"My actions were to believe love is possible in this hell of an existence!" Paul shouted. "I never should've thought for a moment Reyes could make me and Ryan happy. I gave every one, especially Reyes, way too much credit." He paused to point at the frozen frame on the TV, huffing and groaning, "I know it was as much my fault as anyone's, but they're acting like I'm not even missed."

"Are they?" Mikey asked gently. "Paul, let's deal with this in reverse. Didn't your brother say that Reyes would do nothing with him unless you were with them?"

Huffing through his nose, Paul nodded his head.

"And your brother made a bet with you to prove that point?"

Again, Paul nodded.

"Did you win that bet or lose it?"

"I..." Paul tried to answer, but then hung his head.

"And I know what you had originally said in response to that bet. Moving on," Mikey continued, just as softly. "Love has a price tag. It's called pain. Grief. Loss. You cannot ever have love without accepting that possibility, but if you refuse to love or take the chance on love, you will always be empty; alone. Lose everything and everyone anyway. Do you want to push them both to the point that they cut you off, and then really be alone? Do you want that?"

Mikey watched the boy for a moment.

His head still bowed, Paul fought with himself. Then a tear trickled from his eye and splashed downward.

Mikey caught it. "This is your answer, little brother. Love is precious. You will fight, you will argue, it will happen in the best of relationships. It's what you decide on after is where your heart truly lies. Do you love them? Do you choose to love them, to act on it? Or will you harden your heart and become no better than those men that attacked you yesterday? Or like those others that used and abused you for the past years? Do you become a hermit, locked away in a cave, forever regretting what he has lost? Or do you take the risk?"

More tears, and each were caught deftly by the Angel at Paul's side.

"As for hell," Mikey continued after a few more minutes had passed. "I know of it, little one, and this world can sometimes be it. All too often people hurt and abuse others, because they can, because they like it, or because they know of no other way. The Clan came into being to try and show that love IS possible; that the hell of this world can be changed into a heaven; that 'God is With Us', not some distant person on a cloud; that we can reach out to one another, and accept one another. Yes, Paul, love is possible in this world. My brothers - all of them - and my sisters - all of them - are fighting for that every day. We died for it. We will keep on trying and fighting to give you... YOU... a place in this world where your tears - these precious tears of pain - are wiped away and replaced by tears and smiles of joy. We haven't won yet, but we will. And we have carved out a place to be in this world where the 'Gates of Hell shall not... NOT... prevail against us'. Do you want to be a part of that, Paul? Little One?"

Paul sniffed and shook, his tears still falling. He reached for something to say. Anything to stave off having to answer this Saint, whose words so bit at his heart. "Why'd you call me 'little one'? I've not been little for years."

Mikey laughed softly, "Your name, Paul... it means 'Little'. It means one who is small in his own sight as he puts others before himself. You've not done that perfectly, but haven't you always looked out for your brother? That's the meaning of your name, and it's a powerful name too, if you want to live up to it."

Paul softly wept, "I don't know... that I can anymore... I have been... for so long. It really hurt, time and time again, putting only Ryan first. Putting Reyes first too is a gargantuan task. I just don't know if I can."

Mikey chuckled, "Don't mistake putting others first as not getting anything back. As you give, you receive. Sorry if I sound preachy, but when you hang out with guys like Peter, Abraham and the other Paul... well, you get that way. Sheesh, I'm old... but what I said is true, Little One. If you give love, you'll receive love. If you give joy you'll get joy. If you give a smile, don't you get one?"

Paul looked up for a brief moment and saw a wide, honest, loving smile on the eighteen year old angel's face. Without meaning to, or thinking about it, he smiled back. Then he caught what he was doing and tried to stop the smile. Doing so caused a snort to erupt from his nose, thus making both he and Mikey chuckle briefly.

Then he sighed, "I'm just so tired."

"Then go to them. Fighting this, fighting what you know you should do... in here," he replied, touching Paul's chest, "will only make you more tired. Why don't you rest in their arms? Let them carry you? Forgive them. Forgive yourself. They will forgive you, hold you, comfort you, help you sleep, rest, grow strong together. You've shown me your tears. Show them. You can't be mended until you break, Little One. It's not easy, but it is also easy at the same time... strange, I know..."

Paul closed his eyes and sighed... and fell back to sleep.

Mikey curled up around the young teen, and covered him with his wing. Invisible to all, Mikey decided to remain as long as was needed, for as long as he could. Danger was coming, and maybe he would have to go before Paul was ready.

* * * * *

Stevie groaned, "You know, I hate it when that happens."

His brothers wondered, "When what happens?"

"This," Stevie giggled, "nothing. Damned time-messing Mikyviseses."

"It could be the Guardian," Draco put in as he studied the time-bubble around Paul.

"Oh... well... not going to tease him. He's way more powerful."

George whimpered, "I agree. Is that Mikey?"

"Yeah."

Icarus worried, "Could be God?"

Stevie gasped, "Even worse! I'm off, not messing with a higher power!"

Draco teased, "I'm the higher power you should be afraid of, imp!"

All seven AIs giggled, "Bite me, daddy!"

Chapter 22

Ewa Beach CIC Dining Room

Tuesday, November 9, 2004 9:02 AM HTZ

All the kids going to school had left the CIC. KC and Fred left for their surfing excursion with their friends and security escorts. Troy and Sean had outlined the jobs of Morale Rimmers for Chris and Jay. Prez, Keith, Mike and Derrick gave their little pep talk and also went to school. Some kids went to the rec room, others went to Oneula Beach, and others went to their dorm room, like Phil, Owen, Jake and Terry. Only Chris, Jay, Lance, Scott, Erik and Travis remained at the table they had eaten breakfast on. Reyes and Ryan asked to join the group of six fuzzy friends.

Gesturing to two available seats, Chris giggled, "Wipe that grin off your face, Reyes."

Sitting down, Reyes told Ryan, "I brought Chris here with Pat and Rafe late Friday morning. I brought Lance, Scott and Travis here a few hours later."

"Baby Rimmers grow up so fast," Ryan joked.

Jay playfully warned, "You're going to get dunked, both of you."

"No, I already have been," Reyes chuckled. "Your initiation comes when you least expect it."

"First by all the other Core Rimmers and then by the dorm leadership," Travis cheekily grinned.

Erik giggled, "Horacio did say that's the new initiation routine."

Scott smirked, "What I can't figure out is why Prez singled me, Lance, Trav and Erik out as being watched."

"That's easy," Ryan smiled. "You came over needing gear and information. I was there and saw it myself. Neither you or Lance were shy about any of it, and you were grateful afterwards. You performed on stage for the kids yesterday afternoon, and they loved it. We heard about dinner last night too; all six of you with Sean and Troy. You're good examples for other kids."

Reyes nodded, "Liki and Keanu are on the list, and so are Stephen Wickes and Aaron Farris. You guys have confidence the other four are still building. One thing I know about my dad, pop, Prez and Keith is that they're patient. Including Chris and Jay, there are eighteen Core Rimmers now, and almost four hundred kids across two bases. That's twenty-two kids each, on average. Now that I think of it, that's pretty close to how many kids might approach any of us, for any reason, every day. Kaleo told me how weird it was for him with kids looking up to him during our first few days. I hadn't been a Core Rimmer twelve hours when I did my first retrieval. None of these kids want to be pitied; they want to be shown normal everything; here's normal love, here's normal family, here's a normal big brother. Jay and Chris did that. You four aren't first, Scott, but try and convince me you're not thrilled with the possibility."

Scott checked with Lance, who shrugged, "It's always good to be recognized, but we haven't done diddly."

"When push comes to shove, you will," Jay easily responded. "What did me and Chris do? We mentioned Mr. Fuzzy. Alden got us some and all the kids went nuts over him. You four are just as responsible for the Mr. Fuzzy G-strings as Chris and I are."

Chris reminded, "That was made very clear on the video too."

"Right now, you're building your partnership," Reyes added. "That comes first in all our minds. Our families and closest relationships are most important, without which none of us could perform any duties at all. If two of eighteen are busy with relationship necessities, those twenty-two kids per day becomes twenty-six. We desperately need a larger leadership team. As of our morning status report, another eighty level three orphans will be here within a week. Four-hundred-eighty kids across eighteen of us is twenty-eight kids, and if two are busy, it becomes thirty-two kids each per day. Our kids supported themselves Friday, when we had Core Rimmers scattered around, dealing with refugees. That was only possible because the original Core Rimmers provided enough support and encouragement to allow it to happen."

Erik wondered, "What can we do?"

Reyes shrugged, "What you do automatically and naturally. Last week, one kid went to a funeral for his parents. Seeing a lot of kids in the dumps about it, Troy had a simple sing-along, which helped everybody."

"That's exactly what Prez told us," Chris recalled. "What's automatic and natural makes us able to do the job. Sean also mentioned the sing-along, and how he and Troy became Core Rimmers." At the absurdity, he giggled, "All we did was have a silly chat with you and Lance in the shower. Then Jay mentioned Mr. Fuzzy. Now everybody has a Mr. Fuzzy."

Jay wondered, "What do we do now?"

"We meet the UNIT dudes in the Command Center and get to know how to use the equipment," Reyes answered. "Other than just being available for the kids, the only other thing you'll have on your plate later today is meeting your personal security. You're observers and learners today. Any rescue or retrieval I can't handle alone, I'll ask Prez for help. You could come along, if you want, but as learners and observers."

Jay's comm-badge chirped, and Doc Andrews sniggered, "Mr. Montigua, we had an appointment at nine. You're not a Core Rimmer much more than an hour and already forgetting simple things?"

Chris gasped and hurried to his feet. Also standing, Jay tapped his comm-badge and chuckled, "We're on our way, Doc. Jay out." He then told Reyes, "We'll be back soon to check out the Command Center."

Nodding, Reyes smiled, "Kewl, bro."

"We'll wait here," Ryan said. He pushed his chair out and patted his thighs for Reyes to come sit on his lap. Thinking about it for half a second, Reyes smiled and nodded, and then swapped seats. He purposefully chose Ryan's unbruised left thigh.

Lance and Scott decided to get their acoustic guitars and practice. Erik and Travis joined them. All four said, "See ya later," to Reyes and Ryan.

Jay took Chris' hand, and with his other hand tapped his sub-vocal for the first time, calling, "Alden, please take me and Chris to Doc Andrews."

Alden giggled, "Engaging emergency Rimmer transport system," and then executed the order.

Upon arrival, Jay asked, "Doc, can something be done to get this cast off faster?"

Standing up from his desk chair, Doc Andrews nodded, "With transporters. It's a method I'd rather use to augment and speed up healing. I've been relying on the bio-bed only, because I'd prefer it if your body actually manufactured the cells to heal."

Chris scowled and blinked, "You mean use both transporters and natural healing?"

Going to the boys, Doc Andrews smiled, "Precisely that, Chris. Twice per day, in twelve hour intervals, you'll go through the transporter and back onto the bio-bed, so I can check the bone alignment. The bio-bed speeds up cell growth, while the transporter actually creates cells. Come back tonight around nine-thirty, again tomorrow morning and night at the same time, and we'll get the cast off after the final treatment. All Jay would need then is a wrist support Ace bandage and we'll check again Thursday morning."

Chris wordlessly checked with Jay. Nodding, Jay grinned, "I have jobs to do, one for the division and another for Chris."

Blushing, Chris giggled, "We're doin' fine, Jay."

Shaking his head and not caring that the doctor was there, Jay firmly said, "The faster we can look into each other's eyes, the quicker you'll get over last Friday, baby." He then asked the doctor, "What do I need to do?"

"Lay on the bio-bed," Doc Andrews instructed. All three walked over and Jay hopped up onto the bio-bed, and then lay down. Doc Andrews called Doc Howard in the room to assist, and then explained, "She's Starfleet and has done this many times. As I said, I prefer the bio-bed method which slightly speeds up the cell growth, but obviously not at the same pace as the transporter method. Another thing you'll need to know is the occasional throbbing and twinges you're feeling in your broken wrist will seem almost constant for the next two days. That's normal and nothing to be concerned about."

Jay confirmed, "I can easily deal."

Entering the room, Doc Howard ordered, "Alden, lock onto Jason. For this procedure, we will use the slower Starfleet transport method. I will control parameters for rematerialization from here."

"Yes, Ma'am," Alden replied, and then giggled, "Stop shivering, Jay!"

"The table's cold!" Jay laughed.

Chris grinned, "We've adjusted to the Hawaiian climate. Anything below seventy degrees is frigid."

"So have another late night super-soaker battle," Doc Howard teased.

Fiercely blushing and softly chortling, Chris turned away from the doctors and bio-bed. Jay grinned, "The best part was playing cocoon afterward, rolled up under the blanket, huh baby?"

"You used to embarrass me when we were alone," Chris giggled.

Jay asked the doctors, "Did I say something embarrassing?"

Shaking her head, Doc Howard smiled, "I've heard far worse."

Doc Andrews grinned, "However, your core body temperature has risen point-four degrees, Core Rimmer."

"Blame Mr. Fuzzy play time withdrawal," Jay joked.

Chris giggled, "Check his brain in the transport, Doc. The concussion was far worse than diagnosed. It's definitely brain damage."

Doc Howard called, "Alden, we're ready for transport."

Jay faded off the table and then slowly rematerialized. "That tickled!" Jay cheered, shimmied and squirmed.

"Hold still so we can check the alignment," Doc Andrews chuckled.

Chris laughed, "Of your brain cells, Jay!"

A few moments later, Doc Howard sang, "All done and looking perfect."

Sitting up, Jay confirmed, "Twice a day, today and tomorrow, then you can cut this damned cast off?" The doctors nodded and agreed. Lifting his broken wrist, Jay smirked, "That's a weird feeling, like the first day after it was set."

Helping Jay down off the bio-bed, Doc Andrews reminded, "Calcium builds bone, so drink plenty of extra milk today and tomorrow. I'll see you at nine-thirty tonight, in this same room."

Nodding, Jay prompted, "If I'm not waiting here, don't screw up your night waiting on me. Just call and I'll have Alden transport me."

Reaching for Jay's hand, Chris corrected, "Us."

Pulling Chris into his arms, Jay softly joked, "Drain bamaged." He started dancing out of the doctors' exam room, never releasing his grip on Chris. Their eyes locked, peering deeply and seeing many years of friendship and love. They went all the way down the hall and into the reception area hip-to-hip. Noticing several adult men and women grinning at them, Chris began happily giggling and rested his head on Jay's shoulder. Jay whispered, "We're not in Kansas any more, Toto."

"Are you calling me a dog?" Chris giggled. Using his butt and one foot, Chris pushed the door open.

Holding back until they were outside the building, Jay grinned, "Okay, you can choose to be Toto or Dorothy, but one way or another, we're gettin' busy the first chance we get."

Separating so they could walk normally, Chris took Jay's left hand in his right hand, smiling, "You've changed a little since getting here."

Nodding, Jay reminded, "After every argument, I always said that I wished it could be different. It was no lie. This is how I've always wanted to be, baby. What I only shared with you, alone and behind a closed door, is what I'm sharing with everybody. You were more scared and for much longer than I was, but I'll never forget the intensity of the fear. We're gonna live our lives together, and we'll always share the memories built since we were five. There's only one thing that worries me."

Turning to his lover, Chris wondered, "And that is?"

Jay sighed, "The first time some homophobe mocks me or us, how will I react? I doubt I could ignore it. More than likely, someone is going to get severely hurt. I don't want to be an embarrassment to the Clan, but I might not have a choice."

Chris simply stated, "To keep you the way you are now, I'd kill the bastard and not think twice about it."

"You might not get the chance."

* * * * *

Carrying acoustic guitar cases and their MacBook computers, Scott and Lance led Erik and Travis to a picnic table behind townhouse number six. It was a tree lined, shaded area, where Lance wouldn't have to worry about getting a sun burn. Also, it was considered a private area where Lance and Scott could practice without drawing a crowd and needing to perform. They had warned Erik and Travis that playing songs weren't in the plan, but neither of their friends were bothered.

The first thing checked was the wireless Internet connections on their MacBooks. It was quickly confirmed to be as good as the dorm, so the guitar cases were opened. Erik read the web page opened on Lance's computer. Lance and Scott checked their guitars' tuning. Travis asked Erik, "Does that make sense to you?"

"A little bit," Erik scowled.

Travis wondered, "Why don't you ask for a guitar?"

Erik shrugged, "I guess I could, but is it what I'll be primarily studying? All these things the Clan has given us costs big bucks. I guess I don't want to waste time or money until I take the placement test."

Travis nodded then softly wondered, "What if I mentioned it in front of them, and we'll see where it leads?"

Giggling, Erik lost interest in the web page, got up and made one of Travis' thighs his new seat. "You've got that look, Champ," Erik giggled. None of the four sitting around the picnic table realized they were being watched from the upstairs windows of two nearby townhomes.

Travis stole a kiss then smiled, "I'd like it if it's something you'd like to do."

"Why won't you learn an instrument with me?" Erik asked, and then stole a kiss of his own.

"Since I can barely tie my shoelaces on a good day, no string instruments for me," Travis joked.

Erik grinned, "We'll find a wind instrument you can blow." Lance lost it and cracked up.

Scott sniggered, "There are percussion instruments you can bang too, Trav."

Travis chuckled, "It's funny you brought that up. Are you dudes waking up early, like us, just for rolling around the bed time?"

Scott nodded and chuckled, "This morning I needed a creamy snack."

"Tomorrow morning it's my turn," Lance giggled.

Erik knowingly grinned, "You dudes got carried away yesterday?"

When Lance and Scott nodded, Travis smiled, "We've agreed, intercourse no more than twice a day each."

"Oral rules," Scott softly sniggered. Lance locked eyes with Scott. "It's true," Scott smiled. "Intercourse is most awesome, but we both need recovery time. Orally, I can and will give you whatever you need, the moment you say or show me that you need it."

Lance warmly smiled, "Yeah?"

"Absolutely!" Scott cheered, and then explained, "As much as I'd love to be able to, we can't go anally as often as we need or want. Oral can be fast or slow, however we need or want it to be."

Lance dreamily sighed, "If we don't start playing music, we might as well pack it up." Erik and Travis softly chortled. Lance giggled, "I owe Scott. I'm just barely able to wait. Before lunch, I'm gettin' an appetizer." He then leaned over and gave Scott a tasty, tender kiss.

One of the townhouse sliding doors opened. A dark haired boy about thirteen-years-old stepped outside, waved and closed the door. Erik, Travis, Lance and Scott disjointedly said, "Hey."

Scott queried, "We weren't disturbing you, I hope?"

Walking around the small patio table and down the steps, the boy shook his head and smiled, "Not at all. I was messing around on my PC inside, knowing I needed to get out and meet some kids here, but a little overwhelmed." Approaching the table, he then introduced himself. "I'm Angelo Diaz; my mom's one of the math and music teachers here."

Starting with Erik and Travis, more introductions traveled around to Scott and lastly with Lance. Taking a seat on the same bench as Lance and across from Travis and Erik, Angelo smiled, "Don't let me interrupt. I only came out because four is easier than four hundred, and I wanted to hear you guys play."

Scott checked with Lance, prodding, "Name it."

Lance offered, "Tangerine?"

"You've got vocals?"

Lance nodded, "Sure, and you take the rhythm, I'll do the lead fills."

Scott started playing the song and moments later Lance started singing. Once again, Erik and Travis were pleasantly surprised. Although neither Erik nor Travis were very familiar with the tune, they recognized it. Angelo had never heard the song before at all. Lance was singing bluesy and rather high, occasionally playing nice fills to Scott's steady rhythm guitar. A few kids by the pools heard them and wandered over. Amongst the group were Kade and Karey Oldcambus, Jeff Cummings and Thomas Cork. All four introduced themselves to Angelo. Lance played the guitar solo, careful to make the notes sustain as best he could. At the end of the song, the small audience of seven applauded.

Kade smiled, "You dudes are good."

Nodding at his twin, Karey wondered, "Why don't y'all come play over by the pools?"

Scott chuckled, "Actually, we only came out to practice, guys. We weren't planning on playing too many songs, but just trying to get as good as Platinum Habits."

Lance nodded, "It's too nice out to be trapped indoors."

Jeff Cummings giggled, "Sorry, dudes. If you change your minds, it'll be kewl."

Nodding, Thomas said, "There's not too many over there, thirty or so."

"Not too many," Lance giggled.

Kade, Karey and Jeff started back to the pools. Thomas shrugged and smiled, "Compared to yesterday's concert for almost two hundred?"

"Good point," Scott sniggered. Giggling, Thomas turned and hurried after his friends.

Angelo smiled, "They're really nice."

Erik nodded, "Everyone here is. Although I haven't met all four hundred, every kid I've met and talked with has been kewl."

Travis shared, "The dudes in our dorm are exceptionally kewl, dude."

Uncertainly, Angelo glanced around, carefully wondering, "You dudes are boyfriends?" All four nodded and widely smiled. Erik clung onto Travis a bit tighter and stole a kiss. Angelo smiled, "Kewl. I'm pretty sure I'm gay too; at least those are the thoughts flying through my mind since we moved here Saturday."

Travis checked, "Only since you moved here?"

Angelo shrugged, "More so here than ever."

"That sounds very instigated, if ya ask me," Erik giggled.

Feeling his face flushing red, Angelo nodded and chuckled, "Fate dropped me in a place where my next door neighbor's son turns me into a blubbering and drooling veg."

Lance giggled, "Have you met, and do you know his name?"

Angelo nodded, "His name's Reggie." Seemingly wobbling on his seat, Angelo dreamily sighed, "I've never ever thought..." Raising their eyebrows at Angelo and then at each other, Scott and Travis widely grinned. Lance covered his mouth and went into a giggling fit. Still sitting on Travis' lap, Erik didn't cover his mouth and was therefore giggling louder. Snapping out of his trance, Angelo blushed and sniggered, "Kewl. The truth is, I've seen plenty of handsome snobs who aren't even worth knowing. Reggie's got all them dudes beat by light years, in appearance and in personality. Every time I saw him, I swear, I felt like I was walking in the clouds. Now, if I could manage to do more than gurgle like a fish out of water around him, life would be far less frustrating."

Now knowing what they might've looked like when hooking up with their partners, Scott and Travis sputtered, but couldn't hold it back and roared laughing. Turning even redder, Angelo uncontrollably giggled, "Just tell me what to do, before my mom notices all her hand lotion is gone!" All five boys howled.

"Get him alone and tell him how you feel," Erik giggled.

Travis nodded, "My exact words to Erik, only minutes after we met, were; 'Why do I feel like I have to live the rest of my life within arms' reach of you?' The scariest part was, I was definitely confused, but dead serious, and if he had laughed, I would've self destructed."

"So I slowly moved closer and closer, until we were toe-to-toe," Erik smiled at Travis and the memory. "I admitted that I still didn't feel we were close enough. One kiss led to another deeper kiss, and many more. Needless to say, we found a way to be closer than toe-to-toe."

Lance smiled, "Me and Scott just hooked up yesterday, after acting like the other's shadow for three whole days. It's really scary at first, but once it's out in the open, everything becomes awesome."

Scott recommended, "Get Reggie someplace private, where you both feel safe. You have to tell him how you feel. You need to hear every syllable he speaks, which is easy when the feelings are already really intense." Lance suddenly stood and put his guitar back in its case. He went to Scott and took his guitar. Scott sniggered, "What's goin' on, SLB?"

Putting Scott's guitar away, Lance laughed, "You're looking at Angelo, but obviously talking to me!" Angelo, Erik and Travis cracked up.

"Only partly," Scott chortled, and patted his lap for Lance to have a seat. Once Lance had sat on his lap, Scott planted a really passionate kiss.

Erik smiled, "It's all true, Angelo. I felt weak in the knees with Trav. There's never been any dude anything like him. As soon as we shared our feelings, I couldn't wait to hold him tight. Our first kisses were really passionate; completely captivating in every way."

Scott wondered, "Which townhouse is Reggie in?"

Gesturing behind him and to the left, Angelo answered, "Number four."

Lance asked, "Do you think he's home?"

Angelo shrugged, "I'm not sure."

"Go find out," Travis suggested. Caught like a deer in headlights, Angelo could only blankly stare.

Scott smiled, "You've felt this way for three days, Angelo. Do you want a fourth day of more mixed up stuff?"

Lance grinned, "You could wait for him to say something? If Scott waited for me, we might still be waiting. Luckily, he said what I could barely let myself think."

After thinking about it many moments, Angelo softly groaned, "Oh my God, it really is up to me."

Scott nodded and grinned, "You came out to say hi to us. If he's home, then why hasn't he come outside? Is he shy, or is he twice as scared because you're here? It's your call, of course, but I would need to find out, for my own sanity."

Lance giggled, "I made you insane?"

"Almost," Scott chuckled. Lance returned the passionate kiss he had received minutes earlier.

Turning his attention to Erik and Travis, Angelo wondered, "Is there an easier way this can be done?"

Shrugging, Travis chuckled, "If you find one, let us know about it."

Erik smiled, "Completely alone and in the safest place possible, you'll still feel like the world might end. My old world had just ended, during Battle Of Earth. John Hundser introduced me to Trav, and then asked if we wanted to be roommates. I already knew when I nodded my head that I was falling in love."

"That fast?" Angelo grinned.

Rapidly nodding, Erik admitted, "The attraction and vibe was that intense. When I looked in his eyes, I knew I had found my life partner."

"It was the same with Reggie," Angelo shared. "We saw each other moving in, Saturday and Sunday. I've never wanted to be so close to anyone else before."

Travis suggested, "Then it's more than attraction. Something is happening that can't be ignored."

Gesturing to Lance and Scott who were still attached at the mouth, Angelo giggled, "Do they come up for air?"

Nodding, Travis sniggered, "You'll find out soon enough, hugs and kisses are requirements. There's really not much choice in the matter."

Angelo grunted, and then smirked, "I think I'll brush my teeth again, just in case. Are you dudes hangin' around?"

Travis shrugged. Erik giggled, "It depends on Scott and Lance." Lance flashed a thumb-up and affirmatively hummed into Scott's mouth.

Standing up, Angelo sighed, "Thinking and wondering ain't cuttin' it." He warmly smiled, "I'll bring Reggie around to meet you. Thanks for the help, dudes, you've been awesome."

Erik waved and Travis grinned, "No charge, dude."

Angelo went back up the porch steps and into his townhouse. He hurried through the dining room and raced upstairs, wanting to get his teeth brushed quickly, before his ability to speak vanished and he chickened out before even trying to knock on the Combs' front door.

Playing video games on the floor of her new bedroom, nine-year-old Cecelia wondered, "What's goin' on, bro?" Angelo stepped out of the bathroom with a toothbrush in his mouth. "Oh," Cecelia grinned, "that's a good reason to fly up the steps. I've done that... never in my life." Angelo squinted at his little sister, and returned to the sink and mirror. Pausing her game, Cecelia went to the bathroom door, giggling, "That's twice you brushed your teeth today. Darn teeth turn black in under two hours, ya gotta keep scrubbing and scrubbing."

Leaning over the sink, Angelo spit out the suds, and then commented, "Where's your broom, sis?"

"Idling in my room," Cecelia squinted.

"Fly away," Angelo suggested, and then closed the door.

"I'm telling mom!" Cecelia loudly warned.

Giving himself a careful once-over in the mirror, Angelo grinned and teased, "I'm telling mom! I'm telling mom! Go ahead, brat. She'll ask why you were so interested in watching me brush my teeth. Your only answer is to admit you're being a witchy little woman. Have fun with that."

Storming back to her room, Cecelia slammed the door.

"I need this," Angelo sarcastically remarked. He then concentrated and reviewed what he could possibly say to Reggie. Every instinct said that he should simply pull Reggie into his arms and plant a big sloppy wet one. Rolling his eyes and grinning at the idea, Angelo shook his head and decided on a more mellow approach. He cupped his hand before his mouth to check his breath, and then sniffed each armpit, as if the shower he had taken earlier that morning and the deodorant he put on had worn off. Concluding he was about as presentable as possible, Angelo opened the bathroom door, went down stairs and out the front door.

Everything that had been kewl started spinning as Angelo climbed the steps to townhouse number four. He rang the bell. In seconds, the door opened. Recalling Reggie Combs' younger brother's name, Angelo confirmed, "Cameron, right?"

The ten-year-old boy nodded. "You're Angelo, from next door."

Nodding, Angelo asked, "Is Reggie home?"

"He's upstairs," Cameron stated, and then offered, "I'll call him."

"Kewl," Angelo smiled, and wished he had a kewl little brother instead of an annoying little witch sister.

"REGGIE!" Cameron screamed up the stairs, "DOOR'S FOR YOU!"

A few moments later, Angelo heard the song of angels asking, "Who is it?"

"The dude next door," Cameron answered. After a brief pause, Angelo saw Cameron nod, and then the kid giggled, "Yeah, I guess." Obviously listening, Cameron scrunched his face, and then huffed, "The door's open and he knows you're here. You look fine! I'm not talking to the steps b'cause you wanna take another shower and change clothes. You're being dumb."

Cameron went to sit on the couch and watched the television. A few seconds later, Reggie appeared and walked across the living room in an apparent daze. Watching the hunky blond teen angel approach, Angelo cleared his throat. Reggie croaked, "Hi."

Trying to sound kewl while simultaneously holding down his breakfast, Angelo softly asked, "Were you busy?"

Reggie shrugged, "Just watchin' TV."

"Anything good?"

Scrunching his face and shaking his head, Reggie answered, "Not really; morning sit-coms."

Angelo nervously asked, "Feel like doin' something... maybe check out this base with me?"

Nodding, Reggie pointed at his bare feet, softly asking, "Gimme a minute to put sandals on?"

Brightly smiling, Angelo nodded, "Okay, kewl."

Seeing Angelo waiting at the open door, and his brother searching for his sandals on the bottom of the entryway closet, Cameron sighed, "Don't ask him inside, dork."

"Bite me," Reggie growled. Angelo helplessly sputtered and then giggled. Picking up his sandals, Reggie returned to the door, asking, "Do you want a little brother, cheap?" He sat on the nearest chair to slide into his sandals.

Angelo sniggered, "I'll trade you a little sister."

Since his brother hadn't replied, Cameron giggled, "Suddenly I'm not so bad after all, huh?"

Reggie softly warned, "Later today, you and I have stuff to talk about."

"I'll get your crayons so you can draw it for me," Cameron giggled.

Impatiently huffing, Reggie then grumbled, "Make sure there's plenty of red." Cameron mooed through more giggles. With his sandals on, Reggie returned to the door, grabbed the knob and stepped outside, pulling the door closed behind him. Reggie wondered, "Where are we going?"

Angelo shrugged, "I haven't seen much here, so I thought we'd just start walking and see what's around."

"Kewl," Reggie nodded and gestured for Angelo to lead the way. They walked down the steps and turned right.

Angelo admitted, "I was chatting with some guys around back. Two of 'em play guitar. They're pretty good and all four are kewl."

Reggie nodded, softly muttering, "I saw them out there."

"They're the first Clan kids I've met. Have you met any?"

Following Angelo around the townhomes, Reggie shook his head and sighed, "No."

"Would you like to be introduced?"

Reggie warmly smiled, "Thanks."

Angelo grinned, "It's no problem. They may be orphaned Clan kids, but they're really kewl."

"That's why I've been hiding out," Reggie admitted. "It seems sort o' weird having parents when so many here don't."

Nodding, Angelo confided, "I felt the same way. Since there's only four of 'em, I went to say hello." Hearing the sounds of acoustic guitars, they quietly walked the remainder of the way around the back of the townhouses. Since Lance and Scott were busy playing their guitars, Angelo went to introduce Reggie to Erik and Travis first. Erik got up off Travis' lap and stood to greet Reggie. They knocked knuckles then Travis offered his clenched fist and greeted Reggie. Lance and Scott were still playing when Angelo introduced them to Reggie. To see Reggie's reaction, Angelo told his neighbor, "Erik and Trav are boyfriends, and so are Scott and Lance."

Nodding, Reggie grinned, "I kind o' figured, since Erik was sitting on Travis' lap."

"Oh, yeah," Angelo giggled and blushed.

Travis chuckled, "We're a bit more than boyfriends. More like committed partners."

Tilting his head, Angelo carefully and softly asked, "What's the difference?"

Knowing a little of how Angelo felt, Erik uncontrollably giggled, "It's the way we think of it, really. Boyfriends are still free to look around. Committed partners have said, there's no reason to look around any more." Gesturing to Travis, Erik giggled, "I promised to be all Trav needs and he promised me the same. We want it to work long term, and that's more than half the battle, right there."

Finished with the lesson they had been playing, Scott stood and smiled, "It's the same here."

"Yep," Lance giggled.

Seeing Lance and Scott putting their guitars in the cases, Angelo smiled, "That is very kewl, dudes. That wasn't said earlier."

Going to Angelo and Reggie, Scott grinned, "I guess it only matters to the guys making the couple." Scott then greeted Reggie and introduced Lance.

When that was done, Angelo shared, "We're gonna take a walk around the base to see what we've got around here."

Travis instructed, "Teenagers like us are hangin' at the diving well. Younger kids are at the pool. The really little kids are over at the playground. All the housing is at the center of the base, with entertainment, pools and stuff surrounding it on three sides. The fourth side is the CIC and FYS building."

Scott added, "The rec center is the big building by the pools. It's like a health and fitness club. Then there's the rec room off to the side of the CIC dining room. There are pool tables, Foosball tables, and dozens of different video and arcade games. After meals, kids usually head into the rec room first, probably because it's right there. It gives us a chance to digest a little, before going outside to the pools or playground."

Lance smiled, "At the Oneula Beach base, there's more of the same and some different stuff too. Here, we've got basketball courts, and there they have tennis courts. Here, we've got a bowling alley in the rec center, at Oneula Beach, that area is a gymnastics room."

"These bases were built for us kids," Erik explained. "We'd have to go out of our way to be bored."

Turning to Reggie, Angelo grinned, "It sounds like we'll be walking a while."

Reggie shrugged and smirked, "It's better than morning sit-com re-runs."

Returning his attention to the other four, Angelo warmly smiled, "Thanks for the info, dudes. Maybe we'll catch up with you at lunch."

An out-of-sync chorus of "see ya later" travelled around the six boys. Then Angelo led Reggie back to the path between the soccer field and the basketball courts. Lance and Scott got their guitars. Soon, Angelo and Reggie heard them playing again.

Widely smiling, Angelo checked, "What do you think of them?"

Reggie nodded, "They're very kewl, like you said."

Softly and thoughtfully, Angelo scowled, "Since they told us they're committed partners, I've been trying to wrap my mind around it. I guess I had the whole gay relationship thing completely wrong."

Reggie nodded, "Yeah, me too."

"Since moving here, it's been a recurring pattern of ideas and questions that I never spent much time thinking of. According to my mom, the entire leadership team here are gay couples."

Nodding, Reggie asked, "You know what they did last week, right?"

"Do you mean the orphanages in California?"

"Yeah; it was all over the news the whole day."

"I think it shows how deep their feelings are. Not knowing any of those kids, they went there to help the less fortunate, and then brought them back here. Could you imagine doing that?"

"Well, yeah, I actually could," Reggie admitted. "When something is severely wrong, it has to be corrected."

Following the path, they went around the soccer field, along the side of the pool and glanced inside the rec center's transparent aluminum walls. Angelo asked, "Do you want to go inside?" Reggie nodded and they altered their course.

Seeing new kids, Tony Lanning and Ray Varga jogged over to Angelo and Reggie. Tony and Ray were shirtless and wearing damp board shorts. Once introductions were complete, Tony and Ray led Angelo and Reggie through the rec center. Scattered around were many of the off shift UNIT kids, including Kekoa. In the weight room, Tony asked Reggie, "Do you work out a lot?"

Blushing and shaking his head, Reggie grinned, "No, never."

Ray wondered, "How old are you dudes?"

Angelo and then Reggie replied, "Thirteen."

Giving Reggie a quick once-over, Tony grinned, "You look more like fourteen, dude. I was sure you had worked out. Other dudes around with your build are usually older. I'm thirteen too." He went to one of the Nautilus machines, set the weight stack to sixty pounds and demonstrated some bench presses.

While Tony was doing presses, Ray smiled, "These machines are really kewl because they're safer than the free weights." He pointed at the bar hanging and explained, "That's for lat-pull downs. You pull the bar down and kneel or sit on the floor to do this exercise. Sunday, I was over here with Tony, and the damn thing pulled me right back up off the floor." Angelo and Reggie softly sniggered.

Getting up off the bench, Tony chuckled, "That was too funny. The surprised expression was priceless. I've got a clown for a roomie."

Ray sniggered, "Bite me, Tony."

"Grow a few more pubes so it don't look like child abuse and I might consider it," Tony playfully countered. Angelo and Reggie couldn't help chuckling at the banter flying.

"Gimme a break! I'm twelve!" Ray loudly laughed.

Tony roamed around the machine pointing out the different exercises. They then went over to a racquetball room and looked inside. Ray and Tony then showed Angelo and Reggie the boys' locker room, showers, sauna and extra large jacuzzi; at least twenty teens could fit in the hot tub. The last stop was the bowling alley. They went back outside and went through the pool house, which was primarily boys' and girls' restrooms and showers, but had two more saunas.

Outside by the diving well, Ray noticed, "Neither of you have comm-badges?" Tony raced away to get his T-shirt.

Shaking his head, Angelo answered, "No," and quickly wondered, "Why would we need them?"

"To get through the dimensional doors to the Oneula Beach base," Ray replied. "There are other kids that live there, and they also have stuff that's different from here. There are tennis courts there, and in the same area here there's basketball courts. Since neither me or Tony are tall enough for basketball, we're thinking of learning to play tennis. The rec room there is slightly different from the rec room here. Anyway, it's worth checking out."

Returning with his T-shirt on, Tony tapped his comm-badge calling, "Tony to Reyes."

A moment later, Reyes answered, "What's up, Tony?"

"Me and Ray were just giving Angelo Diaz and Reggie Combs the two-cent tour," Tony answered. "They don't have comm-badges to get to Oneula Beach, bro."

Reyes instructed, "Have them meet me at the CIC in a couple of minutes. I'm just wrapping up with Jay and Chris, getting our newest Core Rimmers oriented."

"Okay," Tony grinned, "I should also mention that Angelo and Reggie don't have Mr. Fuzzies." Angelo and Reggie glanced at each other and shrugged. A choir of gasps and groans flowed from the boys in the Command Center.

Over Chris' insane giggling, Jay laughed, "Sacrilege!"

Tony sniggered, "I know, bro. We can't have 'em sticking out, completely fuzziless."

Reyes giggled, "Send Angelo and Reggie to the CIC, please, Tony."

"They're on their way," Tony smiled, and then chirped, "Out."

Slipping his Mr. Fuzzy puppet on, Ray squeaked, "Do you know the way?"

Angelo nodded and grinned, "The big domed building. Thanks for showing us around, dudes."

Reggie politely smiled, "It was good meeting you." He and Angelo followed the path between the dorms and into the quad, toward the CIC. Reggie grinned, "Everybody is so friendly."

Angelo nodded, "It seems a little odd, doesn't it?" Noticing Reggie's uncertain glance, Angelo shrugged, "From orphans, I mean. No matter what their histories are, they're social and easy going."

Rapidly nodding, Reggie smirked, "Now I feel like a bigger dork for hiding out the last couple o' days."

"Don't feel like you're alone. I feel the same way."

"Do you think Tony and Ray are boyfriends?"

Angelo shrugged, "I'm not sure. Since they're roommates, I guess they would have to be really good friends in the first place. I wouldn't share a bedroom with just anyone." Reggie giggled and blushed. Angelo smiled, "I didn't mean to embarrass you."

"So many weird ideas are flying," Reggie softly giggled.

Angelo prompted, "Such as?"

"I can't really put myself in the same place as any of these kids," Reggie uncertainly explained. "I have no idea how I'd act if I had no parents or family. Having parents and family, I was still a little scared when my brother said you were at the door."

Angelo incredulously sniggered, "You were scared of me?"

"Yeah, and of the orphaned kids."

"Do you know why?"

Unexpectedly, a younger blond boy ran out of a dormitory, laughing his Speedo covered ass off. Another young red haired boy, also clad in only Speedos, raced after the blond, loudly laughing, "Get back here, Ralphie!" Grinning at the two kids, Angelo and Reggie stopped walking and watched.

"You're being very bad, Pat!" the blond boy joyfully cackled, and ran around the quad, waving at Angelo and Reggie as he passed by. Ralphie ran back into the same dormitory from the opposite doorway and was soon followed by Pat.

Pointing at the doorway the two boys had just run through, Reggie giggled, "That's why! I only knew a little bit about Clan Short before moving here, so I've been reading up. They rescue kids from every bad situation. In only three days, I've become a total dreamer. I hope to someday be like these dudes, rescuing kids too. Talk about reaching for impossible dreams! It's not like my mind wasn't already prone to daydreams, but most of the time it's you I'm dreaming about!" Noticing Angelo's shocked expression, Reggie quickly gasped, "Oh! I'm so sorry! I should not have said that!" Spinning around, he started to sprint away, leaving Angelo behind.

Hurrying after Reggie, Angelo loudly called, "Please don't go, Reggie! I know exactly what you're saying." Not catching up and becoming more desperate, Angelo yelled in frustration; "Dammit, I'm dreaming of you too!"

Slowing, turning around and stopping, Reggie wore a horrified expression. As embarrassed as Reggie was, he realized that Angelo had just shouted his feelings across the quad. Frightened to death and with goosebumps popping, Reggie glared at Angelo, drinking in every feature and mannerism.

Slowly approaching him, Angelo gently assured, "It's really all right. I've been so surprised with my own thoughts, but I can't deny how I feel." Stopping about a meter before Reggie, Angelo warmly divulged, "Soon after meeting Erik, Travis, Lance and Scott, I spilled my guts, because I really wanted to get to know you, but I had no idea how to even start. It's so weird because I've never had trouble meeting anyone before, but I was scared to even chance getting to know you.

Standing on your porch waiting for you, I was practically quaking. All at once, I was scared, happy, anxious, sad and hopeful."

One at a time, Reggie wiped his eyes, quietly wondering, "How can I feel so much about you when I barely know you?"

Angelo shrugged, "I really don't know, but I've been feeling it too, since the first time I saw you Saturday."

Reggie wondered, "Don't you feel... I dunno... strange?"

Slowly shaking his head, Angelo sighed then softly said, "Fear changed to feeling odd, and then that changed to annoyance and frustration, wondering why you were automatically so special that all these feelings got stirred up. Now I'm really worried and a little anxious too."

"What are you worried about?"

"You," Angelo admitted.

"What are you anxious over?"

"That you don't even want to try to be friends. Without that, we can't be boyfriends, partners or anything else."

"Would you really want that... with me?"

"I do, very much. I've been imagining spending a lot of time with you all weekend. Could you, with me?"

"I really want to, I just don't know how, ya know?"

Angelo smiled, "Believe me, I really do know exactly what you mean. This isn't like most other school friendships. I want us to someday be like Ray and Tony, as close as roommates. Hopefully, we could then try and be like Erik and Travis, or Scott and Lance. Maybe then we could talk to Prez about helping them. We could try and make our dreams come true." Unable to read anything from Reggie's expression, Angelo asked, "Does any of that sound okay to you, like it might be possible?"

Blushing, Reggie grinned, "Yeah, it does. Just listening to you, I relaxed so much that I kind o' spaced out on tangents."

Angelo asked, "Give me an example, please?"

"Us like roommates," Reggie shyly mumbled. "Us like boyfriends and partners. Each little rescue story I read about, I put myself in the scene, with you. Every one of 'em, it was me and you. It's just... you want that stuff with me that's really freaking me out."

Angelo giggled, "I know. I can barely believe I said all that without making a complete fool of myself. All I've seen you doing tells me you're a really nice guy. Even the sound of your voice makes my heart race." He paused, blushed and giggled, "You're the cutest dude I've ever known in my life."

Shaking his head, Reggie giggled, "Nope, you are," and shyly looked away, adding, "Since the first time you said hello to me, I could listen to your voice forever."

Angelo took one step closer and reached out his hand, asking, "We're going to try?"

Reggie nodded, "Yeah. That would be very kewl," and tentatively reached his hand out, barely brushing his fingers with Angelo's.

Angelo took Reggie's hand in his, and then reminded, "Someone named Reyes is waiting to give us comm-badges. Another dude named Jay wants to give us Mr. Fuzzy puppets, for some reason I can't figure out."

Nodding, Reggie agreed, "I'm ready when you are."

They started walking again, this time taking the path between the dorms and the townhouses, simply because it was more convenient. After a few moments and many steps together, Angelo pleasantly sighed, "I'm really happy. This might be the happiest day of my life." Reggie giggled and squeezed Angelo's hand. Angelo playfully warned, "The next time you do that, you just might get kissed."

"Kiss me and you might be carried to the CIC, like the trophy you are," Reggie countered.

Angelo grinned, "My folks would be totally kewl with us."

"So would mine," Reggie assured.

Angelo giggled, "That's a good thing, because your brother is watching us from the window." Reggie turned to check, but saw no one. The drapes weren't even swinging. Smirking and squinting, Reggie turned to Angelo. Angelo released Reggie's hand, began laughing and ran away.

Racing after Angelo, Reggie cackled, "Not funny!"

"It was my sister who saw us!"

"I'm gonna get you!"

"This day is getting better all the time!"

In no time, Reggie caught up with Angelo and began poking tender ribs, causing Angelo to hysterically howl. Joyfully laughing from the teasing done, Angelo and Reggie raced into the CIC dining room. Sipping sodas, Reyes, Ryan, Chris and Jay were sharing a table near the Command Center doors. They noticed the two teenagers playing keep-away around tables. Reyes tapped his sub-vocal, asking, "Alden, is that Angelo Diaz and Reggie Combs, and if so, which is which?"

"That's them," Alden giggled into Reyes', Chris' and Jay's sub-vocals. "Angelo has wavy brown hair, and Reggie has dirty blond hair. Just so you know, earlier this morning they barely knew one another, but now, as you can see, they've gotten quite a bit closer."

Rolling his eyes, Reyes grinned, "Obviously," and Jay cracked up.

Chris asked Jay, "Do you really want to give them Mr. Fuzzies?"

Watching the two boys chase one another around and between tables, Jay chuckled, "Everybody needs a Mr. Fuzzy. It's just some have fewer fuzzy needs than others."

Softly giggling, Chris leaned over and gave his lover a short passionate kiss. Chris hummed thoughtfully then tapped his sub-vocal, asking, "Alden, how are our fuzzy-facts-of-life students doing?"

"They just finished watching the video," Alden privately replied. "Phil and Owen are in the Nash brothers' dorm room. Terry and Jake are in their dorm room." He then giggled, "All seems warm and fuzzy to me."

Reyes asked, "Are you two dudes kewl with assisting Angelo and Reggie?"

Jay nodded and smiled. Chris asked, "We're kewl, but are you?"

Nodding, Reyes shared, "Doc Andrews ordered cold and warm compresses on Ryan's various bruises. It's been over nine hours..."

Ryan interrupted, "I'm fine, Reyes."

Reyes smirked, "Doctor's orders, Ry. I want those bruises gone. This morning, I saw you grab your side twice. When I want to hug you, I have to be careful how I hug you. Humor me, please?"

"That I can easily do," Ryan mischievously promised. Chris widely grinned and Jay made his eyes spin in their sockets.

Offering Ryan his hand, Reyes told Chris and Jay, "We'll be back for lunch. All the Core Rimmers know which condo we're in, so everything should be kewl. If you need anything, just call." They stood. Chris and Jay thanked Reyes for his help.

On the way across the dining room, Angelo paused before Reyes and Ryan, giggling, "Excuse me, I'm Angelo Diaz, and the shy cutie chasing me is Reggie Combs. We were told to come here. Do you know who Jay or Reyes is?"

Gesturing to Reyes, Ryan introduced his boyfriend, himself, Chris and Jay. He finished by adding, "Jay and Chris will help you, Angelo. Right now, I have some swelling that needs relieving." Although Ryan had the one visible bruise on his jaw, Angelo's head bounced in shock, and then he cracked up. Flushing red, Reggie couldn't figure out what to do or say.

Leading Ryan outside, Reyes giggled, "You are so-oo-oo bad!"

Ryan smiled, "I was only partly lying. Honestly, I've had two chubbies per hour since we woke. It seems like one fades and it returns again only minutes later, because you smiled at me. I've been here alone with you for most of twelve hours, but you haven't made a single move on me. In the shower this morning, I had to put moves on you. If I didn't know you so well, I'd probably be discouraged."

Reyes sighed, "I really want to, Ry."

"I know you do, by the hugs and kisses, by an innocent night in bed together, and by the way you held and kissed me in the shower. You were restlessly tossing last night, until I wrapped an arm over you. I've added gallant to your list of admirable qualities."

"I wish there were something we could do to get Paul here. Unfortunately, there isn't a single scenario I've played out that might work. Nothing I say is going to make this better."

"When Paul is angry it taints everything around him. Once he gets here, we'll make sure he knows there's no bitterness or resentment on this side. Your wish to make Paul sandwich is going to come true, you know?"

Approaching condominium A, and following the path around to building B, Reyes nodded and sighed, "I know."

Ryan worried, "What's wrong?"

"I'm empathic," Reyes reminded. "Without accessing any database, I can feel your disappointment and sadness. I felt his anger, and then sadness, and now confusion. He's fighting still, right now. He's not happy there and alone. Being here would only remind him to be angry. He thinks he's in a no win, damned if he does and damned if he doesn't situation."

Ryan huffed, "That's my bro." Stopping short unexpectedly, Ryan pulled Reyes into his arms and held on tight, whispering, "Let it out, love."

Reyes whimpered, "If I start, I might not stop."

"You show love in so many awesome ways to everyone you know. Let me hold you while you cry it out."

Shuddering, Reyes started to sob his heart out. Wordlessly, Ryan comforted Reyes with back rubs. For many minutes they stood there on the walkway between condominiums A and B. Ryan gently reminded Reyes that he hadn't been the cause of this argument, and that as close as he and Paul were, they were two different people. From the school across base, John Hundser felt what was happening to his brother, friend and fellow empath. John tapped his sub-vocal and silently ordered Alden to transport Reyes and Ryan into their condo apartment.

Glancing around and recognizing their flat's bedroom, Ryan guided Reyes to the bed. As soon as Reyes weeping slowed, Ryan stepped back to take his shirt off. Then he pulled Reyes' shirt up and off. He used it to dry Reyes' face then tossed it on the floor. Walking around to the foot of the bed, Ryan crawled up onto the mattress behind Reyes. "Com'on," Ryan prompted, "five hours sleep won't cut it. Last night I held you. It's your turn to hold me. I won't leave you." Obediently nodding, Reyes swung his legs up onto the bed and lay down then turned to Ryan, forcing a small grin. Reyes wrapped an arm over his boyfriend. Ryan smiled, "No apologies, excuses or explanations. Rest now."

Ewa Beach CIC Dining Room

Tuesday, November 9, 2004, 10:45AM HTZ

Angelo and Reggie called a temporary truce to their game, and then went to the table where Jay and Chris were sitting. Politely standing, Chris and Jay greeted Angelo and Reggie. Jay Montigua shook hands and knocked knuckles with Angelo Diaz. Jay grinned, "Playing the keep-away game first?" and handed over a comm-badge.

Taking the comm-badge and nodding, Angelo chuckled, "I was trippin' out holding Reggie's hand, and told him his brother was watching us. Just now, I've realized that I was testing Reggie's readiness."

Beside his new boyfriend, and putting the comm-badge that Chris had handed to him on the left breast pocket of his shirt, Reggie softly wondered, "Testing my readiness for?"

Angelo smiled, "To have a boyfriend. You passed with flying colors." He told Jay and Chris, "We were holding hands, right after deciding to give it our best shot." Focusing on Reggie, Angelo playfully reminded, "When I said your brother was watching us, you didn't let go of my hand. You might think what your brother sees matters, but it didn't matter so much that you let me go. All you did was turn your head and look back at the townhouses."

Grinning at Reggie's blush and wide smile, Chris wondered, "So you chased Angelo here?"

Blushing more, Reggie chuckled, "I thought he was teasing me, not testing my reactions. I couldn't let either go unchallenged."

Nodding, Chris chuckled, "Nope, I wouldn't," and gave Reggie a Mr. Fuzzy puppet. Jay gave Angelo a Mr. Fuzzy. Pointing across the room, Chris prompted, "Let us show you how to use the dimensional doors." Angelo and Reggie nodded. Chris and Jay led the way across the dining room, with Angelo and Reggie following.

Reggie took Angelo's hand, leaned close and whispered, "We have important stuff to talk about." Angelo giggled and nodded.

On the way, Jay explained, "Just tell it where you want to go, and then wait a few seconds until you see the other side appear. Then walk through like any other door."

Angelo asked, "We can get all the way to Oneula Beach by walking through a door?"

"That's about two kilometers," Reggie added.

"It's a new technology, sort of based on transporters," Chris briefly explained.

Pausing in front of a door, Jay grinned, "The right side set are outbound doors, the left side are inbound doors. They won't work any other way, so it's not like you can mess it up."

Reggie softly said, "Alden helped us move some stuff."

"Us too," Angelo smiled.

Gesturing to the door, Chris prompted, "Give it a try."

Angelo clearly but uncertainly requested, "Oneula Beach?" Nothing happened. The silvery facade didn't change and neither did the destination sign above the door. Chris and Jay blinked. Turning to the two confused Core Rimmers, Angelo grinned and Reggie burst into giggles.

Tapping his comm-badge, Jay impatiently huffed, "Alden, what's up with the doors?"

Across Jay's comm-badge, Alden giggled, "The door is fine, but our new Core Rimmers have already forgotten something else."

Moments later, Chris gasped and then nudged Jay, excitedly reminding, "Their comm-badges, lover." Since Jay wasn't getting it, Chris prompted Angelo and Reggie, "Tap your comm-badges and identify yourselves to Alden, guys."

Slumping, Jay sniggered, "It's the simple stuff that gets me, every time. That's how an apartment building fell on me and hurt my wrist." Since Jay only had the cast and a few visible bruises, Angelo and Reggie brightly smiled, believing Jay was exaggerating.

"You haven't worn your Mr. Fuzzy in over an hour," Alden giggled.

"Withdrawal symptoms," Jay chuckled, and pulled his puppet out of his back pocket. He slipped it onto his left hand, squeaking, "Let's try this again." Angelo cracked up, pushing Reggie into a giggling fit. To make matters worse, Alden started replaying the Cozy Cuzzy Fuzzy Water Blaster Battle video at double speed on all four television monitors. Seeing the two dressed leaders they were with on the TVs, wearing only Mr. Fuzzy G-strings, Angelo roared laughing.

Sadly shaking his head at Chris and Jay, Reggie chuckled, "Very... uh... becoming?"

Chris grinned, "Alden, get Angelo and Reggie their Cuzzy Fuzzy Cozies too. As a gay couple, they qualify."

Doing as requested, Alden giggled, "On the table behind you, guys." Angelo and Reggie turned to see the skimpy G-strings.

"Wear it with someone you love," Jay's Mr. Fuzzy squeaked.

Breathless from laughing, Angelo pulled a chair out and collapsed onto it. Heartily giggling, Reggie picked up a G-string, peeked into the elastic port, saw that the nose and jaw were hollow, obviously meant to be filled, and cracked up. He could not see himself wearing it anywhere except maybe alone with Angelo, behind a locked door, when no one else was home to hear them hysterically giggling. Wearing it outdoors, in the middle of the night, for a water blaster fight, was out of the question.

Chris giggled, "We're Morale Rimmers, so-oo-oo."

"Well done," Reggie sniggered. "Our morale was pretty high when we came in here, but thanks for helping us."

"Any time," Chris grinned.

Jay's Mr. Fuzzy prompted Chris, "Let's see who else needs our help, and what other damage we can cause." Taking Jay's hand in his, Chris led the way to the dimensional door. Jay's Mr. Fuzzy squeaked, "Oneula Beach," and the destination changed. The silvery facade faded and soon showed the dining room at the other base. Jay and Chris passed through.

Once they were alone, Reggie sat down beside Angelo and reached for his boyfriend's hand. "Can I ask you something?" Reggie grinned.

Angelo giggled, "Sure, anything."

Reggie wondered, "Did you really think I would let you go, because my brother might've been watching?"

Catching his breath and shrugging, Angelo smiled, "I wasn't sure. Honestly, I can't wait for my sister to see me with you. At the same time, she's naturally irritating, like fingernails on a chalkboard."

Slowly nodding, Reggie softly offered, "After spending three days thinking about you, I want to spend today, the next two days, and the foreseeable future with you. What we do isn't as important as just being together. Everything I like to do, I hope you'll enjoy too, at least a little bit. The hobbies and stuff you have, I hope I'll like. I want to know everything about you."

Angelo shyly grinned, "My mom's a teacher, Reg."

"I know." Reggie offered, "My dad's the facilities manager, and my mom's a chef."

"My dad's finishing his dentistry internship," Angelo shared.

Reggie asked, "What kind of hobbies do you have?"

Angelo answered, "I like everything to do with the ocean; I like surfing, and I like sailing too. When I can't do those things, I'll sit at my PC for hours."

"Playing video games?"

Shaking his head, Angelo chuckled, "Writing electronic music; sampling sounds with my little digital recorder, uploading it onto my computer, and then trying to use those sounds in kewl ways with some music." Angelo then asked, "What keeps you entertained?"

Beginning to turn red in the face again, Reggie smiled, "Remember my brother saying he would get my crayons?" When Angelo nodded, Reggie admitted, "I love to draw; on paper and on computers. I'll draw anything and everything; people, places and things; realistic, abstract or cartoons. When I was little, I used to watch my dad drawing floor plans for the hotel, where he used to work. That always seemed kewl to me, so I imitated him. Lately, he's been asking my opinion on that sort of stuff."

"You're an artist?"

"I wouldn't say that," Reggie giggled. "I like to draw. How artistic it is, is a whole other story."

"I can't wait to see some of it."

"I wanna hear some of your music."

"What about checking out the bases?"

Reggie shrugged, "We can do that later, if it's all right with you?"

Nodding and squeezing Reggie's hand, Angelo beamed, "Anything we do together is kewl by me."

"Let's go," Reggie prodded, and stood, only releasing Angelo's hand long enough for both of them to stuff Mr. Fuzzy puppets and G-strings in their back pockets.

Angelo suggested, "Let's go to your place first. My sister is home, and she's annoying."

"And my brother isn't?" Reggie joked.

Angelo chuckled, "If he gets obnoxious, we can gang up on him and teach a lesson. Compared to a witchy little woman, Cameron's kewl."

"We'll see how long you keep that opinion," Reggie giggled. Instead of leading Angelo to the exit, Reggie went toward the inbound dimensional doors, rec room and bird cages.

"Where are we going?" Angelo wondered.

"Pit stop," Reggie briefly blushed, and grinned, "I've been needing to go since I opened my mouth, out by the dorms."

Angelo nodded and giggled, "It was scary, but I'm glad you told the truth. Left up to me, we might still be beating around the bush, acting like we weren't even interested. Being with you is really what I've wanted most of all, all weekend."

A few steps before reaching the mens' room, Reggie stopped, causing Angelo to also pause. Drinking in his boyfriend from head to toe, Reggie smiled, "You're about two centimeters shorter than I am; a hundred and sixty-five centimeters?"

"Good guess!" Angelo cheered.

"How much do you weigh?"

"About fifty-eight kilos. You?"

"Sixty-one kilos," Reggie shyly answered, and then blushed, "It just dawned on me, I'm going into a bathroom with you. What wasn't a problem suddenly became one."

Nodding, Angelo stepped closer, took Reggie in his arms and grinned, "I've been wondering what it might feel like to hug you." Briefly pausing, he blushed and sighed, "You feel good, and smell fantastic. I like being in your space."

Shivering with delight, Reggie giggled, "Reality is so much better than the dream," and gave Angelo a tight squeeze. "I'd chase you to Timbuktu and back for a hug, ya know?"

Happily giggling, Angelo completely messed up the warning,

"We'd better step away from each other, or I'm going to kiss you."

Before he could change his mind, Reggie tilted his head and stole a tender kiss. He searched Angelo's expression, trying to determine if he'd gone too far, too fast. His answer came immediately with Angelo's returned kiss. Although short, it was exceptionally tasty. By the peppermint flavor, Reggie could tell that Angelo had recently brushed his teeth.

Angelo rested his head on Reggie's broad shoulder, whispering, "This is what I've wanted most since the first times I saw you Saturday." As comfortable as he was, he lifted his head to see Reggie's expression.

"Me too," Reggie softly confirmed, and then chuckled, "I'm glad we did it out here and not in there."

Slowly nodding, Angelo carefully said, "We're gonna see... in there. That's only part of what we're about and working towards, Reg. Being with you, and being held by you is really what I want most of all."

"I know what you mean," Reggie softly assured. "All those daydreams I had of us, we were doing every day stuff together." Beginning to flush red again, Reggie asked, "Does it seem to you... like we already have, so it doesn't much matter when?"

Angelo nodded agreement, giggled, and then went for a deeper kiss, mostly to see what Reggie's reaction would be. When Reggie held him tighter and held the kiss longer, Angelo had his answer. When the kiss broke, both boys giggled and blushed, but never lost eye contact. Still smiling at each other, they separated. Angelo held his hand out high. Without hesitation, Reggie took the offered hand and led the way into the bathroom.

Neither had been in the CIC's mens' room before and almost immediately paused and grinned. Along one adjacent wall were commodes, like most any other public restroom, and the sinks were along the wall nearest the door, but across from the commodes, the urinals were the type that went from the floor and up about a meter-and-a-half. "It makes sense," Angelo sniggered.

"With little boys and adult men around, why limit choices for either?" Reggie grinned.

They went to the row of porcelain and released their hands. They stood side-by-side and opened their shorts to relieve themselves. Once they had started peeing, they turned to each other and locked eyes, wordlessly giving permission to look down with only nods. After a few moments of inspection, they looked up and locked eyes again. Blushing, Angelo sputtered and began giggling. Reggie blushed and grinned, "If you can answer why we did that, please tell me, because I'm clueless."

Shrugging, Angelo giggled, "Because we could and wanted to. It wasn't a sneaked peek. We wanted to check each other out."

"The image is seared into my mind," Reggie shyly admitted.

Finishing up, Angelo wondered, "Why?"

It took a few moments, long enough for Angelo to stuff his goods away, close the Velcro fly and step back, for Reggie to reverently say, "You're beautiful. Even what's hidden, and should be like every other dick I've ever seen in any locker room, is absolutely gorgeous."

"It don't bother you that I was cut as a baby?"

"That's what makes yours even more perfect, to me anyway."

"During a facts-of-life talk with my dad, I asked about it. My dad's family is Catholic. Before getting married, he switched to Episcopal, like my mom and her family, but when I was born, he suddenly had to choose. He didn't want me circumcised, but he was afraid he couldn't teach me to keep it clean well enough, and then it would need to be done when I was older. I wouldn't have blamed him, but he would've blamed himself."

Finished and stepping back, Reggie shrugged, "We're Lutherans, but I don't think religion made any difference. It's just the way it is. When Cameron was a baby, they found out his foreskin was too tight, and it would likely cause him pain, so they snipped him."

"What you've got is perfect too, dude."

Crossing the room for the sinks, Reggie giggled, "Yeah? Why?"

"You've got a larger frame," Angelo answered, and took the sink beside his new boyfriend. "At my school, I noticed dudes who were my height, but much thinner, smaller frame, and then others who were much heavier, larger frames." They started washing their hands, and Angelo continued, "For a guy with your build to have a short, thin dick would be too far out of proportion for the rest of you. At school, there were plenty of big dudes with tiny weenies, and a few skinny, little dudes who were exceptionally well endowed. There's no rhyme or reason about it, but in your case, what you've got fits." He uncontrollably sniggered, "I'm medium frame, with a medium dick, thank goodness!"

Turning red again, Reggie cracked up.

"But neither of you talk to your dick in the morning," Alden giggled from the speakers, "which puts you in a very elite group, unless you silently talk to your dicks."

Wildly cackling, Reggie decided to wash his face with cold water too. Drying his hands with paper towels, Angelo giggled, "Have you been watching and listening to us all this time, Alden?"

"That's my job!" Alden giggled.

Tossing the paper towels in the waste can, Angelo smirked, "Where can we go that's away from your cameras and microphones?"

"Off base," Alden laughed.

Realizing the implications of that, Reggie yelled, "We've been here most of four days and you never told us?"

"I know when to be quiet, and when to make dick jokes," Alden giggled.

"This is not good!" Reggie complained, and got some paper towels to dry off.

"For some of the kids here, it helps them feel safer," Alden seriously replied. Angelo and Reggie locked eyes and barely nodded at each other, reluctantly agreeing that it was true. "Then there are guys like you," Alden shared. "I've seen literally dozens of couples hooking up, and heard what they've said, and saw what they've done, but haven't shared any of that with anyone. You guys haven't said or done anything that I haven't seen or heard before. Your way of getting to know each other is unique, just like every other guy on base." He giggled, "But you gave me an opportunity, so I had to say something, before any of my brothers did."

"Seriously, all of us want to make sure all of you guys are safe." Kerry added. "A lot of Clan kids have some really nasty stuff in their pasts, and sometimes just knowing we are there makes the difference if they'll go out and make friends, or just sit in their room."

Reggie chucked his used paper towels in the trash, then offered a clean hand to Angelo. When Angelo took his hand and they dropped to their sides, Reggie sadly admitted, "You know, even supposedly normal kids like us are overwhelmed, mostly by the number of kids here. I don't think my junior high school had four hundred kids."

"We can easily imagine what it feels like for other kids," Angelo added.

Surprisingly, at least seven male voices answered from the ceiling, "We know."

Angelo and Reggie walked out of the mens' room. From the nearest dining room speaker, Alden reminded, "You guys still haven't activated your comm-badges. You'll need to do that to get from base-to-base." Releasing each other, Angelo and Reggie tapped their comm-badges and completed the activation process.

By this time, some kids were at tables and others were walking into the kitchen, beginning to show up for lunch. Among the early lunch crowd, Tony and Ray noticed Angelo and Reggie holding hands. Tony briefly stood to call them over. When they arrived, Tony and Ray invited Angelo and Reggie to stay and have lunch with them. Angelo smiled, "We were about to go to Reggie's place..."

"To show off our new status, for my brother," Reggie chuckled, picturing his brother completely surprised and out of control.

Nodding, Angelo finished, "And we didn't know we could eat here."

Coming from the kitchen and arriving at the same table, Nate Ramos sniggered, "Of course you can eat here. They're feeding almost four hundred. It ain't like they're gonna run out." Nate sat down with Tony and Ray.

Locking eyes with Reggie, Ray giggled, "Show off your new status with us." Tony sputtered and nudged his roommate. Ray giggled, "What?"

"We talked about this Saturday night," Tony reminded.

Holding an open palm to Angelo and Reggie, Ray countered, "They weren't holding hands about an hour ago."

After checking with Reggie and getting nods in response, Angelo smiled, "We'll get lunch and be back in a few minutes." He and Reggie headed for the kitchen chow line.

Leaning closer to Ray, Tony whispered, "You're younger than me, so it's totally up to you. If you want it to be friends having fun, or to give it a real shot as boyfriends, just let me know."

Nodding, Ray whispered back, "I'm still thinking about it."

Seeing his two younger brothers going to another table to eat, Nate grinned, "Are you two boyfriends yet?"

Ray intensely blushed, causing Tony to shake his head and snigger, "We're still in separate beds. I know I could easily go either way, but Ray isn't sure. I'm not rushin' him, but once a day, this topic keeps coming up."

Nate swallowed, and then asked, "Have you ever tried it with another dude?"

Tony chuckled, "Yeah, when I had less hair on my dick than Ray."

"HEY!" Ray loudly laughed. Having seen one another in the dorm mob shower three days in a row, Nate and Tony uncontrollably sniggered. Feeling like he was being goofed on, Ray giggled, "How about you, Nate; have you tried with a dude?"

Making sure his brothers weren't eavesdropping, Nate nodded and softly chuckled, "It was fun, but we weren't in love or nothin'. I could probably try it again, but this time with someone that has a chance of being a boyfriend. If it works out with a girl first, that's kewl too."

"If only I knew the magic spell that could make everything easier," Ray muttered.

"Don't we all?" Nate and Tony softly confirmed.

Leaning over the table, Nate softly suggested, "How about the three of us try stuff after lunch, with no strings attached?"

"Good idea," Tony quietly cheered. "I'll bet Ray's a mix of curious and afraid."

Seeing Nate and Tony waiting for his decision, Ray replied, "There's no denying it. Sure, after lunch sounds kewl." For a few silent moments, while the three of them chowed down, Ray had some reservations about what he had so quickly agreed to. It wasn't Tony or Nate, but simply the fact that he was about to have his first sexual experience with two other dudes. Nate was very kewl; during the days they'd been on base, he checked up on his two younger brothers, but spent most of his time with the teens and tweens at the diving well.

However, Tony was the kewlest older dude Ray had ever known. Without hesitation, Tony agreed he would be roommates with him.

Since then, Tony had brought Ray along everywhere he went; soccer and the auditorium trip on Saturday; Sunday was more soccer, and after cooling down, they made a quick trip through the rec center and then they played basketball, and after dinner, they sat together during the Clan meeting and concert. Just the prior day, they were back in the rec center lifting weights on Nautilus machines. His mom and dad would've had a melt down; but Tony taught him how to breathe and lift safely. As far as Ray knew, Tony's favorite phrases were 'Come on,' and 'Let's go'. Ray had until the end of lunch to decide if he was ready for his first time; if it would be with Tony, or with Tony and Nate, or maybe neither, not on this day.

To make sure his abrupt proposal was a bit more clear, Nate assured, "We're all friends. I'm not looking to step in between you two. My only real purpose is to be sure I could, if or when the right dude shows up. My dad once told me that an urge to hold and kiss someone comes first. I'm not seeing either of you like that person, but we could at least have fun."

Ray nodded, "Very kewl." His flat, unenthused tone caught Tony's attention. Tony didn't make a face or turn to his roomie, but he did notice that 'very kewl' sounded like less than it normally would.

Tony swallowed another bite of his cheeseburger, and then devilishly grinned, "Sunday morning, our first morning waking together in the same room, I tossed the sheet aside and wandered the room in my usual morning daze. I didn't give a thought about what I might've looked like, turning the TV on, getting clothes and stuff ready for a shower, all with morning wood."

"I hid under my pillow, laughing my ass off," Ray giggled. "It sure wasn't like Saturday morning, in the Hundses' basement, where all of us stayed covered. Tony didn't even notice me for a few minutes. I've gotten used to him being in a morning fog already. Since he didn't recall a thing I said before we showered, I know not to bother saying much until then."

Nate pleasantly shared, "At home, I had my own room, and my bros had their own room. At eight- and ten-years-old, they thought my morning condition was hysterically funny, until I walloped the hell out of both of 'em with my pillow. I'm pretty sure they're only laughing now because they want the morning pillow fight."

Nodding, Ray seriously said, "I've had plenty of friends before, but none were any older than me. There were a few older cousins, but they mostly ignored me. Here, it seems that age means a lot less to just about everyone. I like having a roomie who's older than me, and I don't want to mess that up."

Tony pointed at the Core Rimmers coming into the CIC from school, widely smiling, "When it's good, the friendship gets even better. Keeping our friendship kewl is my only real worry, Ray. I don't want to change rooms or roommates because of sex. I can spank it, just like every other dude." That remark got Ray's attention. His mouth was full, but he did turn to his older friend and brightly beam.

Seeing Angelo and Reggie approaching, Nate, Ray and Tony fell silent and stuffed their mouths. Angelo asked, "If we're interrupting something, we'll find other seats?"

Since his mouth was full, Nate vigorously shook his head. Gesturing to the chairs, Ray grinned, "Not at all, please sit." He then introduced Nate Ramos to Angelo and Reggie.

Tony chuckled, "It's nothin' Earth shattering or mind boggling; just us dudes, talkin' about boyfriends, being roommates, waking with morning wood, and normal everyday stuff like that."

Angelo nodded and Reggie softly chortled as they took seats at the table.

Getting settled, Reggie dressed his cheeseburger, softly telling Nate, "An impression was made by Tony and Ray this morning."

Angelo chuckled, "And Eric, Travis, Lance and Scott too."

"We've only been walking around base, meeting you dudes," Reggie smiled. "In a very short time, everything has changed."

"Clan life is a change, and the changes keep rolling on by," Nate grinned.

Before biting into his burger, Reggie sniggered, "Then there's Ralphie and Pat, who we haven't even been introduced to, but they made another huge impact."

Covering his mouth so partially chewed food wouldn't be seen or spit across the table, Tony mumbled, "Ralphie Taylor and Patrick O'Hara." Angelo started munching on French Fries. Reggie took a big bite out of his cheeseburger.

"They're my age and already a couple too," Ray shared. Since Pat and Ralphie had made that fairly clear, Angelo and Reggie nodded.

Gently tapping Ray's arm to get his attention, Nate offered, "For me, considering having a boyfriend is easy. All the sexual stuff that dudes could do doesn't seem gross or too scary." Reggie seemed to choke for a moment. Bouncing in his chair, Angelo quietly laughed, and reached over to rub Reggie's back. Nate giggled, "I'm sorry, dudes. All I was trying to say is that the scariest part seems to be knowing who to try with. Building a relationship seems to be the toughest part. In comparison, sex seems easy."

After swallowing and washing down his food with soda, Angelo smiled, "I'll agree with that." He turned to Reggie, saying, "If it wasn't so scary, I would've knocked on your door yesterday or Sunday."

"We're attracted and have been since we first saw each other moving in," Reggie softly told the group. Turning to Angelo, he admitted, "That's why I was stupid with my bro, and why I got silly seeing Pat and Ralphie."

Ray giggled, "I have to wonder what they did."

Angelo grinned, "They chased each other around, wearing only Speedos, outside one of the dorms."

"I can picture that easily," Nate chuckled. "Since I got here, Ralphie has been chasing Pat."

Shaking his head, Reggie smiled, "Not this time. The red head chased the blond."

Tony and Nate widely opened their eyes, obviously surprised. Noticing their shock, Ray fell into a giggling fit. Only a few tables away, the quadruple Rs, Carrol, Billy and Pat loudly roared laughing, causing Angelo and Reggie to turn toward the sound.

Still giggling, Pat got up and went over to the table where Angelo, Reggie, Tony, Ray and Nate were sitting. Pat took a free chair, waved them all over the table so he could softly snigger, "Since Saturday afternoon, Ralphie's been sneaking peaks. By Sunday, all one of us would need to do is ask. We've seen each other at least twenty times, but today, we're changing into Speedos in my dorm room. Rafe's not even there, but Ralphie turns away from me, so all I can see is butt!" All six at that table and the other six at the other table roared laughing. The Core Rimmers that had been at school walked out of the chow line and into the dining room to hysterical laughter erupting at tables of boys around the room. Pat giggled, "So that's why I was chasing him."

Slyly glancing at each other while laughter became soft giggling, Angelo and Reggie knew from the reactions around the room that what they had already done in the mens' room was normal.

Thanks to telepaths sharing with John Hundser, soon all the Core Rimmers knew what the joke was. Pat got up to return to his table. Evilily sniggering, Prez put his tray down on a table and called, "Pat, since you and Ralphie are wearing boardies, I'm curious. Where are the Speedos now?"

Blushing almost as red as his hair, Pat giggled, "Stretched beyond reasonable reuse. We'll need to make another trip to the store, Prez." The entire dining room exploded in loud laughter.

Having noticed Angelo and Reggie together, Prez quickly went over to them, saying, "It's good to see you two here," and to ask, "before you take off after lunch, please stop at my table?"

Taken aback that the division director was speaking to them, and wanted to see them, Reggie obediently nodded, "Sure."

"Is something wrong, Prez?" Angelo wondered.

Shaking his head, Prez smiled, "I didn't see you here for dinner Sunday, or any meal all yesterday. Not only are you here, but I see Jay's already given you Mr. Fuzzies."

Angelo grinned, "Getting out of the house was a bit easier today. I saw Erik, Travis, Scott and Lance sitting at the picnic table behind townhouse six. Meeting four is easier than four hundred."

"Then we met Ray and Tony by the pools," Reggie continued.

"They showed us around the rec center."

Angelo nodded and added, "We came over here to get comm-badges. Reyes and Ryan were just leaving, and had us meet Jay and Chris."

Seeing Chris and Jay come through a dimensional door, Prez loudly chuckled, "Speaking of the Fuzzy devils."

Chris giggled. Nearing the table Prez was standing at, Jay grinned, "We went to check the kids at the other base. Little guys and girls asked us for something more than the playground, so we've got a task to work on. The next thing we know, about a dozen gay guys were asking for Fuzzy G-strings." He more loudly announced, "Cozy Cuzzy Fuzzy Water Blaster Battle Two is scheduled for nine o'clock tonight, at Oneula Beach. Everyone's welcome to play, but only gay guys get cuddly fuzzy cozies. Straight guys, wear your underwear." Ensembles of hoorays, yippees and laughter erupted.

Chris tapped Jay to get his attention and then pointed to the entrance. Erik, Travis, Lance and Scott were entering and heading into the kitchen. Chris told Prez, "We're going to see what we can do about finding some kewl stuff for our little kids."

"Go for it," Prez widely smiled. Chris and Jay hurried after their four friends. Glancing down at Angelo and Reggie, Prez queried, "I'll see you in a little while?"

"Kewl," Angelo and Reggie chorused.

Nodding, Prez said, "See y'all in a bit," and then returned to the table where Keith, Derrick, Mike, Troy and Sean were sitting. Derrick and Mike were already eating, so they could make a quick trip to the condo where Reyes and Ryan were.

Noticing uncertain glances that Reggie and Angelo were sharing, Nate grinned, "Prez tries to find time to greet all the new kids. It sometimes takes a while, but it's on his list of things to do."

Tony grinned, "Not to mention, you're obviously becoming a couple. Word's getting around that he and all the Core Rimmers especially like seeing couples hookin' up."

Finished with his lunch, Ray put his glass of soda down. Quite abruptly, Ray glanced to his left at Tony, and to his right at Nate, sadly admitting, "I can't do it."

"Gotchya," Nate chuckled.

Tony carefully checked, "Another day?"

More embarrassed than he had ever been before, Ray shrugged and mumbled, "Maybe."

Nate locked eyes with Ray and then Tony, softly admitting, "It was an idea, and even I wonder where it came from. It sure isn't something I would've dared consider, never mind said, before coming here." He turned to Angelo and Reggie, softly chortling, "It might have something to do with all the boyfriends hooking up, and making it look easy."

"It sure ain't easy!" Angelo laughed. "I had a couple of nervous breakdowns the first half hour."

Turning red again, Reggie chuckled, "I think I almost had an accident in my shorts, three times the first hour."

Giggling, Ray told Angelo and Reggie, "You're sure making it look easy. If you were sitting any closer together, one of you would be on the other's lap."

Tony smirked, "Yesterday, Lance Kinchen and Scott Shetley, two of the seemingly straightest dudes I'd ever met, hooked up. Phil Nash hooked up with Owen Reed last night. Today, it's you two; friends only a little more than an hour ago, but you both sure seem different now."

Having just met them earlier that morning, Angelo wondered, "What surprised you about Lance and Scott?"

Tony shrugged, "They're heavy metal head bangers. When I saw them wearing Mr. Fuzzy thongs last night, my eyes almost jumped outta their sockets, I was so shocked."

"They seemed like close friends from the same city, with similar interests, sharing a room," Nate added. "The three of us live in the other hall though, so it's possible we didn't notice how much closer they were getting."

Reggie revealed, "Angelo and I were thinking the same sort of stuff about Tony and Ray. We were wondering how we could be close enough to be roommates, like you two, just after we left you to come here."

Angelo admitted, "And we also wondered how we could move beyond best friends and roommates to boyfriends, like Lance and Scott, and Erik and Travis. Come to find out, they think of each other as more than boyfriends, they're committed partners."

"So there's another stage to consider that we haven't come close to... yet," Reggie softly said. "There's a whole bunch of things Angelo and I want to share that we haven't said beans about. What about later; where will we have dinner? Up until Prez stopped by, I could've answered, either at my family's place or at Angelo's. Now there's another option too; right here, where our other friends are."

Glancing around the table, Angelo wondered, "What about after dinner? Where will we be as a couple then, and will we be alone to say the things we want to say? Assuming everything is still very kewl, where will we be sleeping? I haven't had a friend spend the night since before starting sixth grade, over two years ago. Just the thought of spending the night with Reggie makes me shiver all over, but we'll be at his place or mine, where we certainly can't make a lot of noise." Tony, Ray and Nate evilly snickered.

Reaching for Angelo's hand and having it taken, Reggie giggled, "All we're saying is that there's a lot of uncertainty in everything we've already done and will do. I didn't know Lance and Scott were into heavy metal, but I saw two dudes who are just like any of us. The biggest difference is when one wants a hug or a kiss, they know who will give that hug or kiss."

Ray asked, "So, it's a challenge is what I'm hearing, or have I misunderstood?"

"Yep, a good challenge," Reggie replied.

Angelo squeezed Reggie's hand, answering, "The best part is, for me anyway, is I can share stuff that lots of people wouldn't be interested in. The amazing thing is that I want to tell Reggie all my goofy ideas and secrets. It's camaraderie taken to a whole new level." He released Reggie's hand to gather stuff onto his tray, smiling, "Now it's time for us to get back to the challenge."

All the others nodded, smiled and began gathering up their trays. They went to the dishwasher, left their trays and said their goodbyes. Nate returned to the dining room to check on his younger brothers. Tony and Ray left the CIC. Angelo and Reggie went to the table where Prez was sitting with Keith, Sean and Troy.

As soon as Reggie and Angelo approached, Prez warmly smiled, "I'm really glad you're here. Have a seat, dudes." Prez then introduced Angelo, Reggie, Troy and Sean.

Watching Angelo sit, Keith chuckled, "Yesterday, before the school day started, your mom asked us to find a way to get you out of the house. Now, we can proudly say, it worked, and we didn't do squat!" All six of them uncontrollably cracked up.

Prez sniggered, "Obviously, all we needed to do was have Reggie standing there with us."

Blushing as much as his new boyfriend, Angelo giggled, "You asked us over here so you could goof on us?"

Shaking his head, Prez smiled, "Nope, my real purpose was to say congratulations, and remind you that everything at these bases is at your disposal. This is your home as much as anyone else's."

"Thanks," Angelo said appreciatively.

Reggie softly offered, "There's some really kewl stuff here."

Keith nodded and smiled, "All courtesy of Clan Short, The Federation of Planets and Starfleet." During the next minutes, the three couples shared some facts about their partnerships. Being new fathers, Troy and Sean said a lot about their sons, which got Prez and Keith taking about their sons. Everything was going well, until things got silly a few tables away.

* * * * *

Ewa Beach Dormitory #3

Tuesday, November 9, 2004 10:30AM HTZ

In room thirty-one-fifteen, Phil Nash and Owen Reed immediately took their clothes off, ready to try what they had learned from the facts-of-life video. Since meeting, Phil shared a lot of memories with Owen, but needed to gently prod his new boyfriend to learn some of what his life had been like. When Owen resisted, Phil carefully took him in his arms, suggesting, "Like this, you can tell me everything. Neither of us can see our expressions, so it should be easier."

Owen whined, "Why do you want to know so badly?"

"Because I'm already falling in love with you," Phil softly shared. "In the video, they said we needed to really know each other. We've already kissed, hugged, talked with Craig, and spent the night together. I really want to take the next steps with you, Owen. Our stiffies prove we're attracted, so let's do this right."

Shuddering and shaking, Owen softly said, "I don't have any normal memories, like you have. Everything I remember is bad."

Trying a little harder, Phil gently asked, "Who were the other three that you shared a room with?"

Owen softly answered, "Lee Bennett, Carlos Burns and Conrad Bowers."

"What're they like?"

"Lee's sixteen, the oldest at our orphanage; Carlos is fifteen and Conrad is thirteen."

"Were you friends with any of them?"

Shrugging, Owen sighed, "We weren't allowed to talk about anything other than chores. We weren't enemies or nothin', just stuck in the same shitty situation, so we dealt with it. I watched more TV at school than I ever could at the orphanage. When they put us in our rooms for the night, we had to be perfectly quiet, do homework and go to sleep. Most of the time, we didn't bother doing homework, and just went to bed. We didn't even have a mattress or a real bed, only a big foam pad for all of us to sleep on."

Phil asked, "What was school like? Did you know anyone special there, or have a favorite subject?"

Beginning to shed tears, Owen softly wept, "We barely made it to school half the time because we were too sick or too weak. There was no one at school either, because we couldn't go anywhere, bring anyone home or do anything except return home. We had doctor's notes excusing us from gym class. We were always mocked, the fringe low-life orphans. In September, I had just started seventh grade for the second year. Lee should've been in eleventh grade, but was restarting ninth grade." Owen broke down crying, "Please don't make me tell you more. There's nothing to tell. After five years, I barely remember my parents. Lots of times I thought of running away, not getting on the bus and just going away, anywhere. Our lives started after we were rescued, in a hospital bed. We did nothing, had nothing, and said nothing. The first time I had hope was watching TV in a hospital bed, Thursday afternoon." Burying his face on Phil's shoulder, Owen wailed, "Please don't hate me!"

Blinking away tears, Phil assured, "I could never hate you. I won't pity you either, Owen. What I am going to do is give you more hope, by showing you everything I know."

Owen sobbed, "How?"

"In the best ways, like a best friend and your boyfriend. Trust me, okay?"

Owen whimpered, "Okay, but I'm so scared. All of us probably are, just about different stuff. All we want to be is normal. Do you have any idea how kewl it was our first night here? We got brand new clothes for the first time. We saw a concert for the first time. AJ, Jerry, Troy and Sean stopped by the common room to check on us. We went to our rooms, when we wanted to, and watched TV from our new beds until we fell asleep."

Gently shushing his boyfriend, Phil promised, "I'm gonna make it better. If I know Craig, he's already doing the same stuff with Felicity that I'm planning with you."

Owen sniffled, "What are you planning?"

Pulling back slightly to make eye contact, Phil shared, "For the next day or two, it'll be me and you, alone most of the time and learning about all sorts of stuff, including a lot of what we saw on the video. Then we'll start adding some friends, like Jake and Terry, and then your roommate, because he'll see what we're doing and get interested too." He pulled back slightly, warmly smiled and asked, "Are you ready to start?"

Nodding and wiping his eyes, Owen forced a smile and answered, "Thank you."

Phil planted a tender kiss, then smiled, "You don't have to thank me for anything. This is gonna be very kewl. We're going to learn a lot about each other, just by going through stuff together." He then led Owen to his desk, pointed at the Mac and told Owen, "Computers are our friends. I can show you the whole world, a little at a time. Luckily, I haven't touched this thing, so even that's gonna be fun for both of us."

Owen giggled, "Aren't we gonna have fuzzy play time?"

Phil nodded and laughed, "Hell yeah, we are! Right now, we're limp again because we got sad. I guarantee we'll have enough fun that we'll get hard again, and then we can have sex, and then we'll look around the Internet some more, and then more sex." He sat down on his desk chair and guided Owen onto his left thigh.

Owen shyly wondered, "Why do you love me?"

Phil grinned, "Because you're a beautiful dude, inside and out. What you had to deal with before isn't your fault." He patted Owen's belly and explained, "As you get healthier, we'll be able to do more stuff outside. Always remember, you already are everything you hoped to one day be, Owen. Even if you don't really know what that is now, you will learn." He asked, "Do you know what that makes you?"

Uncertainly tilting his head, Owen blinked, "Being everything I want, but not knowing what it might be?"

Phil nodded and smiled, "That makes you like me and at least half the kids here, dude." He reached over and opened the Macbook, instructing, "If this is anything like a Windows machine, it's going to do some software preparation and then ask some fill-in-the-blanks questions." Phil powered up the laptop and prompted, "This is an easy beginning. Tell me what kind of stuff you like."

Owen shrugged then giggled, "Pretty pictures," and hid his face on Phil's shoulder again.

Phil chuckled, "That works. While this machine does the installations, I'll show you some pretty pictures." He reached for the television remote control and turned it on. Phil then pressed the button for the channel listing.

Owen excitedly wondered, "How'd you do that?"

Showing Owen the remote control, Phil answered, "The 'Guide' button brings up the channel list. Press it again and it goes away." He handed Owen the remote and smiled, "Here, you do it."

"What if I break it?" Owen worried.

"You can't break it by pressing buttons, dude. Sometimes you have to experiment with stuff. This is a different remote than the one I had at home; instead of cable, here we have satellite TV. Our first night in this room, me and Craig had to figure stuff out too. This system receives local Hawaiian channels, and a lot from the United States and Japan."

The computer had a set up screen displayed and was ready for input, but Owen was still concentrating on the TV remote, so Phil patiently explained simple operations. All that Owen initially understood was the channel and volume buttons. Phil showed Owen how to set favorite channels, by demonstrating that Craig had set some favorites and so had he. Then Phil described what all the other buttons were for, including how to set the TV timer, so it would shut off on its own.

After about twenty minutes of experimentation and learning, Owen had found his pretty pictures, a program about the Serengeti region of Africa on one of the Discovery channels. Since Owen was busily concentrating, Phil occupied himself by tenderly kissing and licking Owen's torso. Upon landing on the channel, they happened to catch a sunrise. Thrilling Owen further, Phil showed him how to turn on the stereo, so they could hear the program with much better sound. Breaking Owen out of his musings, Phil carefully wrapped a hand around his boyfriend's erection and playfully sniggered, "I told you we'd have lots of fun."

"You touch it really nice too," Owen giggled.

Phil checked, "You only got to play with yourself since the hospital?"

Owen nodded, "We were never alone at the orphanage. I didn't even know I could or that it was normal until a doctor told me. I'd heard stuff at school, but never tried it, cos they said it was bad."

"How far did you go?"

"I'm not sure what you mean."

"Did you make yourself shake or cum?"

"No; it just felt really good."

"Would you like me to do that for you?"

"If you want."

"I really do," Phil enthusiastically replied, and started stroking Owen. Barely believing he was touching another dude's dick, Phil couldn't figure out what to watch; Owen's dick, or his heaving chest, or the expressions on his face. In under a minute, Owen was squirming on Phil's lap and whimpering. Barely a minute later, Owen huffed, "Something's happening. I feel weird. It's scary."

Phil instructed, "Hold me tight and kiss me now, Owen."

Doing as he was told, Owen's squirming and trembling intensified. Luckily for both of them, Owen seemed to scream into Phil's mouth when he climaxed. Needing oxygen, Owen broke the kiss and panted, "I love you."

Phil smiled, "I love you too, Owen," and gently pinched Owen's foreskin over the head, knowing it would be sensitive, but needing to get the last drops out. Owen gasped and squeaked. Phil evilly snickered, "That was pretty good, huh?"

"Awesome!" Owen breathlessly cheered. "My heart never beat so fast." Seeing the mess he had made, Owen confirmed, "I did that?"

Phil nodded and giggled, "It's your semen and now it's mine." Raising his hand, Phil licked off the thick white fluid. Having never done it before and seeing Owen's grimace, Phil assured, "It's good."

"Yeah?"

"Kiss me."

More curious than afraid, Owen kissed Phil and tasted what he had produced. Leaning back, Owen giggled, "I want to do that for you," and reached a hand down to begin.

Phil's eyes closed and he sighed, "I can't put out yet."

"It feels good though?"

Nodding, Phil opened his eyes and smiled, "The very best."

"How will I know if I'm doing it right?"

"I'll tell you if you're not," Phil assured. "I'll react the same ways you did, just without semen." Owen's feather light fist was barely putting any pressure on Phil's bone; it was barely enough to move his foreskin. Phil's eyes rolled back in his head. Resting his head against Owen's chest, Phil began kissing and licking again, and softly moaned. Believing he had done something wrong, Owen quickly released Phil's dick and apologized. "It didn't hurt," Phil assured, and guided Owen's hand back onto his dick. "You're so gentle," Phil sighed. "You're doin' me really good. When I moan or groan, that just means I really like what you're doing."

Owen grinned, "I like your fuzzy."

"Your fuzzy's a lot fuzzier than mine," Phil giggled, and suddenly bounced from an incredible shiver.

This time, Owen wasn't quite as afraid and checked, "You're okay?"

"I love you, Owen," Phil moaned. "Oh... Omigod, I'll spend the rest of my life caring about you."

Happily giggling, Owen leaned over to place a few tender kisses. Unknowingly, Owen was driving Phil closer to the edge with each kiss. After unexpectedly long minutes, Phil held Owen tightly and began quaking in the chair, practically bouncing Owen on his thigh. Needing to thrust his hips, but not wanting to send Owen flying to the floor, Phil extended his legs, flexed for several moments, and then grunted. Intently watching Phil's expression, hard dick and flexing leg muscles, Owen loudly cheered, "YES! OH, HELL YEAH! I DID IT!"

Still breathlessly panting, Phil relaxed and began giggling. In moments, he was laughing as hard as ever, partly from his first shared sexual experience, and partly from Owen's loud remarks that anyone in the dorm had to have heard. Ecstatic, Owen laughed along. Phil roared, "It's as much fun to do it as it is having it done, huh?"

"I feel like the king of the world!" Owen giggled. "That was the single most important success of my life! I REALLY DID IT!"

Nodding, Phil giggled, "You did it all right, in a way that was very different from my way. It was so different, and built so slowly, I wasn't sure it was happening until it did."

Owen enthusiastically cackled, "Can I do it again?" Phil cracked up. Proving he was serious, Owen began toying with Phil's hypersensitive bone.

Gasping and squirming, Phil held onto Owen, stood and picked him up. With Owen's hand off his cock, but still shivering, Phil prompted, "Let me tell you a little something?" When Owen rapidly nodded, Phil offered, "Because you were sitting on my lap, you had to stroke me overhand, meaning your palm was on the top side of my bone. When I did you, it was underhand, with my palm underneath your bone. That's the way I do myself. Never once did I even think to try it overhand. I use a tighter grip, but you used a much lighter grip. Again, I never tried it that way. You made the whole thing last a really long time. Everything you did for me was fantastic. You are awesome, Owen."

Holding on tight, Owen rambled, "I always knew I liked other dudes, but you are amazing! You're so patient and understanding, like you know exactly what to tell me. I've never seen a sexier dude. It's not only your dick I love, it's your whole body, Phil. Your legs were like rocks, dude!"

"From playing soccer," Phil sniggered, and put Owen down on the floor.

Owen flung himself against Phil, held on tightly and dreamily sighed, "What's next?"

Phil smiled, "We need to clean our dicks. Then we'll get to the computer, so I can show you a few other things."

Nodding, Owen giggled, "I wanna go through all the fuzzy steps with you."

"We will," Phil brightly smiled. "We're gonna take our time though, Owen. As much as I want sex, I really want to know you, so we're always as inseparable as we've been since last night."

"Kewl," Owen giggled. Leading the way, Phil walked out of his room with Owen holding his hand and adoringly glancing at him. First, they went to urinals to relieve themselves. Owen asked, "Do you think Jake and Terry are doing what we did?"

Phil shrugged, "Probably, but I don't really know. They knew each other from their orphanage. The only thing that matters to me is you."

"I was only wondering," Owen softly assured.

Phil grinned, "Remember the video? Everything we've done and will eventually do, other couples do too. How far Jake and Terry get really doesn't interest me. Only you interest me, Owen. I told you that I watched plenty of other dudes, so I know enough to say that you are all I could ever want or need. You told me you had hopes, for the first time, while you were in the hospital. Did those hopes include a boyfriend?"

Stepping back from the wall, Owen thoughtfully scowled, "Yeah, but I thought it would be a long time away."

Also finishing, Phil shared, "Do you see what your hope did?" Owen shook his head, so Phil explained, "By hoping for a boyfriend, you opened yourself up to the possibility. I took a chance last night and fulfilled your hope. You're fulfilling my hopes too; hopes that I had no idea would ever actually happen. With all the gay dudes here, I didn't see one that attracted me, until I saw you. I want way more than sex, and that's all I thought I might ever get; a string of temporary boyfriends. Then I saw you. It turns out, you're not only extremely cute, but you're a really caring, gentle and sensitive dude. What we have already is what I want; a boyfriend that I can give more than sex, and who'll give me more than sex. Everything I give you, you're returning already. That's a real relationship, and way more than I expected." He went to the sinks.

Following his boyfriend, Owen wondered, "What am I giving you?"

Looking at his boyfriend in the mirror while washing his hands, Phil grinned, "Your heart, Owen. It was in your eyes last night and has been ever since. You've placed your trust in me, I know that, and I won't ever let you down. I'll always try to do my very best for you, because that's what partners, husbands and wives do, every day."

Owen reminded, "Last night and during the video, I told you that I'd always tell you the truth. I'll never break that promise."

Phil nodded and smiled, "What more could I ask of anyone?"

Washing his dick and afraid to look up, Owen softly muttered, "I'm scared of taking too much and not giving enough back."

"Everybody is. That's why telling the truth matters so much."

"At the orphanage, they yelled at us when we lied and when we told the truth. There never was a right way to say or do anything."

"Lying is never good," Phil simply stated. "Lying means you know you've done something that someone else won't be happy about. Since you're afraid, you might think that it's better to make up a story. The stories almost always come around again to haunt you though. Telling the truth is most important in families and close relationships." Phil quickly went to the shower changing room and returned with a towel so they could dry their hands and dicks. As they were doing that, Phil reminded, "Saturday morning, when Craig and I moved into our room, the Core Rimmers told us that we're all brothers, sisters and family. That means we always tell everyone the truth. What you learn from me, you can share with anyone you know. I don't mean sex, that's between you me, but everything other than sex, like the TV remote control. Show your roommate, Ellis, how the satellite television works. Since this is our home and everyone is family, do what you can, the very best you can. That shows me how much you value what I say and show you. It also gives me really good reasons to kiss you and play with your pretty dick." Intensely blushing, Owen cracked up.

Phil giggled, "It's called rewards. When anyone does something you like or need, you show them or tell them how much you appreciate it, so they do it again. As soon as I see Drew and Corey, they're getting hugs, for suggesting we watch that video."

Owen held up the towel, asking, "What do we do with this?"

"Bring it back to my room," Phil grinned. "Somehow I get the feeling we'll be needing to wash our dicks at least once more today."

Owen giggled, "Did I do something to be rewarded for?"

Slipping behind his boyfriend, Phil sniggered, "Not yet," and then softly kissed Owen's neck and tickled his ribs. Cringing and insanely cackling, Owen ran back to Phil's dorm room, and Phil hurried after him. Entering the room and closing the door, Phil teased, "Have I mentioned you've got a real nice tush?"

"You're lying!" Owen giggled.

"I'll never lie about that," Phil assured, and plopped down onto his desk chair. "Now you can park that pretty butt over here on my lap."

Sitting down and wrapping an arm around Phil's shoulder, Owen grinned, "I'm liking this way too much."

"So am I," Phil giggled, and then reached for the computer, asking, "Did you get to use computers at school?"

"Very little, and I wasn't too good with 'em. I can type with one finger, two if I use both hands."

"We had a couple o' computers in our house," Phil shared. "One was a Mac, and I liked it, so that's why I took this one."

"It wants your name."

Phil prompted, "Go ahead and type it for me." Owen squinted at him. Phil giggled, "What? Do you think you can learn without doing? If so, next time I'll jack off and you can just watch."

Impatiently grunting, Owen smirked, "You don't get to play with yourself anymore," and then pulled the computer closer. With one finger per hand, he eventually typed 'Phil Nash'.

"Press the Enter key and let's see what's next."

"It wants the time zone."

"Scroll through the list and find Hawaii."

In a few moments, Owen found and selected The Republic Of Hawaii. He then confirmed the time and realized it was quarter after twelve in the afternoon.

Phil hummed then said, "Most of the kids have probably already eaten lunch. As soon as we get through the set up, we'll have to put our clothes on and go eat. Are you hungry?"

Owen nodded, "A little, yeah."

"I've gotta pay closer attention to meal time, dude," Phil complained. "You won't get bigger and healthier if I can't get you to the dining room."

Owen giggled, "I think your hand was full at the time."

Phil chuckled, "Yeah, which means I got a snack that you didn't." Phil saw the Mac desktop had started, but didn't get the chance to say anything before being deeply kissed. Moments later, Phil felt Owen's hand caressing his dick and nads.

Only because he needed to breathe, Owen broke the kiss and smiled, "You got hard really fast."

Phil giggled, "That kiss alone would've done it."

"Consider this your reward for being awesome."

"Omigod, Owen," Phil whimpered. Owen was still using an overhand technique, but was using a firmer grip. There was no chance of lasting long and Phil knew it.

"I won't ever disappoint you," Owen softly promised, and then dove for another deep kiss. With tongues darting, Owen purred and Phil moaned until he extended his legs and grunted once again. Breaking the kiss and watching Phil's eyes practically spinning in their sockets, Owen giggled, "I really love doin' that! What's even more awesome is knowing that I'll be the one to make you really spew. We'll be even, since you were the first to make me shoot."

Wearily, Phil warned, "You have until I recover to get dressed and run out of here for lunch."

Madly giggling, Owen got up off of Phil's lap, and then happily reminded, "No matter how fast I run, you'll catch me."

Spinning in the chair to watch his boyfriend dress, Phil sighed, "It never occurred to me that you might be hornier than I am."

Slipping into his clothes, Owen giggled, "I'm happier here and now with you. I couldn't even try to hide that. My boyfriend is very cute too, so I want to play with his willie." He slid into his sandals, wildly cackling, "The best part is, you don't make a mess, so I can do you every chance I get!"

Phil grinned and slowly counted down, "Ten... nine... eight..." Grabbing his T-shirt, Owen raced out of the room and down the hall toward the common room, hysterically laughing the entire way. Phil quickly got dressed, turned off the TV and the stereo, and then dashed after his naive boyfriend. He took the same route, through the common room and down the hallway where Lance, Scott, Pat, Rafe, Jay and Chris live. Seconds later, he was bashing through the inner door.

Hiding far under the stairs, Owen covered his mouth to mute his laughter. Phil ran right past Owen and through the outer door. Owen hurried after Phil and heard his boyfriend complaining, "How the hell did he get through the quad so quick?" Phil slowed down, allowing Owen to tap him on the back as he raced by. Starting to run again, Phil sniggered, "You're gonna get kissed so hard you'll need replacement lips!" Owen howled laughing.

* * * * *

Sullivan's Island, Owen's Residence

Tuesday, November 9, 2004 5:15PM EST

Waking alone again, Paul wiped the sleep from his eyes, and then looked at the television. Reyes and Ryan were asleep in bed, on top of the blanket, and wearing board shorts but shirtless. This time, Ryan had an arm over and around Reyes. Paul called, "Stevie?"

"Yes, Paul?"

"Has anything happened?"

"Not much," Stevie answered. "After breakfast, Reyes introduced Chris and Jay to the UNIT boys in their Command Center. Two boys needed comm-badges, but Reyes passed that job to Chris and Jay, so he could take Ryan back to the apartment, to swap cold and warm compresses. That never happened though. You not being there caused Reyes to cry. John Hundser had them transported off the walkway and into the apartment. Ryan prompted Reyes to get more rest, and this is where they've been since."

Blown away, Paul hung his head and sighed.

The television hissed, causing Paul to look up and around, half expecting another angelic visit. Only the video on the television had changed. Now Paul was seeing Keith and Prez, dressed in boardies and T-shirts, slow dancing to old rock and roll. "Stevie," Paul called, "what is this?"

Alden growled, "It's intimacy, Paul. This was nine days ago. Prez and Keith had been leaders and fathers a little more than a day."

"I didn't ask to see this," Paul grumbled.

"True, but this is what you need to see," Alden sighed.

Switching to a video of Ronnie and Garrett talking alone in Des Moines, Kerry added, "You've obviously forgotten what intimacy is. It's not just sex. It's all the heart-to-heart talking a couple does. Ronnie was used for kiddie porn. Garrett was sexually abused by his father. Garrett and Ronnie really like one another, but before they can make love the right way, they're talking about their pasts, so they can understand one another. Maybe they'll move beyond hugs, kisses and talking, or maybe they won't, but they will be best friends, with intimate knowledge of each other that very few other people know."

Stevie reminded, "We're AI's, destined to get bodies and become just like you, Reyes and all the other androids walking around. We're a lot of things to a lot of people, but we think of each of those people as friends. Some are far more than friends." He switched the television to a clip of Jon and Mary talking earlier that morning in the kitchen. Stevie explained, "That's my mommy and daddy, twisted up inside, their hearts breaking because Jerry, Joey and KC have left the house, after your argument with Ryan. They want to be patient and understanding, but they want their son, grandson and household back to normal. Me and all my brothers care about every kid at every Clan Division around the world. We can't wait for bodies to interact with them as people, not just voices from speakers."

Jack sighed, "We understand pride, and have seen it as the driving force responsible for so much good. Now we're seeing the opposite side, where pride is hurting you, Ryan, Reyes, Jerry, Joey, KC, Jon and Mary. It's also affecting Reyes' entire family and everyone that knows them. George isn't saying a word about this because he's busy, talking to kids at Orlando H.Q, some of whom want to come here and slap you around for being stubborn and stupid."

"Aw, crap," Stevie groaned. "It's too late, bros. Danny is climbing the stairs."

Icarus whimpered, "I don't want to see or hear this. Bye!"

Alden evilly snickered, "Your room isn't safe any longer, Paul. The longer you stubbornly hide out, the longer the list of visitors will get. Marc, Derrick and Prez are all considering coming to talk to you." The television video returned to Reyes and Ryan asleep in bed.

Paul hurried to lock his bedroom door.

Moments later, there was a single knock on the door. Danny called, "Let's talk, Paul."

Paul loudly replied, "I really don't have much to say, Danny."

Danny queried, "Are you going to talk to your bro and Reyes?"

Unable to decide, Paul answered, "Maybe."

The doorknob rattled, making it obvious that Danny had tried to turn it and enter the room. Danny impatiently huffed, "Unlock the door, Paul." Not wanting to deal with anything or anyone, Paul didn't reply. "Fine," Danny softly said. Seconds later, the door disappeared, Danny stepped into the room and the door reappeared, closed and locked as it had been.

At Paul's shocked expression, Danny quipped, "It's good to have a King Mikyvis in your head."

"I guess no wasn't a suitable answer," Paul griped.

"Not at this point," Danny began. "This is the smallest, most closely intertwined division in the Clan. When one of us has a problem, we all have to work it out together. At this moment, the Owens family has shrunk to three, because you had a disagreement with Ryan over something Reyes had no control over."

Paul yelled, "Why can't I decide what to do and when? So far, Jon's been up here, Saint Mikey popped in unannounced, five of six AI's have been chewing on my ear and now you too."

"You haven't even started to feel discomfort yet," Danny smirked. "If you think I'm a bit perturbed, then I highly suggest you come downstairs for dinner on your own power. If Mary has to come up here, I guarantee a much more uncomfortable experience. You know that she won't allow a third skipped meal today. She will grab you by the ear and drag you down the steps. To make your future hours here even less comfortable, the last I heard, Marc was cleaning litter boxes in the basement. Consider yourself very lucky if he doesn't come in here and dump the mess on you, and then transport you onto a bio-bed under a forcefield, to examine every line of code in your head for the cause of this malfunction. Then there's a very disturbed Carolina Panther slinking around corners who might pounce at any given moment. And need I remind you that Mike Gibbons and Derrick Seibert are Reyes' fathers? Mike's a sweetheart, but he's also built like a friggin' NFL linebacker who could knock you through walls without even working up a sweat. The only thing greater than Reyes' love for Derrick is Derrick's love for Reyes. I don't even want to consider what he could say or do. Whatever's left of you, Marc would put back together, and then ask if you're ready to talk to Ryan and Reyes. God and all the Saints won't be able to help you if you say no, because then you'll get Mike's and Derrick's best friends and lovers here, Prez and Keith. At this point, I'll have everyone else here transported to the Ark compound for the duration of that catastrophic event.

"Are you getting the picture, Paul? People that only know of you, Ryan and Reyes are ready to dismantle you over this incredibly foolish display of obstinance."

"Is that all you wanted to do; threaten me?"

Danny evilly snickered, "If you think a single word I said is a threat, I encourage you to test that theory. When Mary rips your ear off, we'll call you Picasso. When Marc dumps soiled cat litter on you, you'll look like a Picasso. Thankfully, we won't have to smell the cat urine and feces very long, since you'll be under a forcefield on a bio-bed. Then, when Marc rewrites your code, you can introduce yourself around as Pablo."

Seeing Paul unmoved, Danny hollered, "You're stubbornness is fucking up this division and half the Clan, you imbecile! All because of unforeseen circumstances? Give me a fucking break! My patience is exhausted! I swear, if you haven't gone to Ryan and Reyes by morning, I'll have you transported to the most remote place on the planet, so you can be completely alone. You'll never have to worry about caring for another person again. You can wallow in your sorrows without impacting another person anywhere." Going to the door, Danny warned, "Test the theories, Paul. I dare you." He left the room and slammed the door closed behind him.

"This wasn't my fault," Paul softly grumbled.

Stevie gently said, "The original encounter with homophobes wasn't your fault, bro. It wasn't Ryan's fault, nor was it Reyes' fault. It is your choice to remain here and separate from them."

Paul sighed, "I know I need to talk to them. What I could or might say is the big problem."

"I'll do all I can do to help you," Stevie offered.

"You're not Ryan or Reyes though, Stevie."

"True, but I do have algorithms that would allow me to suggest possible responses that Ryan or Reyes might give you."

"You'll help me?"

"We're all trying to help you; all my brothers, daddy, mommy, even Danny was. It was your unwillingness to talk that put Danny in a confrontational mood. Please understand, the same way I've developed strong connections to this family and this division, each of my brothers have done the same. For instance, Alden is connecting with the Hundser family; Kerry has connected with the Morrison family; and one day, I hope to have the Owens surname. Anything I can do, I will do, just to have my family happy again."

Sitting on the edge of his bed, Paul wondered, "How do I start?"

"As if you had Ryan and Reyes standing in front of you," Stevie answered.

"Both of them at once?"

Stevie giggled, "Yeah! This revolves around the three of you, so you can't really say different things to them. Or would you?"

Paul blinked, and then muttered, "Yes, I would."

"Okay, so what would you say to Ryan?"

"Please come home."

"What would you say to Reyes?"

"I don't think the three of us can work together."

"You've just proved that you're not ready to talk to either of them, Paul. Ryan would simply say no. Reyes would be very upset, and that would get Ryan even more upset."

Paul whined, "But that's how I really feel."

Stevie said, "You'd give up everything, your brother and Reyes?"

"No, of course not."

"That's where this would lead," Stevie said.

Stevie then replayed Ryan, sincerely saying, "If it had been him that was hurt, it would've been bad, but I probably could've talked him into staying. Because it was me, it's everybody's fault; the world is hell and we're only trying to find a temporary kawl spot. He can believe that all he wants, but I know we've found two permanent kawl spots, here in the Clan in general, and close to you."

"That was immediately after you left," Stevie explained, "before Ryan came to pack his clothes. That tells me that Ryan isn't staying with Reyes to spite you; he's there because that's really where he wants to be." Stevie then replayed more of what was said immediately after Paul's departure from Ewa Beach.

"He loves us too, Reyes," Ryan warmly said. "Paul's just got this funny way of showing it. He believes he's protecting me, but neither of us need that kind of protection, and I sure don't need to be protected from you. He'll eventually realize all that, when he wants. Until then, he'll be irrational and stubborn."

Reyes called, "Alden, get Ryan into clean clothes, please?" A second later, Reyes said, "Doc Andrews, this is my boyfriend, Ryan Owens. He'll be staying with us a while."

Ryan corrected, "A long while, since this is where Reyes lives."

Stevie reminded, "All that was said in the first minutes after you left. Ryan's not being stubborn; he's with Reyes because that really is where he wants to be. I'd also like you to hear what you missed minutes before Ryan and Reyes went back to bed this morning."

Reyes huffed, "I wish there were something we could do to get Paul here. Unfortunately, there isn't a single scenario I've played out that might work. Nothing I say is going to make this better."

Ryan explained, "When Paul is angry it taints everything around him. Once he gets here, we'll make sure he knows there's no bitterness or resentment on this side. Your wish to make a Paul sandwich is going to come true, you know?"

Reyes sighed, "I know."

Ryan worried, "What's wrong?"

"I'm empathic," Reyes reminded. "Without accessing any database, I can feel your disappointment and sadness. I felt his anger, and then sadness, and now confusion. He's fighting still, right now. He's not happy there and alone. Being here would only remind him to be angry. He thinks he's in a no win, damned if he does and damned if he doesn't situation."

Ryan huffed, "That's my bro," and then he whispered, "Let it out, love."

Reyes whimpered, "If I start, I might not stop."

Ryan prompted, "You show love in so many awesome ways to everyone you know. Let me hold you while you cry it out." Reyes started weeping and was soon wailing, like his entire world was ending.

Stevie faded out the pitiful sound of Reyes crying, and then explained, "Logically, you have only two possible paths, Paul; either you accept being with Ryan and Reyes, or you refuse that and accept living your life alone. Even the later decision isn't really acceptable, because it would adversely affect Ryan, Reyes, daddy, mommy, Jerry, Joey and everyone that knows you. Grandpa Danny may have been exceedingly grumpy, but when I strip away all the emotional parts, he really was saying the same things I just told you. That's why Alden sounded irritated. It's why George hasn't participated, and why Icarus has also stepped back."

Closing his eyes, Paul sighed, "I'm really screwed."

Stevie shared, "It's about to get worse, bro. Mommy is climbing the stairs to bring you down for dinner."

"I really couldn't eat a bite," Paul grouched.

"At least go downstairs with her and give it your best shot."

* * * * *

Ewa Beach, Condominium B

Tuesday November 9, 2004 11:57AM HTZ

Knocks on the door of unit 3-B woke Reyes and Ryan. Rolling out of bed, Reyes sleepily staggered out of the bedroom to answer the door. Automatically, Ryan shuffled after Reyes, hoping it was Paul standing at the door. Pulling the door open, Reyes found his entire family standing at the door. Most surprisingly, Jonah was without Gage for the first time since Saturday afternoon.

Dillon and Randy were holding large to-go cups. Derrick and Mike were holding plastic to-go food containers. Watching his eldest son's expression brighten, Mike grinned, "When Mohammad won't come to the mountain, the mountain comes to Mohammad, complete with lunch for two. Cheese burgers and fries are on today's menu."

Giggling, Reyes stepped aside to allow his family in. Waving them to follow, Ryan led the way to the small dinette table.

Entering the flat last, Derrick explained, "Jerry and Joey were looking for you at the CIC. When I didn't know for sure where you were, I had Alden brief me. You're off duty for the rest of the day, Reyes."

Bringing the cup of soda to the table, Dillon smiled, "This is a really nice place, bro."

Randy followed Dillon and rambled, "A nice big TV, a sound system, and there's even flowers on the table."

Having nothing to bring to the table, Jonah went in the opposite direction, loudly reporting, "Even the bedroom's really nice. It's not a king size bed, but a queen size. There's flowers in there too." He returned to the main rooms, giggling, "Me and Gage might have to grab a place like this..."

Evilly snickering, Mike interrupted, "In your dreams, Jonah."

Through his giggles, Jonah whined, "Why not?"

"When you're thirteen going on fifty-six, I'll think about it," Mike sniggered.

Taking a seat at the table, Ryan laughed, "You'll need to become an android too, Jonah."

"Within the next four years," Reyes smirked, and sat down beside Ryan. "You can have your own place in 2065."

Going into the kitchen, Jonah searched the fridge and cupboards, softly remarking, "I don't think I can wait that long."

Dillon and Randy plopped onto the couch. Randy picked up the remote control and turned on the television. Jonah walked across the rooms to join his brothers on the sofa.

Almost at the same time, Derrick leaned over to Reyes and Mike leaned closer to Ryan to whisper the same question; "Is there anything you'd like me to do that might help?"

Reyes smiled, "Thank you for offering, but really, there isn't anything you could say or do."

Clearly, so everyone could hear, Ryan said, "Please try to understand what it was like for us. All we wanted or needed was a warm place to sleep and something to eat. The cost for that was having someone's religion jammed down our throats; or someone else's drugs to either take or deliver; or to have sex with each other, or anyone they said. In some cases it was all three; pray to this deity, deliver this and pinch a little out for ourselves, then come back and we'll get it on. Everything was a struggle. Initially, our first day or so at AI Division, Danny, Marc, and even Jerry thought there was something wrong with me. Although everything has been really good for over two weeks, Paul's still living those battles. Everything we did together all day yesterday was really nice, but Paul's still waiting for the other shoe to drop. Somebody must want something, or we wouldn't be fed and we wouldn't have beds to sleep in.

"I see Paul's perspective, but I also see almost four hundred other kids here. This is the only other division we've visited, because Paul wanted to visit Reyes as much as me. Some of these kids were street prostitutes, surviving the best they could, just like Paul and I. During the concert Sunday night, Paul and I talked to some of them. I heard and believed what they were saying, but I'm sure Paul only heard what he wanted to hear. Like I told Reyes last night, if the same attack had happened on Sullivan's Island, that place wouldn't be safe and he'd want to leave as soon as possible. The only point I'm trying to make is that the Clan is a kewl and safe place to be. Near Reyes is where we both decided to be. In Paul's mind, homophobes changed that decision. I do not believe what my bro does.

"Since we're on the topic, I told Paul that Reyes wouldn't touch me without him here too. It became a gentlemen's bet when the whole Owens family heard us arguing. To prove that point, I ordered Stevie to relay video and audio to the TV in our bedroom." Brightly smiling at his new boyfriend, Ryan beamed, "Reyes hasn't done more than hug and kiss me. Even in the shower this morning, Reyes wouldn't take what I repeatedly sold and wanted him to have. Reyes is acting exactly like he said he might act if three became two. I couldn't be happier, or prouder of my new boyfriend."

After glancing around the room, but seeing no disapproving expressions, Ryan called, "Stevie, are you still relaying audio and video to Paul?"

"Yes, I am," Stevie replied.

"Is he still watching?"

"Not at the moment," Stevie answered. "He's having dinner with mommy and daddy, Les and Victoria."

Ryan ordered, "Stop the relay, Stevie. If Paul hasn't learned by now, he simply chooses not to."

"Done," Stevie responded, "but if he asks me to reestablish the connection, I will. Paul is learning, but he's really not ready to come and tell you or Reyes yet."

Facing Ryan, Reyes smirked, "You devil." Mike, Derrick, Jonah, Randy and Dillon began softly chortling.

Blushing, Ryan giggled, "The only way Paul could learn to trust you more than he already does is to see it for himself. If I recall correctly, Paul's exact words were, 'you don't lie, but conveniently omit certain details'.

Reyes smiled, "What am I gonna do with you?"

"Anything ya want!" Ryan laughed. Derrick, Mike, Jonah, Randy and Dillon cracked up.

Reyes giggled, "As soon as we're alone, we'll have to chat about a few things that occurred last night."

"There's no reason we need to be alone," Ryan giggled. "I was a slut!" Mike and Derrick roared laughing. Taking Reyes hand in his, Ryan smiled, "Before we went to bed, it was only partly for Paul's benefit. Laying on the couch with you, I nervously hoped you would and wouldn't make love to me, at the same time. Honestly, I've learned almost as much as Paul. All day today, everything I've said and done was completely for you." Never breaking eye contact with Ryan, Reyes widely smiled and glowed.

"Okay," Derrick chuckled, "we only wanted to see how you're doing and bring you lunch. It's time for us to leave." Jonah, Randy and Dillon got up from the sofa. Dillon and Randy went toward the door, but Jonah went to Reyes to give his bro a kiss on the cheek.

Standing and pushing his chair back under the table, Mike prompted, "Reyes, please consider coming to school with us tomorrow afternoon? We'll be focusing on jazz, and your input would be appreciated."

Nodding, Reyes queried, "As a guest speaker?"

Derrick stood and nodded, "We can only talk about the history that you lived part of."

"I'll be there," Reyes assured.

Ryan corrected, "We'll be there, love."

Patting Reyes on the back, Derrick grinned, "Stay and finish your lunch. We'll show ourselves out."

"Thanks, dad," Reyes giggled.

Unexpectedly, Mike kissed Ryan on the top of his head. Ryan smiled, "What was that for?"

Mike followed the rest of the family to the door. After everyone else had left, Mike answered, "For giving Reyes a little hope," and closed the door behind him.

With Reyes' eyes digging deep into his soul, Ryan giggled, "What?"

Reyes softly asked, "Please tell me what you're feeling?"

Ryan sighed, "That Paul's idiotic bullheadedness kept him from sharing great love and warmth. It permeates you, your family and this entire division. If only he had stayed, his anger would've been drowned. Once he decides to join us, he'll witness this for himself." After a brief pause, he softly admitted, "All morning, I've been reviewing possible pet names for you. You're not my honey, or baby or anything else. To me, you're the embodiment of love, so that's your pet name." He then wondered, "How do you feel?"

"Almost the same."

"Almost?"

Nodding, Reyes admitted, "Because you're here, I'm falling deeper in love with you."

Ryan giggled, "Even though I'm a conniving slut?"

Reyes smiled, "I can't fault you for how you deal with Paul. He's your brother. All I can say is, it's not what I would've done. I can only hope that someday we'll have him with us and feeling the same way we do."

After taking another bite out of his cheeseburger and swallowing, Ryan softly wondered, "What's the plan for the rest of the day?"

Reyes shrugged, "The only thing I need to do is have a chat with Grandpa Rob. Some time can be spent with Joey and Jerry. Maybe later we can find KC and Fred. Prez wants to jam for the kids later this afternoon too."

"That sounds good, but a little light on activity, compared to yesterday."

"Right after we're done eating, it's time for cold and warm compresses again. That was our original purpose, before I turned to jelly in your arms."

Ryan asked, "If I got naked for you, like last night, would you please touch more than my bruises?"

Slowly nodding, Reyes smiled, "You made my family believe I've been an innocent virgin. I was far from saintly when you backed up to me in the shower."

"True," Ryan giggled. "Your erection proved that you do love me, even though you didn't take me."

"Was it really enough?"

Rapidly nodding, Ryan assured, "It was perfect, Reyes. Being caressed and kissed by you was the most beautiful experience I've had in years. It'll be plenty if all we do is show a little love."

"Then that's the kind of stuff we'll do," Reyes promised.

Ryan checked, "You do realize that every day we'll go a little further?"

Reyes nodded, "Yeah. The longer Paul stays away, it becomes inevitable. I can't ignore what I'm feeling for you. That would be so wrong, for both of us."

Softly, Ryan assured, "He'll join us, Reyes. I just can't say when, how or why." After he and Reyes had eaten a little more, Ryan wondered, "What do you need to talk with Grandpa Rob about?"

Reyes sighed, and then answered, "The men that attacked us last night, and their loved ones." Noticing Ryan was patiently waiting for more, Reyes explained, "Manny is enhanced, and telepathic. Of the four men involved, the last one was actually the leader; he stirred up the other three. That man, and the first one in the group are married. The leader also had a four-year-old son. The other three men came here on vacation; one with his wife and the other two with their girlfriends. Some time in the next few days, I'm going to have to go meet with those women." Reyes picked up his cheeseburger again, but didn't immediately bite into it.

Ryan softly asked, "Is there something more?"

Shrugging, Reyes sighed, "The one thing that bugs me is that there's now one fatherless boy to be concerned about. How that's dealt with depends completely upon the boys' mother."

* * * * *

Ewa Beach, CIC Dining Room

Tuesday, November 9, 2004 11:57AM HTZ

Meanwhile, the two newest Core Rimmers, Chris and Jay, were working through lunch with Lance, Scott, Erik and Travis. Since there were so many kewl activities for bigger kids and teens, the goal was to provide more appropriate entertainment for the many dozens of little kids.

Lance recalled, "I went to a birthday party when I was about seven. At the party, they had these huge inflatable, transparent balls." Scott evilly grinned, causing Erik to crack up. Lance giggled, "Seriously, kids and even adults could climb into the center of the balls. It was like bumper cars at Coney Island. Kids rolled around and into each other. It was a blast and completely safe."

Beginning an Internet search on his PADD, Chris smiled, "We could get about a dozen of them for each base."

Erik remembered, "How about a few of those water trampolines? They come in different sizes and styles, for the smallest and youngest kids, and for the bigger kids up to twelve. I saw one that looked like a gothic castle, another that looked like a rocket, and even ones for girls that look like doll houses. Up to ten kids can bounce around in those things. They're completely enclosed, so nobody falls off, and they're pretty safe too." Jay started another Internet search for water trampolines.

Chris sniggered, "Believe it or not, Lance's idea is called Giant Hamster Balls." He passed his PADD to Lance.

"Yep, that's them," Lance confirmed, and passed the PADD back to Chris.

Scott chuckled, "We'll need some sort of fenced in area to store them when they're not in use, or we'll have wind blown Hamster Balls scattered around both bases." All six cracked up.

Starting to calm down, Chris tapped his sub-vocal, asking, "Alden, can you get a Hamster Ball enclosure installed near the playgrounds?"

Across the six comm-badges, Alden giggled, "Heaven forbid our blown hamster balls get scattered hither and yon, but I need the size of your hamsters' fuzzy balls." Again all six cracked up. Nearby and hearing Alden's remark, almost every teenage boy howled laughing. It also interrupted the conversation between Prez, Keith, Angelo, Reggie, Sean and Troy.

Jay sniggered, "This is how rumors start."

"Oddly enough," Sean giggled, "what you told us you intended to do does not match what Alden said."

Chris laughed, "Trust us, guys. When you get out of school later this afternoon, there will be a hundred exhausted rug-rats."

Lance giggled, "Each Hamster Ball is about six feet in diameter, Jay."

"OH MY GOD!" crowed Aki, Hajime, Keanu and Liki.

Aaron sniggered, "That's one damn big hamster."

Nodding, Keanu playfully teased, "Imagine what's hangin' over six foot wide nads."

Offering Keanu his hand, Liki giggled, "Do we need private time before school this afternoon?" Shaking his head and taking Liki's hand, Keanu leaned over for a tender kiss.

Blushing intensely, Reggie giggled, "I'm not hearing any of this."

Angelo playfully asked Prez, "Does everyone here talk about hookin' up and sex?"

Shrugging, Prez gestured to the table of little boys, and sniggered, "The youngest tikes don't talk, they just go for it."

Watching Angelo and Reggie look over at a table where Jimmy Car was kissing Richie, Keith said, "Remember when liking someone wasn't a major decision? There's a lesson to be learned over there."

Hearing John's telepathic remarks regarding how much time Angelo and Reggie have had alone, Keith, Prez, Sean and Troy grinned. Keith prompted, "Go build your relationship, dudes."

Prez nodded, "We'll see you later, and remember, what's here is yours too."

Nodding and standing, Angelo giggled, "Thanks."

"Later," Reggie chirped. He and Angelo had taken only two steps away from the table when their hands automatically clasped. Prez, Keith, Troy and Sean noticed Angelo and Reggie, widely smiled, and deliberately nodded their heads.

Scott smiled, "To hold twelve Hamster Balls, each enclosure needs to be at least eighteen feet by twenty-four feet, Alden."

Travis chuckled, "Just a question, but how're we going to inflate twenty-four huge Hamster Balls? I mean, I love a challenge, but let's be real."

"We'll get tanks of compressed air to blow our balls," Jay joked.

Almost every boy over eight-years-old on that side of the room cheered, "YIPPEE!" At the table where some of the youngest Rimmer sons were sitting, Richie, Jimmy, Scott, Geoff and Mike Hunnicutt held onto each other and hiccuped through their laughter. At the next table over, Sammy, Ben, Gage, Dee, Bruce, Stan, Leo and Kenny giggled at the chaos they had helped to create.

Gage moaned through his giggles, "I wish Jonah had stayed ten more minutes. He would've loved this."

Sammy smiled, "As soon as they check on Reyes and Ryan, Jonah will be right back, glued to your side again, bro."

Gage pleasantly sighed, "He invited me to go too, but one more person in a small apartment might've been one too many. Besides, Reyes needs his family as much as we need ours. Jonah would've loved hearing about Hamster Balls though."

Ben reminded, "We'll be together again in school. Our first music appreciation class is today, with your dads, Jonah's dads and Troy as our teachers."

"Your Hamster Ball enclosures are built," Alden reported, "and I've inflated the Hamster Balls. They're ready for use, Jay."

Starting with the youngest Rimmer sons, tables of little kids got up and raced out of the CIC. John, Stephen, Frankie and Wade also went with the little kids. Jay smiled, "Excellent, Alden. On my PADD, I've selected three models of water trampolines; the castle, the rocket, and the doll house. Please install them near the playgrounds and outdoor rec area field here and at Oneula Beach."

"Comin' right up, Jay," Alden giggled.

AJ, Jerry, Kaleo and Tory stood to join their youngest sons out by the playgrounds. As they were walking out, Derrick, Mike and Jonah came back in the dining room. Jonah went to Gage, sat on his lap and immediately stole a kiss. Gage began sharing the fuzzy hamster ball story. Derrick and Mike returned to the table where Prez, Keith, Sean and Troy were waiting. Wanting to see the hamster balls for themselves, Ben, Sammy, Gage, Jonah, Dee, Bruce, Stan, Kenny and Leo got up and soon left the CIC.

Derrick shared, "I told Reyes that he's off duty today. He knows we're rehearsing after school, but as far as I'm concerned, he can choose whether or not he wants to join us."

Keith asked, "How is he?"

Mike shrugged, "He's got his brave face on, but we know it's an act. He doesn't want anyone interfering, so that's the way it'll be. I can tell that Reyes and Ryan are good together. Each is hoping for Paul to join them. They'd be happier if he was here."

Derrick gently tapped Mike's thigh. When Mike turned to his hubby, Derrick grinned, "You're over-thinking it, Lick. There's nothing anyone can do. We can think of a hundred different ways to change what is, but ultimately, it's Paul's decision."

Prez sighed, "I'm so annoyed about the situation that I'm tempted to take nighttime strolls along the beach, purposefully making myself a target."

Troy nodded, "I'm there too. Let's give the homophobic radicals more targets and take 'em out."

Sean, Derrick and Keith loudly chorused, "See what you've done now!"

Prez, Troy and Mike laughed, "WHAT?"

Sadly shaking his head, Keith grinned, "We aren't going looking for trouble with one aggravated Irishman and two irritated Italians. We'll deal with 'phobes of every sort, when they make their bigoted ways known."

"Then I need to burn off some energy," Prez smirked. Reaching for Keith's hand, Prez stood and loudly announced, "Let's go to the diving well, T'hy'la."

Almost at once, the remaining teens and tweens in the dining room got up to follow their leaders to the pools before the afternoon school session. Once outside and crossing through the housing area, peels of laughter could be heard from the playground. Everyone could see many little kids rolling around inside their transparent Hamster Balls. Inside the three water trampolines, other kids could occasionally be seen bouncing around. Corey, Drew, and other tweens ran past the older kids.

Troy smiled at Sean for what the two new Morale Rimmers had accomplished. With nods of their heads, they went to Chris and Jay. Troy brightly beamed, "You guys are doin' great."

"We had help," Chris smiled.

"We all get help, dudes," Sean smiled.

Troy suggested, "I'd like you two, and your helpers, to consider going out on a date ASAP. By then you'll have your security, and you can take our security guys with you. Try to avoid those nasty homophobic moose, if you can."

"One more beach incident and all of us will have big problems when Prez flips out," Sean nervously giggled.

Nodding, Jay chuckled, "We'll talk about it."

Sean softly realized, "They don't have debit cards yet, Lover."

"I'll see if Prez can get them expedited," Troy offered.

"Don't go to any trouble," Jay smiled. When Chris turned to him, Jay offered, "Not until this cast is off. How about a sunset stroll along Ewa Beach, all the way down to Oneula Beach? Then we can decide to walk back, or through a dimensional door." He checked with Scott, Lance, Erik and Travis, asking, "What do you guys think?"

"It sounds awesome!" Travis cheered. The sentiment was echoed by Erik, Lance and Scott.

Already at the diving well and standing naked on the five-meter diving platform, Drew noticed Jay and Chris approaching. Having an evil idea, Drew widely grinned. He tapped his sub-vocal and silently told Alden his plan.

Mid-stride, Chris and Jay unexpectedly phased out and back again, without their clothes. Walking behind and almost into the naked couple, Erik sniggered, "Nice butt, Chris!" Already hysterically laughing, Travis nudged his lover.

"Their profiles are kind o' bouncy too," Lance giggled. He checked with Scott, "Did you know dicks bounce and sway without clothes to keep 'em in place?" Shrugging, Scott cracked up. Slumping and beginning to glance around the group for guilty expressions, Chris and Jay disappeared from the walkway, and reappeared ten meters above the diving well. Dropping to the well, they saw Drew cheekily grinning and waving at them.

Chris and Jay screamed, "DREW!"

"Initiation time," Keith chuckled. Prez, Keith, Derrick, Mike, Troy, Sean, Erik, Travis, Lance and Scott took off running for the diving well.

* * * * *

Stepping outside, turning right and following the path toward the townhouses, Angelo shook his head and grinned, "These kids are nothing like I had imagined."

"They're definitely not sad, which is what I expected," Reggie offered.

"I've learned a couple o' lessons from almost every kid in there."

Nodding, Reggie brightly beamed, "I still can't quite believe what you said to Nate, Ray and Tony."

Angelo wondered, "Which part?"

"Where will we sleep tonight?" Reggie giggled.

"Actually, I wonder if we'll be sleeping tonight. You're real easy to talk with, Reg. I want to tell you everything; that'll take all night."

Nodding, Reggie giggled, "Since the first time I stepped into a junior high locker room, I've noticed other dudes. I never saw anyone before that affected me like you have."

Shivering from another compliment, Angelo sighed, and then brightly beamed, "That's how I could say all that stuff about body types and frames. I never considered myself gay, but figured I was bisexual."

"Me too," Reggie smiled.

"My first thought when I saw you was, I wonder what it might feel like to be in his arms and rest my head on his shoulder."

Shaking his head and blushing, Reggie giggled, "I knew as soon as we held each other close that I'd want to kiss you. Talk about your major surprises! I hadn't ever imagined kissing anyone before, male or female." He turned to see Angelo's reaction.

Before turning left, toward the townhouses, Angelo paused, and then gently pulled Reggie into his arms. Face-to-face, Angelo softly admitted, "I thought we'd be going to your place, so I could see your drawings, and then to my place, so you could hear my music, but now I think that needs to wait. The most important things in my world don't mean as much as being with you."

Nodding, Reggie's eyes teared up, and he whispered, "There's no denying it, and I can't help it; I'm falling in love with you. My brain can't figure out all the reasons, but my heart says that it's real." He carefully planted a tender kiss.

Angelo was speechless. He had surmised that Reggie was sensitive and caring, but had underestimated the depth of his new boyfriend's feelings. Hugging Reggie tighter, Angelo returned the tender kiss and it turned into a passionate lip lock. Within a minute, each could feel the other's heart racing, and lower they could feel their bodies reacting to the closeness. When the kiss broke, Reggie rested his head on Angelo's shoulder to whisper, "Where we're going to sleep tonight and in the future is now a serious issue."

Angelo giggled, "Yeah, we're kind o' stuck, unable to separate without making our feelings more obvious. What're we gonna do?"

After a few moments, Reggie lifted his head off Angelo's shoulder, grinning, "Just lean back a little bit." Angelo did so, carefully insuring that his hips remained against Reggie's. Reggie tapped his comm-badge, calling, "Hey, Alden."

"Yes, Reggie?" Alden giggled.

"We have a problem," Reggie sorrowfully smirked, and prepared for repercussions.

"I can tell!" Alden laughed. "I could call for a Core Rimmer rescue team and a crowbar?"

Alden's brothers shouted across the comm-badge, "No-oo-oo!"

"A bad combination if I ever heard one," Remi giggled.

Reggie rolled his eyes, sniggering, "So we don't make a spectacle of ourselves, can you get us someplace private?"

Without warning, Alden transported Angelo and Reggie, and then he giggled, "This room used to be Kaleo's and Tory's room. Every other guy in this dorm will be heading to school soon, so you're alone until at least three o'clock."

Never separating, Angelo and Reggie glanced around. The drapes and mini blinds were open, allowing daylight into the room. They noticed the full sized beds, dressers, closets, desks, computers, chairs, television, game station and stereo speakers. Angelo smiled, "All the kids get rooms like this?"

"Yup," Alden giggled. "Kaleo and Tory moved out of here and into a townhouse at Oneula Beach on Sunday. Everything's been cleaned by the housekeepers, so it's like a brand new room again. Even the computers are unused."

"It's perfect!" Reggie cheered.

Angelo asked Reggie, "Maybe we can stay here tonight?"

"No brother, no sister and no parents," Reggie brightly smiled.

Looking up and around until he found a camera, Angelo evilly snickered, "Turn off that camera and microphone, Alden."

Alden giggled, "I have never interrupted any couple, and never will." Alden then flatly said, "This room is now routed to one of my VI's. As long as I don't hear a kid in trouble, you won't hear another word from me."

Still closely embracing, Angelo and Reggie waited a few moments. Angelo softly asked, "What do you want to do?"

"This room is exactly what we need, a place to be alone, to say and do what we want," Reggie answered. He stepped back from Angelo, went to the TV and picked up the remote control to turn it on. He checked with Angelo, asking, "Got a favorite program?"

Shaking his head and going to his boyfriend, Angelo answered, "At this hour, there's nothing good on. Just choose a music channel, Reg."

Selecting the guide channel and getting to the start of the music channels, Reggie asked, "What's your favorite music?"

"I like almost all types of music, so find a pop and rock mix that you'll like," Angelo answered.

While he searched, Reggie asked, "Do you like to dance?"

"I never have before, but I want to do that with you too," Angelo blushed.

"Me too," Reggie giggled. "Any excuse to be in your arms works for me."

Taking a place just behind his boyfriend and wrapping his arms around his waist, Angelo wondered, "Where did you used to live?"

"On the windward side, Kaneohe," Reggie replied, and then asked, "Where are you from?"

"Right here in Ewa Beach," Angelo answered, "My mom was a teacher at James Campbell High. In another year, I would've been at the same school. Next week she'll be one of our teachers."

Stopping his search, Reggie said, "This says it's a pop mix." He put the remote control down on top of the TV stand, and then turned to face Angelo, giggling, "Where were we?"

Moving closer, Angelo smiled, "Talking about my mom and teachers." He then softly prompted, "Lift your arms?" Without hesitation, Reggie did so, and Angelo stepped back to take his boyfriend's shirt off. Reggie noticed that Angelo took his time removing the shirt and felt his boyfriend's hands caressing his torso. Softly saying, "You're so handsome," Angelo tossed the shirt onto a desk chair. The moment Angelo turned around again, Reggie lifted Angelo's arms to return to the favor. From the gentle tickles, Angelo squirmed and giggled. As soon as the shirt was tossed onto the same chair, they embraced and began swaying to the music. Angelo whispered, "I swear, if I ever say or do anything that hurts you, I'll never forgive myself."

"I know what you mean. That's all right, I'll forgive you plenty, for just about anything."

"How did I wind up with the most awesome dude in the world in my arms?"

Reggie giggled, "Second most awesome, and you reached for me, so..."

"It's not like I would back away from you," Angelo finished.

"I feel like I need to promise you anything you want."

"All the promises are already assumed," Angelo assured.

Reggie sighed, "The worst part of promises is that they can be broken."

Angelo nodded, "That's why we'll never say them aloud. All we're doing is trying, and it's making us a couple, so much so that Tony and Ray noticed. Don't worry about promises, please?"

Nodding agreement, Reggie asked, "Besides music, what other topics do you like?"

"You'll laugh," Angelo warned.

Leaning back, Reggie smiled, "Is it funnier than geology?"

Calling for his stack of halos to brightly shine, Angelo nodded and giggled, "Biology." Reggie turned beet red and cracked up. "Seriously," Angelo giggled, "without any effort at all, straight A's in that class last year."

Cackling wildly, Reggie suggested, "So I get to inspect your rocky parts and you can dissect my lizard?" Quickly stepping back so he didn't loudly laugh in Reggie's ear, Angelo howled and nodded.

Getting a good long look at Angelo's medium frame and the happy expression on his face, Reggie pleasantly sighed. He moved closer, reached for his boyfriend's boardies, and slid his fingers around the waistband. Since Angelo wasn't protesting in the slightest, Reggie asked, "Are you ready to see me too?" Still giggling, Angelo rapidly nodded. Equally afraid, surprised and thrilled, Reggie moved slowly, and watched Angelo's expression as much as he watched his hands working.

When Angelo's boardies dropped to the floor, and he was still wearing white boxer briefs, he held up a finger to signal a pause. Stepping back, Angelo kicked his sandals and boardies aside, and then stepped forward again. Placing his hands on Reggie's shoulders, Angelo left enough space for Reggie to complete the task and leaned forward to steal a deep kiss. Reggie pushed the rear of the boxer briefs down, and then pulled the elastic waistband forward to lower the front. With a few pushes at the sides, Angelo's briefs also dropped to the floor, but they held the kiss a little longer, allowing their tongues to play.

Feeling a little woozy from the kiss and the excitement of the situation, Angelo broke the kiss and stepped back. Kicking his boxer briefs away, he never broke eye contact and watched Reggie's eyes dance over his body. When Reggie locked eyes with him again, Angelo felt like his heart might fly out of his chest at any moment. At last, Reggie smiled, "You're absolutely beautiful, and your dick is a bit more than medium sized, by the way."

Uncontrollably blushing, Angelo asked, "Ya think so?"

"I know so," Reggie confirmed, and shyly explained, "A couple of dudes at my school commented on mine, because it hangs a little long. One dude brought in printouts of what he found on the Internet. Normal flaccid is between seven and nine centimeters; normal erect is between thirteen and fifteen centimeters. You've got at least sixteen, probably seventeen. It's probably thicker around than what's considered average too. In every way, you're more than I hoped and dreamed, Angelo."

Stepping closer and reaching for his boyfriend's boardies, Angelo wondered, "Where are you at?"

Since Angelo had already seen him limp and had to have felt his erection through their clothes, Reggie smirked, "A little more than eighteen limp and over twenty-one erect. It's embarrassing, especially those first times in junior high showers. Everybody saying stuff to me about it was looking down. You're not doing that; you're looking in my eyes. Get me naked quick, please, before I have a nervous breakdown."

With the drawstring untied, Angelo paused, put his hands on Reggie's hips and instructed, "Hold eye contact with me, Reg." When Reggie did so, Angelo gently reminded, "You were awesome to me Saturday, while we were passing each other and moving into our new homes. For three days, I wondered what made you special. All morning, I've been getting the answers to that question. Other large framed dudes, like you, know it and take advantage of smaller dudes because they can; that's not you though, not my boyfriend. You're careful, gentle and sensitive, and playful and completely fantastic in every way, with everybody. I heard you threatening your bro, and I totally got how annoyed you were, but your tone was so unthreatening, your bro probably took it all as a game. I've been falling for a dream too, and the real you is way better than the dream. What you've got is only another part of you, dude. I'd still love you if you were completely average. I'd still love you if you were less than average. I'm attracted to your hair, eyes, physique, voice and personality. Your dick never mattered all weekend, and still doesn't, okay?"

Nodding, but a little teary-eyed, Reggie sighed, "I saw the naked dudes out by the pools, and tried to not see at the same time. As much as I'd love to be the way I was when I was younger, getting naked and skinny dippin' at the beach, I haven't wanted to, for a long time, because of what they'll see, and what they might say. I'm not a lady killer, or a heartthrob, or anything like that, and I never wanted to be."

"I figured that out already."

"For the next few hours this afternoon, and later tonight, I want us to be naked together, mostly so I can relax about it. When you first saw me in the mens' room, I saw in your eyes what you never said."

Angelo smiled, "What is it you think you saw?"

"Wow, he's got a nice bit hangin', more than I expected."

"You're missing the rest, Reg. Try saying it like this; Wow, he's got a nice bit hangin', but he's not stuck up, or a snob about it. Here's this awesome dude, who could make at least half the dudes around here envious, yet all he wants to be is kicked back and relaxed about it, and every other guy's equipment."

"Is that really what you were thinking?"

"Cross my heart. If you had ever acted like a snob once, and I had seen it, the dream would've evaporated days ago. I never would've wanted to knock on your door. We sure as hell wouldn't be standing here now."

Practically flinging himself on Angelo, Reggie tearfully shivered, "You're right. Since puberty, all I've wanted was for everything to be like it was before. My dick grew faster than the rest of me. My voice changed and I had pubes growing before finishing grade school. Everyone looked at me differently. In less than six months, between Christmas and June, I looked and sounded like a different person, but inside I hadn't changed at all. That summer and all last summer, I kept my shorts on. I didn't want anyone to ever see me. For the first time in a long time, I want someone to see. I want you to see, because you'll still be able to look in my eyes, like you have since we were in the mens' room. You look into my eyes all the time, even when we're kissing."

Rubbing his boyfriend's back, Angelo assured, "This ain't a tiny first crush, or puppy love. You want this to work as much as I do. That makes us the real thing, like what we were imaging we might be only a little while ago; us like roommates, us like boyfriends, us like committed partners for life."

Reggie sighed, "What I really want most is to be near you. Since we walked out of my house, I kept wanting to take your hand in mine, and kept telling myself, no. We could've left space between us in the men's room, but I didn't want to be that far away. Now that we're together, I don't ever want to be apart from you." With his tears drying up, Reggie chortled, "Here we are, in a private room, with you nude and me crying on your shoulder, instead of me being naked with you."

"Tell me when you're ready, Reg."

Before Angelo knew it, Reggie's arms were under his butt and he was being lifted off the floor. Once again, Angelo howled. Reggie carried Angelo to one of the beds, placed him down on it and crawled over him. At the lustful grin Reggie wore, Angelo moaned through his giggles. Reggie softly proclaimed, "You're the only one for me, Angelo Diaz. Now I'm gonna prove it." Amazingly to Angelo, Reggie didn't immediately reach for his chubbie. Instead, Reggie began with tender kisses and the gentlest of fingertip traces around Angelo's ear, jaw, neck, shoulders and chest.

Melting from unexpected romance, Angelo moaned, "Oh, Reg."

Chapter 23

Ewa Beach

Tuesday, November 9, 2004 12:25PM HTZ

After lunch, Tony Lanning and Ray Varga went over to the pools, as they normally would, but this time both boys kept walking past the diving well. There was no one else around, so they took chairs at one of the poolside tables and relaxed. Tony took his shirt off, and Ray copied his roommate's action.

Tony asked, "No diving?" Ray shook his head. Tony sighed, and then tried again, asking, "Wanna relax in the jacuzzi?" Scrunching his face, Ray shook his head again.

Tony waited for Ray to say something about what had been discussed during lunch, but Ray didn't speak. For the first time since meeting, Ray was so embarrassed that he couldn't hold eye contact with Tony. For several minutes, Tony watched his roommate and patiently waited. He remembered what he had said to Ray in the dining room, and realized it wasn't the best thing he could've said. The only correct thing he said was at the dishwasher; "Don't sweat it, dude." Ray acknowledged it with nods, but since he wasn't speaking, all Tony could do was worry. Tony felt a dull ache in his belly, and the longer they remained silent, the worse it got. Somehow Tony had to correct the situation, before the friendship faded and they couldn't stand living together.

Hordes of kids from the dining room began arriving at the pools, so any chance of a serious chat evaporated. Certain that Ray was more confused than ever, Tony stood, put his shirt on, patted Ray on the shoulder and softly prompted, "Com'on." Tony led the way back to dorm three. Putting his shirt on, Ray followed his roomie, but didn't say a word.

Entering the quad, they saw Prez, Keith, Chris, Jay, Sean, Troy, Lance, Scott, Erik and Travis approaching. Only steps away from the doorway into the short hall of dorm three, they heard Jay and Chris screaming, "DREW!" Tony and Ray only paused for a moment to watch their initiation. Tony evilly sniggered, but Ray avoided eye contact and barely grinned. Silently, Tony and Ray entered the dorm and walked into their room.

As soon as Tony closed the door, he gently pleaded, "Please say something."

Ray sighed, and then sincerely said, "I'm really sorry, dude."

Tilting his head, Tony wondered, "What for?"

Stopping by his bed, Ray shrugged, "For ruining your fun; for saying yes, and then changing my mind and saying no."

Sadly shaking his head, Tony crossed the room, smiling, "I expected it."

Ready to suggest that Tony go find Nate and have some fun, Ray's frown flipped around into a smirk. He asked, "Why?"

Tony went to his roomie, patiently reminding, "We know each other now, Ray. I told you plenty on Saturday, and you told me a lot too, before we ever stepped into this room to unpack that night. Your dad was a County Sheriff. You said that he didn't bring his job home with him, but that still tells me that you have firm beliefs in what's right and what's wrong. Sunday morning, with Doc Weiner and every other Battle of Earth kid, we shared more. I was sitting right beside you, exactly where I wanted to be.

"When you agreed with Nate's plan, that shocked me. Once again, you were very kewl about it. The unkewl way is to wait until we're naked together and then say no. There's no harm done, and I'm sure Nate feels the exact same way, because he was still talking with us. Maybe Nate might like an explanation, but not me. I fully expected you to change your mind, because you could've started something with me at any time we've been alone in this room. You haven't, which tells me either you're completely straight, or you're just not interested in me that way. For a couple o' minutes there, I thought you were more interested in Nate."

Ray giggled, "I thought you were more interested in Nate too. I was just about to tell you to go and find him."

Tony shrugged, "I am interested, but nowhere near as much as I am in you." Ray's jaw dropped. Tony grinned, "I told you, you're younger, by fourteen months, so you have to lead the way. So you fully get what I'm saying, if I led the way, I'd want all of you; heart, body and mind. What started simply enough, with us trying to be roommates, had us best friends by the end of the first day. When I told you I was bi, you didn't walk away, and you didn't ask to be moved to another room. I warned you that you might catch me whackin' off. All you did was shrug and giggle.

"Every time I suggested that we go do something, I was a little nervous, thinking you might not want to join me. Instead of being disappointed, I was thrilled each and every time. Saturday night, I had only one worry; that I'd pop a bone before I got my clothes off to crawl into bed. That would've made my feelings very obvious in an abrupt and unkewl way. By the end of the weekend, I wasn't thinking of you as my younger roommate any more. You're my roommate and best friend in the world. I care a lot about you, and about everything you think and feel. Saying no hasn't messed up anything at all, and most definitely not between us. All your age means now is that you have to lead. So tell me how you want it to be, Ray. You can be unsure, and want to experiment, and I'll leave it that way and be happy enough."

Rapidly blinking and still processing, Ray uncertainly repeated, "Happy enough?"

Sitting down on the edge of his bed, Tony chuckled at his own slip of the lip. Ray definitely had a brain in his head. Trying to pull his out-of-control thoughts together so they made sense, Tony rambled, "Nate's definitely cute enough, but he's also got two little brothers, that he cares about and watches out for. I don't want to compete for my boyfriend's attention, and with Nate, that's what would eventually happen. Reggie's cute, and so is Angelo, but I never had a shot to show either of 'em that I was interested. When we were showing them around, I didn't notice how much they wanted to be together. At lunch though, I noticed the way they were looking at each other. I'm not the kind of dude to pout over stuff, I'll just move on. There's not a single dude here in our age bracket that I couldn't be boyfriends with, given half a chance." He paused briefly and then watched Ray carefully when he cautiously admitted, "I'm most interested in the dude I've spent every waking moment with, and every night with too."

Ray loudly squealed, "Why didn't you tell me?"

"How could I?" Tony chuckled. "You told me you weren't too interested in babes or dudes. I was twelve too, not so long ago. I know exactly where you're at, cos I was there too. Suddenly all your friendships have different meanings, whether you want them to or not. Being bisexual, I was exceptionally confused; sometimes I'd pop a bone for awesome perky tits, and other times I'd get just as hard for the dude with perfect pecs. So, I understand completely, and it's kewl with me. If you're thinking of babes and dudes, tell me and I'll be able to adjust, easily.

"Or were you just saying what you thought I wanted to hear? If you were, then you need to change that attitude right now. More than anything else, I want you to be honest. We can't even be good roommates if we're not being honest. Thank goodness you're looking at me and making eye contact; between that and not speaking to me, I was freaking out by the pools. I can't ignore you, dude; especially not over a three-way wank that never happened. I'll be whatever you need, anytime, and all you have to do is give me clue. I was attracted to you when we met Saturday morning, and it's only getting more intense. Being with you, these last couple o' days, is the greatest feeling I've ever had. It's fun, and good, and right, and so much more, I can't even figure out how to describe it. Dozens of times I've wanted to reach for your hand, almost as many times as I've wanted to give you a hug, and that's followed by the wish that I could run my hands through your hair. If I had actually done any of the three, I know I'd want to kiss you too."

"Omigod," Ray gasped, and started pacing the room. For about a minute, Ray couldn't decide whether to look at the floor or in Tony's direction.

Not expecting a reaction anywhere near this cute, Tony couldn't help grinning.

Still pacing, Ray ranted, "You want the truth? The truth is the ugliest dudes in the world went to my school, and the cutest dudes in the world are right here. Have you ever seen a twelve-year-old dude with a mustache and a beard? I HAVE! Sure, it was all soft hair, over his lip, down his jaw and across his chin, but he was a missing link! There was another dude in eighth grade who had more hair on his chest and belly than my dad, but talk about having the tiniest dick in the world, you couldn't even see it beyond all the hair! Then I'd go home and get stiff watching dudes on TV; on movies, sit-coms or sports, and I'd wonder where these dudes were hiding, because they sure weren't in my real life.

"Then, at Des Moines, I met Drew and Corey and almost fainted, they're so drop dead cute! Phil Nash shows up with his brother and again, I can't stop staring. Which is cuter than the other is a toss-up, depending on what's noticed at the moment. Thank goodness we all sat down to chat and drink milkshakes, before I crashed to the floor. Truthfully, how I drop my shorts and skinny dip every day around here, without popping serious wood, and staying hard the entire day, is a mystery to me. But what have I ever done besides occasionally play with myself? NADA! I've never even pissed in the same toilet as another dude." Pausing to be sure he really wanted to continue, Ray threw caution to the wind, hollering, "AND YOU'RE INTERESTED IN ME? ARE YOU BLIND, TONY? There are hundreds of cuter dudes around this place!"

Softly chortling and becoming more enamored by the minute, Tony smiled, "You're plenty cute now, dude."

Sadly shaking his head, Ray giggled, "That must've been prime herb you smoked, dude. I think you're tripping."

"No," Tony sniggered, and stood up again. He cautiously approached his roomie, playfully assuring, "If I was high, I would've jacked you off Saturday night, without asking. Strike one for child rape. Then I would've blown you the moment we woke in the morning. Strike two. Before I ever touched your ass for strike three, Prez would've picked me up by the throat, tossed me to Keith, who would toss me to Mike, and so on until John telekinetically bounced me off the ground."

"I think you're great, dude, the best roommate I could've hoped for. When it's time to be wild, you are, and when it's time to chill, you're as quiet as a mouse. All my other friends from LA are combined in you. Seriously, you're the best parts of a half dozen other dudes. Sometimes it really blows me away how awesome you are. I've been thinking a lot, about my needs that my old buds met, and that you're meeting all the same requirements. Six compared to one; that's amazing.

"If you want to hear more truth from me, I'm at the same place you are, wondering how I'm not stiff as a board skinny dipping at the pools. If I had no self preservation instinct at all, I'd walk up to Melonie Carrero and go 'BRRRRR!' right between her awesome titties. She'd knock my nads into my throat with one kick. Once I recovered, I'd kneel down before Darren DeVault and choke on his giant cock. The last thing I'd hear him say before asphyxiating is, 'uh, dude, alone might've been nicer.' Instead, I'm waiting and praying for my completely average and normal roommate to say, be my boyfriend, as well as my roommate and best bud."

Ray whispered, "Are you sure, Tony?"

Tony nodded and admitted, "I was completely sure the moment you said, 'I can't do it'. Four words saying something negative never sounded so positively awesome before. I almost floated out of my chair, without the Soul Rimmer's cosmically phenomenal N-Gen tricks. That told me that you want more than a quick wank, and you want more than the fun times. You want a real boyfriend too, huh?"

"Yeah," Ray giggled, "I just never guessed or dared hope it might be you."

"Why not me?"

Shrugging, Ray offered, "Only because you're older, way more experienced with everything, and way cuter."

Tony sniggered, "I wasn't the one pacing, rambling and waving my arms in the cutest way possible. Sometimes, when I wake in the middle of the night, I roll onto my side just to watch you sleep. The first time it happened, about dawn Sunday morning, I was completely surprised by the most beautiful and peaceful sight. Since then, I've been telling myself to just chill and be your best friend; to let you decide. Besides, I'll bet big bucks that in another year, you'll be even cuter, and hopefully you'll be mine."

Ray shyly asked, "There's no one else you're interested in?"

"No where near as much as I am in you," Tony warmly smiled. "Derrick rescued me, and he's nice enough, and cute enough, but I think Mike would have a few four letter words to say about it. I could list a dozen other dudes, but they don't know me as well as you do. I don't know them as well as I know you. It's you that I really want to build a life long partnership with."

Nodding and absorbing it all, Ray brightly beamed, "Be my boyfriend, Tony?"

"You got it," Tony smiled.

Ray uncertainly asked, "What do we do now?"

Tony shrugged, and then chuckled, "Show me how you want it to be, pretty boy." He knew that last bit would get to Ray, but it was honestly the first thing he thought when he met Ray on Saturday.

Incredulously, Ray roared, "PRETTY BOY?" They began evilly snickering at each other. "I'll show you who's a pretty boy," Ray abysmally warned through giggles. He rapidly moved closer to Tony, took him in his arms and reached up for a big, wet, open mouth tongue kiss. In under thirty-seconds, the playing transferred to hands reaching under shirts. When Ray's hands wandered lower onto his ass, Tony uncontrollably giggled into their kiss. At the giggling, Ray lightly chomped on the tongue in his mouth. As soon as it retreated, Ray firmly goosed Tony, and then sent his tongue out searching for its playmate.

When the first kiss broke, Tony felt free to try some things he had always wanted to try, and Ray was the perfect test subject. Beginning with tender kisses on the cheek that led down to Ray's throat, Tony focused on the earlobe dangling and went for it, sucking firmly, flicking his tongue around it, and then gently scraping his front teeth over it. Cringing, Ray went into a giggling fit that very quickly turned into loud laughter. Past the earlobe in his mouth, Tony sniggered, "Ya like that?"

Ray cackled, "I love it, you maniac!"

"What's next?" Tony playfully prompted, and then dove for Ray's neck, twirling his tongue around in little circles.

Almost hysterical, Ray released Tony's back and blindly searched for the drawstring on his roommate's boardies, nervously fumbling and turning a neat bow into a knot that he couldn't possibly get undone without seeing. Knowing he was in trouble, Ray fondled Tony's erection through his shorts. Pulling back from his snack and wondering if Ray was again having second thoughts, Tony searched Ray's grey eyes. "Sorry," Ray giggled and blushed. Tony stepped back and looked down at the knot, and then up at Ray, and they both cracked up.

After a few hysterical moments, Tony sniggered, "Any second thoughts?"

Shaking his head and reaching to unravel the knot, Ray smiled, "You're awesome. I'm only surprised, and a little nervous too. I didn't have a clue you felt so strongly about me."

Tony chuckled, "I've been falling in love with you for four days."

Rapidly blinking, Ray smiled, "Since we met, really?"

Nodding, Tony grinned, "There was never any other choice. You're cute, funny, smart, and everything I could ever want."

With the knot untied, Ray looked up, giggling, "You've been holding back stuff too, dude. Do you wanna clear the air a little?"

Nodding, Tony grinned, "Remember Saturday morning, when I introduced myself?" When Ray rapidly nodded, Tony admitted, "I offered my fist to knock knuckles with you first. The next thing I know, I'm knockin' knuckles with all the dudes rescued Friday, and introducing Jimmy and all the dudes in my little group. That's not what I wanted to be doing though; I wanted to get to know you. The whole time we were chattin', I could barely wait to ask you if you wanted to be roommates. You asked me first though. I was completely thrilled and amazed that you asked."

Ray giggled, "I remember that. I remember watching you greeting everyone too. You were occasionally smiling at me, like being social and saying hello to everyone was embarrassing, and now I know why. What I don't get is why me? Phil's my age; a little taller and from LA too."

Tony chuckled, "Why didn't you make moves on Phil?"

"First of all, I thought he was straight," Ray easily answered. "He spends a lot of time with his older brother, and playing soccer. There wasn't opportunity, and even though I've talked with him, I really don't think of him that way. Last night, I thought Owen was only Phil's friend. At breakfast this morning, we all figured out that they're boyfriends. Lastly, I don't really know how to make any moves on anyone."

Nodding understandingly, Tony smiled, "Neither do I. When I led you here, all I wanted to hear was what you were thinking; why you were so upset. I had no idea that I'd wind up telling you so much. Only by listening to you and really hearing what you've been saying could I share it all." Pausing for a moment, Tony grinned, "By the way, with a little instigation, you came to me for a kiss. What you just did qualifies as making moves. There's been no one else anything like you, and there won't ever be."

Blinking rapidly, Ray muttered, "I still can't believe it. You've seen me nude; there's nothing special about me."

Reaching to gently pull Ray into his arms, Tony whispered, "In my eyes, you're the most special dude here. I've paid attention in the shower, dude. Trav and Craig are attractive, but they're fifteen; two years older than me. Phil, Stu, Vaziik, Rob, Paul and Theo are all twelve-years-old, just like you. Phil's taller than you, but none of them have as much pubes as you do. Soon, your shoulders are going to get wider, and that ring of sparse pubes around your dick and nads is gonna be a bush. Being like this, with you in my arms and holding me is what I've been hoping for. When you tried lat-pull downs at the rec center and flew up off the floor, half of my laughing was at myself, for not grabbing you and kissing you hard."

Running his hands back under Tony's shirt, Ray giggled, "I feel the same way. Three mornings in a row, I watched you roaming this room naked. I told myself not to look your bone, but I do anyway. I've wanted this too, Tony. I'm completely gay, dude. Attractions have been there, way before I understood what any of 'em meant. The one thing missing here has been daily hugs and kisses."

"You'll get 'em, several times a day, every day," Tony softly promised. He sealed his vow with tender kisses on the mouth. Ray wanted Tony's shirt off, but that only paused the kisses for a moment, and then they immediately resumed. With no shirt to hide his roaming hands, Ray slid both hands into the back of Tony's shorts, earning another evil snicker.

Pushing the back of Tony's shorts down, Ray giggled, "Ya still want me to lead?"

Shivering with anticipation, Tony nodded and chuckled, "Only what you're comfy doin', dude."

Ray squealed, "Seriously?"

Slowly nodding, Tony smiled, "We're boyfriends now. You don't need to prove anything to me. We're just starting a new, better relationship. Seriously, I couldn't be happier. We'll get around to more, whenever you're ready."

Widely smiling, Ray giggled, "But..."

"But your hands are on my butt!" Tony playfully interrupted.

Wearing the most wicked grin Tony had ever seen on his roomie's face, Ray cackled, "I know what I want most," and slid his hands around to Tony's hips and beyond. After copping a quick feel, Ray pushed Tony's shorts down, and then dropped to his knees. Looking down and watching Ray lovingly caress his erection and nads, Tony gulped and whimpered. Looking up and locking eyes with Tony, Ray giggled, "Betchya this is gonna be more than you ever expected from me."

Tony laughed, "No bet! It already is!"

Ray giggled, "Since I haven't caught you spanking it, when's the last time you did?"

Tony sniggered, "Sunday afternoon, at the pool house, on the toilet."

Sadly shaking his head, Ray giggled, "Once in three days? Tisk, tisk, tisk. I guess I can correct that easily enough." He began kissing the length of Tony's bone, but then paused and suspiciously looked up, evilly cackling, "Was that load for me, for Melonie, or for Darren?"

Cracking up, Tony howled, "It was for you, I swear!" Giggling louder, Ray returned to kissing the bouncing bone before him. He worked his way from the tip and down, then gave each hanging testicle a kiss. On the tips of his toes, Tony yelled, "OMIGOD! Ray, you're freaking me out! What have I done?"

Ray giggled, "Dunno. Let's find out." He pointed Tony's bone at his mouth, pulled the foreskin back, opened wide and engulfed the head.

Having never experienced anything Ray had already done, Tony's eyes rolled back in his head. He dizzily glanced down to find Ray still looking up at him. Tony giggled, "Can I kick my boardies aside?" Ray negatively hummed and wrapped his arms around Tony's thighs so he couldn't move. Tony sniggered, "Am I gonna get some of you any time soon?"

Removing Tony's erection with a wet pop, Ray giggled, "Maybe after I get you to release some of what you've been storing up. You're a teenager, so once in a couple o' days ain't enough. That's about where I'm at, ya know. I'm not gonna let you squirm or ask, Tony. I knew I was gay years ago, and my dad knew it too, but there was nobody around to experiment with. Since getting here, there's no doubt about it." He gave Tony's bone two quick strokes, muttering, "This is what I want to be doing," and then went back to work.

Through groans and whimpers, Tony repeatedly declared his love for Ray. The only problem Tony had with this surprise was that he had no idea what to do with his hands. Rather than freak Ray out by letting both hands run through his hair, Tony moved one hand behind his back, to rest on his butt, and the other finger-combed Ray's hair. He sure didn't want Ray to think he was going to force anything. Ray was already exceeding all expectations Tony ever had.

Realizing that his jaw was stretching and getting sore, Ray shifted his focus and used his hand. When Tony softly approved of the alteration, Ray smiled and trapped Tony's stiffy between two hands. Tony gasped at the new sensation. Shoving Tony nearer to the precipice, Ray opened his mouth and took only the head.

Nearing his climax, Tony repeatedly warned Ray, but Ray had to finish; he honestly was doing precisely what he wanted to do for Tony. Besides, he had always wondered if he could make another dude cum, and what it would taste like. Stiffening and trying to control his bucking hips, Tony lost it. Ray took most of it, but because he helplessly giggled at the accomplishment, he sputtered and a little dribbled beyond his lips. When Tony was spent and slumping, Ray cleaned up after his snack. Bouncing, shivering and gasping, Tony pulled Ray up and into his arms. First Ray started laughing at the drained and surprised expression on his new boyfriend's face. Tony began chuckling, and soon they were hysterical. Tony wanted to kiss his new boyfriend and he did try, but they kept cracking up.

"By the way," Ray giggled, "I love you too, Tony."

Tony cheered, "Thank goodness!" and squeezed Ray tight.

Becoming much more serious, Ray checked, "You'll be mine and always listen to me?"

Trying to match Ray's expression, Tony enthusiastically nodded and giggled, "Definitely, for the rest of our lives."

"We need to set some ground rules," Ray began.

"Anything for you," Tony smiled.

Ray giggled, "Rule number one; you're already a teenager, so you need more than I do, for now, but that means you don't have to worry about how or when you get off any more." Reaching down and fondling Tony's recovering chubby, Ray giggled, "You warned me about whackin' off. No, no, dude; that's my job, only mine."

"Got it."

"The same goes for me too, Tony. I just did one of the things I've always wanted to do. Every fear I had about doing it disappeared, because it was you. Making you that crazed was the most fun I've ever had."

"I know," Tony wickedly leered, "I can feel you're still hard."

"It's for only you, dude. When either of us needs or wants, it's time to be alone. My dad only loved my mom. Since she's been gone, he never went looking for another wife, or even another woman to date. When I asked him about that, he told me that he was still committed to her, and no one had come close to sparking any interest at all."

Getting the idea, Tony smiled, "Like all the Core Rimmers, and all their parents. I can do this, Ray. As soon as I got over the fact that you knelt down for me, I was thinking the same stuff; only you could've done what you did. If it was anyone else, it wouldn't have meant much to me. Anybody can go through the motions and make it feel good. Only someone very special can make it mean something, and it does mean a lot to me."

Happily giggling, Ray instructed, "Take my clothes off?" Without argument, Tony went to work. In less than a minute, Ray was naked, but Tony kept running his hands around his new boyfriend's neck and shoulders. Ray confirmed, "You like this body?"

Tony enthusiastically gushed, "I love your body, Ray. What you've got now is perfect for me. You're only gonna get more perfect, and I'm gonna get to watch it happen too. I've fallen for you, even though I tried not to, I did anyway."

Ray smirked, "We're gonna have to do something about this age difference thing that you're so hung up on. Saturday morning, right after we met, I felt like I'd known you a lot longer. My first happy surprise was when you said we'd unpack later. I didn't want to waste daylight either. We seem to think a lot alike."

Evilly grinning, Tony chuckled, "Boss me around some more, pretty boy."

Cracking up, Ray pointed at Tony's bed, ordering, "Face up, this time."

Mooing provocatively, Tony practically ran the six steps for his bed and jumped up, twisted mid air and landed on his back. Approaching the bed and giggling, Ray warned, "I'm not done with you, not by a long shot."

Tony whimpered and begged, "Please let me hold you this time?"

Nodding, Ray crawled onto the bed and lay on top of Tony. He softly asked, "Do you really like girls too?"

Wrapping his arms around Ray and shivering delightfully, Tony replied, "Yep, I really do, but you won't ever have to worry about that."

"Don't stop now. Tell me why."

"Because you're that cute, that smart, and completely awesome to me. I want you, dude, always and everywhere. Back in September, I went to a dance with a girl that I really liked. It was fun, and she was kewl in some ways, but my friends didn't like her, and her friends made it clear that they didn't like me. There was only one other time I considered a date, right before Halloween. At a McDonald's, we decided to remain friends. That's all I'm gonna say about her. It taught me to pay attention to our feelings, and the hell with anyone else's thoughts about it. The one thing I was most worried about, the age difference, you've already taken care of. If you hadn't gone down on me like you did, I'd still be slowly working my way. I'm only yours and you're only mine. The attraction has been nerve wracking for days. That's why I invited you everywhere I was going; just to be with you. I don't ever want to be apart from you. I can't say that about anyone else."

Widely smiling, Ray giggled, "Seriously?"

Sighing, Tony shared, "In case you haven't already figured it out, my smart-ass remarks about your pubes was only a lame excuse. When I was about your age, I'll bet I had the same or maybe less than you. The reality is, I've been falling in love with you and can't even fight the feelings. I just need to know a few details."

"Such as?"

"I want you," Tony repeated. "I don't wanna chance anything fucking us up. Our feelings for each other is the most important thing. So tell me what you consider kewl, that you know you're ready for?"

Smirking, Ray reminded, "I told you, I'm completely gay. Girls are pretty, but there's nothing else there to get a rise out of me. Not once in four days have I sat down to have a conversation with any girl. They're so alien to me that it's easier to talk with Vaziik!" Tony helplessly sniggered, and Ray continued, "That means I want dudes and dick. Out at the pools, I see hundreds of dicks, and every one is completely beautiful. I've fingered my butt and liked it a lot. It's just that dicks are way bigger than fingers. Have you done that?"

Nodding, Tony chuckled, "All it takes is a fingertip for me to lose it."

"Then we're gonna have to work our way there," Ray smiled. "Until we get there, everything else is fair play."

Tony wondered, "Can you cum?"

"Only a little bit, and that only started the last couple of weeks. My voice still needs to change. I'm four months older than Drew, but he's much further along than I am, in every way. I can't wait to stand next to Drew and notice that I've caught up to where he's at."

Rolling over and smiling down, Tony chuckled, "You'll get there. Now I'm gonna show you how much I love you." Returning to tasty earlobes, Tony softly chortled at Ray's loud laughter. Over the next few minutes, Tony got to make love to Ray, kissing, licking and nibbling his way down the torso. Bouncing, squirming and twitching the entire time, Ray clearly showed his approval. With his feet, Tony spread Ray's legs so he would have a place to kneel for his afternoon snack. Pausing only to lock eyes with Ray, Tony lifted his boyfriend's erection, earning a whimper. Tony smiled, "I don't think I had a six-incher when I was twelve. Betchya I can make sure it gets even bigger?"

Completely thrilled with the minutes of body kisses, Ray loudly cackled, "TONY!" Lowering his head, Tony took about half of Ray's bone, and then tried to take more and achieved his goal. Proving his age and staying power, Ray screamed, "TONYYYYY!" and thrust his hips up, lifting his butt nearly a foot off the mattress. Deliriously humming, Tony got the first taste and decided he liked it. Collapsing back down to the bed, Ray giggled, "You are awesome! Get ready for more, Tony."

Gently laying down Ray's spent meat, Tony snorted, "Oh no, pretty boy, I've only just begun." He swiftly lifted Ray's legs, bent him in half and then began licking trails around the scrotum. Thrashing and giggling, Ray tried to get free of Tony. Holding on tighter, Tony wickedly snickered, "You started it!" and went for a meaty thigh. He then gave its twin a little attention.

Ray was laughing hysterically, but unable to break free of Tony's grasp. Feeling a warm, wet lick between his scrotum and his butt hole, Ray whimpered, "Oh, Tony," and stopped struggling.

Softly chortling, "Keep calling my name," Tony gave his new lover a tongue bath between his legs.

"Omigod!" Ray giggled, "I thought you wouldn't want to."

"Bisexual means I get hot for babes and dudes," Tony sniggered.

"You just happen to be the lucky winner. I'll always love you, even when there's a room full of people around."

Realizing that Tony was getting closer to his sphincter, Ray began whimpering Tony's name over and over. Encouraged by the voice of desire, Tony licked to the twitching opening, earning a squeal and cries of pleasure with every flick of his tongue. Giving his tongue a rest, Tony looked up and between Ray's legs, smiling, "I'm gonna treat my pretty boy the very best I can. I promise to always treat you nice." Going back to his enjoyable task, Tony chanced releasing Ray's legs, allowing them to rest on his shoulders. When Ray's chanting of his name slowed, Tony wet a finger and tapped Ray's backdoor. More whimpering began, and when Tony rubbed the hole, it was followed by soft gasps. Ready to try carefully inserting a digit, Tony looked up again to watch Ray's expression. Only a fingertip slipped inside.

Ray moaned, "Oh yeah!"

Tony chuckled, "Luckily, I clipped and filed my fingernails last night."

Nodding, Ray giggled, "Wiggle it around a little bit." Doing as he was told, Tony leaned over to let some saliva drip from his mouth and onto the inserted finger. Ray gasped at the extra moisture and then digressed into a giggling fit.

Widely smiling, Tony checked, "Ya like that too?"

Rapidly nodding, Ray cackled, "You're surprising me too, Tony. I never thought any of this could happen with you. I thought bi meant hugs, maybe a few kisses and rarely anything more."

Tony smirked, "So you're not surprised, I'll let you know that you can do this stuff to me too. This bisexual dude wants your dick bangin' his butt."

"Really?"

"Any chance of me going straight evaporated when you asked me to be your boyfriend. To keep you always with me, I'll give you all I've got, anytime you want."

"In a minute," Ray giggled.

Uncertainly blinking, Tony repeated, "In a minute?"

Ray giggled, "You're gonna make me cum again."

Raising his eyebrows, Tony reached for Ray's bone, pushed it between his legs, and then practiced his oral techniques. It barely took another minute. Tony felt Ray's sphincter gripping his fingertip and then briefly relaxing before tightening again. In his mouth, Tony felt the corresponding throbbing and again deliriously hummed when he got another taste of semen. Slumping and giggling through the cleanup, Ray warned, "That's twice! I better get some soon too!"

Cracking up, Tony spit out the bone, carefully pulled his finger out, and lowered Ray's legs. He lay down and snuggled up to Ray, completely thrilled that his life had changed again. He pleasantly sighed, "Only one of my six friends in LA jacked me and let me jack his cut cock." Looking into Ray's eyes, Tony grinned, "While that was okay, you're the very best. I never felt this way before; it's not just kewl, it's definitely love. I only hoped this might happen with you."

"You never gave me any clues it could happen," Ray smiled.

Tony chuckled, "How would you have reacted if I had commented on your bare butt, cute dick, or leered at you while you were dressing or undressing?"

"At least I'd have known you were interested," Ray giggled.

Tony stole a kiss and then chuckled, "You never admitted you were gay. So we've both been caught telling lies."

Ray seriously said, "No more lies or exaggerations, I promise."

Nodding, Tony smiled, "I promise too."

Shuffling and sliding over on top of Tony, Ray asked, "How do you want to be; out or more private?"

"Out and very proud," Tony smiled.

Ray giggled, "Yeah?"

Running his fingers through Ray's hair, Tony assured, "I'm very proud of you. There's no reason to keep us hidden from anyone. I've been watching everything around here, and keep seeing little kids showing how they feel about everything and everyone. Learning to edit ourselves and hide our feelings is the worst part of growing up, and probably why we waited so long to be honest. Truthfully, you're the hottest roommate and boyfriend around. Telling everyone we're a couple is high on my list of things to do."

Seeing Ray smirking, Tony chuckled, "Do you think I rimmed your ass just to give you a thrill and call myself a real Rimmer? Come on, pretty boy! My eyes were wide open, and I saw only you. I enjoyed every moment, and I'll do it again, anytime I get the urge, or you tell me it's what you want. Yeah, out of this room I see a bunch of other really hot dudes around too, but they're off the market and out of my reach. I'm completely thrilled with you and us. I don't need a fantasy dude, cos I've already got more than my wildest dream. One day I'm gonna notice your shoulders are wider, or your pecs are stronger, or you've got a full bush around your cute dick, and then I'm gonna drag you right back in here and eat your pretty ass again. Pick any reason you want, and it'll prob'ly cause me to get a stiffy and make love to you again. Whatever makes you happy will thrill me. I'm not gonna hide how I feel about you, not anymore. We can't be more honest with each other and still hide stuff from everyone else. It won't work that way."

Ecstatic, Ray lowered all the way down and began kissing Tony. After about a minute and too many deep kisses, Tony's hips reflexively thrust up. Ray whispered, "Do it for me, Tony," and matched his pumping hips. Holding each other tightly, they whispered affirmations that they would always be a close couple and always tell the truth. After Tony lost it, they returned to pillow talk. Tony was on his back and Ray was cuddled up close to him.

At the time he was rescued, Tony had no idea that Derrick was a drummer or part of a band. For the first time, Tony admitted that he wanted to learn to play drums. Rescued by Drew and Corey at Des Moines, Ray knew about Platinum Habits and dreamed of learning to play guitar. "It don't matter if I get good enough to perform on stage," Ray confided, "but I do want to be able to strum a few favorites."

"If I could get good enough, I'd prob'ly like being on stage," Tony confessed.

Ray wondered, "Are there any other dreams you have?"

Tony smiled, "The same as any other SoCal dude, I guess. I'm pretty good on a skateboard, but suck at surfen', and lose my balance almost every ride, but I'd like to get better. During PE softball games, I played catcher and enjoyed it. I was thinkin' of trying out for the school team in the spring. Here, we'll have to see if we can build at least two teams. Two teams per base would be kewler." He paused to asked, "What're you dreamin'?"

Ray sighed, "Now's not a good time to try and think about it."

"Why? What's wrong with now?"

Devilishly grinning, Ray replied, "I'm cuddled up with you and we're both still hard." Tony chuckled. Ray giggled, "Every thought revolves around us. When we came in here, I was expecting our first big argument, not this. I'm thinking of you playing drums, and picturing you in a baseball uniform. I can't see a single moment that isn't with you."

"I love you too, pretty boy," Tony chortled.

Ray laughed, "Are you gonna call me that from now on?"

Nodding, Tony teased, "Until we're the same height and you become my sexy dude." Mooing a warning, Ray bounded up, straddled Tony's hips and started tickling. Half-heartedly trying to protect himself, Tony howled, "RAY!"

With hands flying from Tony's neck to his belly, Ray giggled, "Tell me why you've still got a bone."

"Because of you, PRETTY BOY!" Tony cackled.

"Twice isn't enough?" Ray giggled.

Tony howled, "How the hell can I answer that?" and started tickling Ray back. Both of them laughed louder. Shifting back, away from Tony's tickling, Ray thought he was safe again. However, Tony sat upright and wrapped one arm around Ray's back so he couldn't get away. With one hand, Tony was driving Ray into hysterical laughter.

A spot just above Ray's hips seemed to be the golden zone. All Tony would need do is press on that spot, on either side and with either hand, and Ray would bellow laughing. Tickling seemed to only make Tony more determined. Unable to stand it any longer, Ray shifted a tiny bit closer and dove for Tony's neck. Both of them were breathlessly laughing and started making out again. Tony began gently munching on Ray's shoulder and neck.

Accidentally, they had discovered an awesome position to be in; with Ray on his knees over Tony's groin. All Ray needed to do was shift slightly and Tony would gasp and shiver. With another shift of his hips, Tony's bone slipped right into the crack of Ray's ass. Shifting and squirming turned into grinding and humping. Playtime suddenly and urgently became very serious. In a flash, two mouths were wide open and connected. Ray kept thrusting his hips to make Tony gasp and grunt. Tony wrapped his right hand around Ray's throbbing. In under a minute, Ray lost it. Sliding his bone in Ray's crack, Tony followed moments later.

Panting and huffing, Ray giggled, "Omigod, that was fun!"

Squeezing Ray tightly against him, Tony looked up into his boyfriend's eyes, chuckling, "Only with you could any of this mean so much. I love you, Ray."

Ray lowered his head to plant a deep kiss, and then whispered, "I love you too, Tony." They remained as they were and stealing kisses of varying intensity for another few minutes. Ray then softly suggested, "If you're interested, we've got about half an hour to get cleaned up and ready for a concert."

"At last, we can dance together," Tony cheered.

Ray giggled, "Can you dance? I never have."

Shrugging, Tony reminded, "There will be lots of other dudes to watch, so we'll learn together."

After stealing another kiss, Ray got up off of Tony and stepped off the bed. Watching Tony get up and reach for his hand, Ray giggled, "There's one other thing I'd like to learn with you later tonight." Tony suspiciously waited, and Ray giggled, "I wanna try to get your bone in my butt. It felt real nice sliding around."

"You're in me first, pretty boy," Tony countered. Noticing that Ray was now waiting, Tony explained, "I don't want to hurt you, and I'm pretty sure it's gonna take some time to get it so it feels good for both of us. We can start trying tonight."

Having heard about the Clan's Friday night dinner conversation, Ray loudly called, "Hey, Alden?"

"Hey Ray!" Alden giggled.

Ray asked, "Can you help two new boyfriends out and get us dildos?" Shocked speechless, Tony's jaw dropped open. Two dildos, about a meter tall and at least that round appeared in the room, blocking the path to the door. Tony howled laughing at the tree stump sized phalluses. Cracking up, Ray laughed, "Not the Jolly Green Giant sized ones! We're just beginning!"

"I might barely be able to get my arms around one of those," Tony hysterically bellowed.

"Now there's a picture worth sharing," Alden teased.

Nodding at Tony, Ray giggled, "I don't even want to know where Alden found them. I might have nightmares if I knew."

The two monster dildos vanished and were replaced with two much smaller, five inch by four inch dildos. Alden giggled, "On your dressers, guys. I got you bottles of lube and condoms too, since they're also necessary."

Spying the more realistic toys, Tony frowned, "They're smaller than either of us, Alden."

Much more seriously, Alden said, "Take my word for it, I've seen enough guys starting out, like you, to know that those are a good beginning. Be gentle with each other, guys. I've never had to say anything while any couple was playing, and I really don't want to."

Covering his face with both hands and slumping, Ray softly giggled, "Omigod!"

Grinning at his embarrassed boyfriend, Tony chuckled, "Alden, were you watching us?"

"To be sure everyone is safe, I watch everything, around the clock," Alden giggled. "Like I said, I've never needed to interfere with any couple, and I truthfully don't want to." After a brief pause, Alden took pity upon Ray, giggling, "Ray, you're not the youngest guy I've ever seen making love. Need I remind you that Drew is twelve, Corey and Stephen Marr are eleven and John is ten? You didn't do anything that I haven't seen before. Love is the most complex emotion. How drastically two guys change when they're playing together, never ceases to amaze me."

Wrapping Ray in his arms, Tony looked between fingers to make eye contact, warmly assuring, "Yeah, you surprised me too, at first. Always remember, you're my kind o' lover; that much I knew at lunch and before we actually made love. We might have to keep our shorts on at the pool from now on, or I might be showin' off my bone far more often."

Lowering his hands, Ray giggled, "Did I really make you happy?"

"Ecstatic, pretty boy," Tony chuckled, and then planted a deep passionate kiss. Feeling Ray getting another erection, Tony broke the kiss, asking, "Do you still want to go to the concert?" Ray nodded and Tony released him, saying, "Then let's shower, get dressed and do that."

Ray nodded, stole a tender kiss, and then took Tony's hand. They stepped out of their room and out to the hallway, where they saw Angelo and Reggie were also naked and heading for the shower. Noticing messed up hair and shiny, chubby dicks, Ray bit his tongue and acted more mature than his age. No sooner had the couples congratulated each other, Phil and Owen stepped into the hall too. All six boys went into the lavatory to shower before the concert.

* * * * *

Ewa Beach, Condo B

Tuesday, November 9, 2004, 12:41 PM HTZ

Finished with their lunches and after cleaning up, Reyes asked Ryan, "Is there anything you'd like to do?" He suggested, "Hang out by the pools with the rest of the kids, or anything you want?"

Ryan stole a kiss and then said, "I have to talk with my dad and mom. If I know Paul, he's not saying much about what happened. He's too stubborn to even realize they deserve an apology."

"Let's do that first," Reyes smiled. "Afterward, we can go find Grandpa Rob, and learn about the four women and the fatherless little boy."

Holding up a finger, Ryan giggled, "Maybe we can put clean shirts on first?"

Rolling his eyes and his entire head, Reyes smirked, "I obviously still need sleep. We can't let them see all your bruises."

"Not immediately," Ryan grinned. "If they ask, I'll lift my shirt and show them, but it shouldn't be the first thing they can see." He paused, only to call, "Stevie, where's mom and dad, and are they busy?"

Stevie giggled, "Our mom's always busy. About ten minutes ago, she and daddy transported here. They're upstairs, and mommy's cooking for Jerry, Joey and KC."

Leading Ryan by the hand back into the bedroom, Reyes chuckled, "Did you mention that we've got two huge kitchens full of chefs, who won't allow any of them to starve?"

"Course I did," Stevie giggled. "I even told her that they all had breakfast and lunch already. Still, she's up there cooking dinner. Daddy's helping, by staying out of her way. KC's still surfing with Fred. Jerry and Joey haven't been back yet, so they don't even know what's goin' on."

By this time, Ryan and Reyes had clean shirts on. They crossed the apartment and went out to the hall. On the way to the elevator, Ryan asked, "Aren't you curious about what I'm going to say?"

Reyes smiled, "Is there something I don't know that will shock me?"

"I suppose not," Ryan cheekily grinned.

Pressing the elevator up button, Reyes giggled, "Would you like to explain that expression?"

Giggling insanely, Ryan waited for the elevator to arrive. Once they were inside, Ryan playfully explained, "I don't care what my brother thinks. I chose to be with you." Reyes pressed the button for the fourth floor. The doors closed, and Ryan continued, "You're being gallant to the extreme, and the feelings I thought I had last night have easily quadrupled. I'm living with you, from now on, no matter how long it takes Paul to yank his head out of his butt. We'll visit my mom and dad, but I live here now, with you."

The elevator opened at the same moment that Reyes giggled, "I guess you love me?" Standing at the elevator door were Rad and Gil, preparing to return to work. Since their romantic moment had accidentally been shared, Reyes and Ryan blushed and giggled.

"Now I understand," Gil smiled.

Rad chuckled, "I guess Core Rimmers can get it up just about anywhere. A lift seems unnecessary, but whatever!"

Following Ryan out of the elevator, Reyes giggled, "One cantaloupe is waiting in our flat downstairs. We're planning on snacking later." Ryan cracked up.

Sadly shaking his head, Gil went into the elevator. Following his partner, Rad joked, "We'll get the professional size melons for the team meeting."

Making sure the elevator door had slid closed, Reyes giggled, "Is there anything more you plan on saying in mixed company?"

Shaking his head, Ryan smiled, "That's the important part for mixed company. Between us though, Paul can take days, weeks or months, but in the meantime, I get to be with you, each and every hour of every day. I'm very happy here with you. I don't see that ever changing." Leaving Reyes widely smiling, Ryan giggled and lifted the door knocker for unit 4-B.

"Sure," Reyes sarcastically giggled, "don't give me a chance to give you a thank you kiss."

Pulling Reyes into his arms, Ryan laughed, "I won't argue!"

"Grandpa Rob might have to wait," Reyes playfully warned.

The door opened. Jon Owens grinned at the smiling and giggling boys in the hall. He turned slightly and teased, "Mary, your cooking is attracting guests." He waved Reyes and Ryan inside.

Hurrying across the apartment, Mary smiled, "Only two?" She went directly to Ryan and gave him kiss on the cheek, followed by a motherly inspection. Seeing the bruise on Ryan's jaw, she called, "Stevie, get an ice pack for your brother," and held out a palm.

Watching Ryan's eyes roll, Reyes chuckled, "Cold and warm compresses is what the doctor ordered." Watching Mary apply the compress to Ryan's face, Reyes told her and Jon, "I swapped compresses for over an hour last night. For some reason, Ryan keeps finding ways to prevent it today."

Holding the ice pack to his jaw, Ryan asked his parents, "Do you know what happened?"

Leading the boys inside, Jon nodded, "Stevie had to tell me, because Paul couldn't. All that matters now is that you'll heal." He sighed, "It might take Paul longer to heal from the emotional trauma."

"He's being a doofus," Ryan grumbled. Taking a moment to pull himself together, Ryan explained, "Last week, Reyes was our friend.

All three of us felt we could become more than friends. We missed seeing him Thursday and Friday."

Reyes quickly interjected, "I missed seeing them too."

Ryan nodded and continued, "Saturday, we shared all that. Before coming here Sunday evening, Paul and I talked about Reyes. We both wanted to give him a real chance. The way Paul is now is because I got hurt. It's the way he used to be, when we lived on the streets. I know I have a family there on Sullivan's Island. I also have an awesome boyfriend here. How much of that Paul really knows, I can't say for sure any more. Since I can't speak for Paul, I do want to apologize for waking everybody up. It didn't need to happen, but since it did, I'm sorry."

Taking a seat on the easy chair near the kitchen, Jon asked, "How do you feel, Reyes?"

Joining Ryan on the sofa, Reyes easily answered, "Disappointed that Paul's not here, and really happy that Ryan is."

Jon said, "It'll take him a while. I told him to just apologize, but he's not ready."

Returning to her meal preparations in the kitchen, Mary sighed, "I'm sure he will, eventually."

"Don't be so sure, mom," Ryan warned. "He still hasn't gotten over the streets. The three of us together would be so good, we could help Reyes and he could help us, but now, I really have no idea what might be going through his mind. Maybe being separated from me would be good for him, to finally realize that he has a family and the bad times are all over."

"We'll be available for him, whenever he needs or wants to talk,"

Mary assured.

Jon wondered, "How're you two managing?"

"We're happy enough," Ryan brightly beamed at Reyes.

Reyes offered, "I took care of Ryan's bruises last night, and I will again later today, if I have to chase him around the apartment." Ryan sputtered and then cracked up. Reyes grinned, "Today, I was sad because Paul's not here, and Ryan took care of me. We're managing, just like I hoped, and then some."

"I like it here," Ryan smiled. "Prez hired two new command team members this morning. I got to watch Reyes get the two newbies oriented. The command center here is much more than what Marc has at his house. And then there's about four hundred kids roamin' around." He turned to Reyes and reminded, "You need to show me where the school is."

Reyes nodded, "It's a short walk to the southeast side of the base."

Mary smiled, "This apartment is very nice; the large windows and sliding glass doors make it very bright and cheery."

"Our apartment is one floor down," Ryan shared. "It's a really large one bedroom unit."

"Eight hundred and seventy square feet," Reyes smiled. "A lot of the employees live here. The Taylor family moved into one of the big homes. Jason and Trinity Taylor are teachers. They arrived with one son and now have six. By the end of the week, all our bases will have condominiums like this. Grandpa Carl tried to make sure we have enough space for all the employees and visiting guests."

Ryan asked, "What are your plans for the rest of the day?"

Jon reminded, "We're on Eastern time. I expect we'll be going home about five or six o'clock, local time. More than likely, we'll be back tomorrow for a few more hours."

Reyes suggested, "I'd like it if you could stay for a concert this afternoon. I don't know if I'll get to introduce my dad and pop, but they'll be up on stage."

"With you!" Ryan giggled.

Nodding, Reyes smiled, "And Troy. We're concentrating on audience interaction and participation. We never know what might happen during our rehearsals."

Mary asked, "Would it be music that we'd enjoy?"

"I'm sure it will," Reyes answered. "There might be one or two newer songs that you've never heard, but we play a little of everything. The adults here seem to like our choices, and the kids really seem to love the show. The other five band members are virtuosos. For example, Keith is a classical pianist. The band knows over three hundred songs, and that's not including songs that each of us know, but haven't really rehearsed together."

"I saw them play Saturday," Ryan smiled. "They're really good, and obviously enjoy performing. It's guaranteed that Jerry, Joey and KC will want to be there."

"You'll be on stage near me," Reyes giggled.

"WHAT?" Ryan squealed. Mary began giggling and Jon widely smiled.

"It's a rehearsal concert for our kids," Reyes laughed. "You can be with me. Last week, I was up on stage as an observer, and so was Jonah, Dillon, Richie and Dee."

Whining through giggles, Ryan wondered, "Why can't I watch from the audience?"

"Because I want you closer than that," Reyes teased.

Ryan locked eyes with his dad. Shrugging, Jon chortled, "There are prices to be paid."

Ryan turned to his mom. Mary shook her head and giggled, "There's a spare bed in the room with your brother?"

Smirking, Ryan shifted the ice pack to his forehead and huffed, "I'd rather take my chances on stage." Reyes, Jon and Mary cracked up.

* * * * *

Ewa Beach, Dormitory #3

Tuesday, November 9, 2004, 12:45PM HTZ

With the afternoon school session and their first music appreciation class only minutes away, Prez and most of the Core Rimmers (excluding Chris and Jay) got dry and dressed again. Soon, a large mass of teens and tweens were heading to the playground to gather the little kids for school.

Remaining at the pools were only a couple dozen teens and tweens. Dunked repeatedly by everyone strong enough to capture and lift them, Chris and Jay, dripped over to where Erik, Lance, Scott and Travis were getting dressed. Chris wondered, "Where are you guys off to?"

"Don't tell me you're needing more alone time," Jay teased.

Chris grinned, "You said you had that time before lunch." He scanned the nearest tables and chairs for his and Jay's clothes.

Lance giggled, "Me and Scott had that time, but now it's time to get the guitars out and practice."

Nodding agreement at Lance, Scott told the others, "Last night, we found a metronome app for our computers. The clip-clop is already driving us crazy. We really need some sort of drum machine to help us keep time."

Travis reminded, "We're dorm leaders. Let us know what you need, and we'll try and get it for you."

Jay tapped his sub-vocal, and told Alden, "Whatever music stuff that Trav orders for Scott and Lance is pre-approved. Just add it to their music education expenses."

Watching Lance's jaw drop and Scott widely smiling, Erik giggled, "Having friends in high places is nice, huh?"

Jay chortled, "Morale Rimmers find and help guys, like musicians, to help keep morale high."

Carrying the clothes, Chris padded over to that table, sniggering, "Don't start that 'high places' crap, Erik, or you'll be falling ten meters into the diving well." He handed Jay his boxers, shorts and shirt.

Lance noticed Jay waiting for a remark, and laughed, "I'm not saying more than thank you! We need a drum machine, so the next time we jam with Reyes, Joey and KC, we're not struggling to keep up."

Trav asked Jay, "What're you two planning on doin'?"

"We'll check the kids here and at Oneula Beach first," Jay answered. Bending over and stepping into his boxers, he added, "Assuming everything's kewl, we've been hoping for some private time since my doctor appointment."

Chris smiled, "Maybe we can actually shower alone before the rehearsal this afternoon."

Erik giggled, "Let's synchronize our watches and meet in the shower again..."

"Without John and Stephen this time!" all six sniggered. Catching themselves saying the same thing at almost the same time, six smiles faded and suspicious glares were cast.

Taking Erik's hand and glancing at Scott and Lance, Travis prompted, "Let's go get your drum machine whatchamacallit, dudes." All four waved at Chris and Jay and began the walk back to their dorm.

Scott revealed, "We're not exactly sure what it is we want. I've seen them in stores, but since I didn't have the bucks, I never really checked them out too closely."

Lance nodded, "It needs to be something we can hook speakers up to, so we can both hear it."

Thoughtfully scowling, Erik asked, "Do you need time to search the 'net for the right one?" Travis softly chortled. "What?" Erik giggled, and squeezed Trav's hand in his.

"You have the interest in music, cuddle bunny," Travis grinned.

"Yeah," Erik giggled, "but it also takes lots of practice hours. I have a partner now, one I want to be with, so I can't really split my time and be everything all at once. If the placement test says that's what I should be doing, then I'll go with that, because you'll be studying at the same time I am. Right now, this first week with you, I want to spend the majority of my time with you."

Lance and Scott provocatively mooed. Erik cracked up.

Travis laughed, "We aren't always intertwined, ya pervs!"

Scott teased, "Uh huh, so what are you doin' then?"

Travis checked with Erik. Getting a nod in reply, Travis reminded, "I lost both my parents when I was eight. More recently, Erik lost his mom and then his dad. Saturday, we spent a lot of time talking about that kind of philosophical stuff; heaven, hell, karma, the deep stuff like that. I never had anyone to talk with about that stuff, so what was important is still important."

Erik smiled, "Yeah, we made love a lot, but as two complete virgins. As slow as we went... as slow as you two went, how quick did we climax? Between about ten yesterday morning and lunch, you two dudes became a couple. What's evident to us, and what we've talked about, is only the surface of what's between the two of you, and the two of us."

"What's the purpose of our lives?" Travis softly asked. Without waiting for an answer, he wondered, "Is it what we make of our lives, or is there a greater purpose we're led to accomplish? What happens when we die; heaven, hell, reincarnation?"

Erik said, "All the questions everybody has, that everybody has their own unique answers for, that's what we sometimes talk about. The great part is not only sharing our own thoughts and feelings about it, but exploring the alternatives too. We're planning on spending our lives together. There's a lot of dreams and aspirations that will come and go over the next decades. Similarly, there's bound to be some disappointments and failures that we'll be sharing too."

Opening the door to the short hall of dorm three, Travis asked Lance and Scott, "Have you spent time alone, cuddled in bed, watching a movie on TV, and just enjoying each other's company?"

Entering the dorm, Lance and Scott shook their heads. Following them inside, Erik prodded, "Try it tonight, dudes. It's totally awesome. At bed time, when you're both nude, pay attention to what makes your lover's dick get hard, and get soft. Pay attention to the way he breathes, and what makes him breathe faster or slower. The movie might inspire some random thoughts and emotions, so really listen to each other."

Travis grinned, "We've felt like important parts of each other since meeting. Neither of us want that feeling to ever fade. From the first minutes alone together, we started sharing everything. Sure, we're teenagers now, and getting plenty crazy. Sometimes we're together in body, and other times we're together in mind, and all the time we're together in soul. Neither of us want any of that to ever change."

Scott sighed, "We spend so much of our time concentrating on music, we've missed something, Lance."

"Yeah," Lance reluctantly agreed.

The conversation paused because the door to the dorm room shared by Taron and JD was open, and Rafe and Jason were in there with their boyfriends.

Crossing the empty common room, Scott asked Lance, "Do you want to try that tonight?"

Lance giggled, "Yeah, but the question is, can we?" Scott widely smiled, pushing Erik and Travis into evil snickering. Lance unlocked the door to room fourteen. Once everyone was inside and Trav closed the door, Lance cackled, "How can I sit there naked with you and not touch your dick?" Scott, Erik and Travis cracked up. Lance giggled, "We're always playing guitar, or always playing something! I can tell myself not to, but I can also foresee another consequence that will keep us awake later too!"

Going to his new best friend, Erik giggled, "We didn't say that couldn't happen, bro. It does and probably will, but the important part is the hour or two together without messin' around. Just spend the time for one movie being naked and quietly enjoying each other's company."

"In our case, we usually make love first and then spend the time being together," Travis shared. "The TV timer is set, so we can drift off to sleep, already completely relaxed."

Erik giggled, "In the morning, we can wake up with a bang." Scott and Lance roared laughing. Softly chortling, Travis pulled Erik close and planted a whopper of a kiss.

Lance went to Scott, wrapped his arms around him, and giggled, "Let's try it tonight."

After landing a deep, passionate kiss, Scott grinned, "Sex before the flick or after?"

"Before and maybe again after," Lance giggled.

Peering deep into Lance's green eyes, Scott smiled, "We'd better search the 'net for drum machines, or we may forget all about it." Lance nodded, but before moving away, he dove for an unexpected deep kiss that left Scott reeling. "That settles it," Scott grinned, "we'll be in the shower before the rehearsal." Erik and Travis cracked up. Giggling insanely, Lance led Scott to his desk and powered up his laptop. Glancing back at Travis and Erik, Scott prompted, "Pull the other chair over, guys."

They did so, while Lance tried to get Scott to sit on his lap. After a few moments of playful arguing, the MacBook Pro had booted, and then Scott was guided down onto Lance's right thigh by Travis. That left Scott typing in the password to Lance's computer, and beginning the search for the best drum machines available. While Scott leaned forward, Lance bounced his eyebrows at Erik and Travis. Without diverting his attention from the laptop, Scott softly sniggered, "I know you're being bad, SLB."

"Then why do I feel so good?" Lance giggled. Erik cracked up.

Finished typing, Scott wrapped his left arm around Lance's shoulders, smiling, "Because once we agree on a drum machine, get it and jam for a while, you're going to go hyper on me. At which point, the noise coming from this room will escalate to ground shaking levels. Afterwards, we'll be very happy, very sore and we'll need to have Alden remove the destroyed bed."

Widely smiling at the banter and his hysterical partner, Travis prodded, "Shopping for a drum machine, dudes?"

"And jousting for position," Scott smirked, stealthily tickling Lance's neck. Loud cackling erupted and a tickle fight broke out in front of the computer. In seconds, they were off the chair and chasing one another around the room.

"I think I understand why being close together, like us, might not accomplish what we hoped with these two," Travis told Erik.

Nodding, Erik giggled, "Is it because they're guitar players, heavy metal guitar players, or just because they didn't allow themselves to do this stuff for three days?"

"All three!" Scott and Lance cackled. After about another minute of tickling, Scott and Lance returned to the chair, the laptop and their shopping. This time Scott took the chair and pulled Lance onto his lap.

The top of the line manufacturers were Korg and Roland, they quickly discovered. Both companies had drum machines between 150 and 2000 credits. The more expensive models were obviously for larger PA systems and DJs. Lance scurried over to the stereo system in the room to see what sort of interfaces were available. Lance smiled, "We could do either digital in with an optical cable, or analog with RCA jacks."

Nodding, Scott smiled, "Let's get a machine that can do either type. That way, we can use whatever's necessary for the task; practicing here or rehearsing on stage. One unit, one time expense, many uses." Scott assembled a list of various cables and connectors for any purpose, and a Roland drum machine.

"HOLY CRAP!" Lance shouted. Appearing very sad, he looked over at Trav and Erik, softly sighing, "Two hundred bucks on cables alone, totaling one thousand five hundred and seventy-nine bucks."

Travis shrugged, "Jay's already approved it, and you dudes got something that was highly rated and versatile. If you're both satisfied and ready, I'll call Alden to complete the deal."

Scott told Lance, "It's got 256 preset rhythms in eight styles, and is completely programmable. We can store another 256 patterns, up to eight bars each. Unlimited additional patches can be stored on our Macbook PCs."

Lance smirked, "It's just a lot of money, more than I expected. The smaller, less expensive units wouldn't be nearly as good in the long run. We'd wind up having to order something else to perform live."

Scott told Travis, "Let's make it happen."

Tapping his comm-badge, Travis called, "Alden?"

"I've been watching and listening," Alden replied. "The only thing you didn't consider is the size of the machine. You'll need a small table to store it near the stereo, so it's not sitting on the floor. I'll add a dust cover and padded carry case too."

With all four teens watching, the entertainment center components faded out and then back, in a slightly different position. A sturdy folding table, about a meter long and half-a-meter wide appeared. Then, in its original shipping box, the drum machine materialized on the table. Under the table, the case, dust cover and an assortment of cables appeared.

Lance and Scott quickly unpacked the drum machine and got it set on the table. Travis took the empty shipping carton to the storage closet. In the meantime, Scott reviewed the manual, while Lance and Erik got the digital cable connected to the stereo and plugged it into the drum machine. When Travis returned, they were powering up the drum machine, and then the stereo. Lance switched to the auxiliary digital input. Scott set the unit to play a preprogrammed heavy drum part and pressed play.

Initially, the volume level was low enough for them to talk to each other without shouting. Wearing an evil grin, Erik prompted, "Get your guitars out and let's find out how loud it needs to be?" Nodding and snickering, Lance and Scott got their electric guitars out and plugged into their amplifiers. Travis walked across the room, stopped between the two beds, and turned around to listen. Turning on the amps and choosing the key of E, Lance offered to play rhythm and Scott would play lead. Waiting for the next four bar sequence to begin, Lance started off and Scott followed. Erik turned up the stereo's volume to about half way.

Smiling and nodding, Trav hollered, "That's good; I can hear each of 'em and the drum part too." Erik checked with Lance and Scott.

"It's awesome!" Lance laughed.

Travis hurried across the room, opened the door and stepped out into the hall, closing the door behind him. He went into the common room and turned on the big television, to make sure other kids could be in there without the TV being terribly drowned out. With the common room surround system turned up only about a quarter of the way, very little of what was going on in Lance's and Scott's room could be heard. He turned the TV off and went back down the hall. Beyond Chris' and Jay's room, there was so little sound leakage that Travis had to listen carefully for the occasional snap of a snare drum. He returned to the room, smiling and flashing a thumbs up.

To find out what Travis was doing, Lance and Scott stopped playing. Scott turned down the stereo, and then asked, "What's the scoop?"

Travis smiled, "That's really loud in here, but I checked the common room and down past Jay's room. You could practice at that volume without disturbing anybody. Just to be sure, check with the Hiram twins later. They need to be able to watch TV or do whatever they want, without you dudes drowning out their TV and stereo."

Erik checked his watch, and then smiled, "We'll see you in about forty-five minutes."

"In this hall's shower," Lance giggled. Catching Scott's evil grin, Lance cackled, "WHAT?"

Shaking his head, Scott then turned to Trav and Erik, chuckling, "We'll see you soon. Thanks so much for the awesome gear, guys."

Travis nodded and waved, and then reached for the door knob. "Any time, dudes," Erik smiled.

When Travis opened the door, Joey was standing there with his dad. "Who was pwayin' dwums?" Joey giggled.

Waving Jerry and Joey into the room, Scott chuckled, "Our new drum machine, for practicing."

Hurrying in and pulling his dad along, Joey shouted, "KEWW! ID SOUNDS AWESOME!"

Softly chortling and stepping out of the room with his partner, Erik closed the door. They went towards the common room, intending to go to their room. Erik beamed, "That felt fantastic! They were so hyped up, they could barely conceal their excitement. I like being a dorm leader."

"Me too," Travis smiled. "How about we add a little something in the common room for other kids?" Rapidly nodding, Erik giggled. Walking to the far corner, on the opposite side of the room from the upright piano, Travis called, "Alden, we need a shelf unit in here, to hold some board games and toys for the kids."

Over the room's speakers, Alden giggled, "Be a little more specific about the shelving, Trav."

"Like a right triangle," Travis replied, "with wider shelves on the bottom and getting progressively narrower as it goes up. Maybe steel framed with plexiglass shelves."

In about ten minutes, Erik and Travis had added a shelving unit loaded with board games, miniature electric cars and trucks, brain teaser toys like Rubik's Cube, and a collection of hardcover books by various classic authors, like Jack London and Mark Twain. To complete the task, on the top shelf was a fiber optic lamp that changed colors. It could act as a night light, and even during the afternoon, it was pretty.

Now that they had taken care of their dorm brothers, Erik and Travis returned to their room for some private time to take care of each other. Erik wondered, "Why'd you check with me before telling them what we talk about?"

"The most important reason was to make sure you were okay with it," Travis admitted. "That's something that you might rather remain between us."

Erik unlocked their door and they stepped inside their room. "You didn't share any details," Erik smiled, and closed the door. "It also proves that we do much more than get messy. At some point, I'd like our other friends to know some more aspects about us."

Travis nodded, "I think the conversation should just meander in that direction naturally." Briefly pausing, Travis wondered, "Do you think Lance is still a little afraid of me?"

Erik shrugged, "I hope he was only playing with the fact that you're about five or six inches taller, and many pounds heavier than he is. Only you can prove how gentle and caring you are, Champ. I can say it, but he'll know my thoughts are biased."

Travis smirked, "I have no idea how I can prove that to him."

"It's not something you need to rush into," Erik reminded. "We've only known each other a few days. Living in the same dorm, and seeing each other every day, eventually something will prove it. Lance will notice and he'll say something to you about it."

"Probably through you," Travis grinned.

"I don't know about that," Erik giggled. "Lance has no problem saying what's on his mind. He just needs to feel comfortable about it. In that regard, you two are similar. If it's that important to you, then ask him about it. Time's on your side, and so am I."

* * * * *

Ewa Beach, CIC Dining Room

Tuesday, November 9, 2004, 1:07PM HTZ

After having their late lunch, Phil and Owen joined Jake and Terry, who had arrived at the dining room even later. While the latter couple ate, Phil initiated a conversation so Owen, Jake and Terry could share their orphanage experiences. Since the dining room was barren, they could freely talk without fears of being overheard.

The primary difference between level one and level two orphans were quantities of food and their sleeping arrangements. Level one orphans had twin size bunk beds with shabby mattresses, but that was better than the foam pads on the floor the level two orphans had.

Level one orphans were fed measured quantities of food, but the level two orphans weren't even fed that much. For those reasons, Jake and Terry were healthy enough to participate in gym class at their school, although they weren't as capable as many other boys. Being somewhat healthier, Jake and Terry had never been left behind their classmates to retake entire school years. Their grades weren't great, but good enough to advance.

Owen began raving about the computer and television operations that Phil had shown him. Enthusiastically, Jake and Terry asked to be shown the same, and get some help with starting their computers for the first time. Phil checked with Owen. As much as Owen wanted to be alone with Phil, he realized that he had an opportunity to be a brother, and with Phil's help, Owen could try, so he agreed.

While Jake and Terry were taking their trays to the dishwasher, they met other boys from dormitory two who were grabbing drinks and snacks from the kitchen, and told them what was about to happen. With six more boys that lived in the same hallway, Jake and Terry returned to the table where Owen and Phil were waiting. Phil and Owen were introduced to three pairs of roommates; ten-year-old Luke Nepos and nine-year-old Silas De Aquila, ten-year-old Jeffery Castillo, and twelve-year-old Thomas Cork, and eleven-year-old Matthew Cottingham and ten-year-old Rodney Casteneda. Luke and Silas were ex-Latin King kids. Jeff, Tom, Matt and Rodney were all level one orphans. Hand-in-hand, Jake and Terry led the pack to dorm two.

From the path through the quad, Phil wondered, "Don't you dudes open your windows?" He then pointed to dormitory three, where he lived with Craig, saying, "The weather's always beautiful here, dudes. Saturday night, when it rained, was the only time we had our windows closed. Sunday morning, after breakfast, they were opened again."

Holding the door open for the group, Terry checked with the slightly taller but younger boy, asking, "Is that kewl?"

"I'll prove it," Phil grinned. Jake went to his room, number twenty-one-twenty-five. As soon as the group had entered, Phil called, "Alden, tell these dudes that it's kewl to open their windows."

Alden giggled, "Of course it is! If we didn't want you opening them, they'd be panes of glass you can't open. It's not like anyone would think of stealing anything. Even if they did, with cameras in each room and every hall, I'd see who stole what and let a Core Rimmer know. I assumed you guys just liked the windows, blinds and curtains closed for privacy, so I didn't say anything."

Phil smiled, "You dudes can call on Alden for just about anything, any time. How do you think we got the water blasters last night?"

Owen nodded and giggled, "It all started when Phil's big bro, Craig got soaked by the other dudes wearing Mr. Fuzzy G-strings. Craig called Alden and the water blaster war began."

"You dudes can do just about anything you want in your room," Phil patiently explained. "Chris and Jay wanted their beds away from the windows, so they moved the beds to the adjacent walls. In Pat's and Rafe's room, they decided to move the dressers between the two beds, because Pat's hooked up with Ralphie. That way they have privacy."

Alden giggled, "As of last night, Rafe's hooking up with Taron Reyce Otter. After the cozy cuzzy fuzzy Water Blaster battle, Pat and Ralphie slept on one bed and Rafe and Taron slept on the other. Chris and Jay moved the beds and night tables themselves. Since Pat and Rafe are younger and couldn't lift the dressers, I had them step back and transported the dressers to the new, preferred locations. The three Oldcambus brothers are sharing one room, so I set up their room with full size bunk beds, and an extra desk, chair and computer."

Tom Cork squealed, "I thought you were only for helping the Core Rimmers, Alden."

Alden giggled, "I'm here for all of you guys and girls. I have VIs, or virtual intelligence machines that handle ordering food for the kitchens, replace the clothes you guys got from the store and dozens of other tasks." In a more relaxed tone, Alden said, "This is one of my VI's. I can handle multiple tasks at once, interact with any one or groups of kids, and do anything the Core Rimmers ask of me." Returning to a more emotive voice, Alden giggled, "One day I'll have a body, so I can interact with all of you, and you'll still be able to call me the same way that Phil just did. The only difference will be the real me will have legs and a body to be with you. If all you need is help with something, like moving furniture, the VIs managing the transporters will respond and help. The night you were being rescued from your orphanages, one of my VIs was assisting Reyes in the auditorium, so he could play drums along with the songs he selected."

Already aware of the answer, Phil smiled, "You heard me in the dining room with Owen, Jake and Terry, didn't you?"

"You're here to help acquaint the guys with their laptop computers, the televisions, satellite systems and the stereos," Alden replied.

Phil shared, "I can help two dudes easily, but I can't help all eight of these dudes at once, Alden."

Alden sang, "DUN-DUN-DUUUN! Super AI to the rescue!"

Kerry groaned, "Oh, puh-lease!"

"Give us a break, bro," George giggled.

Stevie grumbled, "If I had an arm, I'd slap him!"

Jack muttered, "The only thing 'super' about Alden is his colossal ego."

Insanely giggling, Alden introduced his brothers to the boys in the room. All the AIs and the boys had a brief conversation about androids and the AIs getting bodies.

For the next hour, Phil and Owen roamed from room-to-room, showing the other eight boys how to operate their televisions, stereos, and assisting Alden with some computer tasks, including replacing Windows laptops for Macbook Pro laptops in all four rooms. In small groups, other boys came inside from the pools and rec room. Seeing and hearing what was going on, they wanted to learn the same things. Wanting some time alone with Owen before the Core Rimmers got out of school, Phil encouraged the original eight to show their dorm brothers what they had already learned.

Owen was ecstatic. In only two days, he had a boyfriend and experienced what it was like to be a brother. Owen wanted to go to Oneula Beach, where he could show Phil his room and maybe find his roommate, Ellis. Suddenly, many dozens of possibilities were opening Owen's eyes. He could barely decide what to do first. However, Phil could tell Owen was a little hyper, so he suggested some alone time was needed.

* * * * *

Back at dorm one room one, Angelo had received and had Reggie writhing on the bed. As Reggie had done for him, Angelo worshiped his lover's body. Between tender kisses, Angelo told him every thought he hadn't yet shared. Resting his head on his boyfriend's belly, Angelo stroked away, completely mesmerized by the foreskin hiding and showing off the head. The intention was, as Reggie had done, to lick up his lover's load off his belly. It was the perfect first time for Angelo, and he wanted to reproduce it, as best he could for Reggie.

Beginning to warn his partner, Reggie stiffened, and appropriately, Angelo lifted his head out of the way. Reggie grunted. A fountain of jizz flew up, the likes of which Angelo didn't even know was possible. It hit Angelo on the cheek and dripped down his face. He adjusted the angle so he didn't get squirted again, but he didn't stop stroking until the last seemed to only ooze over Reggie's foreskin and over his hand. Groaning the entire time, Reggie occasionally bounced on the bed. Fully retracting his lover's foreskin, Angelo cleaned up a bit. Surprisingly, all Reggie managed was soft cooing for several more moments.

"Oh my God!" Reggie wearily cheered, "That was the very best ever! I swear, it never ever felt anything close to that!"

Releasing Reggie's bone, Angelo turned to his one true love, sniggering, "Yeah, I think I did pretty good for a first time."

Blinking, Reggie tried to focus again. Seeing what had happened, and Angelo wiping it off his face, Reggie's jaw dropped. "Oh!" he squeaked, and covered his mouth, softly giggling, "I can't believe it. Seriously, a few centimeters is as far as I've ever shot before. I'm so sorry, babe."

"Don't be," Angelo giggled, and then slurped up the juice he had on his fingers. "I sure ain't sorry, just surprised."

"So am I!" Reggie cackled. He uncovered his face only to pull Angelo down and repeatedly kiss him. During the kisses, Reggie discovered that one of his hands running through Angelo's hair was getting wet too. He helplessly giggled into kisses. Angelo pulled back with a curious glare. Reggie cackled, "It's in your hair too. We're gonna have to shower too now."

Smirking, Angelo giggled, "Pretty funny, huh?"

"Your hair is sticking up on that side." Reggie uncontrollably laughed, "You look like a one-horned demon!"

On a mission, Angelo reached down to fondle his boyfriend's very sensitive penis. Laughing harder, Reggie tried to double up to protect himself, but that only exposed other ticklish areas, which Angelo took full advantage of. Completely on the defensive, Reggie squirmed to get away. All he accomplished was falling partially off the bed. Wrapping one arm around the legs protruding in the air before him and pulling them against his chest, Angelo tickled to his heart's content. He playfully giggled, "Do you love me?"

"YES!"

"How much do you love me?"

"WITH ALL MY HEART, I SWEAR!"

"Swearing is bad."

Reggie loudly laughed, "I'm your SLAVE, FOREVER AND EVER, just STOP TICKLING ME!"

"You'll do anything?"

"And LOVE IT!"

Releasing Reggie's legs, Angelo watched a fine butt roll. He shifted back away from the edge of the bed, giggling, "I'll love you too, forever and ever, Reg."

Wearily kneeling on the floor at the edge of the bed, Reggie smiled, "Being extra romantic is only making me more determined."

Bouncing his eyebrows, Angelo sniggered, "Lookin' for a new hair style too, are ya?"

Shaking his head and standing, Reggie warned, "That would be a waste," and then jumped up onto the bed. Falling backward, Angelo cracked up. Purposefully, Reggie dropped with his face near Angelo's crotch. Without hesitation, round two began.

When they had finished a few minutes later, they snuggled, completely wrapped in one another's arms and legs, sharing life stories, and all the best and worst times. Reggie learned that Angelo had been harassed in elementary school by a few bullies. Angelo learned that Reggie spent every spare moment drawing as a younger boy, and sometimes fell back into that pattern, especially when there was a picture to finish. He had played little league baseball all through grade school too, and was good enough to play infield baseman and shortstop positions.

They spent a few minutes trying to understand why they felt so much for each other before ever saying more than hello. It wasn't only physical attractions, it was more like destiny. They finished their conversation by agreeing to commit themselves to one another. Whatever life happened to toss their way could be easier as long as they remained together.

At a pause, Reggie softly asked, "Dinner at my house tonight?"

"I'd love that."

"Before we leave my place for your place, we'll have a short chat with my dad, to tell him we'll be out late."

"Do you want to tell him that you won't be home at all?"

"Yeah, we might as well. We're on base, just here, not there. It's my mom who worries more over little stuff than you and me combined."

Angelo giggled, "Could you imagine doing what we did with your brother in the next room?"

"It won't happen," Reggie grinned. "I'd really hate to be executed for child abuse and endangerment now, babe."

After thoughtfully humming, Angelo admitted, "I'd simply smother my sister. That means we have something new on our agenda."

"There's no way I could be separated from you. I think it's time to move out on our own. I'm not even imagining spending a single night without you. I'd never get to sleep."

"Don't you think we need to give our folks some time, to get used to us being together, before we drop that bomb on them?"

"My dad would be kewl about it, because we'd only be at a different place here on base, not far away. On the other hand, I think my mom would argue no matter when we mentioned it. What about your folks?"

"I think they'd both be very kewl, if we wait a couple of days.

Just like your dad, they'd realize we'd be close."

Reggie sighed and then wondered, "How can we work this? I'd be perfectly happy spending every night here, from now on."

"That would make our intention pretty clear. There's also the little problem of clothes and our other necessities, not to mention your art supplies and my computer music stuff."

Both boys scowled and hummed. Very suddenly, Angelo stole a kiss, and then called, "Hey, Alden?" Reggie grinned, thinking of how they probably looked from the camera lens of an AI, and began to blush and softly giggle.

"Yes?" Alden flatly replied.

"We need your kind of help, dude."

Alden giggled, "I guess so! Everything worked out well?"

"Very much so," Reggie smiled.

Angelo shared, "So much so that we're planning on living alone, right here in this room."

"It's not a problem," Alden assured. "I'll just let the Core Rimmers know, if that's okay? At least Prez and Keith should know. I have a suggestion too, if that's all right?"

"Sure," Reggie answered.

Angelo prompted, "Fire away."

Alden said, "There's a free room very much like this one at dorm three. That's where Tony, Ray, Chris, Jay, Lance, Scott, Erik and Travis live."

"AWESOME!" both boys cheered.

Alden giggled, "I thought you'd prefer to be with friends."

Reggie prompted, "We'll need clothes too, Alden; enough for three or four days, at least. We can grab stuff from our rooms during the days, when our folks aren't around."

"And toothbrushes and stuff too," Angelo added. "We can't let our parents know that we have no intention of sleeping separately ever again."

"Got it," Alden giggled, "so taking stuff from your homes would let them know what's going on."

"That summarizes it pretty well," Reggie grinned.

Alden giggled, "Unravel yourselves and stand up please, so I can take measurements and get you clothes." While the two boys kissed and began to separate, Alden instructed, "If there's any colors or types of clothes you don't want, let me know." Once Angelo and Reggie were standing, Alden prompted, "Turn in place, please." They let go of each others' hands and did as instructed.

Reggie said, "No plaids or stripes for me, Alden. I'm boxy looking as it is, and they only make me look bigger."

Angelo added, "With brown hair and eyes, I try to stay away from shades of brown. Tans are kewl, just no browns." For a moment, Angelo considered asking Reggie to flex his muscles. Knowing that would cause another round, he didn't ask but openly watched Reggie turning around. Noticing Angelo's wandering eyes, Reggie smiled and stole a tender kiss.

Alden playfully reminded, "I've seen you guys dressing since Sunday. I'll use that criteria as well as what you mentioned."

Reggie wondered, "How is laundry handled in the dorms?"

"By housekeepers," Alden answered. He transported the boys and the entire contents of the room to their new room at dorm three. Everything was exactly as it had been at dormitory one. The only obvious differences Angelo and Reggie noticed was the colors of the carpet, walls and drapes. Then Alden delivered stacks of new clothing and necessities on the beds. He said, "You're all set with a week's worth of the basics, guys. In the closets are laundry bags; one for whites and one for colors. I've got another idea that you'd both probably like to know about."

Going to check out their new clothes, Angelo wondered, "What's that?"

Alden reminded, "Only your dad is working off base, Angelo. I figure you've got a couple of days, a week at most, before a housekeeper notices you're here all the time. Your parents will find out, sooner or later. This is a pretty big secret to try and keep."

Looking up at the camera, Reggie said, "All we need is a couple of days, for them to get used to the idea. Almost four hundred kids are living in these dorms without their moms and dads. We can do it too."

"Just making sure you're thinking clearly and not acting spontaneously," Alden giggled. "Although, the entire day's activities have been pretty spontaneous for you two."

Both boys spun toward the camera, shouting, "ALDEN!"

"Tell me I'm exaggerating," Alden giggled.

Angelo smirked, "You've got a real naughty streak that you will pay dearly for."

"I know," Alden giggled. "My first day in my new body will be spent getting tossed in the diving well, and chased, probably all the way to Des Moines, where I'll spend the rest of the day with Grandma Morrison. With my brother Kerry there too, I'm sure it will be a very interesting day."

Reggie asked Angelo, "Wanna share a dresser, babe?"

Angelo smiled, "We're sharing everything we can, from now on," and leaned over for a tender kiss. They started loading the dresser, easily agreeing that toiletries belonged in the top drawer, underwear in the next drawer, socks went in the next drawer down, and board shorts went in the drawer below that. The various polo and T-shirts got hung in the same closet on the same side of the room. During the process, they kept hearing muffled laughter from the air conditioning vent. Pausing and scowling, Angelo wondered, "Who is laughing and what is so funny?"

Alden giggled, "The short answer is that you two have already made an impact on two of your friends. As of about two hours ago, Ray and Tony are a happy couple too."

Reggie smiled, "That's awesome! We'll have to congratulate them."

"Later, after Angelo shampoos his hair," Alden giggled. Slumping, Angelo huffed. Reggie went to his lover and tried to push down the clump of hair that was protruding, but it only bounced back up again as soon as he removed his hand. Reggie couldn't help smiling, but quickly stole a tender kiss and then turned away.

Sadly shaking his head yet widely grinning, Angelo decided to change the subject and asked, "Alden, who else is in this hall?"

"Across the hall from you are twelve-year-olds Rob Wheeler and Paul Eliason," Alden replied. "Brad and Theo Triggs are in the room beside yours. Brad's ten and Theo's twelve-years-old. We also have a Vulcan named Vaziik and his roommate, Stu Sutliff; both of them are twelve-years-old too. Moving further toward the common room are the three Oldcambus brothers, fourteen-year-old Kassidy, and eleven-year-old twins Kade and Karey. In the next room are Nate Ramos and his brothers. Across from the lavatory are Taron Reyce Otter and JD Matos. Beyond the lavatory are Tony and Ray, and Erik and Travis. Fred and Chauncy Eckhart and their puppy Rikko, and the Nash brothers are at the far end of the hall, by the common room. Your room is at the opposite end, closest to the exit."

Reggie muttered, "We don't even really know where we are."

"Later tonight, we need to walk around, get used to the place, and say hello," Angelo suggested. He went to a window to open the drapes and blinds to look outside. As soon as that was done, he noticed the time on the clock radio between the beds and gasped, "It's two-forty already? School will be out soon, and that means my mom will be wondering where I am."

Nodding, Reggie queried, "Where do we get towels, Alden?"

"They're in the shower changing area," Alden replied, and then giggled, "It's all boys on this floor, and the upstairs is empty, so you've got nothing to worry about. Most of the guys stay naked or in their underwear, whether they're going to the showers, coming from there, or just hanging out in the common room."

"Kewl," Angelo smiled. "Without a little witch sister around, life just became infinitely more simple."

Reaching for Angelo's hand, Reggie grinned, "She's not that bad."

Taking his lover's hand, Angelo sniggered, "Before meeting you, my last words were 'where's your broom?' and then 'fly away'. She was a crier as a baby, and in most ways, she hasn't changed." They left the room naked, saw the exit door to the right and turned left. Before making it to the lavatory, another door opened. Also nude, Tony and Ray walked out of their room. All four had smushed up bed hair and swollen lips. They knowingly grinned and began chuckling congratulations.

From the room at the far end of the hall, Phil Nash and Owen Reed emerged in their birthday suits. Phil raised his free hand, asking, "We've got new dudes in our hall?"

"New to you dudes," Tony grinned, and then introduced Phil and Owen to Angelo and Reggie. They greeted each other and knocked knuckles. Tony turned to Angelo, asking, "You dudes decided to come here instead of going home?"

Shaking his head, Angelo grinned, "There's a little sister at my place, and a little brother at Reggie's. When it became an emergency, we asked Alden to help us out."

Reggie smiled, "We'll probably be around here a lot more often, starting tonight."

Sliding in closer to Reggie and cuddling, Angelo shared, "We can't deal with sleeping apart, so we're gonna give our parents a little warning, and then be back here later. Our intention is to give them time to adjust, and eventually move here."

All six continued on their way to the lavatory, and then lined up at the urinals. Phil said, "The Core Rimmers will be out of school soon, and we heard they're rehearsing. Once we grab a shower, that's where we're going."

"Us too," Ray shared.

Reggie explained, "Once we get some family stuff taken care of, we'll be there."

Glancing down the line of bright, cheery faces, Phil grinned, "We heard an awful lot of giggling and laughing." Hanging his head and turning very red, Ray giggled.

"That's exactly what we heard," Owen laughed.

Nodding, Tony chuckled, "Me and Ray have hooked up too. I've got the best kind of sex crazed boyfriend." A chorus of provocative moos erupted. Catching Ray squinting at him, Tony smiled, "Seriously, Ray's the romancer, and an excellent pillow-talker. He got me to tell him everything I've been thinking since we met. We've both been holding back our feelings, but thankfully that's over now, and a whole new life is starting."

Ray giggled, "Tony thought it would be better to let me lead the way. So I did, repeatedly."

Over the giggling and laughter, Tony chuckled, "I'm so tuckered out." Angelo, Reggie, Owen and Phil cracked up. Ray's giggles transformed into evil snickers, making it obvious that he had only begun wearing Tony out.

"So, it's going to be three couples in the shower," Reggie realized, and mysteriously shifted his eyes. Surprised that Reggie had mentioned it, Angelo's jaw dropped for a brief moment.

Almost at once, all six began laughing and joking around about what would happen. Not one denied their intention to share a shower, or the desire to help their partner bathe. Down the row, urinals flushed and couples went into the mob shower.

Since everything was uncharted territory to them, Angelo and Reggie were the last in the shower. They checked out the commodes and sinks. Everything was clean and neat. Compared to nasty smelling boys' rooms and locker rooms at their schools, Reggie and Angelo thought this lavatory and shower looked and smelled freshly cleaned.

For all three couples, the shower company also turned out to be one of the many great experiences of the day. There was plenty of giggling between each couple. No rude remarks were passed when erections began sprouting like wild flowers in the rain forest. The most extroverted of the group, Tony leaned forward and palmed his knees, giving Ray full access to wash his butt. During the laughter, Angelo and Phil assumed the same position. To complete the task, the other three did the same as their boyfriends.

Another kewl thing was when Erik and Travis came in to use the urinals, and loudly warned those in the shower that they intended to flush. All six calmly stepped away from the spray, but with only three showers going and only two urinals flushing, the water temperature barely changed, Reggie noticed. It wasn't that way at his old school, he commented. One toilet flushing would scald anyone under the showers and send naked dudes bouncing back out of the way and into one another. Instead, they were able to calmly rinse the last remnants of soap off their bodies, during which time Phil, Tony and Ray shared some details about both bases with Angelo and Reggie.

Tony led the way to the changing area, saying, "Take a walk up the stairs around condo A, bros. The most awesome views on this base can be seen from the fifth floor and up, especially at night." Tony began passing towels out. When Ray took a towel, Tony teased, "Second most awesome views." Ray squinted at his boyfriend. More mooing and giggling erupted. Once Angelo and Reggie had taken two towels, Tony firmly pulled Ray against him and planted a deep kiss. The first things Angelo and Reggie noticed was that the towels smelled fresh and the cotton was very soft, as if their moms had washed them. Then they noticed Ray was holding the kiss and pushing Tony backwards against the wall.

Hopefully, Owen asked Phil, "Can we go there, please?"

"Sure we can," Phil promised. He told the others, "I've heard about it, but haven't actually gone to check it out."

Breaking the kiss and returning to the conversation, Ray cheered, "You can see all the way to the beach." The other four noticed that Tony seemed to be swooning, and only the wall he was leaning on held him upright. Quickly covering his face with his towel, Owen burst out laughing.

Rapidly blinking his eyes, Tony softly huffed, "Whoa."

Phil giggled, "Is the room spinning, Tony?"

"It's slowing down now," Tony smiled.

Angelo asked Reggie, "Would you like to go there after supper?"

Reggie nodded, "It sounds kewl."

"Just remember that people live in most of the condos," Tony reminded. "As long as you're kewl about it, and keep reasonably quiet, no one will care."

Ray warned, "Don't bother with condo C. The President of the United States is living there this week, so the Secret Service won't let you. The views probably suck from there anyway. Condos A and B block most of the CIC, the dorms and down to the beach."

Before leaving the changing room, while he was wrapping his towel around his waist, Reggie told Phil and Owen, "We'll catch up with you in front of condo A, after dinner."

"Kewl, dude," Phil smiled.

Noticing that Phil was pretty tall, taller than Owen and almost as tall as he and Tony were, Angelo smirked, "We need to deal with family stuff, but we'll try to find you at the rehearsal." More agreements flowed around the room.

As couples, they left the changing area and lavatory to return to their rooms. The moment that he closed the door, Reggie spun around, practically exploding, "Do you believe what just happened?"

Angelo giggled, "Which part?"

Reggie excitedly gushed, "Nobody said a word about my dick, or yours, even when we were stiff as steel. As soon as I realized we were all heading to shower, I was disappointed, because I really wanted to wash your butt and dick, and have you wash mine, but thought, it'll have to wait. That was nothing like a junior high locker room shower! All four of them did exactly the same stuff I wanted to do, so I did wash you and you washed me. Not a word was said about any of that, or the hugs and kisses shared when we were almost done.

I've learned so much on this one day, I'm flippin' out."

Going to his lover, Angelo giggled, "Yeah, I can see that, but you know what?"

Wrapping his arms around Angelo, Reggie smiled, "What?"

"Your dick doesn't make you different from anybody else," Angelo warmly explained. "When we were chatting in the hall, nobody was looking down at your dick. I specifically watched for that and only saw Owen quickly glance down once. I had the only cut unit of the six, but it's just meat hanging, until I'm with you. Nobody said anything about your length, or my circumcised dick. I washed your dick and ass, and you washed mine, and the other four did what they wanted to do too. That means we're normal gay dudes, and a gay couple, just like them. We've got pubes, and so do Tony and Owen, but Phil and Ray don't have much hair yet. We know Tony is thirteen and Ray is twelve, and they became a couple today, since lunch, partly because of us. Is Owen younger than Phil? I'd like to know which is older, but it really doesn't matter a whole heck of a lot. What matters is they're in love, like Tony and Ray, and you and me. Only a little while ago, I felt kind of bad scheming so we could be alone together here."

"Now I can't wait," Reggie laughed. "I can only hope to stick to our plan."

Nodding agreement, Angelo giggled, "I feel exactly the same way. Neither of us knew how alone and limited we were this morning. Now we've got each other, and a bunch of really kewl dudes that I very much want to live with, and get to know better."

"And we hid in our homes because they're orphans and we're not." Sadly shaking his head, Reggie smirked, "I feel even dumber now than I did this morning."

Seeing in Reggie's eyes how serious he was, Angelo reached for a tender kiss that was passionately returned. When the kiss broke, Angelo whispered, "We didn't know better and made poor assumptions." He then prompted, "Let's take care of stuff and try to get to the auditorium."

Reggie smiled, "I love you so much, babe. My life changed in less than a day, thanks to you."

Desperately whimpering, Angelo again rested his head on the shoulder that he had dreamed of resting his head on. The need to take care of business fought the desire to remain where they were, and how they were; bare except for the towels wrapped around their waists, and as close as they could possibly be. Seconds ticked away and turned into minutes. Neither of them cared about anything except being together.

Over the room's speaker, Prez announced, "Attention all Rimmers. Platinum Habits will be rehearsing in the Ewa Beach auditorium. Everyone is welcome to attend. That's all."

Reggie whispered, "It's time, babe."

Without moving, Angelo softly whined, "I don't want to."

Softly chortling, Reggie offered, "I promise to hold you and kiss you anytime, in front of your family and mine. The quicker we get this over with, the quicker we'll be together and alone again." Angelo looked up into Reggie's eyes. Pressing his lips against Angelo's cheek, Reggie softly assured, "I'm a lot less shy than I was this morning. Give me an excuse and I'll give you a big kiss in front of your entire family."

Stepping back, Angelo happily giggled, "Any particular excuse?"

"A simple glance my way would do it," Reggie smiled. At that moment, he knew he wasn't lying or exaggerating. For a few moments in Angelo's arms, he would do anything to make him happy, blushes be damned, he would do it anyway, just to see a smile. The towels were dropped. Wiping deodorant under their pits, they complained about putting their dirty clothes on just to keep up appearances. While brushing their hair, they decided to put clean, new underwear on. Angelo helplessly giggled at his boyfriend's long dick flopping into his boxer briefs. Tucking his goods away, Reggie teased, "You know that your dick flopped around too? It's definitely more than average."

Nodding, Angelo seriously apologized; "I didn't mean to make you feel uncomfortable."

Dropping the shorts he had just picked up, Reggie hurried across the room, wrapped Angelo in his arms and firmly assured, "Between the things you said today, and four new friends saying nothing about it, I feel more like I used to than I have in a long time. You changed me in less than a day, Angelo Diaz. I can't recall any other day that was as much fun as this day has been. I love you." He stole a quick kiss and stepped back, carefully watching Angelo's reaction. Angelo's smile turned into gleeful giggles. Reggie could see goosebumps popping on Angelo's arms, chest and shoulders.

They went into overdrive again, getting their boardies, shirts and sandals on. They flew out of the room and out the two doors into the quad. At first, they glanced around to get their bearings. To their right was the domed CIC. The diving well and olympic sized pool was to their left. The townhouses were directly ahead, on the opposite side of the other dormitory.

"Dorm three is the one Pat and Ralphie were chasing each other around," Angelo realized.

Nodding, Reggie took Angelo's hand and confirmed, "Two more kewl dudes live where we do."

Angelo giggled, "If I shyly turned away from you, so you couldn't see my dick, what would you do?"

"Chase after you," Reggie grinned, "and probably tear whatever you were wearing off your pretty butt too."

"That's twice you've commented on my butt," Angelo smiled.

Nodding, Reggie grinned, "It's as awesome as the rest of you. It and all of you are mine to admire. If you catch me blankly staring, that's prob'ly what I'm doin'." Angelo began giggling. Reggie chuckled, "What?"

"It's all catching up to me, Reg. I had hopes, maybe in a few days, but we did it in less than a day."

Reggie shrugged, "We had the same hopes. Words can't describe how happy I am, because the dude that woke every feeling and emotion in me, had the same feelings for me. I hope tomorrow will be like today. We'll get to meet more kids, and we'll get to spend time alone too. Fears suck. For no good reason we hid in our homes, afraid of being different. Nobody has treated us differently all day. To them, we're just two more dudes."

"Who did you like the most today?"

"We spent the most time with Tony and Ray. I like them most. Everyone was different and I liked everyone we met."

"Me too."

Nearing the row of townhouses, Reggie asked, "Your place first or mine?"

"Yours; I'm in too good of a mood to deal with the witch."

Moments later, they were walking up the steps to townhouse four. Reggie put his hand on the security plate and said his name. He opened the door and stepped inside, holding the door open for Angelo. Once his boyfriend was standing beside him, and took his hand, Reggie closed the door. He then called, "Hello? Cameron?"

Not hearing a response, Angelo wondered, "Do you think he went out?"

Reggie shrugged, "Maybe. Since I didn't come back for lunch, he might've gone scrounging, or maybe he's just lurkin'." Leading the way to the dining area sliding doors, Reggie opened the blinds part way and peered outside. Again, he didn't see anyone. Leading the way back across the rooms, Reggie grinned, "If he jumps out from his room in a sad attempt to scare me, I'll hold him still, while you tickle him until he pees his pants. The second room on the left is mine. I'll show you my drawings."

Climbing the stairs, Angelo said, "I've got the first room. The witch has the second room. These are big homes; compared to the other one we lived in, this is really nice."

"Yeah, I think so too," Reggie agreed. At the top of the stairs, he peeked into the first room. Not seeing his younger brother, he grinned at Angelo, saying, "As nice as this is, the rooms we were in at the dorms were nicer."

Rapidly nodding, and following his boyfriend into his room,

Angelo proudly beamed, "That dorm room is our place, starting tonight, Reg."

Immediately upon entering his room, Reggie opened his arms wide. They embraced and grabbed a few kisses of varying intensity. Never releasing Angelo, Reggie shared, "There were plates, glassware and other kitchen necessities when we got here. Even the beds were made with new sheets, pillows and blankets. My mom had Alden remove the plates and glassware, so she could keep the china and glasses we've always had."

"It was the same at my place. We've all got bigger beds now, so the bedding that was already here, we kept."

"My folks seem to like working here more than their old jobs. My dad especially needed a little time at home before he chilled and started talking. I expect them home around four. He'll walk in the house chatting up a storm. Betchya it's the same as yesterday; no commute, no stuck up rich hags to cope with."

Trying to act suspiciously, but not managing very well, Angelo giggled, "Are you stalling, or just jonesin' for more hugs, Reggie?"

"Both," Reggie chortled.

"Com'on," Angelo giggled, "you can hold me and show me your drawings at the same time." To prove the point, Angelo slowly turned in his partner's arms. Playfully sniggering, Reggie ground his crotch against Angelo's butt. They both began laughing. "Soon, stud," Angelo cackled.

"Yeah?"

"Definitely," Angelo purred, and held his lover's arms around his waist. Looking over his shoulder, he asked, "Do you think you might like it too?"

"I never considered that at all either, until you," Reggie admitted. Leaning closer to Angelo's ear, he whispered, "Yeah, I've thought about it too, and like the idea, but it is a little scary."

"I thought sucking dick would be scary too, but it was more fun than I ever imagined," Angelo softly shared.

"It was awesome. You smelled and tasted great."

Feeling a lump growing against his butt, Angelo giggled, "Drawings and pictures, remember? We're not gonna prove we're in love by getting caught in the act."

Evilly snickering, Reggie pointed at the desk, directing, "The top center drawer has my recent sketch pads," and released Angelo to help himself. Nervous jitters washed over Reggie. The real Reggie Combs would be seen in every drawing, and nothing he had done with Angelo all day matched the anxiety he felt; it was on par with showing Angelo his erection. Before falling down, Reggie sat on the corner of his bed.

Angelo slid open the drawer and pulled out the first pad. The first drawing was a view of Diamond Head, likely from Kaneohe, where Reggie used to live. The next page had another landscape, with palm trees in the foreground and a marina in the distant background. Flipping between the first and second crayon drawings, Angelo didn't see a single pencil line anywhere. Reggie softly said, "I made that marina one up, from piecing together a couple of memories."

Angelo gushed, "It's really great, Reg. I'm wondering how you drew such tiny boats, and they still look like real boats. The use of colors actually gives everything the illusion of light and depth. If I spent an entire month on it, I couldn't have done anything like this."

Flipping to the next page, Angelo saw a pencil and charcoal sketch of his face. It was as if he had modeled for it. There was depth to his entire head, his cheeks and even the lips, probably the most difficult facial feature to get right, were exactly drawn and shaded perfectly. The date on the page was Sunday's date. Knowing he never had modeled for it, and that it was drawn from memory, Angelo looked up and turned around, finding his boyfriend sitting on the edge of his bed.

Blushing more intensely than he had most of the afternoon, Reggie giggled, "I couldn't get you out of my mind for three days."

As far as Angelo was concerned, the picture was better than any photograph ever taken. Angelo was speechless. Rather than stammer and stutter, Angelo went to Reggie, leaned over to kiss the top of his blond head, and softly promised, "I'll always love you."

"I love you too," Reggie giggled, and gestured to the pad, cackling, "Obviously!"

Sadly shaking his head, Angelo muttered, "I balked and fussed for three days." He lifted the pad and flipped to the next page. Immediately giggling, Angelo turned the pad to portrait orientation. On the page was a cartoon image of Cameron, wrapped only in a towel and flexing in a bathroom mirror. Reggie's little brother's biceps sagged pitifully, and there wasn't enough butt there to hold up a feather, never mind a towel that went well below the knees. And the overly impressed expression on the skinny kid's face was priceless. Reggie evilly snickered. Angelo cracked up and roared, "Every time I see your bro, from now on, I'm gonna see this in my mind."

"Join the club," Reggie cackled.

"You have to draw a cartoon like this of my sister, riding her broom," Angelo giggled. "I'll frame it and hang it in our dorm room. All of these are excellent and deserve frames."

"I'm glad you like them," Reggie shyly grinned.

"I'm not just saying it cos I love you," Angelo seriously assured. "They really are fantastic; much better than I imagined. You've got a gift and real talent, Reg."

Standing up, Reggie took the pad from Angelo, dropped it on his desk, and then took his boyfriend in his arms from behind again. This time, Angelo felt Reggie's heart frantically beating against his back. Not able to see the expression on Reggie's face, Angelo turned his head slightly to ask, "Are you all right?"

"More than ever," Reggie whispered. "I've got you."

"Yeah, ya do," Angelo giggled. "My boyfriend has talent. When you're drawing, I'll impatiently wait to see what your imagination dreamed up."

Reggie admitted, "My family thinks I draw really well too. You're the first person outside my family to compliment me. Thank you, babe."

"You're welcome," Angelo giggled.

"It seems my family has abandoned me," Reggie joked.

"Let's tell Prez," Angelo giggled.

"We're completely justified moving into the dorm."

"We don't need justification, or any reason more than the one we've got."

"Since we're in a holding pattern, at thirty-thousand feet, what do you wanna do? We could go to check out your music, or go to the auditorium?"

Before Angelo could answer, they heard the door opening downstairs, and the voices of at least three young boys. Reggie grinned, "My brother is home."

"With some friends, from the sound," Angelo softly sniggered.

After giving Angelo a firm squeeze and whispering, "I really love you," Reggie led the way downstairs. They could hear the refrigerator door open and close, and then cupboards opening and closing. At the landing, Reggie saw two red-head twins, and a third, brown haired boy sitting on the stools at the kitchen counter. Reggie called, "Cameron?"

All three boys at the counter turned to the voice, waved and giggled. Reggie's brother looked over the counter, giggling, "Hey." He pointed to the one light brown haired boy, saying, "Reggie and Angelo, this is Brad Triggs." Cameron quickly moved to the other two, adding, "And this is Kade and Karey Oldcambus." He giggled, "Which is which, I'm not too sure yet." All four boys cracked up. Cameron giggled, "That's my bro and our next door neighbor, Angelo Diaz."

Walking toward the dining room and kitchen, Reggie and Angelo waved with their free hands. Brad giggled, "It looks like your bro has a boyfriend, Cameron."

"Yeah," Cameron teased, "Reggie's been acting weird since we moved here. Now I get the reason why."

Reggie sniggered, "You brought new friends home to raid the kitchen?"

"Course!" Cameron laughed.

"We know your mom is one of our chefs," Karey giggled.

Kade hungrily growled, "Apple and cherry turnovers!"

Brad reminded, "This morning's blueberry and banana nut muffins were so good!" Heavenly reverent hums erupted from Brad, Kade and Karey. Angelo cracked up.

Sniggering, Reggie walked around the counter, asking, "Where did you meet these muffin and turnover monsters, bro?"

"At the pool," Cameron giggled. "They skinny dip here all the time, bro."

"I saw that, yeah," Reggie grinned, and snagged two home made muffins. Brad, Kade and Karey squealed as if kicked in the nads, and then began loudly complaining. Angelo howled laughing. Reggie guided Angelo to the table and offered him a choice, "Strawberry or banana nut, babe?" Still laughing, Angelo pointed at the one with visible nuts. Widely smiling, Reggie put it down on the table.

Picking up the tray of muffins, Cameron put it close to his three friends. Hands flew everywhere. While snacking, Reggie asked his little brother what he'd been doing the last few hours.

Around the food in his mouth, Cameron mumbled, "About one o'clock, I got hungry enough to go out. I met these three dudes by the pool, and they took me to get some lunch at the CIC. After I ate, we went into the rec room and hung out there, playing video games for a while. Then we went back to the pools. You've gotta try the diving well, Reggie."

"We'll get around to it," Reggie responded, and then flashed Angelo a small smile.

Moments later, while six mouths were being stuffed, Roy Combs walked into the house. He closed the door, chuckling, "It has begun."

Two voices greeted, "Hey dad."

And four said, "Hi Mr. Combs."

Once again, Cameron introduced his three new friends, and managed to correctly point out Kade and Karey, based on the T-shirts the twins were wearing.

After wiping his mouth with his hand, Reggie asked, "Dad, do you remember Angelo?"

Nodding, "Of course," Roy then smirked, "I'm not that old yet, Reggie."

Reggie grinned, "We spent most of the day together."

"I'm glad you got out of the house," Roy smiled.

"We went around the base," Reggie explained. "We never made it to Oneula Beach, but saw some of what's here. Once Angelo and I finish eating, we'll go over to the auditorium."

"Good," Roy cheered, and then asked, "How many should I tell your mother to expect for dinner?"

"Four here," Cameron answered.

Reggie checked with Angelo. Shrugging, Angelo softly answered, "We shouldn't surprise your mom with a bunch of additional mouths. Let's eat at the CIC."

Returning his attention to his dad, Reggie said, "We'll be out for dinner and probably most of the night."

Curiously, Roy blinked and then grinned, "What are you trying to not say, Reginald?"

Cameron, Brad, Kade and Karey sang, "Reggie and Angelo, sittin' in a tree, K-I-S-S-I-N-G!"

Grinning insanely, Reggie rolled his eyes. Angelo stuffed half his muffin in his mouth at once, so he couldn't giggle or smile.

Glancing around the room and settling on his eldest son, Roy smiled, "Is it true?"

Nodding, Reggie reached across the table, had his hand taken by Angelo and then explained, "We've been in the same rut all weekend. Since our feelings are very mutual, yeah, it's true."

"Thus, you're staying out late tonight?" Roy confirmed.

Reggie smiled, "We met a bunch of really kewl dudes today. We've got a few plans with them. And there's one other thing I'd like your opinion on."

Roy chuckled, "That means I'll be scraping your mother up off the floor again soon." Cameron and his three friends broke into giggles. Bracing himself, Roy prompted, "Go ahead."

Turning redder by the second, Reggie grinned, "Since we couldn't be alone here, and Angelo has a little sister, we checked and learned we could have a place at the dorm. It's the same place our friends are at, and it's very kewl. We won't only be out late, we'd rather not be home at night at all. Please say it's okay, dad."

Ignoring the four giggling younger boys, Roy went to his eldest son, smiling, "There are boys half your age in those dorms, Reggie. Of course, I approve, and completely understand. Your mom, on the other hand, won't be quite so accepting."

Cameron loudly laughed, "Alden?"

From the speakers in the kitchen and dining room, Alden replied, "Yes, Cameron?"

"Smelling salts, dude, lots of smelling salts, like a week's worth," Cameron cackled. A pile of the little packets, at least thirty of them, appeared in the center of the table.

Checking with Reggie and Mr. Combs, Angelo grinned, "You're kidding, right? She won't really faint, will she?"

Roy nodded, "She's got low blood pressure, and so does Reggie. Something a bit too shocking sends all the blood destined for her brain to her toes, and then she's out cold."

Angelo glared at Reggie, wordlessly wondering why he hadn't said anything. Reggie smiled, "It only happened to me once, when I was about seven, in second grade. Don't worry, okay?" All Angelo could think of was the surprising orgasm his lover had. Every dude is ecstatic after the release, but Reggie was almost comatose. If Reggie ever passed out on him while making love, Angelo knew he would climb the walls. This topic would need to be discussed alone.

Looking up at his dad, Reggie asked, "So, you'll say what to mom?"

"That you're staying out with friends, on base, so she'll know that you're safe," Roy easily replied. Taking hold of his son's shoulders, Roy smiled, "I'm very happy and even prouder than ever. You didn't worry a bit about being gay, and I had hoped you wouldn't, but would just do what needed to be done."

Reggie gasped, "How'd you know? I wasn't even sure until Saturday afternoon."

Roy chuckled, "It's not hard to miss when your son is so hopelessly preoccupied that he can't follow simple instructions. If I heard, 'Sorry dad, what did you say?' once, I heard it about ten times Saturday and Sunday. I wasn't sure who was preoccupying you, but that much was obvious."

Cameron howled laughing. Of course, only Cameron and Brad knew that Kade and Karey were telepathic. Angelo, Reggie and Roy had no clue what was so funny. Brad, Kade and Karey shuffled off their stools and filed into the kitchen, where Cameron was still laughing. In seconds, Cameron had three pretend boyfriends wrapping him up in their arms. The four boys were actually playing out Angelo's and Reggie's thoughts. Roy found it pretty funny and playfully scolded, "Cameron, just because I taught you the facts-of-life, that doesn't mean you need to demonstrate what you've learned."

Cameron cackled, "But dad, if one is good, and two is better, three must be the best."

Brad giggled, "We're serious; at least I am." The other three cracked up and shifted around to snuggle up with Brad. The ten-year-old gay curious boy, rescued Saturday afternoon by Keith and John, was suddenly far less curious and much more certain.

Roy chuckled, "Since Reggie and Angelo won't be here, you and your three boyfriends can spend the night here, if you like."

Cameron whined through giggles, "Can't we stay at the dorm too?"

"Smelling salts won't revive the departed," Roy grinned. All six boys began laughing. Over their combined voices, Roy joked, "She'll take me out before she goes too. I did not take the job here to make an early departure from this world, and make two more orphans."

Locking eyes with Angelo, Reggie gleefully prompted, "It's time to go to the rehearsal, isn't it?"

Cameron teased, "You still need to rehearse, bro? After this afternoon, I'd think you have the show uh... mastered by now." He quickly hid behind his three friends and all four evilly snickered.

Watching Angelo turn redder than a fire engine, Reggie turned and shot daggers from his eyes at his brother.

Roy smiled, "Angelo, welcome to the family. Please take your boyfriend out of the house. There doesn't need to be witnesses when I teach four pranksters a lesson."

"Yes, Sir," Angelo softly answered, and stood. He reached for Reggie's hand.

Standing up, Reggie threatened, "Lots and lots of red, bro," and took Angelo's offered hand. In the kitchen, a chorus of moos erupted. Angelo and Reggie walked out of the house hearing the combined squeals and giggles of Cameron, Brad, Kade and Karey.

Angelo prompted, "Let me see if my mom's home, Reg. If it's only my sister, then we'll head to the auditorium. I wouldn't be surprised if my mom went there. She really likes the band." They turned and went up the steps to townhouse five. Angelo unlocked the door and stepped inside with Reggie. Cecilia Diaz was sitting on the sofa watching TV, but briefly turned and saw her brother and Reggie. Angelo asked, "Has mom been home?"

"Been and left again," Cecilia answered.

Angelo asked, "Did she go to the band's rehearsal?"

More involved in the TV program she was watching, Cecilia shrugged, "I think so."

Rolling his eyes, Angelo grinned, "Let's go, Reg."

They walked back out of the house and down the steps. Reggie giggled, "Do you think she even noticed us holding hands?"

Angelo sighed, "Who knows." High pitched screams caused both boys to pause. Off in the distance, beyond the nearest dormitory, high above the diving well, Cameron and Brad dropped. Moments later, Kade and Karey appeared and followed their friends down.

Reggie sniggered, "Had to be my dad."

"And Alden," Angelo agreed. Beginning to walk again, Angelo smiled, "Your dad's really kewl."

"He completely blew me away again," Reggie sniggered. "How he might've guessed or figured anything out, about me or us, is beyond me. There's never been any dudes I looked twice at, babe. Realizing that I was interested in you as more than a friend completely blew me away."

Angelo admitted, "I was pretty nervous, ya know, meeting him again, under this circumstance." Squeezing Reggie's hand, Angelo giggled, "And you, coming out and telling him that we needed a place to be alone, this afternoon and tonight, and for the foreseeable future. Seeing the picture you drew of me, from memory, I should've guessed. I wish I could say I wrote a song about you, but I'll have to start working on that as soon as possible."

Reggie smiled, "I know what you were thinking and feeling, babe. You don't have to do anything to prove what was, you've been proving what is all day. I was well on my way to giving up, but you made me stop, by shouting your feelings so everyone could hear. That told me that you were very serious, and to really listen to every word you said."

Thrilled to the core once again, it took Angelo a few moments to softly yet firmly say, "I am going to prove it though, Reggie. Somehow, I'm going to show it to everyone paying the slightest bit of attention, I'm all yours, by your side every possible moment of every day."

"I'm hearing you, and loving every word, but this really isn't a contest," Reggie gently said. He raised their clasped hands, smiling, "The proof you're looking for is right here. At first, I was afraid to take your hand. Right now, I'd start becoming terrified if your hand wasn't holding mine. More of that proof keeps showing up in some awesome, completely unexpected ways, like an intimate shower with two other couples in plain sight. Tonight, when we fall asleep together in the same bed, will be more proof. Tomorrow morning, when we wake will prove it all over again. Waking up and kissing you good morning, for the first time, is what I'm looking forward to."

Completely giddy and out of control, Angelo began laughing. He saw two little kids that were holding hands ahead, nearer to the auditorium. Angelo yelled, "HEY, YOU KIDS!" Reggie sniggered.

The two blond boys turned to the voice. It was Dillon Helde and Scott Mullins. Together the boys hollered, "YEAH?"

Angelo loudly laughed, "Are you boyfriends?"

"YEAH!" both little guys giggled.

Gesturing to Reggie with his free hand, Angelo shouted, "This is my boyfriend, Reggie Combs."

Dillon and Scott cracked up. As soon as they could, they screamed, "KEWL! WE'LL TELL OUR DADDIES!"

Reggie was laughing his ass off by this point. Angelo hysterically bellowed, "Who are your daddies?"

Dillon laughed, "DERRICK AND MIKE, THE CORE RIMMERS!" Losing it and becoming hysterical, Reggie could barely walk.

"SEAN AND TROY!" Scott cackled. Giggling like crazy, Dillon and Scott ran the rest of the way to the auditorium. Together, the two little tikes wrestled the auditorium door open and hurried inside.

Angelo giggled, "Well, I got to share with someone."

Nodding, Reggie wheezed, "Prez and Keith already know about us, but now half the leadership know us by reputation only."

At the same moment Angelo shrugged, a woman shouted, "Reginald Combs, get your butt over here!" Seeing Reggie's mom, Angelo hurried, afraid that they had shocked her and she would faint right where she was standing, on the grass between the CIC and a dormitory. Being pulled along by his boyfriend, Reggie blushed and laughed his ass off. When the two boys were close enough, Monica Combs grinned, "I've already heard Angelo's confession. Do you have anything to say?"

Nodding, Reggie lifted his and Angelo's clasped hands, happily giggling, "I love him, and he loves me too, ma."

Widely smiling, but sadly shaking her head, Monica said, "Your father recognized the signs, but I said he was imagining it. I'm only wondering why you didn't say something to us about it?"

Reggie shrugged and smiled, "It was such a big surprise to me too. What could I say? I had to figure it out first. About ten o'clock this morning, Angelo asked if I wanted to walk around the base. We haven't been apart since then."

Monica nodded and admitted, "I saw you together, at the kitchen food line during lunch. Of course, that wasn't anything like Angelo's declaration to two six-year-old boys." Turning redder, Angelo sputtered and burst into giggles. Monica continued, "I only thought, at last my oldest son is out of the house and has found a friend."

"Prepare yourself for bigger surprises at home, ma," Reggie giggled.

Closing her eyes for a moment, Monica sighed, "Such as?" and reopened her eyes.

"Cameron went out too," Reggie cheekily grinned. "He came home with three boyfriends, a pair of twins and a spare. Since they're having dinner at home, we're having dinner at the CIC with the Clan. Dad will tell you the rest."

"I warned your father that Cameron was too young," Monica groused.

Reggie giggled, "Dad told me when I was ten. Why isn't Cameron old enough?"

Monica simply stated, "You were born more mature; an old soul in a young body, Reggie."

"Or you're afraid the baby is growing up and you're getting old," Reggie teased, and started walking again, leading Angelo to the auditorium.

Monica giggled, "You're grounded, Mister."

"Sorry, ma," Reggie sniggered, "talk to dad."

Looking over his shoulder, Angelo watched Mrs. Combs begin the walk toward the townhouses. Turning to his boyfriend, Angelo giggled, "At least she didn't pass out."

"Now it's your turn," Reggie devilishly grinned.

Recalling the exact same words said when they were alone in a dorm room, Angelo giggled, "Whip it out, stud."

Reggie turned and leered, "Tonight, we're wearing each other out, sexy."

Chapter 24

Ewa Beach School

Tuesday, November 9, 2004, 3:02PM HTZ

At the end of the school day, AJ and Jerry transported to the Rapid Response Base for their level one phaser training. Walking out of school with his husband and most of the Core team, Prez tapped his sub-vocal, asking, "Alden, connect me to the PA at both bases, please?"

"Go ahead, Prez," Alden replied.

"Attention all Rimmers," Prez announced, "Platinum Habits will be rehearsing in the Ewa Beach auditorium. Everyone is welcome to attend. That's all."

Running back to Prez with Dillon and Geoff, Richie whined, "Poppa, we wanna play with our Hamster Balls!"

"Yeah!" Dillon and Geoff chimed.

Most of the Core Rimmers roared laughing. Richie, Dillon and Geoff impatiently squinted. Squatting down, Prez chuckled, "You know where we'll be, so go have a good time," and planted a kiss on Richie's cheek.

Nudging Troy, Keith smiled, "Richie, what's the deal with Jimmy?"

"He's the best kisser and hugger!" Richie cheered.

Troy giggled, "Are you sure you're not the best hugger and kisser, Richie?"

Shrugging, Richie giggled, "Dunno, lemme check," and ran off to find his boyfriend, with Dillon and Geoff running after him.

Once Richie was far enough away, Troy chuckled, "I know they're mostly emulating us, but I wish I had been just a little like our kids are."

The Core Rimmers resumed their walk toward the auditorium. Kaleo prompted, "You'll have to play some love songs and ballads today, dudes."

"Yeah," Drew agreed, "I can think of at least three or four new couples that would appreciate it."

Corey giggled, "So leave plenty of time between the end of rehearsal and dinner."

Evilly grinning and leering at Troy, Sean shared, "If the band plays ballads, we'll need twice as much time." Pausing briefly, Troy pulled Sean close for an after school tonsillectomy. They stopped walking long enough to leave each other dizzy, and then hurried after their team mates.

Tapping his comm-badge, Drew called, "Jake, are you available, dude?"

Moments later, Jake answered, "Yeah, workin' on it, Drew. We'll meet you in the PA booth."

Corey giggled, "We didn't see you during lunch."

"Yeah," Jake chortled. "We were... uh... busy... but we did have lunch, about one o'clock."

Terry sniggered, "It was a very helpful flick, Corey. We'll have to thank all the fuzzy facts-of-life professors."

"You're welcome," Kaleo, Sean and Troy chorused.

Tory grinned, "This is at least the third time I've heard of this video. While you dudes play love songs, I'll watch the video on my PADD."

"I guess we'll have dinner around eight o'clock," Kaleo playfully warned his hubby.

Jake sniggered, "Please don't say another word, or we'll miss the concert. Jake out."

Up ahead, streams of kids and some off-shift adult employees could be seen walking toward and into the auditorium. Reading the river of kids, John learned that Tony Lanning and Ray Varga had hooked up that afternoon. Hearing his husband's telepathic remark, 'It took them long enough!' Stephen went into a giggling fit.

Drew gasped, "The place isn't even powered up yet," and started running, with Corey and Leo hurrying after him.

Prez, Keith, Derrick, Mike and Troy began building the list of songs they specifically wanted to work on that day. At a pause, Sean asked, "Please play 'Just My Imagination' and 'Oo-oo Child'? Those songs are just too good to leave out."

The band members agreed to play the songs, but Derrick reminded Sean, "On both those tunes Reyes sings lead vocals. If he doesn't show up, we'll have to choose alternatives."

Inside the auditorium lobby, Corey and Drew found the lights were already on. Erik and Travis were holding the theater doors open for the kids. Lance and Scott were at the circuit breakers, with Alden instructing them on which switches to flip on. It was one of those rare moments when Alden's voice could be heard saying different things from two comm-badges. First, Corey turned to Leo, and then to Drew. Seeing his dad's and pop's stupefied expressions, Leo sputtered, covered his mouth and turned away, softly giggling.

Going to Scott, Drew wondered, "Have you ever messed around with electronics before?"

Busily flipping switches, Scott shrugged, "At my place in New York, the building used breakers and old fashioned fuses. I replaced the things all the time. I don't think that really counts as electronics though."

Overhearing the question, Lance said, "I got my Les Paul pretty cheap because it needed new pickups. I soldered the new pickups to the pots, found the tone knobs weren't working right at all, and installed the replacement capacitors and potentiometers."

Jake and Terry entered the auditorium. Right behind them, Prez, Keith, Derrick, Mike, Sean and Troy filed inside. Drew went to Prez, pointed at Scott and then Lance, and smiled, "We've got two more Toy Rimmers, Prez."

"Kewl," Prez chuckled, "log it." The members of Platinum Habits went into the theater, greeting Erik and Travis as they passed, but Sean remained in the lobby.

Almost in unison, Lance and Scott spun around and shouted, "We turned on the friggin' lights!" Sean softly chortled because they said the same thing at the same time again. Going to the concession stand, Leo leaned over onto it, covered his mouth with his arms and busted up laughing.

Corey giggled, "Did anyone else even try, or think to double-check with Alden?"

Seeing both teens shaking their heads, Drew grinned, "You took the initiative without anyone prompting you. Both of you have electronics experience too."

"I couldn't have soldered pickups in a guitar," Corey giggled. "And you know what a capacitor does in that simple circuit."

Drew offered, "We'll keep your jobs easy at first, maintaining HTML and PHP for our website. That'll allow me, Corey and Reyes to concentrate on more advanced programming. Growing your skill set is entirely up to you."

Lance grinned, "We're guitar players, primarily interested in music."

"Like six other Core Rimmers," Corey reminded.

"Besides," Drew smiled, "I see a team of two, working together on this task, and very probably their music and much more. And by the way, we heard what you two did for the McPhearson brothers Friday morning. You might think it was nothing, but a five-year-old and a seven-year-old know otherwise. When their parents never came home, and their baby sitter had to leave them, you made them feel safe on the scariest day of all." Drew uncontrollably sniggered, "You were Core Rimmers before we met you at Des Moines."

Still holding open the theater doors, Erik and Travis sang the blues; "It's too late, it's too late. You're secret is out, and now it's too late." Losing it, Sean howled.

Nodding at the poor impromptu performance, Drew laughed, "Those McPhearson boys followed you here. Now they have a new family too."

Alden playfully asked, "Did you know that Grandma Morrison can giggle?"

At the theater doors for no other reason except to eavesdrop, Erik fell into a giggling fit and Travis cracked up.

Corey sniggered, "Are there any other excuses; chronic gas, hang nails, jock itch, warts or unruly pubes?"

"ALL OF THE ABOVE!" Lance and Scott hollered.

Corey cackled, "Damn pubes, always trying to wrap around dicks, making us rearrange the furniture in public places." Loud howling laughter escaped Leo before he covered his mouth again.

Drew nodded at his hubby, and then told Lance and Scott, "Say yes and you can get married whenever ya want. You can also adopt some kids. Besides, we need and want you two. This weekend, four hundred kids will become almost five hundred, when eighty more orphans show up."

Scott checked with Lance. Lance sighed, "When Troy and Sean talked about this yesterday, I really wanted to, but now I've got major league butterflies."

Sean interjected, "Remember what I said yesterday? Family and relationships come first. I'm confident that you two guys can do this job."

Scott told Lance, "I had web design in high school last year, and got an A."

"I just started that class in September," Lance shared. "I was doin' good, but we didn't get to Javascript or PHP yet."

Reyes and Ryan ran into the auditorium lobby, waved at the group gathered, and kept going into the theater. Scott reached for Lance's hand. Lance took Scott's hand in his, and then told Drew, "It's kewl."

Scott told Drew, "It's kewl by me too."

Drew smiled, "Go watch the show, bros. I'll take care of the rest. We'll talk more during dinner." Lance, Scott, Erik and Travis went into the theater together. Corey gathered Leo, Jake and Terry. Drew joined them and had the group transported up to the PA booth. While getting the gear set for the show, Drew had Alden log Scott Shetley and Lance Kinchen as Toy Rimmers. Corey notified Lieutenant Vorik to have personal security assigned.

Walking down the theater's left side aisle with Erik and Travis, Scott and Lance were called by Alden on their comm-badges. He had the two newest Core Rimmers hold out their hands and then transported their sub-vocals into their palms.

Walking up to a microphone, Prez told the gathered audience to "greet the two new Toy Rimmers, Ensigns Scott Shetley and Lance Kinchen," and then welcomed them to the team. Amid the applause and cheers, Mike flashed two thumbs-up. Kaleo and Tory went to Scott and Lance to help them get their new sub-vocals fitted and tested. In the audience, the entire Gibbons family, including Al and Charles, stood and applauded the two newest Core Rimmers.

Troy cracked up and went to a microphone, laughing, "I could've sworn I told you to wait two days."

Lance giggled, "You didn't tell Corey and Drew though."

Shuffling down the third row, where Erik, Travis, Chris and Jay were already seated, Scott loudly told the band, "We expect some rockin' jams."

Stepping up to his microphone, Mike chuckled, "We'll see what we can do about that."

Playing a few chords and arpeggios on his electric piano, Keith told the audience, "We learned a few new tunes, and there's another we're going to give a first try today. Your responses will tell us if they're cooked and ready for prime time, or if we go back to the proverbial drawing board."

Lance and Scott yelled, "Got ya covered, Keith."

"Back here too, dudes," KC hollered. Sitting along the same row as KC were Fred and Chauncey Eckhart, John and Rich Murphy, and Jerry, Joey, Jon and Mary Owens.

Keith chuckled, "How're the waves, KC?"

"This morning they were better at Waikiki," KC replied. "When they flattened out on us, we went over to Oneula Beach."

Prez confirmed, "There were no problems?"

Above the negative chatter, Matt loudly answered, "No homophobic moose sightings east or west of Pearl Harbor." Ryan cracked up, making his presence on stage obvious.

Joey loudly announced, "Uncah Wyan is on sdage widh Weyes!" Many of the Rimmers' sons that had met Joey turned around and giggled. Waving at his new friends, Joey giggled, "Hi guys!"

Unaccustomed to being on stage in the first place, Ryan blushed.

He stood, picked up his chair and tried to slink away, but Reyes hurried after him.

Bringing his boyfriend back and sitting him down beside the drum risers again, Reyes giggled, "That's right, Joey. I'm hoping to prove that I can dance too."

Prez smiled, "Drew and Kaleo asked that we play some ballads and love songs for you guys. If we see some more dancing partners, like Sunday night, we'll know we've got these tunes ready."

Derrick announced, "Troy's gonna start us off with a tune called Baby Come Back," and softly counted off. Derrick, Prez and Reyes started the song. Keith, Mike and Troy joined in. After a few more bars, standing and strumming his favored Stratocaster near center stage, Troy sang;

Spending all my nights

All my money going out on the town

Doing anything just to get you off of my mind

But when the morning comes

I'm right back where I started again

Trying to forget you is just a waste of time

By this time, Craig and Felicity were out of their seats and dancing in front of the stage. Phil was whittling away at Owen, who wouldn't go dance because he had never danced before. The entire band sang along during the chorus.

Baby come back, any kind of fool could see

There was something in everything about you

Baby come back, you can blame it all on me

I was wrong, and I just can't live without you

Gage and Jonah, Ben and Sammy, Jason and JD, Ralphie and Pat, Robbie and Billy, Ronnie and Garret, Jason and Trinity Taylor hurried down the aisle to dance before the stage. The last of the single and available quadruple Rs, Richie began tapping other twelve year old boys on the shoulder to dance with him. With a brief glance, Richie could easily tell who was gay or bisexual and would be willing to dance with him.

All day long, wearing a mask of false bravado

Trying to keep up the smile that hides a tear

But as the sun goes down

I get that empty feeling again

How I wish to God that you were here

Owen had at last agreed to dance. Before he could change his mind, Phil took Owen's hand and hurried down the aisle.

Baby come back, any kind of fool could see

There was something in everything about you

Baby come back, you can blame it all on me

I was wrong, and I just can't live without you

Richie Taylor found Theo Triggs, who was trying to act inconspicuous and disinterested. Truthfully, Theo's thoughts were still mixed up; he wanted a boyfriend, but wasn't sure if he was ready. Richie thought Theo's surface thoughts were really interesting. Richie immediately knew Theo was gay, and had been in a relationship before. That relationship had ended because of Theo's parents, which was why Theo was part of this Division, and also why Theo had mixed up thoughts. Richie sent a test telepathic message, asking, 'Do you like to dance?' Theo grinned and nodded. Bursting with fear and joy, Theo almost imploded when Richie held a hand before him and implored, "Please?"

Now that I put it all together

Give me the chance to make you see

Have you used up all the love in your heart

Nothing left for me

Really feeling the words because Paul was missing, Reyes desperately sang: "Ain't there nothing left for me?" It sent shivers down the spines of many, especially Ryan Owens.

Taking Richie's hand, Theo stood, leaned close and told Richie, "I've been hurt."

Richie replied, "Me too. We'll definitely get around to that, after we dance. Kewl?"

Theo nodded. They shuffled down the aisle and walked hand-in-hand toward the stage.

Baby come back, any kind of fool could see

There was something in everything about you

Baby come back, listen baby, you can blame it all on me

I was wrong, and I just can't live without you

I was wrong, and I just can't live

The band played out the song, extending the guitar solo a few more bars before abruptly ending the song with all the band members singing "Baby Come Back!" The audience erupted with applause and cheers, the loudest coming from Jason Taylor's whistles.

Popping into the PA booth, a boy's voice giggled, "They really loved that song in New Boston," causing Corey, Drew, Leo, Jake and Terry to spin around. Seeing purple eyes, Corey giggled.

Leo wondered, "Who are you?"

"Dylan Richardson. Hey, how's the boyfriend doin', Leo?"

Leo squealed, "I don't have one!"

"Yet," Dylan corrected.

Glancing at each other, Jake and Terry left the PA booth without saying a word.

Sighing, Drew turned and pulled down the talkback microphone to sorrowfully tell the band, "We've got trouble." Down on the stage, the band wondered what had gone wrong.

"No," Dylan giggled, "my brothers are trouble. I'm cuddly, cute and innocent!" Turning around again, Drew rolled his eyes. Dylan giggled. "Okay, to be specific, my big little brother is trouble!"

Corey and Drew simultaneously wondered, "Which big little brother, specifically?"

"All fifteen of them!" Dylan answered innocently, with twinkles in his eyes.

Seeing Leo pacing around the booth, softly wondering who his boyfriend was and when he would meet him, Corey digressed into a giggling fit. Drew grinned, "We've met four before you; Kyle, Tyler, Levi and Peter."

Dylan giggled, "Gotcha!" He looked around the booth and smiled. "I thought I'd pop in and see how you were doing on setting up your road crew. Looking good; you've just about found everyone."

Slipping off his stool at the lighting console, Corey howled laughing. Frighteningly, the band started playing Just My Imagination \(Running Away With Me\), with Reyes singing lead vocals. Drew pressed the button to start the preprogrammed lighting that Corey had prepared.

"I prefer 'Twilight Zone'; the guys really do that one great!" Dylan giggled.

"They don't know..." Drew started to say, but thought better of it and never finished the statement. Suddenly, Drew had images of shoveled piles of spaghetti pouring over checkered table cloths running through his mind. He softly offered, "KC and Joey are here, down in the audience. I kind o' need to monitor the board too."

Noticing that Leo was still pacing, Dylan seriously said, "You can relax, Leo. You're doing fine, and if you need someone to bounce things off of, that you think are too weird for anyone to understand, just have Alden look me up. Unlike my Dad and Pop, I don't try to drown Rimmers!" Dylan added, "Oh, Drew; I just told KC to catch up with the band later. You can fill them in on why he's showing them the song."

On his hands and knees on the floor, Corey hiccuped. Drew rolled his stool over to the lighting console to be sure Corey had programmed it for the next song. Dylan popped out of the booth and down to the audience, into a chair beside Joey and KC.

Leo whimpered, "Dad?"

Holding an arm out for his freaked out son to take, Drew grinned, "I know, Leo. We're not even at the beach and he still managed to make a twenty-foot Mikyvis wave."

Taking his dad's hand and moving closer, Leo whined, "I have no idea who he was taking about."

"Don't worry about it," Drew gently instructed. "You're ready, whenever and for whomever you decide."

"I don't know," Leo sighed. "It still seems a little weird, ya know?"

Drew nodded and smiled, "I sure do. I felt the exact same way a couple hundred times, before I ever touched your pop's dick. For a long time, I thought of every friend I ever had, and tried to figure out why they were my friend, and then I tried to understand what made Corey so special. Once you find a boyfriend and start sharing your feelings, the weirdness turns into willingness. You'll want to hold him and be held by him. It gets to the point where you can't wait to make your boyfriend feel good. You barely even think of him returning the favor, it's way more important to give than to receive. Every hug, kiss and shoulder massage is paradise. Go a little further to sexual contact and it's the rollercoaster dive you felt the other night." Having caught his breath, Corey got up off the floor. Drew grinned, "The song's almost over, Cor."

Nodding and returning to his seat, Corey giggled, "No problem," and pulled over the PADD with the band's set list.

The audience erupted with more applause, cheers and whistles. Seeing his boyfriend wiping his eyes, Ryan hurried over to give Reyes a quick hug and kiss. As far as the audience was concerned, it was only a cute public display of affection for a job well done. However, Ryan understood how wrecked Reyes was feeling because Paul hadn't yet shown up at Ewa Beach.

Mike switched guitars and picked up his Candy Apple Red Stratocaster. Reyes moved over to the electronic drums. Once Reyes and Mike nodded signals that they were ready, Derrick counted off and the band began playing How Much I Feel. Troy sang lead vocals. More couples meandered down the aisles to dance, including Chris, Jay, Horacio, Sonia, Roy, Mollie, Tony, Ray, Nell and Pete.

Noticing Ray and Tony dancing, Nate Ramos widely smiled. After a few moments consideration, Nate got up and went down the aisle to his friends. He paused near them, chuckling, "Three's a crowd?"

Blushing and nodding, Ray began giggling his ass off. Tony smiled, and loudly spoke over the music, telling Nate, "I had to deal with a very embarrassed roomie. In the process, I spilled every thought and feeling that I've been hiding for days."

Nate laughed and locked eyes with Ray, asking, "You didn't notice?" When Ray shook his head, Nate sniggered, "Everyone else noticed both of you."

Ray hid his blush on Tony's shoulder. Tony chuckled, "For how long?"

"It started in the meeting with Doc Wiener, I think. Definitely since lunch Sunday," Nate smiled.

Lifting his head off Tony's shoulder, Ray giggled, "You purposefully suggested..."

Shrugging, Nate giggled, "That wasn't my goal. I would've, with you two, but when I didn't see you for a while, I starting thinking if you two might finally hook up." The song ended and all three applauded. During the break, Nate quickly gave Tony and then Ray hugs and offered his congratulations. He started back up the aisle to return to his seat. Before he arrived though, fourteen-year-old Amelia Medicus stopped him.

She cutely smiled, "Do you like to dance?"

Shocked, but equally pleased, Nate stammered, "I do, but never have before." He almost mentioned the times his mom had attempted to teach him, but caught himself before actually saying something completely dorky.

Amelia giggled, "It's time you learn," and reached a hand out. Nate took her hand, and they went down towards the stage.

The next song was You're My Best Friend, with Keith singing lead vocals. The song prompted Scott to take Lance's hand and lead his lover down before the stage. They were followed by Erik and Travis. Also deciding to dance, Carter, Doug, Neil and Tad went down the aisle to the stage. Swaying hip-to-hip and cheek-to-cheek, Scott and Lance watched Mike play during the entire song.

With his arms draped over Ray's shoulders, Tony saw Nate dancing with Amelia and told Ray. Amelia was petite, and very pretty.

Tony had to wonder how Nate had lucked out. Leaning close to Tony's ear, Ray wondered if Amelia had any clue of Nate's clearly bisexual tendencies. Soon, they were closer together, and softly giggling silly remarks and commentaries, few of which Nate would find very funny, and Amelia definitely would not appreciate.

When the song ended and the audience applauded, Scott and Lance went to the edge of the stage, loudly calling, "Mike!"

Grinning, Mike went to them and knelt down. Scott asked, "We're just wondering, why don't you really wail?"

"We know you can, and it seems you're holding back," Lance added.

Understandingly, Mike nodded and answered, "We're a band. Prez or Troy could've easily played that guitar part. I could've played the piano part or the bass guitar. This isn't about any one of us showing off; it's about the music. After a couple more love songs, we're going to play some rockers, like you asked. I'll talk with Troy and Prez, and ask if they'd like to switch instruments, so you can see exactly what I mean."

"Kewl," Scott and Lance chimed.

Standing again, Mike waved the band members together in front of the drum risers. Lance and Scott believed Mike was only sharing what they had just spoken about, but that was only part of what they were saying. The next song required close vocal harmonies and precision for all the instrumental parts. When the band separated, Keith went to the Hammond organ on the right side of the stage. Troy went to the stack of keyboards on the left side of the stage, where Keith normally stood. Reyes and Derrick swapped places; with Reyes taking a seat on his dad's drum throne, and Derrick went to the congas and assorted percussion instruments. Prez picked up Mike's Stratocaster.

Returning to his microphone wearing a Fender Jazz bass guitar, Mike told the audience, "We're going to try this next song a little differently, just for Scott and Lance. All you musicians and wanna-be musicians, check it out; our vocal parts are very much locked in place, but Keith's going to play the organ part that Troy normally plays. Troy's taking the synthesizers and keys that Keith normally plays. Derrick and Reyes have switched and so have Prez and I. Sunday night, you saw Keith pick up a guitar. During our music appreciation class today, most of you saw each of the five of us sitting down at a piano and playing different songs. This is what it means to be a musician, making Good Vibrations."

Counting off and then starting the song, Keith sang lead vocals and played the Hammond Organ while Mike played the bass guitar part. Reyes came in with the drum parts, Derrick shook a tambourine and Troy added the synthesizer part. Soon, all six boys were singing various parts, with Prez taking the lowest part, Troy and Mike harmonizing and Reyes and Derrick harmonizing. Everyone was simply awestruck, especially Lance, Scott, KC and Joey. Not even Dylan had seen Platinum Habits perform the song that way. When the song ended, every kid and adult in the audience bounded to their feet to give the band an ovation. Focusing on Scott and Lance and gesturing an open palm to the audience, Mike grinned, "That's what it's about, dudes."

Locking eyes, Scott and Lance laughed, "We are so screwed!" Shoving their two friends around, Chris, Jay, Erik and Travis cracked up.

Returning to their normal places on the stage, Platinum Habits performed That's The Way Of The World, How Can I Be Sure and O-

o-h Child, with Reyes singing lead vocals on the first and third songs, and Keith singing lead vocal on the second song. For the next tune, Mike and Troy sang The Dave Clark Five song Because as a duet, playing their guitars before a single microphone. After hearing all the intricate songs the band had already played, Lance and Scott could barely believe the band chose to play the simple tune. Once again seeing all their friends and other couples dancing, they were pushed to realize that the performances were for the audience and not the musicians. Playing a very simple bass part and not too occupied, Prez saw Angelo and Reggie enter the auditorium and walk down the aisle.

Angelo and Reggie saw a lot of kids were near the stage dancing. There were gay couples, straight couples and more who were dancing alone. Two of the adults were up there too. Angelo grinned, "Do you get the impression Clan Short likes taking things to extremes? Sunday night there were about six or seven hundred in here, and we barely occupied an eighth of the place."

Nodding, Reggie chuckled, "There are three more bases, according to my dad, but we'll never fill this place on our own. Even the dorm rooms were pretty extreme; they're huge for two dudes, so imagine two little orphan boys in a room that large."

Beginning to scan the center seating area for his mom, Angelo admitted, "Butterflies are starting to flap again, like when you ran away from me this morning." Concerned, Reggie squeezed his partner's hand and turned to examine Angelo's expression. Noticing Reggie's concern, Angelo smiled, "I feel like I'm walking on clouds again. Where do I start explaining?"

"Anywhere," Reggie grinned. Up on the stage, Troy and Mike played guitar and shared a single microphone. He noticed that they sang and played really well. Reggie told Angelo, "Might as well start with the weekend, which is really where we both started."

Glancing to his right again, Angelo returned to his search. He soon found his mother, amongst the other adults and parents sitting about thirty rows back. Beside his mom sat his dad, still wearing his hospital greens. Surprised his dad was there, Angelo told Reggie. Nodding, Reggie now understood how anxious Angelo felt when his dad walked into the townhouse. The band finished the song they were playing and their audience applauded. Eugene and Laxmi Diaz had seats near the center of the row. There were other adults sitting on both sides of them. Angelo led Reggie down the empty row behind them. On the stage, most of the band had shifted around to other instruments. The drummers counted off and the band began playing another song titled Miracles, which was a complete reversal and another intricate song with many vocals and kewl instrumental parts.

Leaning forward so his head was between his mother's and father's, Angelo mischievously smiled, "Can we chat? I've got news to share."

Eugene Diaz began laughing. Widely smiling, Laxmi Diaz, turned to her son, giggling, "Keith and Preston told me that you have a boyfriend."

"Word has it that it's very serious too," Angelo's dad chortled. "Once again, you made up your mind and dove headlong into something."

Rapidly blinking, Angelo glanced up at the stage and at Prez. Fully occupied performing for an audience, Prez didn't notice.

Leaning back, Eugene reminded, "We're employed by Federation Youth Services, and have comm-badges and sub-vocal devices. Reggie's father clued us in first, and then a few minutes later, his mother did."

Laxmi giggled, "Would you like to get up on stage and announce to everyone that you have a boyfriend?"

Feeling all the blood in his body race into his face, Angelo giggled, "Talk about anti-climatic information. All the wind has been taken out of my sails."

Laxmi said, "You're having dinner with the Clan tonight, so I assume you're no longer afraid."

Eugene wondered, "Do you know where you're staying at night?"

Realizing that he only knew the dorm building and location, but not the actual room number, Angelo gasped. He then smirked, "Is there anything you don't know?"

Laxmi laughed, "He doesn't have a clue!"

"Dorm three," Angelo giggled.

Eugene and Laxmi laughed, "Room number twenty-six." They then leaned over to give their son kisses on the cheek.

Eugene suggested, "If I were you, I'd take my partner down to the stage and dance with the rest of the kids."

"But first," Laxmi stipulated, "have Reggie lean over so we can welcome him to the family."

Angelo nodded and stood up straight. He told Reggie, "They know everything." Watching Reggie's head tilt, Angelo giggled, "Thanks to comm-badges and sub-vocals, everything your mom and dad know was shared. There are no secrets to keep anymore. They'd like you lean down between them, so they can welcome you to the family." Angelo stepped back out of the way.

Already blushing and giggling, Reggie took his boyfriend's place and leaned down. He got kisses on the cheeks too, and congratulations from both of Angelo's parents. Reggie giggled, "I promise to take good care of him."

Laxmi smirked, clearly showing Reggie that it was already assumed and understood.

"Go dance," Eugene prompted, "we'll proudly watch."

Standing up, Reggie reached for Angelo's hand and had his taken. Shuffling down the row to the aisle, Angelo suggested, "Let's pause on the way for a kiss."

Reggie giggled, "We didn't kiss for my parents."

"That's exactly why we should do it; to give gossiping geezers something to blab about."

Reggie sniggered, "You might have to twist my arm?"

Angelo giggled, "It's your tongue I wanna twist, stud."

After taking few more steps down the aisle, Angelo and Reggie paused, and moved close together for the deepest, most passionate lip lock yet. At first, their arms hung loose at their sides and they held hands. Unconsciously, Angelo's hands then began climbing up Reggie's arms. Reggie put his hands on Angelo's hips. In small increments, Angelo and Reggie moved closer together and their arms effortlessly moved to hold one another tight. It wasn't only to show off, but to show each other how completely thrilled they were. Every time they had tried to plan something all day, the plans were blown away, but somehow, everything worked out better than either might have hoped. In the middle of the song 'Miracles', Angelo and Reggie proved the theme of the song; that miracles can and do sometimes happen.

Smiling and holding hands, Eugene and Laxmi noticed their sons tightly embracing and kissing. They were happy for their son and proud of the young man emerging. Several of the other adults around the Diaz's also noticed. There was a lot of soft chortling amongst the group of adults. Since the band members were rather busy, with an intricate song and multiple vocal parts to give their full attention, none of them ever saw Angelo and Reggie.

However, down by the stage, Lance, Scott, Erik, Travis, Tony and Ray noticed Angelo and Reggie. Hysterical and trying to not show it, the former six hurried up the aisle, surrounded the latter two, patiently broke the kiss, and then led them down the aisle, razzing the two new lovers the entire way.

Travis chuckled, "It sure looks like your day progressed nicely, dudes."

"So," Lance giggled, "Angelo, might I suggest a change from hand lotion to AstroGlide personal lubricant?"

"We'll get an official gay Rimmer welcoming package prepared for you two after supper," Tony sniggered.

Scott joked, "The kit consists of four bottles of lube, four boxes of rubbers, dildos in assorted small, medium, large and WTF sizes, and the condensed version of the Kama Sutra - pictures only."

Erik giggled, "That ought to get you through tonight."

For the first time in his twelve years, Ray had laughed himself into a case of the hiccups.

When the group of eight arrived near the stage, Chris and Jay were waiting.

"I have an idea," Jay cheekily grinned.

Whipping out their Mr. Fuzzy puppets and sliding them on, five of the eight squeaked, "NO-OO-OOOO!" Angelo, Reggie and Chris roared laughing.

Faking a pout, Jay slumped, and then sniggered, "Fine, I'll tell you later. We're all needed, and the rest of the Core Rimmers too, to execute this plan."

The song 'Miracles' ended and everyone applauded. The band shifted around again, preparing for the next tune and getting different instruments. Erik turned to Angelo and Reggie, smiling, "We hear that you're moving into our dorm tonight."

Angelo nodded, "That's right. Our original intention was to make it seem temporary, so our parents didn't freak, but even that plan altered." Quickly moving behind Reggie and wrapping his boyfriend up tight, Angelo prompted, "Tell 'em what you did, Reg."

Brightly beaming, Reggie smiled, "I told my dad the real deal. He'll keep my mom from flippin' out. My parents told Angelo's, so we're all set. We've got a place to be a real couple."

At the break between songs, while the majority of the audience applauded, Mike and Prez were at the guitar stands. Seemingly having a playful argument, Mike and Prez began shoving one another, driving their band mates to giggles and the audience into loud laughter. At his rack of keyboards and sniggering, Keith told the audience, "This kind of argument would normally upset me.

Eventually, they'll figure out who's playing top and who's playing bottom." The audience roared laughing.

Collapsing against each other, Angelo and Reggie cracked up. "I can't believe Keith said that, on stage!" Reggie sniggered.

Mike and Prez suddenly hollered, "FINE!" and walked away from the guitar stands. However, neither had a guitar.

Stepping up to a microphone, Prez giggled, "I can fix this. Alden, get me and Mike new guitars; Gibson EBSF-1250 double-neck electric bass and guitar."

Mike sniggered, "We'll need an extra bass amp and an extra guitar amp too, Alden."

Two black double-neck guitars materialized on Prez and Mike. They then went to turn on and adjust the two amplifiers. Further back in the audience, Dylan howled laughing, "I was wondering when they'd actually get those guitars! They bring them on the tour."

Slightly out of sync, the six band members wondered, "Who said that?"

Standing and pulling Dylan up with him, KC grinned, "Platinum Habits, meet Dylan Richardson. He already knows all of you, thanks to his time-shifting shifty ways."

Waving, Dylan giggled, "Hi guys! Where are Lance Kinchen and Scott Shetley?"

Pointing at the couple before the stage, Mike answered, "Right there."

Dylan asked, "Have you hired them yet?"

Prez nodded, "They were just made Core Rimmers before we came in here."

"Not THAT!" Dylan giggled, "They're your guitar technicians and roadies."

Scott and Lance squealed, "We are?" Cracking up, Jay, Chris, Travis and Erik shoved Lance and Scott around some more. Sadly shaking his head, KC dropped back into his seat.

"Don't cutely flutter those purple-eyes at us," Prez sniggered. "Are you planning on telling us more about the concerts we performed, that we haven't left for... yet?"

Nodding, Dylan giggled, "Dinner tonight sound good?"

"Kewl," the five of six band members chanted.

Dylan giggled, "You were about to play 'Europa,' as dueling guitars and basses for the first time."

Noticing Troy rubbing his temples, Mike asked, "Are you all right, bro?"

"Fine," Troy huffed, "just a temporal causality headache, I think."

Prez asked, "Wanna take a break, Troy?"

When Troy nodded, Mike called, "Sean, come up here and help your partner. We'll need him for the next songs."

Standing and jogging down the aisle, Sean giggled, "I'm just glad my name wasn't mentioned."

"Sean Moorhead?" Dylan giggled, "Yeah, you're eventually a roadie too, primarily amplifiers."

Stopping short on the stage steps, Sean spun around and shouted, "I just took my first basic electrical principles class this morning!"

Dylan giggled, "You're Troy's husband, aren't you?" Whimpering, with visions of sparking amplifiers flashing through his mind, Sean turned and went to Troy, where it was safer. Dylan giggled, "There's a drum roadie and a keyboard roadie too, but I can't say without chancing a paradox." Dylan then called, "John?"

Standing up and turning around, John waved, "Here, Dylan."

Dylan checked, "You know your job?"

"I do now," John sniggered. "I'll try it out when they play those songs."

"That's everybody," Dylan giggled. "Kewl, go ahead, guys."

Glancing around to be sure everyone was ready, Prez softly counted out the tempo. Mike loudly laughed, "WAIT A MINUTE! Who's starting on guitar and who's on bass?"

"Not this again," Prez giggled. The audience helplessly fell apart.

Mike sniggered, "You only doubled the problem by getting us double-neck guitars."

Prez grinned, "I'm Head Rimmer, so I'll start on guitar."

"Kewl," Mike giggled, and shifted his hands up to play the bass.

Derrick chuckled, "Are either of you going to face the audience?"

"Once in a while, when we're not preparing to swap parts," Prez sniggered. "Count us off, bro."

"One of these days, they'll stop sharing their part-swapping in public," Dylan stage-whispered in a voice the entire audience heard.

"I wouldn't count on it," KC chuckled.

Regardless of the audience's laughter, Derrick counted the tempo and Prez played the first eight notes of the guitar part to Europa. About thirty-seconds into the song, Prez signaled Mike and they swapped off. About every half-minute through the entire song, Prez and Mike swapped parts, and shifted from bass to guitar and back again. Lance and Scott told Erik, Travis, Jay and Chris that Prez and Mike had obviously never done this before, but they were effortlessly playing the song as good as the record, only giving each other four beats notice before swapping parts again. Many of the kids had only seen Prez playing acoustic guitar and raced down to the stage.

To crying and wailing guitars and the latin beat, Craig slow danced Felicity over toward where Phil had Owen swaying hip-to-hip. The brothers smiled at each other and stealthily flashed thumbs-up gestures. The song ended to a dueling bass guitar part and thundering drums, forcing the entire audience onto their feet.

The stage lights dimmed to dark blue. Prez and Mike put their double neck guitars down and picked up their preferred axes. Derrick came out from behind the drum kit and moved down to center stage. Reyes took his dad's place again at the drum kit. Coming out from back stage, Troy went to his stack of keyboards. Keith took a seat at the Steinway. Before the audience's applause had faded, a spotlight shone down on Keith and he began playing the introduction to Against All Odds \(Take A Look At Me Now\). Couples that hadn't already come down to dance before the stage got up, including Kaleo and Tory. A spotlight hit Derrick a moment before he began sweetly singing.

How can I just let you walk away?
Just let you leave without a trace?
When I stand here, taking every breath with you.
You're the only one who really knew me at all.

How can you just walk away from me?
When all I can do is watch you leave?
Cause we've shared the laughter and the pain,
and even shed the tears.
You're the only one who really knew me at all.

So take a look at me now!
There's just an empty space.
And there's nothing left here to remind me,
just the memory of your face.
Well take a look at me now!
There's just an empty space.
And you coming back to me is against the odds,
and that's what I've got to face.

Reyes began pounding on drums and provided backup harmony vocals for his dad. Fully involved in what he was singing, Derrick didn't even realize he was rising up off the stage.

I wish I could just make you turn around, turn around and see me cry!
There's so much I need to say to you,
so many reasons why.

You're the only one who really knew me at all.

From about ten feet above the stage, Derrick realized where he was. Many rows back, John, Stephen, Frankie and Wade began giggling at Derrick's silent complaint to be warned before being levitated in the middle of a song.

So take a look at me now!
Well there's just an empty space.
And there's nothing left here to remind me,
just the memory of your face.
Now take a look at me now!
Cause there's just an empty space.
But to wait for you is all I can do and that's what I've got to face.
Take a good look at me now!
Cause I'll still be standing here.
And you coming back to me is against all odds,
It's the chance I've got to take.

Take a look at me now.

All the stage lights went out and the audience roared approval. John lowered Derrick down to the stage floor. Walking back to the drum risers and sadly shaking his head, Derrick softly growled at John's "special effect". Heading for the Steinway, Troy knocked knuckles with Keith as they passed each other. Keith took center stage to sing lead vocals. A spotlight shone down on Troy as he began playing the piano introduction to Faithfully. Couples gasped and immediately pulled back together for another great slow dance tune. This time, Keith and then Mike were levitated by John, but had returned to the floor before the last tones faded.

The band members began exiting the stage, leaving Troy at the grand piano to gently call, "Come out here and sit with me, Tiger." Forewarned by Troy this would happen, Sean proudly walked out from behind the stage right curtains and a spotlight followed him across the stage. He took a seat on the piano bench to Troy's left, mostly out of sight from the majority of the audience.

Right after kissing Sean, Troy inhaled deeply to tell the cooing and smiling audience, "A week ago today I met Sean. Right about this time, before dinner, I had an idea to play this song for Sean. It took him days to tell me all of what it meant to him. It's our song, but I'd like to share it with all of you, so you can make it yours too. I think everyone here will get the message."

Troy began playing Bridge Over Troubled Water and was soon singing to Sean before an audience of over five hundred. During the first verse, Ryan and Reyes slow danced out of the shadows and just behind the piano bench where Sean and Troy were. In the middle of the second verse, Derrick, Keith and Prez returned to the stage to play their parts. Keith also provided a brief section of harmony vocals during the third verse.

During the song, while couples slow danced, Reggie admitted that he really didn't know the names of all the members of the leadership team. Hip-to-hip with their lovers, Erik, Travis, Tony, Ray, Chris and Jay filled in Angelo and Reggie, completing the roll call with the newest two Core Rimmers, Lance and Scott, who were still glued to the stage.

Angelo and Reggie had no idea that Lance and Scott were Core Rimmers. Since he had met and spoke with them that morning, Angelo was especially surprised. Then Erik giggled, "Just before we came in here today, they were found powering the place up. Drew hired them before they could complain too much."

"No one was more surprised than they were," Travis sniggered.

Still swaying hip-to-hip with Angelo, Reggie wondered, "And who are the two dudes that were talking to the band?"

Jay replied, "KC McKensey was the older one. He's a friend of Reyes', from the AI Division. We met him yesterday. I'm not sure who Dylan is, or where he's from."

Erik offered, "Clan Short is all over the world, pretty much. There are tens of thousands of Clan kids, dude. We've only been here a few days. It would take lifetimes to know them all." Gesturing to Chris and Jay with one hand, and then Tony and Ray with the other, Erik giggled, "On the other hand, these pervs we call friends think all Trav and I do is get crazy and messy, but we can read, and browsed our division's web site."

Chris smiled, "The Clan is really big dudes. It took us an hour in the Command Center to just say hello to the folks at six US divisions, and the Australian Oceanic Division. We didn't get to Wales or St. Petersburg, Russia, partly because it was late there."

"And because somebody needed comm-badges and Mr. Fuzzies," Jay sniggered accusingly at Angelo and Reggie.

Giggling and nodding, Angelo teased, "What's required to make the dimensional doors work, Jay?" Jay held up his Mr. Fuzzy hand, and then reached over to have it nibble on Angelo, Reggie and Travis' necks. Suddenly, Jay jumped in place and devilishly grinned at Chris.

Chris giggled, "You don't Fuzzy anyone but me."

Reggie evilly snickered, "I saw that. Nice one, Chris; you pinched Jay's ass." Wild cackling broke loose in the small group.

Pulling back to make eye contact, Angelo giggled, "Tell me you weren't checking out Jay's butt." Erik and Ray digressed into giggling fits. Tony and Travis cracked up.

"No!" Reggie laughed, "Honest, babe, I was watching Chris slip his hands into Jay's back pockets. That's why I did the same thing to you. Only when Jay jumped did I realize Chris had a motive."

Almost at once, Erik, Ray, Chris, Jay, Tony and Travis congratulated Reggie on an excellent rebuttal, which caused all eight of them to crack up.

Still giggling, and wiggling his fingers around Angelo's back pockets, Reggie asked, "Jay, how tall are you?"

"Five feet nine inches," Jay answered.

"Convert that to metric?" Reggie giggled.

"About one hundred seventy-three centimeters," Angelo quickly calculated, "probably a little more. It's two point five-four centimeters per inch, so sixty-nine inches times two point five is a rough guess. He's about three inches taller than you, and four inches taller than I am."

Travis grinned, "You did that in your head?"

"Yeah," Angelo giggled, and reminded, "My mom's a math and music teacher." Seeing a bunch of grinning faces, Angelo laughed, "Sixty-nine times two is a hundred and thirty-eight. Half of sixty-nine is thirty-four point five, so add it together and round up, since I rounded down a little bit."

Slowly swaying with Phil, on the floor before the stage, Owen was sobbing his heart out. As soon as Troy lowered his hands from the piano, Sean grabbed him and passionately kissed his sentimental Lover. The audience and the band members applauded and cheered the couple, seemingly making five-hundred sound like fifty-thousand.

A quivering wreck again, it took Sean about two minutes to be able to stand up and walk with Troy, past all the band members congratulating them, and off behind the stage right curtains. During this brief interruption, Phil lead Owen way up the aisle, heading toward seats where they could talk privately. Stepping back out to the stage again, Troy got more applause from the audience. He picked up his twelve-string acoustic, went to a microphone and giggled, "I love him, and it's our one week anniversary. Sean's already warned me to be prepared for reprisal later."

Troy moved nearer to Keith and they counted off then began playing the introduction to Time For Me To Fly. This time around it was Keith's turn, as lead vocalist, to levitate with his keyboard rack and microphone stand. John had forewarned his brother what he was intending to do, but no one was prepared for the method. The audience, all the other band members and even Ryan and Sean were hysterical watching Keith float a little higher every time he sang the word 'fly'. It was the crazy nervous twists in Keith's expression that drove his fellow band members to giggling the backup vocals during the final chorus. By the end of the song, Keith was about a half-meter below the racks of lights above the stage and profusely sweating from the heat.

Returning to the stage floor during the applause, Keith sniggered, "Alden, get me a towel and a bottle of cold water." The towel materialized just above Keith and dropped onto his head, causing the audience to crack up. Mike had to walk off stage, where he was heard howling with laughter.

"The water bottle is on the stage, by your right leg, Keith," Alden giggled across Keith's comm-badge. Insanely snickering, Angelo, Reggie, Chris, Jay, Erik, Travis, Lance and Scott found seats to sit on in the front row.

Since Prez was still leaning on his bass amp and hysterically wheezing, Derrick giggled, "This next song is a brand new cover tune for us and one we've always wanted to play. Prez and Mike are going to share lead vocals, if either can ever stop laughing. After this song, we're going to play five heavy rockers for Lance and Scott, but that'll probably push us past dinner time. Anyone that's hungry is free to go eat whenever you want. Please stick around through one more song though."

The stage lighting dimmed, but Corey left only some of the blue and green stage lights on. Lance and Scott noticed Mike's Les Paul appearing on his guitar stand, and then Mike's Stratocaster disappeared. Troy and Keith moved to their racks of keyboards. Prez moved forward to his microphone. Fog began billowing onto the stage, cooling the band members and the kids still standing before the stage. From the darkness, six voices sang, "Is there anybody out there?" After a few seconds to allow the reverberating sound to dissipate, more blue lights flooded the stage, and the band started playing Comfortably Numb. Slide guitar could be heard, however Mike was nowhere to be seen and kids wondered where he was.

Prez's voice echoed around the theater.

Hello?

Is there anybody in there?

Just nod if you can hear me.

Is there anyone at home?

Come on, now,

I hear you're feeling down.

Well I can ease your pain

And get you on your feet again.

Relax.

I need some information first.

Just the basic facts

Can you show me where it hurts?

Bright beams of red light shone behind the drum risers. Floating down from high above the stage, in silhouette causing most of the audience to gasp, Mike sang:

There is no pain you are receding

A distant ship, smoke on the horizon.

You are only coming through in waves.

Your lips move but I can't hear what you're saying.

When I was a child I had a fever

My hands felt just like two balloons.

Now I've got that feeling once again

I can't explain, you would not understand

This is not how I am.

I have become comfortably numb.

Hanging in the air about five feet above Derrick's shoulders, Mike leaned back to play the guitar solo. Corey added a little bit of red light so Mike could be seen by the audience. Grabbing hold of the Stratocaster's tremolo bar, Mike made his guitar sing. At the end of the solo, the entire band sang:

I have become comfortably numb.

Returning to his microphone, Prez sang the next verse.

Okay.

Just a little pin prick.

There'll be no more

The sickly scream "AHHH-AHHHHH-AHHHHH!" was sang by Reyes, Keith and Troy. Then Prez continued.

But you may feel a little sick.

Can you stand up?

I do believe its working. Good.

That'll keep you going for the show

Come on it's time to go.

Still floating motionless above his husband and son, Mike sang:

There is no pain you are receding
A distant ship, smoke on the horizon.
You are only coming through in waves.
Your lips move but I can't hear what you're saying.
When I was a child
I caught a fleeting glimpse
Out of the corner of my eye
I turned to look but it was gone
I cannot put my finger on it now
The child is grown,
The dream is gone.
I have become comfortably numb.

The final crescendo dramatically built and Mike closed his eyes, leaned back and played the closing guitar solo. Soon, Mike was laying flat on his back, hovering above the drummers and slowly spinning. These special effects had been prearranged with John during the minutes Mike was back stage and out of sight. Moments and about eight bars before finishing the song, John returned Mike to an upright position and brought him forward to land at his usual spot at right center stage. The band finished the song with thunderous explosions of sound then all the stage lights went out. Applauding and hollering, Angelo, Reggie, Lance, Scott, Chris, Jay, Erik and Travis bounded out of their seats. All the kids stood and cheered, screamed and yelled.

Corey raised the stage and audience lighting slightly, so anyone who wanted to go to dinner could safely do so. Not very many people stood and left the auditorium, mostly adult employees. When Jon and Mary decided to leave for home, Jerry, Joey, KC, Fred and Chauncey hurried down the aisle to the stage. Putting his drum sticks down, Reyes went to Ryan and they walked off to far stage right. Keith meandered over to the Hammond Organ. Mike switched from his Stratocaster to his Les Paul. Troy picked up his Stratocaster. Prez switched from his favored Gibson EB-3 bass guitar to a Rickenbacker 4001. Seeing the band was ready, Corey lowered the audience lights.

Holding up his hands with his index finger and pinky protruding, Mike ordered, "Let me see them horns!" Derrick counted off, and then hit his bass and snare drums, starting Born To Be Wild, with Mike singing lead vocals. Seeing Prez and Troy bopping along, Corey set and activated the strobe lights. The band extended the song to allow Mike, Troy and Prez to each take twelve bar solos. Many of the kids seemed to love it, especially Angelo, Reggie, Lance, Scott, Jay, Chris, Travis and Erik, who had planted themselves before the center of the stage.

For the next song, Keith walked away from the Hammond Organ and got a drink of water. Mike picked up his Randy Rhoads white Les Paul Custom. Derrick played the drum introduction to The Rover. Prez, Mike and Troy began playing. Lance pointed out Mike's right foot riding a wah-wah peddle. Keith had the vocal range to pull off a damn good impersonation of Robert Plant. For the solo, Mike lifted his Les Paul and played his axe behind his head. Never hearing a missed note, Scott faked slamming his head against the stage edge, driving his friends, Prez, Mike, Troy and Derrick to hysterics. Without giving the audience much chance to applaud, the band drove directly into Flight Of Icarus, with Keith handling lead vocals again. Effortlessly and without even watching one another, Troy and Mike played the guitars solos note-for-note. The band didn't even pause at the end of that song. Derrick changed the tempo through drum rolls and the band went right into No One Like You.

At last, after three songs in a row, the band took a breather. Reyes came back on stage to play his electronic drums. Grabbing his bottle of water and towel, Keith walked off the stage to keep Ryan company. Prez and Mike decided to swap guitars again, and this time Troy joined the argument, wanting to play lead guitar, causing Lance, Scott and most of the audience to crack up. While the three guitarists got silly and endlessly swapped guitars around, Derrick and Reyes began juggling maracas and tambourines. When at last Mike stepped forward wearing Prez's EB-3 bass, and Prez had Troy's Stratocaster and Troy had Mike's white Les Paul Custom, Mike giggled, "This will be our last song for the day. Then we can go have dinner." Derrick and Reyes stopped juggling and prepared to play The Boys Are Back In Town. Jonah immediately recognized the song lyrics that his pop had taught him more than a week earlier and sang along.

During the course of the song, the band members noticed many of the girls wandering around. When the song ended, the male two-thirds of the audience cheered, but the female third loudly booed. Having never been booed before, the band members were obviously surprised. Trinity Taylor, Felicity and the other female dorm leaders near the stage cracked up. They only laughed louder when the highly put-off girls stormed out of the theater to go have dinner. Squatting down near the edge of the stage where Lance and Scott were with their close friends, Mike sniggered, "Lesson two: know your audience." Nodding, Angelo, Reggie, Chris, Jay, Lance, Scott, Erik and Travis cracked up.

The adults and kids began streaming toward the exits for dinner. "Lance and Scott, hang back with us, dudes," Mike called. "We'll be talking about our tour, so you'll need to be here with us."

Scott told the other six, "We'll catch up with you soon," and turned around with Lance. Dylan Richardson was already standing on the stage. Used to dealing with point-to-point transportation, Lance and Scott didn't think twice about it. Mike waved them up on stage, and they happily hurried, so they could bounce a couple hundred questions off the band members.

Angelo, Reggie, Erik, Travis, Chris and Jay continued up the aisle. Many meters ahead of them were Tony and Ray. Referring to Lance and Scott, Jay joked, "Just a tiny bit obsessed, those two."

Chris smiled, "With each other."

Travis chuckled at Chris and Jay, "Don't you two dare try acting innocent! It's partially your fault."

"We spent most of the morning with Lance and Scott," Erik giggled, and teased, "Yesterday morning's shower?"

Jay laughed, "Did they mention that they were freaking out because we walked in on them?"

"Yeah, we got the whole story," Travis smiled. "They weren't a couple a whole hour when you two started slippin' and sliding around."

Blushing, Chris giggled, "They caught on fast." In that short glance, Chris noticed Angelo and Reggie blushing and fighting back giggles. Soon, Jay, Erik and Travis joined Chris, widely smiling at Angelo and Reggie.

"It was only a shower," Reggie giggled.

Angelo softly sniggered, "With other couples."

Chris, Jay, Erik and Travis loudly laughed, "AH HA!"

Angelo laughed, "Tony, help us out here, dude."

Spinning around with Ray at his side, Tony asked, "How?" and paused, but then noticed the evil expressions none of the six were able to hide.

"We didn't do anything," Reggie giggled. "Couples showered, that's it."

"Oh, that!" Tony laughed, "It was very kewl, in a steamy way."

Ray giggled, "Dinner time conversation just took a dive."

"No, it won't," Tony assured his boyfriend, and then told the others, "It was a grown up shower, with three couples, and partners washing each other like we wanted, with no little kids around."

Erik, Travis, Jay and Chris, incredulously laughed, "Three couples?"

Angelo giggled, "We are not mentioning the other couple, until they're around to defend themselves."

"Good call," Tony chuckled, and flashed a thumbs-up gesture.

Pulling his Mr. Fuzzy out of his back pocket and slipping it on, Ray squeaked, "What's all this about four teen couples in the shower yesterday, with the Soul Rimmer?" Angelo and Reggie howled. Ray giggled, "John will always take the side of the youngest dude in a group. Thankfully, that's me."

Putting his Mr. Fuzzy on his hand, Tony squeaked, "You taught the fuzzy-facts-of-life, Jay. Face it, bros, a lot of what goes on around here is largely your doing. That's how you became Core Rimmers."

Now near enough to Ray and Tony, Jay softly sniggered the warning, "During tonight's cozy cuzzy fuzzy Water Blaster Battle, you two are targets."

Nodding, Tony chuckled, "Which reminds me, where are our Cuzzy Fuzzy Cozies, bro? We can't play fuzziless." Ray sputtered and then lost it and cracked up.

Tapping his sub-vocal, Chris giggled, "Alden, get Cuzzy Fuzzy Cozies for Tony and Ray, please?" Mid-step, Tony and Ray phased out and back in again.

"HEY!" Ray giggled.

Tony sniggered, "That felt way weird!"

Across Tony's and Ray's comm-badges, Alden giggled, "You weren't wearing underwear."

"That's what felt weird," Tony chuckled, "hanging loose and suddenly being confined."

Ray grinned, "At least it's a comfy fuzzy."

Leaning close to his new boyfriend, Tony whispered, "A little too comfy, pretty boy." Widely smiling, Ray locked eyes with Tony. "Too many ballads and love songs," Tony softly offered. "Thank goodness they finished off the show rockin', or we'd be making time."

Ray giggled, "Can you wait until after supper?" getting everyone's attention, and causing another breakout of snickering.

Closest to Tony, and giggling madly, Erik nudged his neighbor, prompting, "Gotta get your strength back first, dude."

"You're tellin' me!" Tony cackled. Again, the group cracked up. Ray blushed and laughed as loud as anyone, but proudly held his head high.

Noticing Angelo and Reggie sadly shaking their heads, Chris wondered, "What's wrong, guys."

Reggie shrugged. Angelo smiled, "We're just starting out. You dudes are in a different mindset than we are."

Chris nodded, "You'll get there too."

"It's the best part of being gay teenagers," Jay grinned.

Travis added, "Being gay teenagers, we each know our partners well enough to guess when its time to play, or time to talk. Alone time is right after dinner. At some point later tonight, Jay will drop another fuzzy bomb on us."

Jay scowled and tapped his sub-vocal, prompting, "What's that, Alden? I was listening to Trav and only got part of what you were saying." Listening to the AI, Jay's frown turned into a grin that slowly widened until it almost split his face. Jay chuckled, "Redesign it and give him a new one, when he's alone with Angelo. We'll have two basic types, problem solved."

The last group stepped out into the auditorium lobby. Reggie giggled, "Since no one besides me will be alone with Angelo tonight, what the heck was that all about?"

"I didn't want to embarrass you," Jay offered, and veered off course, away from the exit door and over by the concession stand. The entire group followed Jay and stopped, glancing around for some explanation.

Guessing what Alden was saying to Jay, Angelo leaned closer to Reggie and whispered, "I'm pretty sure your hidden secret is out."

Reluctantly, Reggie smirked and sighed, "I'm living in your dorm now. Everyone will know soon enough, so go ahead."

"It's a lack of planning on my part," Jay explained. "When we had Alden and his brothers design the Fuzzy G-strings, the top part, Mr. Fuzzy's nose is for our dicks..."

"WE KNOW!" Tony and Ray loudly laughed.

Jay chuckled and finished, "And only comfy for dudes that hang six inches or less."

Angelo gasped, "Uh oh!" and quickly pulled Reggie close to whisper the conversion from inches to centimeters. Covering his flushed face with Angelo's shoulder, Reggie couldn't help it and broke into giggles.

During the moments the group was gathered and waiting, Alden was explaining the facts to Chris. Rapidly blinking, Chris could barely believe what he was hearing. Chris locked eyes with Angelo, saying, "Only you could explain it."

Glancing around and carefully watching reactions, Angelo described Reggie's challenges with puberty. Noticing no one was smiling or grinning, Angelo bluntly said, "Reggie hangs over seven inches. He'd never fit."

Ray squealed, "We were in the same shower and I never noticed anything."

Shaking his head, Tony chuckled, "You were as focused on me as I was on you. It was the first time we showered together and could take advantage of our new relationship. Of course we didn't notice."

Angelo asked, "Did you notice I was circumcised, Ray?"

"No," Ray giggled, and innocently rolled his eyes up, adding, "I guess I was preoccupied at the time." Roughly grabbing Ray around the waist, Tony softly sniggered and proudly glowed.

Angelo grinned, "So Reggie and I paid more attention in the shower than you and Tony. I was the only one in there with a snipped dick."

Travis shrugged, "So what? I was cut as a baby too."

"And it works perfectly, believe me!" Erik excitedly giggled, causing the group to break into loud laughter again. Chuckling insanely, Travis held his lover by the shoulders and spun him around for a kiss.

Jay sniggered and patted Reggie on the back, carefully assuring, "It's kewl, bro. Every guy notices his dick changes at puberty, and we can easily understand how your change might've been too much to cope with. While you're the one packing, it's Angelo who's the winner of the stud contest in your relationship, because he's the one that has to deal with you."

Chris added, "Before, when we were all goofing around about showers taken and who saw what, the reality of the situation is, I was looking much higher, in everyone's eyes and at their expressions. We've all seen more at the pools here than we ever did anywhere else.

In only a couple o' days, it's already very normal. Only the longest, thickest dicks might be noticed."

Erik, Travis, Tony and Ray all agreed. Jay offered, "Even when the shower was more intimate, with Lance and Scott across from us yesterday morning, all I could say for certain is that Lance is longer and cut, and Scott is thicker and uncut. So, since I messed up the design, I told Alden to design Mr. Fuzzy G-strings for those who hang longer than six inches. Even with the redesign, there's eventually going to be a dude longer than ten inches who won't fit. To make Mr. Fuzzy's nose bigger than ten inches, he'd need to be renamed Mr. Droopy." Everyone in the group evilly sniggered, including Angelo and Reggie.

Nodding at the group who were very considerate of his boyfriend, Angelo appreciatively smiled, "I know Reg well enough to say, he won't wear it for anyone except me, when we're alone."

"That's exactly why you should help him get over what other dudes said," Erik instructed.

Travis said, "They probably meant well, but Reggie hasn't lifted his face off your shoulder. That tells us that it's time to drop this subject. Reggie, the only dudes who will ever say a word to you about it here are younger boys, those that are having the same challenge. Teach them, bro. I liked you this morning, way before this conversation, so please, chill."

Proving that he was done with this conversation, Tony said, "I'm starving, so let's go have dinner, together, like we planned."

Only partially lifting his head up off Angelo's shoulder, Reggie softly confirmed, "It really doesn't matter?"

Almost simultaneously, Tony, Jay and Erik answered, "Only to Angelo."

"As it should be," Chris finished.

Angelo brightly smiled, "Believe it or not, you've all helped Reg, simply by being kewl about it. At Reggie's old school, dudes would often talk to him looking down."

To complete the conversation, Chris, Jay, Erik and Travis shared Sean Moorhead's personal information. With Angelo's math skills, Reggie learned Sean's limp and erect size. Then everyone else gathered shared their limp and erect sizes. What struck Reggie was how easily all of them proudly told very personal information. Even Ray, the youngest and only starting puberty, never blushed and simply stated the facts. Again, Tony brightly beamed, knowing that if they hadn't already hooked up, Ray wouldn't have been as confident, and neither of them would have been participating in the first place.

Paired up as couples, first Erik and Travis went toward the door. Following the first couple, Tony grinned, "I want PB&J" When Ray turned to him, quite obviously confused, Tony teased, "Pretty boy and jelly." Giggling his ass off, Ray mooed. Evilily snickering, "Dinner could take all night!" Tony raced past Erik and Travis and out the door, with Ray only a pace behind him. Sniggering, Travis and Erik jogged after them.

Seeing Reggie lifting his head off Angelo's shoulder, Jay grinned, "In case you haven't gotten the full picture, let me say a few words. A boyfriend that chooses a long dick over anything else is shallow, and probably has a poor self image. From Alden, I happen to know Angelo chose you days ago, way before he saw you nude. Similarly, I love Chris, and have since we were kids. Erik is crazy for Travis, and it's the same with Lance and Scott. Tony has turned his best friend and roommate into his boyfriend, thanks at least partially to you two."

Stepping back from Angelo, Reggie wondered, "What did Alden say?"

Taking Jay's hand, Chris smiled, "It was Alden who told us some of what you were telling Angelo this afternoon. That's how we knew to tread carefully, when we explained the deal with the Fuzzy G-Strings. Alden's a trip, and a pervert, but he really does care about every kid here. He wouldn't intentionally hurt anyone, which is why he privately told Jay about our miscalculation, and then filled me in."

The four of them started for the exit. "An observation," Jay began telling Reggie, "the only adult man on this base taller than your dad is Bill Seaver, Corey Seaver's father. Assuming you grow to be as tall as your dad, seven inches won't seem so out of proportion, Reggie."

Uncontrollably, Angelo giggled. Seeing his partner's dancing eyes, Reggie grinned, "You obviously like that idea."

"I hadn't thought of that at all," Angelo laughed, and couldn't stop laughing. Sighing, Reggie sadly shook his head but widely smiled. Opening the door and waiting for the other couple, Chris and Jay glanced over at Angelo, who was still laughing, and then at Reggie. There was no doubt about it, Reggie was standing up prouder than a peacock.

Dumbfounded, Chris simply couldn't believe Jay had done it again. They were approaching the CIC doors before Chris found his tongue, and giggled at Jay, "Stop being so pleased with yourself."

"I can't help it," Jay sniggered.

* * * * *

Ewa Beach Dining Room

Tuesday, November 9, 2004, 5:40PM HTZ

Minutes later, when Chris, Jay, Angelo and Reggie walked into the CIC dining room, some of the little kids slipped on their Mr. Fuzzy puppets and disjointedly squeaked greetings; "Hi Jay, hey Chris." Struggling to keep from cracking up, Angelo and Reggie sputtered and immediately went into the kitchen chow line. Slipping on their Mr. Fuzzies, Chris and Jay went to the kids, squatted down and made squeaky-small-talk, asking which foods the kids were enjoying most, and if they had fun at the playground with Hamster Balls and trampolines.

Already seated at a table for twelve were Travis, Erik, Tony, Ray, Phil and Owen. Watching Chris and Jay with the little kids, Phil was evilly snickering, knowing it was only a matter of time before the two new Core Rimmers latched onto kids.

Owen was slowly eating, because he was uncontrollably giggling. Owen had just learned that of the six showering earlier that afternoon, he had been paying attention to the others as much as Angelo and Reggie had. Phil knew this immediately after the shower, because Owen had told him that the kids in his home were strictly timed when they were allowed to bathe or shower. Owen didn't know how to take a relaxing shower and just enjoy the warm water; his normal routine was to get clean as quickly as possible, before a bathroom door flew open for the next kid to be timed. Since that day's two showers were the first with Phil at his side, Owen was learning to slow down, but didn't know what to do with the extra time. Naturally, Owen's eyes wandered. Owen's eyes were wandering again, busily watching Chris and Jay, two of the Fuzzy G-string lunatics that started the water blaster battle the prior night.

When adults from FYS began coming in, and filing into the kitchen, Chris squeaked to the kids, "It's time to feed our fuzzies, guys."

"Famished fuzzies get feeble and fall down," Jay grinned, causing many of the kids to crack up.

Rolling his eyes, Chris giggled, "That's how Jay hurt his wrist."

Angelo and Reggie came out of the kitchen just as Chris and Jay were going in. Tony and Ray raised their hands, so Angelo and Reggie could see where they were. Balancing trays in their hands, Angelo and Reggie signaled with nods that they had seen Ray and Tony.

Meanwhile, in the chow line, Chris and Jay were beside Jen and Jim Hundser. Waiting for her main course, Jen teased, "Chris, how many children are you and Jay planning on adopting today?"

Chris giggled, "Today is a little too quick, Aunt Jen."

"Maybe tomorrow," Jay smiled, "the kids have to choose us."

Jim chuckled, "You both realize that the bringer of Mr. Fuzzy puppets will have a long line of kids?"

Taking her plate from Miguel, Jen giggled, "You may be the first Core Rimmers to move into a full size house, and have children that are your own age."

Hearing Jay chortling and turning to see him nodding his head, Chris laughed, "No, Jay!"

"Why not?" Jay sniggered, "Derrick and Mike have Reyes."

Chris giggled, "Reyes still looks thirteen. Please, let's keep it to twelve and younger, at least two years younger than us?"

Jay shrugged, "We'll see, is the best I can offer, baby. If a thirteen year old wants us for parents, I couldn't say no. Could you?"

Looking over at the chef who was patiently waiting for his dinner order, Chris giggled, "Soup, please; about a gallon, so I can drown myself in it." All the chefs and adults cracked up.

"Chicken," Jay teased.

"With noodles works," Chris giggled.

Before leaving the kitchen, Doc Wiener smiled, "I think I'd better clear my schedule."

"Thanks, Doc." Chris evilly grinned, "I'll send Jay over right after dinner," causing Jay to snap his neck turning to his lover, and another round of laughter.

Prez and most of Platinum Habits, and the band's roadies came into the kitchen chow line while the majority of laughing parents were going into the dining room. KC, Jerry and Joey invited Reyes and Ryan to their condo for dinner, so the latter two weren't present. Picking up a tray, Prez grinned, "You've demented our parents too now, Jay?" All the chefs suddenly put their utensils down, stepped back from the food and howled laughing.

"Can't leave some people alone for five minutes," Scott joked.

Jay laughed, "It wasn't me! Chris did it, I swear!"

Before leaving the kitchen, Carl Seibert smiled, "We've got the nineteenth and twentieth floors of a new condo put aside, just for Chris, Jay and their brood of twenty kids."

Picking up a tray, Keith commented, "Twenty, huh? That leaves very little time for Core Rimming."

"Or any other sort of rimming," Mike softly joked.

Two of the lady chefs, laughing themselves to tears, hurried to the back of the kitchen. Lance smirked, "We're killing the kitchen staff. Can Dylan put us back in a time bubble thingie, so we can eat tonight?" Glancing around for the little Mikyvis, Lance wondered, "Where'd he go?"

John smiled, "Never can tell where or when."

Suddenly, the entire group found themselves in a clear bubble, sans clothes. The weird thing about the bubble was that it had clock hands on the outside.

Prez, Keith, Mike, Drew, Corey and John cracked up. Outside the bubble, everyone was moving in extreme slow motion. "Nice!" Derrick groused. "We tell the kids they need clothes in here, but here we are, setting a great example."

Dropping his tray back on the stack, Stephen covered his eyes, excitedly squealing, "But where is Dylan? How the heck do we get out of this, and when?"

Having been with his dad and pop the whole time they were in the auditorium, Leo tapped Drew on the back, wondering, "Why is there a clock, dad?"

Facing his son, Drew sighed, "Knowing Mikyvis pranks, it probably means we're on a timer. The question is, at what rate are we versus the clock and the rest of the world?"

Trying to leave the confines of the bubble, Corey giggled, "Dudes, come over this way. Maybe if we all walk back outside, this bubble will pop."

"Or at least let us get dressed again," Leo hoped. As a group, they all moved to where Corey was. Once they were all close together, Leo noticed, "The clock is smaller."

Near the back of the group, Scott sniggered, "Watch your fuzzy, Jay. You walked right into me."

"Watch your own fuzzy!" Jay laughed.

Lance giggled, "I'll watch Scott's fuzzy, Jay, but you need to back up a step or two."

Chris slapped Jay's shoulder, sniggering, "What did I tell you about fuzzying other guys?"

"I usually try to brake for Core Rimmers," Jay innocently chuckled.

Getting bumped from behind, Troy turned slightly and sniggered at Lance, "I promise to teach you guitar, bro, but that's as far as I'll go."

Blushing, Lance cackled, "So, we're all learning to hold the long, hard, wood things?" A chorus of groans and moans erupted.

As the group digressed into more silliness, Prez, Keith, Derrick and Mike huddled up to figure a way out of the bubble. John levitated to try and learn the bubble's dimensions. Of course, Jay, Chris, Sean, Troy, Lance and Scott passed a few remarks about John floating around with an unfuzzy fuzzy drooping down. Giggling his butt off, John slapped away hands reaching up. Stephen had a fair amount of complaints for all the goofy teenagers, and his floating husband, who should've known better. In a few moments, John gathered the bubble was oval shaped, sort of like an egg, and telepathically shared that with his brothers.

Having reached an agreement, Prez, Keith, Mike and Derrick began sharing their plan. The main problems were Leo and Stephen, who were more than a little worried, and then there were Chris, Jay, Lance, Scott, Troy and Sean, who weren't worried about anything except 'accidental' fuzzy brushings within the confines of the bubble.

Having little other choice, Prez loudly commanded, "ATTENTION, RIGHT NOW!" Once everyone was silent and watching him, Prez ordered, "Line up as couples, according to height, arms' distance to the man in front of you. When I say march, you WILL march, left leg, and then the right leg, in unison. We're going to march right out of this bubble."

Leo pointed and reminded, "But the clock, Uncle Prez."

"The hands haven't moved," Prez recognized. "That clock is a figment of our combined imagination, a play on Mikyvis ability. The only purpose for that clock is for Dylan to see how long it takes us to pull our act together, as a team. He's already had at least fifteen minutes of giggling, while we get more hungry and desperate."

Smiling down at his nephew, Prez explained, "You're the only one in here without a partner, Leo. That means you have to lead us out of here."

Leo squealed, "But the dining room is full and I'm naked!"

Drew reminded Leo, "When Dylan showed up, his first words were to you, asking how your boyfriend is. It sort o' makes sense, in a Mikyvis manner."

Nodding, Prez said, "My guess is we'll pass out of the time bubble dressed again. This bubble is egg shaped, so you're our point man, Leo. Lined up by height, we're sort of egg shaped. After Leo are John and Stephen, then Drew and Corey, Lance and Scott, Mike and Derrick, Sean and Troy, Keith and I, and lastly Chris and Jay." Turning to the rest of the team, Prez ordered, "As couples, and taller than man in front of you, military style, we'll march out of here."

After making some adjustments to keep their height organized, Prez ordered, "Forward, march." As it worked out, they exited the kitchen chow line in the reverse order as they had entered it, which was Dylan's twisted intention.

From his swing hanging from a light fixture, Dylan giggled, "You didn't specify what type of time bubble!" He paused, then added, "Remember this, Leo. You can lead, and Time will let you out. If you follow, you'll be stuck in Time forever."

Dylan and his swing popped out of existence. Everyone in the dining room paused to watch the bulk of the Core Leadership, who had just walked into the kitchen, walking back out with hands on the shoulders of the those in front of them. Giggling erupted from the little kids who were closest to the kitchen. Near the center of the room, Angelo grinned, "This must be a statement of some sort, I'm just not sure of what exactly."

Nodding, Reggie chuckled, "When my dad came home from work last Thursday, he told us stories that I didn't believe, until we got here Saturday. Act like everything's normal, and maybe they'll stop." Erik, Travis, Owen, Phil, Tony and Ray cracked up.

The group of Core Rimmers dropped their arms and smiled at one another. Billy got up from the table where he had been eating with the rest of the Taylor family. He hurried to his dad and pop, giggling, "Why did you do that?"

Not willing to cause a bigger disruption by explaining Mikyvis to his eldest son, Troy grinned, "How did it look to you?"

"Like you just wanted to show everyone that you're a team of close friends," Billy sniggered, "like we don't already know that."

Since neither he nor Troy had had a chance to speak with their eldest since breakfast, Sean wondered, "Did you have good day with Robbie?"

"Awesome," Billy cheered. "We spent the early afternoon playing Blackjack, with Ronnie, Garrett, Richie, Carrol, Ralphie and Pat. After that, we went to Des Moines." He gestured for his dad and pop to lean down. When they did so, Billy smiled, "We're going along at a slow pace. We went no further then step two, and it's so kewl like this. He wants us to know each other, so it's not just sex. We talk about all kinds of stuff, like school and sports. Even TV shows and movies are a lot more fun than they've ever been before."

"That's what boyfriends are really like," Sean smiled. "Suddenly everyday normal stuff becomes more important."

Troy placed a soft kiss on Billy's forehead, and then prompted, "Go finish dinner. And remember to let us know where you'll be sleeping tonight."

Nodding, Billy giggled, "He wants to be at our place, but I want to be there, at the Taylors', just for the change. I'll let you know when we figure it out." When Billy hurried back to his dinner, Sean and Troy returned to the kitchen.

Jay was sharing his plan with the rest of the team for the second cozy cuzzy fuzzy water blaster battle. It was a good idea, and would likely help many of the level two newbies feel included. With that shared, Chris and Jay joined their friends at the table. As soon as they sat down, they shared the same plan with Erik, Travis, Tony, Ray, Phil, Owen, Angelo and Reggie.

Immediately, Reggie slowly shook his head and went into a giggling fit. Angelo chuckled, "I'll try to get Reg to wear it outside of our room, but I won't push too much."

Widely grinning, Erik told Chris and Jay, "We already talked a little about that. Phil and Owen were the other couple with Tony, Ray, Reggie and Angelo. We paused their shower fun when Trav and I needed to leak and had to flush."

Nodding, Travis grinned, "We introduced Reggie to Darren too."

Locking eyes with Reggie, Chris suggested, "If you can't deal with the G-string, wear your underwear instead. It's more important that you're there than what you're wearing."

"Those kids need to know they can get crazy once in a while," Jay explained between mouthfuls. "Just like you're a little self-conscious, consider the kids whose overall growth was stunted because of those orphanages."

Phil smirked, "I guess you didn't realize that Owen is one of the level-two kids?"

Jay shrugged and locked eyes with Owen, asking, "Did I exaggerate or offend you?"

"No," Owen meekly replied. Turning to Phil, Owen smiled, "It's true, and I'm sure most of the dudes at Oneula Beach are looking forward to it. When lots of dudes here go there, just for fun, they'll know what I already do, from you. The icing on that cake is Jay's plan. All the Core Rimmers being there to play is a good idea."

Jay grinned, "But you two are cozy cuzzy fuzzy veterans, so you're on our team."

Owen giggled, "Like teams matter."

Feeling the need to say something for his new boyfriend, Phil looked at Angelo and Reggie, chuckling, "After a while, it's every man for himself."

Finished with his dinner, and since Reggie, Phil and Owen had empty plates before them, Angelo suggested, "Let's go over to the condo." With nods and affirmative replies, the four of them gathered their trays and said their goodbyes.

Erik, Travis and Tony were nearly done eating too, but Ray was chowing down like food was a rare commodity. Tilting his head slightly toward his ravenous boyfriend, Tony bounced his eyebrows and widely smiled at the others. Erik giggled. Travis matched Tony's smile. Chris and Jay intently watched Ray dunk a dinner roll into brown gravy and then stuff most of the roll into his mouth. Noticing everyone was looking at him, Ray gleefully bounced in his seat and chewed until he could manage to laugh, "WHAT?" Almost at once, everyone offered something from their plates to Ray.

Cracking up, Tony howled, "I'm not saying a word!"

Suspiciously squinting, Ray giggled, "Good, just grunt and groan some more. I'll understand perfectly." Watching Tony turn red and digress into a giggling fit, Chris, Jay, Erik and Travis roared.

* * * * *

The Scooby Gang scampered into the dining room and directly to Nathan Hayes. Sitting with Brice Glotzbecker, Jerry Burk, John Huth, Roger Mosqueda, Nick Shavers and Greg Holton, Nathan was alternating between the hope the Scoobies would simply say hello and go away, or maybe the extinct volcano on Oahu would suddenly erupt. In either scenario, it would only hurt a moment.

"Yous needs to come sees your new Shiny, Nathan," the Scoobies cutely sang.

As if this interruption wasn't enough to cause giggling at the table, in Nathan's mind, Daileass, Draco, and all the Clan AIs were clogging his positronics with more insane thoughts, half of which were unique ways to commit suicide and make it appear accidental.

Since Nathan seemed to be in a trance, Brice giggled, "You guys got a special Shiny for Nathan?"

"Uh huh," Willow sang, and scampered over to sit on Brice's lap.

Picking up a dirty spoon from Nathan's plate, Xander began polishing it and smiled, "It tooks almost a week to make it just right."

"Com'on, Nath," Nick prompted, "we'd all like to see your new shiny." The sentiment was shared by all the other boys at the table. Pleased with the excitement all the boys were portraying, Faith climbed onto Jerry's lap, and Spike joined Nick.

Nathan sighed, "Where is the shiny?"

"Daileass," Spike called, "transports us all into the new Shiny!"

In a blink, all seven boys and four ferrets were sitting inside a Hummer at the parking garage. Nathan was sitting in the driver's seat, and Brice was in the passenger seat. Rarely getting the chance to be transported, the five sitting in the back seat chorused, "Kewl!"

Still polishing the spoon, Xander concentrated on his task, and explained, "The dull loving ZCC man don't needs this no more."

Spike added, "Weez tooks it to Utah for armaments, and then weez tooks it to Des Moines, for Shiny camouflage paint, Shiny bullet proofs glass, and to installs the Shiny weapons."

"On the roof's a thirty-millimeter canon," Willow smiled.

And Faith giggled, "Underneath, its gots laser-guided missiles. Targeting system is ins the dashboard."

Handing Nathan his brightly polished spoon, Xander grinned, "In the back is four surface-to-air rockets." He seriously warned, "Don't be's standing up top and shoots the thirty-mil and fire the rockets. Yous'll get cooked that ways."

Brice and the other five in the back seat howled laughing.

Spike grinned, "It's gots independent suspensions, five-feets off the ground, so's there's ladders on all four doors."

"And don't forgets the sound system," Willow cheered. "Five hundred watts, seven speakers and a sub-woofer! Preloaded with Platinum Habits concerts!"

Nearest to the driver's side rear door, Roger opened it and smiled, watching the ladder steps cascade to the concrete floor. The other three doors opened and the gang climbed out to see the exterior for the first time. It was painted in camouflage, but with enough polish and shine to reflect a single candle to ten thousand times brightness. Add in the polished chrome ladders at all four doors and the chrome wheels, the vehicle was anything but stealthy.

Pointing at the chrome side ladder, mounted between the front and rear driver's side doors, Xander prompted, "Come on, Nathan." The little ferret-boy practically flew up the side of the vehicle.

Widely smiling, Nathan moved slowly to take hold of the ladder and put one foot on the first step. Willow wondered, "Don't you like it, Nath?"

Climbing steadily up the ladder to the roof, Nathan chuckled, "I love it guys. I'm just really surprised, that's all."

Faith giggled, "Yous a UNIT Rimmer, and needs a Hummer."

Almost to the roof, Nathan abruptly stopped, felt his face flushing red, and hung his head. His life had changed radically in the days since joining the Pacific Rim Division, and mostly in good ways, but sometimes he truly had to wonder if anything had changed at all. The flavor of the insanity was different, but still, everyone around him was nuts. He climbed the last few steps up to the roof and stood.

All five boys on the ground paused and glanced at each other. Breaking into giggles, Greg, Jerry, John, Nick and Roger nudged Brice around, each playfully asking why Nathan hadn't gotten a hummer before now. Laughing his ass off, Brice didn't admit or deny anything. Fiercely blushing, Brice smiled up at Nathan, the blond cutie that had become his best friend.

Taking hold of the thirty-millimeter cannon, Nathan insured the weapon wasn't loaded and the barrel was cleared, and then swung it to the side, aiming at the group surrounding and teasing Brice. Louder shouts erupted on the ground. Greg and Jerry pretended to be shot and hit the floor. Screaming in mock horror, Nick, Roger and John scattered. The Scoobies cracked up and chased after them. Only Brice stood his ground, still smiling up. Brightly beaming, Nathan softly prompted, "We've got stuff to talk about tonight."

Nodding, Brice giggled, "Yeah, I think so too."

Laying on the concrete deck, off to each side of Brice, Greg and Jerry giggled. Evilily smirking, Nathan hit them both with more imaginary cannon fire. Giggling louder, Greg and Jerry made their bodies jolt and dance from the pretend gun shots.

* * * * *

After finishing their dinners, AJ, Jerry, Chris, Jay, Lance and Scott went into the Command Center. Returning to the dining room only a few minutes later, the group went to the married Core Rimmers, and began handing out little black velvet boxes. On their one week wedding anniversary, all the married Core Rimmers received their wedding rings. They were all two-tone, yellow and white 14 karat gold, with round ruby center stones, signifying the ring of fire, and had smaller diamond accent stones around the ruby.

AJ wondered, "Will we all get rings like that?"

Keith smiled, "You dudes can get whatever rings you want. The ten of us decided on this style."

"We wanted to keep ours the same," Kaleo offered.

Stephen said, "If you guys like the same style, I think it would be kewl for all us leaders to have the same rings."

Sean giggled, "We haven't even decided when to get married."

Glancing around the eight unmarried Core Rimmers, Prez quickly said, "Tell me when, and shop around for rings."

AJ told Jerry, "Those are awesome rings."

Jerry nodded and chuckled, "I think so too." Almost simultaneously, Sean, Troy, Chris, Jay, Lance and Scott agreed. Jerry chuckled, "Kewl, so unofficially we've got a style of ring already chosen for future Core Rimmers."

"Now to set the date," AJ prompted.

Kaleo grinned, "I suggest Friday afternoon, after school."

Several members of the team asked, "Why Friday?"

Kaleo explained, "It would be a week after AJ and Jerry joined us, and it's a reminder that they found the Hunnicutt brothers the same night. Remember, some time this weekend, we'll be receiving the level three kids. Or you could wait for those kids to arrive and get settled in?"

Lance told Scott, "Friday's as good a day as any."

With the realization that Lance had just asked him to marry him, Scott shivered. So incredibly happy that he couldn't help it, Scott beamed, "Yeah?"

Nodding, Lance giggled, "I already promised you everything, including my Les Paul. We might as well make it official." Scott took Lance's hand and wordlessly led him from the CIC dining room. Lance giggled, "Where are we going?"

"To work up another, bigger appetite, MSLB," Scott chortled. The rest of the team grinned.

Jay reminded Chris, "This cast will be history by Friday." Chris took hold of Jay's hand and they followed Lance and Scott back to dorm three.

Playfully, Prez observed, "Those two couples need kids."

"They're at least sort o' thinking of kids," Keith sniggered.

Over the PA at both bases, Jerry announced, "For everyone that has arrived since last Wednesday night, your ID cards and Clan debit cards have arrived." Pausing for the cheering, Jerry then chuckled, "After breakfast tomorrow morning, we'll get them passed out."

The youngest sons at the tables of the Core Rimmers gathered together more young level one and level two orphans to go to the rec room. Once Ray had finished eating, he and Tony deposited their trays at the dishwasher. Leaning close to Ray, Tony quietly asked, "Wanna hang out in the rec room for a while?"

Surprised, Ray softly giggled, "Don't you want to go back to our room?"

Beginning the walk across the dining room, Tony smiled, "After the water blaster battle, pretty boy. Once we're there, that's where we'll be for the rest of the night."

Pulling Tony off to a deserted area of the room, Ray paused and smiled, "When we play with the dildos, I'd like it if we both played at the same time."

"Sixty-nine?"

Rapidly nodding, Ray giggled, "I haven't stopped thinking about what you said, about you bottoming for me?"

Feeling a shiver race up his spine, Tony smiled, "I'm gonna show you off in the rec room. I hit the Super-Lotto with you today. By the time the water blaster battle is over, every dude's gonna know; I'm yours and your mine. Then we'll go back to our room and have some more fun." He sealed his promise with a tender kiss that Ray quickly turned into a passionate lip lock.

Many of the adults and teens still in the dining room noticed the new couple. Chatting about Platinum Habits cover songs, Derrick, Mike, Keith, Prez, Troy and Sean warmly smiled at the couple across the room. Sean grinned, "Normally, Tony's the one leading Ray around, but now it seems that Ray's taking the lead." Nodding, the other five agreed, and then returned to their conversation.

* * * * *

It wasn't planned, but when Leo and Bruce walked out of the CIC alone to talk, AJ and Jerry had an opportunity to talk with Kenny alone. AJ and Jerry walked through a dimensional door to find Kenny and pull him aside. Firmly holding his eldest son's shoulder, Jerry gently asked, "Would you like to know what happened to your parents, Kenny?"

Rapidly blinking and sighing, Kenny thought about it for about a minute, until they were seated at a small table. At last, he softly replied, "I do and I don't. I can figure stuff out, pop. My parents went to work, at the downtown financial district. When the two gay men came to our apartment to check on us, I overheard some of what they were whispering. Downtown was the worst place to be, they said."

AJ nodded and sighed, "That's right."

"That was Friday," Kenny struggled to say, "and today's Tuesday. Since there's been no word until now, it's more certain that they didn't make it." Grimly, AJ and Jerry nodded. Kenny whimpered, "What I can't understand is why they kept me and Mike home from school, but they went to work. If I had known then what I know now..." Trailing off, Kenny couldn't stop the tears. AJ reached for some napkins and handed them to Kenny, hoping that he wouldn't join his eldest son and break down crying. Finally, after about two minutes, Kenny softly sobbed, "We had a real nice apartment and went to private school. I'll bet they were more worried about paying bills."

Leaning closer, Jerry patiently reminded, "Adults have to work to provide for their families, Ken. They were more concerned about keeping their three sons safe. I'll bet you they didn't think twice about their own well being, only about providing for their family. That won't happen again in this family. Me and dad each have gorillas and enhanced human security to keep us safe."

"I know," Kenny cried. Unintentionally, Kenny drew attention from other kids in the Oneula Beach dining room.

Rather than embarrass his son or create a very public scene, AJ asked, "How about we go home, Kenny?" Getting nods in response, AJ tapped his sub-vocal, ordering, "Alden, get all three of us home and on the sofa, dude." Without a comment, Alden executed the order. AJ was seated on Kenny's right, and Jerry was on the left side. Two teen dads shifted closer to their boy. AJ sighed, "We're sorry, Kenny. We thought about where and how to tell you, but there were no good answers."

Shaking his head and wiping his eyes with the damp napkins, Kenny whimpered, "There ain't a good place or way. My brothers couldn't be around either. It just sucks. I don't even want to know how or where they died, not now, and maybe not ever."

Jerry nodded, "All you have to do is ask, Kenny."

Nodding, Kenny sighed, "I'm glad me and my brothers got out of New York, and even more happy that we found you two guys. Being here, as a family, is so much more than I hoped might happen. I was afraid I'd lose my brothers; that we'd be separated. I don't ever want to go back to New York. It's stained." Sadly shaking his head, Kenny forced a small smirk, showed it to his dad and pop, then admitted, "More than anything, I'm angry at them for thinking more about money than they did about our family. I had to deal with Mike and Shaun constantly asking, 'Where's mommy and daddy?' I had to deal with it the entire day and into the night. As far as I'm concerned, it was the dumbest thing they'd ever done."

Jerry wondered, "What do you want to do now?"

"Stay here, at my new home, with you, my new dad and pop," Kenny answered.

AJ gently prompted, "Why don't you talk with your friends about it?"

Shaking his head, Kenny firmly said, "Not yet. This is where I want to be now, in my new home with my new dad and pop. Tomorrow I'll see what the other guys are doing. All you did was verify what I already expected. Someday I might want to know more, but maybe I won't. The more I know, the worse it'll be; like Leo. I don't want to relive that day. I want this family in this home." He paused and scowled, and then asked, "Am I being selfish?"

"I sure don't think so," Jerry quickly answered.

AJ smiled, "Definitely not. You're making perfect sense; choosing to move forward rather than look back or stagnate."

"Yeah," Kenny brightly smiled.

Jerry gave Kenny a hug, and then suggested, "How about we do something, since we have time available?"

Kenny wondered, "Like?"

"My thoughts are looking into the future, to winter rainy days, with three boys and two teenage fathers, chilling out in this house," Jerry grinned.

"Kewl," Kenny smiled.

"To the basement we go," Jerry prompted, and stood up.

Also standing, Kenny asked, "Why the basement?"

AJ answered, "It's a big empty space right now. It needs to be set up for those rainy days, with games and toys and all the stuff we'll need."

"Sweet!" Kenny brightly cheered, and hurried to the basement door. Before he had even opened the door, Kenny said, "I know a bunch of games and stuff Mike and Shaun would love." He started down stairs with his dad and pop trailing behind. "We'll need beanbag chairs, enough for all of us."

Jerry said, "Get extras for friends."

Like every other basement in the houses and townhomes, the walls were finished and the floor was carpeted. At the bottom of the stairs, Kenny turned and smiled. AJ sniggered, "What are you waiting for? Tap your comm-badge and call Alden."

Happily doing as he was told, Kenny called the AI to help get the beanbag chairs, enough for twelve kids and six teenage fathers. A shelf unit was ordered, and then games and toys, that Mike and Shaun had in New York City, filled the shelves. A convertible card table and snack table, with seating for four went to the other side of the staircase. Since they already had four televisions in the house, they decided to put a stereo radio and CD changer in the basement. Of course, a CD changer required a CD library. Kenny ordered a lot and both his dads added to the collection. Ripping off the CD wrappers meant they needed garbage bins, so two good sized ones were ordered; one for each side of the basement. While they worked on the CD library, Kenny revealed, "I have an embarrassing question that needs to be asked."

Never pausing their work, AJ and Jerry smiled. Jerry joked, "You want me in a full-body Fuzzy for this?"

"NO!" Kenny loudly laughed. Jerry and AJ softly chortled. Sadly shaking his head, Kenny giggled, "You're on the right track, it does have to do with last night." Seeing his dad and pop patiently waiting, Kenny said, "I played a game yesterday, and the prize was Jason Mullins. I didn't win the game, but almost did. It suddenly put me on the spot, ya know? Jase and me are friends, and cousins, and that's all it'll ever be. Since last night, I've been noticing the couples, gay and straight. The straight side is much easier to figure out, it seems to me."

Jerry blinked, "I'm not sure I get what you mean."

"Girls sit on their boyfriend's lap," Kenny said. "Most of the time, it's the boyfriend that wants a kiss, but I have seen some girls do that too. With the gay couples, it's not easy to figure out. Honestly, I can't really see having a girlfriend or a boyfriend any time soon, because nobody is that special. But then I noticed how Billy was with Robbie, and how Jase was acting with JD, and all the other gay couples during the day today, like Gage and Jonah, and Ben and Sammy. Are there some rules that gay guys agree on or what?" He tossed the crumpled CD wrapper in the trash and then turned to his dad and pop.

Jerry explained, "Looks are deceiving. In most cases, guys are heavier and stronger than their girlfriends, so that's why you see that being pretty constant. I sit on your dad's lap, even though I'm a little taller and a little heavier. For now, Gage and Sammy are heavier and stronger than Ben and Jonah, but that won't necessarily always be the case. Troy sits on Sean's lap and they switch, just like me and dad, and just like Keith and Prez."

Kenny gasped and then squealed, "Keith and Prez switch too? I never saw that! And Prez is our leader! HOLY CRAP!"

Only because Jerry was fighting to not crack up, AJ giggled, "You've only been here three days, not counting the day at Kaho'olawe. Later on, talk to your bother, Mike. I'd place big money on him being with Geoff right at this very moment." He went to throw a CD wrapper away, saying, "You could also talk with Gage, Jonah, Sammy and Ben. I guarantee that none of them have made any agreement about who is doing what and how. When you find someone that makes you feel good, and discover that you make him feel good, everything else simply falls into place, very naturally."

"Your dad and I went through some rough times together," Jerry reminded. "A lot of our bedtime chats were about that bad stuff, and we made each other feel better. When we were reunited, we shared more bad stuff, and with each day since we were rescued, less of that and more of the good stuff we were discovering together. Now we talk about our three sons, and each other too. Even with straight couples, everything is pretty even. It has to be, or the couple won't last. Somebody's gonna feel hurt about something, and they'll split apart."

AJ recommended, "Talk with your cousins and buddies, Kenny. Another bet I'll place is against Jase, JD, Gage, Jonah, Ben and Sammy having a lot of sex. Maybe in the mornings they're playing in the shower, and at night they're playing before they go to sleep. None of them are like any teenager, I guarantee it. They're just having fun. It'll be the same with you, when you find that special person, especially if it's another guy. And in about five years, if you're very lucky, you'll be teenagers and having more grown up fun together, like me and your pop."

Finishing the last CD and tossing it onto a beanbag chair, Jerry loudly laughed, "It makes me crazy when you do that!" AJ cracked up and backed away. Kenny's eyebrows shot up. Advancing on his future hubby, Jerry giggled, "You did it with Shaun yesterday." Playfully imitating AJ, Jerry teased, "Maybe you'll want to hold hands, or maybe you'll want to hug, and maybe you'll even want to kiss, like me and poppa kiss."

AJ and Kenny roared laughing. In an instant, Jerry picked up AJ and they kissed around their combined laughter. Practically in tears from laughter, Kenny watched Jerry carry AJ to the nearest wall. Once trapped between the wall and Jerry, AJ wrapped his legs around Jerry's butt. When the kisses paused, AJ turned to Kenny, giggling, "See, I started it, and we both got what we wanted."

"For now," Jerry sniggered, "bedtime tonight will be reversed." He placed AJ back on the floor and they each stole tender kisses. Jerry finished his fatherly advise, reminding, "Everything is even, the love and caring flows back and forth however it's needed. As we said last night and tonight, don't worry about the sex part; when you've got the sharing, it really does happen just as easily as what you just saw us do."

Still red faced from laughing, Kenny rapidly nodded.

With all the CDs unwrapped and stowed on the shelf, the three of them glanced around their new family playroom. Satisfied, AJ called Kaleo and told him what they had done. Intrigued, Kaleo transported into their basement with Tory to see the results for themselves. The space was perfect; comfortable, inviting, and clearly a place that kids and their teenage dads could hang out at. Glancing around the space, Kaleo chuckled, "This is great!"

Tory suggested, "How about we add to it?"

Tilting his head, AJ grinned, "You could add whatever you want in your basement, bro."

"We will," Tory giggled, and walked over toward the basement half bath. However he didn't go in the bathroom, but stopped short. He pulled a little lever that opened a hidden latch in the wall, explaining, "These are collapsible, folding walls; they'll slide open, so your basement opens to Sean's and Troy's next door, and their basement will open to ours at the end unit. Our three families can chill together, or apart, or we could even make a space large enough for newbie nests." Tory then went to the opposite side of the half bath and opened the other sliding wall, effectively doubling the space. Kenny cracked up at the surprised expressions his dads wore. Evilily sniggering, Kaleo hurried to the next wall that separated Troy's and Sean's basement from his.

Jerry went to help Kaleo open both sections of sliding walls. Tapping his comm-badge, AJ called, "Sean, are you busy, bro?"

"Not yet," Sean evilily cackled. In the background, Troy began giggling. Recognizing that teenaged boys were insane, Kenny covered his mouth with both hands and muffled a belly laugh.

Bouncing his eyebrows at his eldest son, AJ giggled, "If you can, you two need to come down to your basement. We've got a surprise for you."

Out of sync, Sean and Troy uncertainly muttered, "A surprise in the basement?"

Troy said, "We're only chatting with Prez, Keith, Derrick and Mike."

"Bring them along too," AJ quickly suggested.

Kenny giggled, "I'll go get my brothers, and all my new cousins too, dad."

"Kewl," AJ nodded. He pulled Kenny close for a moment, gave his eldest a hug and mouthed, "I love you, ya know?"

Giggling and nodding, Kenny warmly smiled, "I love you too, dad." He then called Alden to be transported to the CIC rec room, where his brothers and friends were. In a blink, Kenny was gone.

Prez reminded, "That's about three dozen of us in your basement, AJ."

Now that all the basement separator walls were open, AJ giggled, "Space won't be a problem, Prez."

Mike chuckled, "Right, now I'm curious." The sounds of chairs sliding could be heard. Then Mike called Alden to have the group of six Core Rimmers transported from Ewa Beach's dining room to AJ's and Jerry's basement.

Upon arrival, Prez, Keith, Derrick, Mike, Sean and Troy glanced around the space that was now about ten meters long by twenty-four meters wide. AJ giggled, "The walls on both sides of the half bathrooms and stairs are temporary sliding walls. Tory showed us."

Kaleo cheered, "The division's basement nest just moved. There are three half bathrooms down here now, and plenty of space for at least fifty kids to nest."

Prez chuckled, "We were just talking about combining gear in Mike's and Derrick's basement with ours. At our townhomes, we could set up a little jam space, have space to chill, and including Drew's and Corey's basement, still have space for kids to nest."

Tapping his comm-badge, Keith called, "Drew?"

"Here, bro."

"Transport over here," Keith grinned. "You and Corey need to see this to believe it."

There were a few seconds silence, then Drew giggled, "We've heard plenty from you two, and still don't believe what we've seen!"

Derrick sniggered, "Then the next trip to Archmania, the bedroom walls come down."

"And we'll show you how to do it while standing on your hands," Keith teased. Corey and Drew cracked up.

Obviously near his dads, Leo squealed, "That's more than I needed to hear, Uncle Keith!"

"For the moment, nephew," Keith sniggered.

Drew chuckled, "Give us a minute to rinse the glasses we're using and we'll be right there. Out."

Happily cackling, "I found 'em!" Kenny transported into the basement with his two brothers, Stan, Leonard, Russ, Mark, Marv, Jimmy, Richie, Scott, Dillon, Jonah, Gage, Ben, Sammy, Dee, Jason, JD, Randy, Lenny and Geoff. The only Core Rimmer son that wasn't present was Billy, because he was over at the Taylors' house. Moments later, Drew, Corey and Leo transported into the basement. With twenty-two Rimmer sons and twelve Core Rimmers roaming around, there was still plenty of space. Soon, the boys were making themselves at home on bean bag chairs. Games and toys were pulled off the shelf. They began playing and chattering. Their dads made preparations for nesting kids, getting blankets, mattress padding and pillows piled in one corner of Kaleo's and Tory's section. When that was complete, Corey, Drew, Keith and Prez transported to their townhomes to make similar preparations in their basements. Derrick and Mike went to dorm three to meet with Lance and Scott for a prearranged guitar lesson.

* * * * *

Ewa Beach, Condominium A

Tuesday, November 9, 2004, 6:40PM HTZ

Outside, it was twilight. The sky to the East was dark, and to the West there were the final vestiges of sunlight bouncing off of orange and pink clouds. Angelo, Reggie, Phil and Owen began the walk up one of the exterior staircases at condominium A. Owen was trying to keep up with Angelo and Reggie until Phil called his name at the third floor and gently reminded, "Slow down for me, okay?"

"It's already so pretty!" Owen beamed. "Don't you think it's pretty?"

Pausing at the landing halfway between the third and fourth floors, Phil nodded, smiled and leaned close to whisper, "I want you to keep that dinner in your belly."

Owen pulled back and saw the sincerity in his boyfriend's eyes. He was already getting a little winded and understood Phil's intent. "Okay," Owen smiled, and quickly kissed Phil on the cheek, but then he grabbed Phil's hand and hurried up another flight of stairs. Giggling hysterically, Phil held Owen back, making him slow down. By the sixth floor, Owen was feeling the exertion from climbing and they paused there.

Already at the tenth floor, Angelo and Reggie looked out over the base. "The CIC and auditorium look like a bloated teal guppy," Angelo sniggered.

Pointing over to the right, Reggie smiled, "Some kids are going to the pool and diving well."

Angelo wondered, "Do you want to hang out there tonight?"

"When we're done here, I want to be alone with you," Reggie confessed. Taking the hint, Angelo moved closer and was soon wrapped in his boyfriend's arms. Angelo rested his head on Reggie's shoulders. After a few peaceful moments, Reggie whispered, "Can I tell you something?"

"Anything."

"We can and will be more social... tomorrow. Tonight, we're gonna dance, and we're gonna watch TV, and all the while we'll be chatting about everything and anything. Some of that's gonna be done naked, just 'cos we can. We'll play in the water blaster war, and then go back to our room. We're gonna talk, and cuddle, and make love, and talk about making love. Before we crash, we're going to know so much more than we do already. What we did alone before was too good to be true."

Angelo giggled, "Yeah, it was way too much fun."

Reggie asked, "If I said I'd like it if we stayed like that for another few days, what would you think?"

"You're scared of intercourse too?"

"That's only part of the reason," Reggie admitted, and then explained, "It's plenty for now, babe. You made me do something that I've never done before. If your hand could do that, and your mouth was even better, then what's the rush?"

"All true, but don't you feel like we have to try?"

"I do, very much, but I'm not going anywhere. I guess I want it to be special. Since this day is already very special, we don't need to make it better."

Angelo asked, "You'll tell me when you're ready to make another unique day?"

Squeezing Angelo tight, Reggie sighed, "I'm counting on it happening automatically and naturally, like this entire day has been. I'd like it to be two very unique days; the first day I'll be looking up into your eyes, and the next, you'll be looking up into mine."

Surprised and pulling his head off Reggie's shoulder, Angelo checked, "You want to go first?"

Reggie giggled, "Why are you shocked? I love you, Angelo. If we're gonna make us work, then I have to be all you'll ever need, all the time, so all of me is yours. I already know that you're who I'll be turning to for everything; whether that means to talk, or if it means bedroom playtime. You may be more than average, but you're closer to average than I am. Since I expect challenging first times with you, I can only imagine what you must be expecting." Because Angelo was only smiling at him, Reggie sniggered, "After I finished your portrait Sunday night, I was in the bathroom, putting out the fire."

Angelo began giggling. Reggie planted a tender kiss, and then teased, "You needed hand lotion, but thanks to foreskin, I only needed soap and water to clean up when I was done." Cracking up, Angelo flung himself against Reggie and muted his laughter. Reggie giggled, "I really do love you very much, Angelo. Everything that was impossible suddenly became possible today. Let's keep this day just as it has been. We can have plenty of fun for as long as we want, before going for intercourse."

"I'm all yours, Reg. Take me home."

Soft chuckling caused Angelo and Reggie to look over toward the sound. Leaning against the wall that separated the balcony from the staircase was another teenager, wearing the widest grin he could manage. "Sorry, but you two are just too cute," the teen boy chuckled. Mindful to not appear aggressive in any way, he slowly came around the corner, saying, "My name's Mathew Thornton, but call me Matt. My dad and I just moved here today. Dad's joining the housekeeping staff. We're over in condo B, seventh floor. Since the view from my bedroom was partially blocked by this building, I was only coming over to get the full picture."

He giggled at his own understatement, then offered, "Don't worry, I'm gay too, so it's kewl. It's more than kewl, really. There were two other guys, another couple, that I passed on the way up. They seemed a little younger, so I didn't stop. This clearly is the place for me to be. Being gay wasn't too kewl back in Kentucky. That's why my dad was searching for a job, and why we're here."

He paused again and blinked, "Am I talking too much? I always do, which is why my orientation became a tiny problem."

Separating from Reggie, Angelo reached to shake hands and introduced himself, and then introduced Reggie. Reggie also shook hands and greeted the new kid. Immediately, Angelo and Reggie took notice of Matt's southern United States accent, but hadn't heard those inflections before. Angelo noticed that Matt was taller than Reggie, but they both had the same large frame. Between Angelo and Reggie, they managed to explain that their parents were employees too, and that they had just met over the weekend, and hooked up that day, before Matt took over again.

"While I was unpacking, I occasionally peeked out the windows," Matt admitted, and then offered, "There seems to be more guys than girls here." All Angelo and Reggie did was nod, and Matt cheered, "SWEET!" He looked up, clasped his hands together and loudly prayed, "Dear Lord, just one cute guy about my age, please?" Angelo and Reggie giggled, and Matt continued, "I only want one, and I'll never cheat or nothin'. Fourteen, and if he's a ginger too, that would be really nice, but beggars can't be choosers, ya know, so just sayin', I've been good, and I promise to stay good; really, really good, if ya know what I mean. And thanks for the pretty sunset, and my dad's new job here, and tonight's dinner was primo, so thanks for teaching dad how to cook and not burn food. Amen and out." He unclasped his hands and brightly smiled at Angelo and Reggie. Soft giggling turned into triplicate loud laughter.

Angelo giggled, "Is your dad expecting you home soon, Matt?"

Matt shrugged, "Eventually, ya know, he knows where I said I was goin'. Why'd ya ask?"

"Your prayer has been answered," Angelo smiled. "Why don't you walk with us?"

Catching on to Angelo's plan, Reggie grinned, "As you heard, we were just about to go to our dorm room. We can show you around a little, and hopefully introduce you to two leaders. At least you can meet a few dudes."

"And you can get a comm-badge too," Angelo said. He pointed out, down and to the right, explaining, "That building is our dormitory."

Matt grinned, "I thought your folks worked here."

"They do," Angelo and Reggie chorused.

Gesturing to Angelo, Reggie sniggered, "We've been successfully avoiding each other for three days. Today, Angelo knocked at my door. This afternoon, we were scheming to find a place to be alone, away from my kid brother, and Angelo's little sister. Need I say more?"

Dropping to his knees, Matt clasped his hands, again praising the Almighty for everything in heaven and Earth, including the creation of Angelo and Reggie. He hopped up again, prompting, "Lead the way."

Walking with Reggie to the nearest staircase, Angelo grinned, "We'll introduce you, but the challenge is yours."

Following them down the steps, Matt wondered, "Challenge? What challenge?"

"Turning an acquaintance into a boyfriend," Reggie briefly answered.

"All we can do is shake our heads when we know someone is already spoken for," Angelo said.

Matt asked, "How many gay couples are here?"

Pausing at the next landing, Reggie looked up at Matt, still a few steps up and away. Reggie grinned, "What do you know about this division?"

Matt shrugged, "It's Clan Short, so that tells me its better than where I was."

Angelo and Reggie smiled at each other, and then started walking again, telling Matt about the leadership team, and that they referred to themselves as Core Rimmers, and the rest of the kids are Rimmers. They admitted that they had personally met five gay couples that one day, and the entire leadership team accounted for another seven couples. At a pause, while Matt was again praising the good Lord, Reggie tapped his comm-badge, calling, "Reggie to Jay, come in, please?"

A couple of seconds later, Jay and Chris simultaneously laughed, "PLEASE?"

In his Mr. Fuzzy squeaky voice, Jay sniggered, "Sorry, the number you have dialed is out of service. PUH-LEASE re-try your call, without the friggin' politeness."

Reggie chuckled, "We met a new kid, the son of a new employee, dude. Can you hook him up with a comm-badge and the necessities?"

"One Rimmer welcoming package, comin' up," Jay replied in his normal voice.

Chris sniggered, "Your welcoming package is waiting in your room, Reggie."

Angelo giggled, "Accept our Fuzzy thanks in advance."

"We'll meet you in our common room in five minutes," Reggie smiled.

Chris giggled, "Guess this means we need to get dressed, lover." Angelo, Reggie, Matt and even Jay cracked up. "Whoops!" Chris giggled, "Please insert another five credits to continue with this obscene call."

"OUT!" Jay howled.

Matt chuckled, "I'm not askin' what's in the welcoming package." Seesawing back and forth, Angelo and Reggie recalled the exact contents mentioned in the auditorium, driving Matt to hysterics. Not knowing any better, Matt thought it was all made up, just friendly banter. The truth was that Angelo and Reggie also thought they were kidding, and were simply repeating what they had been told.

Entering the quad, Matt's jaw dropped when Aki and Hajami were chased outside of dorm one by Stephen Wicks and Aaron Farris. All four had super-soakers and were in their underwear. The pre-cozy cuzzy fuzzy water blaster battle practice sessions were already beginning. Angelo and Reggie glanced over at Matt. Finding the newbie with wide eyes and his jaw dragging on the ground, Angelo and Reggie evilly snickered. Matt provocatively growled, "Those two older guys are too cute."

"We haven't met them," Reggie sniggered.

Angelo grinned, "There are three hundred kids here, and another hundred at Oneula Beach. Having parents, we initially felt out of place, but we haven't met a bad kid here all day. Once we introduce you to Jay and Chris, I expect all three of us will get introduced to some more kids."

From the direction of the CIC, another two boys were racing toward them. Brice Glotzbecker howled, "You cheat so bad, Nathan!"

Several meters in front of Brice, Nathan Hayes loudly giggled, "It's not my fault that your organic brain can't keep up with my positronics!" They ran directly for dormitory one and went inside.

Matt grinned at Angelo and Reggie. "We haven't met them either," Reggie cheekily smiled.

Looking up at the sky, Matt called, "Mamma, please don't call me home now."

Angelo checked, "Momma?"

Nodding, Matt briefly explained, "A bad car accident on an icy road, four years ago. Since then, it's been just me and dad."

Angelo sincerely apologized, "I'm sorry, Matt, I didn't know."

"It's been a long while," Matt explained, "and my dad is one of the best. He's always known which way I lean, and he has never been critical about it. He changed his life and career for me. Just to give you an example, when mamma passed, and I woke from a nightmare about the accident, he stayed the night with me in my bed. He knew about me, and didn't care about nothin', 'cept makin' it better the best he could. Now it's my turn to make things better for him. I'll find a nice boyfriend, someone he'll like too, and then he's gettin' booted out, to find a nice lady that I'll like. The hopes and dreams I had last week are materializing real nice. If it weren't for them stupid Romulans, we would o' been here Saturday. Everything's going to work out better now." Realizing they were heading toward a doorway, Matt asked, "This is home?"

Nodding, Reggie smiled, "The last room at the far end of the shorter hall, yeah."

"Room twenty-six," Angelo repeated what his parents told him.

"The scenic route," Matt happily chortled. "It's not like the walk hasn't been plenty scenic enough, mind you."

Pulling the outside door open, Angelo giggled, "You're gonna do fine around here, Matt."

"I sure hope so," Matt smiled. He stepped inside and paused to wait for Angelo and Reggie. Glancing around the area, Matt saw the stairs leading up to the second floor, and what appeared to be postal mail box units, like he would see at post offices in the United States. The mail box units were resting on the floor, by the stairs and out of the way, needing to be mounted on the walls. Installation was a task his dad would very likely help to accomplish.

In moments, they were walking beyond the inner door and into the hall. The first couple of room doors were closed, but they could see the TV on in the common room, and there were electric guitar sounds gushing from far down the hall. They passed a room where two little boys were seen on the floor playing video games. A little further down, near the lavatory, another two younger guys were watching TV. Quite unexpectedly, a really horrible note was played, and the guitar playing stopped, but loud laughter from multiple voices reverberated down the hall. Angelo, Reggie and Matt stopped at the last room and looked inside. Seeing Lance, Scott, Erik, Travis, Jay, Chris, Derrick and Mike inside the room, Angelo and Reggie raised their free hands.

Still sniggering, Scott waved them in the room, causing everyone else to look to the door. Standing before one of the two closets, with his Les Paul hanging from his shoulders, Lance was pretending to slam his head against the doors. Turning around, blushing red and still giggling, Lance lifted the guitar off his shoulders and handed it to Mike, prompting, "Once again, please." Looking over at Angelo, Reggie and the newbie teenaged boy, Lance giggled, "Great! All the new guys heard me blow chunks."

Everything paused while Angelo and Reggie introduced Matt Thornton. Jay continued introductions around the room. Since Reggie hadn't yet been formally introduced to Derrick and Mike, they also shook hands and knocked knuckles. Soon, Matt was the center of attention, repeating all that he had already shared with Angelo and Reggie. Hearing a familiar accent, Derrick wondered, "Where are you from, Matt?"

"Bowling Green, Kentucky, USA," Matt smiled.

Derrick asked, "Is that close to Louisville?"

Matt nodded, "About two hours south of, on I-65."

"Just what the doctor ordered!" Mike cheered. Causing the rest of the boys in the room to nod and chuckle.

"Careful, Lick," Derrick grinned, "Galli will pop in, TARDIS and all, and melt our brains again." Wobbling unsteadily, Mike groaned through his chortling. Chris and Derrick went to Matt.

Chris explained to Matt, "One of our brothers, from Louisville, has been in the dumps and grumps, because he learned both his little brothers found themselves boyfriends today."

Nodding, Derrick asked, "Could you try and help us out, Matt?"

Shrugging, Matt smiled, "I'll give it a shot."

Chris giggled, "Maybe by the time we get back, Lance and Scott will be able to play all of 'Flight Of Icarus'."

"It's a rough tune to play," Matt chuckled.

Realizing there was another guitar player in their midst, Mike smiled, "If Kassidy insists on being grumpy, come right back here again, Matt."

Nodding, Matt chuckled, "Sure thing."

Chris, Derrick and Matt walked out of the room and passed through the common room. Chris softly offered, "Kassidy is fourteen, like us, and has two little brothers, eleven-year-old twins. Kade is getting close to Brad Triggs. Karey is building bonds with Reggie's little bro, Cameron."

"In the meantime," Derrick smirked, "Kassidy is stumped, wondering how both his younger brothers managed what he hasn't. He's a real nice guy and mixes in easily with every group, but he's just a little down tonight. All Kassidy needs is an ego boost, and someone detached to get him off the ground."

Beginning to think of what he might say, Matt wondered, "Is he gay?"

Chris shrugged, "I'm not sure. At dinner, he had a bunch of guys from this dorm sitting with him. I've seen him chatting with girls too, before today, but that's not proof of much, besides being social."

Pausing at the Oldcambus brothers' room, Derrick checked, "Ready, dude?"

Matt nodded, "This will be simple, unless he decides otherwise."

Chris knocked on the door. In moments, the door swung open. Soft country music drifted out into the hall. Dressed as he was at dinner, only now barefoot, Kassidy forced a small grin, asking, "How's it goin', bros?"

Derrick gestured to Matt, introduced him and added that Matt was from the same state. "We thought maybe a dude with the same background might help you feel better," Derrick sincerely tried.

"Damned kids," Kassidy smirked, "I turned my back on 'em for ten minutes, and two hours later they come runnin' to me, braggin' about boyfriends."

Chris had been watching Matt closely. He hadn't blinked once. Chris and Derrick didn't know that Matt had prayed for a ginger haired boyfriend soon after meeting Angelo and Reggie. Kassidy had strawberry blond hair, gray eyes and a medium build that momentarily stopped Matt's heart. Concentrating on Kassidy's reactions, Derrick felt invisible for the first time in a long while. Chris could tell Matt was attracted and fought back the urge to grin. Raising an open palm, Matt cleared his throat and offered, "If you wanna talk, I'll listen?"

Nodding, Kassidy grinned, "Lets talk about anything but brothers."

"Since I don't have any brothers or sisters, that's not a problem,"

Matt chortled.

"Come on in," Kassidy prompted, and stepped aside.

Walking between Chris and Derrick, Matt went inside the room, past Kassidy and turned around to raise a hand to Chris and Derrick.

"We'll catch y'all later," Kassidy said, and closed the door before Chris or Derrick could say a word.

Blinking uncertainly, Chris and Derrick went back down the hall. After only a few steps, Chris softly giggled, "Did you feel that?"

Derrick nodded and chortled, "Kassidy looked at only Matt, like we weren't even there. Matt was every bit as spellbound."

Chris laughed, "Talk about your turnarounds! Kassidy should've just said, thanks for the hunky hottie, dudes. You're dismissed."

Nodding and cracking up, Derrick and Chris raced back to Lance's and Scott's room to share what had happened.

Once the door closed, Kassidy turned to Matt, smiling, "We've got trikes and a huge area to ride them, right here on base."

"Sweet!" Matt chuckled, "My dad and I had dirt bikes that we sold before coming here."

Gesturing to the stereo in the room, Kassidy wondered, "Do you like music?"

Nodding, Matt answered, "Dad plays bluegrass banjo, mandolin and acoustic guitar. I started on acoustic guitar and got an electric two years ago. Country rock and southern rock are my favorites though. That's why dad chose to work here, instead of other US Clan divisions, so I could go to school here." He paused and then seriously said, "I have a question for you."

"Ask away."

"Do you believe in miracles?"

Widely smiling and nodding, Kassidy replied, "A few days ago, I probably would've said no. My parents and an aunt and uncle were killed during Battle Of Earth."

Matt groaned, "I'm sorry. I know what that feels like, because my mamma died a couple o' years ago. It's just been me and dad since then."

Taking a few steps closer to Matt, Kassidy softly said, "Miracles ain't like magic tricks, but sometimes things happen that are just too good to be true. It started hours after I lost my parents, and it's continuing, right to this very moment. A bunch of really kewl kids took the sting out of the loss. The first time someone says, 'it'll be all right,' you don't really believe it might happen, but I can say that it does, and it has. For four days, I've been doing some major soul searching, knowing I couldn't only be a big brother, but not being able to tell myself what I really want. I think I've found my answer. That's another miracle I didn't expect."

"I think you're right," Matt smiled. "All I did was decide to take a walk to see my new home. Climbing the steps at condo A, I passed two younger kids that were hugging and kept climbing. That's when I met Angelo and Reggie, hugging and sweet talkin' at the tenth floor balcony. They brought me here, where I saw two more miracles before we even stepped inside. Then I heard Lance and Scott playing electric guitar. Now I'm up to six miracles in about half an hour."

"What're we gonna do about these miracles?"

Reaching his hand out and having Kassidy take it, Matt answered, "Be glad for what we've been given."

Chapter 25

Ewa Beach, Dormitory 3

Tuesday, November 9, 2004 7:47PM HTZ

Kassidy gently held Matt's hand, softly confessing, "Even before losing my folks, I was starting to feel like I needed someone really special. Since Friday, it's like, I haven't stopped hoping and looking for that person. Part of me wonders if it's grief that's making me feel the way I do?"

"Only partly," Matt offered, "that's life. We're old enough to feel that way, so it's natural, a part of growing up."

"So it's not only one situation, it's all of 'em combining?"

"Yeah, I think so."

Widely smiling, Kassidy chortled, "I don't want anything interfering with what I'm thinking and feeling. One something to think about is all I can handle."

Curious to know exactly what Kassidy was saying, Matt prodded, "Give me an example of what you're thinking."

"The whole string of events since we went on vacation, and more so since last Friday," Kassidy explained. "You must know it too. Back home in Kentucky, there were gays and lesbians, but they weren't talked about; they were the dirty little secret kept hidden. Even though I never had a boyfriend, or any quick flings to try it out, I always hated that attitude. While visiting Los Angeles, they weren't hidden and sure didn't keep much secret. To me, seeing two dudes holding hands, huggin' or kissin' was just as cute as any straight couple. Then, after the accident, I started meeting some of the Clan guys. They're some of the nicest people I've ever met. They make it real obvious that some folks back home didn't take the time to know what people were really like."

Nodding, Matt confessed, "That's why dad took the job here. I was one of those dirty little secrets, and he hated it more than I did."

Kassidy asked, "How do you know you're gay?"

Matt chuckled, "The best lookin', nicest folks are other guys. It's always been that way for me. There's never been any other way to be. Think of it like shopping for clothes; what fits and what's comfortable is what you walk out with."

Kassidy sniggered, "If the sneaker fits..."

"Or jeans versus slacks, or polo shirts versus dress shirts and ties," Matt smiled.

"Like warm weather versus cold weather."

"Warmer is always better," Matt smiled. "Daddy says, the only good part of winter is snuggling up with someone to get warm. I can't wait to find out if that's true."

With a purpose in mind, Kassidy grinned, "It's always warm here. It rained Saturday night and was below seventy degrees Sunday morning. Almost everyone here was shivering, except me and my brothers." Knowing he was about to step out on a limb, he paused and then giggled, "We'll have to make an excuse to snuggle under a blanket sometime."

Matt's smile waned. He softly said, "I think you're awesome, Kassidy, but I would like to get to know you really well, before we start snuggling."

Beaming, Kassidy shared, "That's exactly what I hoped you'd say. When you mentioned snuggling, that's where I thought you wanted me to go. Sharing how you really feel, even though we've just met, is really important to me, Matt. I don't want quick flings or meaningless sex. What I do want is someone that knows it takes time, caring, and the willingness to make something good last. I think you're awesome too; my miracle man."

Chuckling insanely with relief, Matt dropped to one knee and prayed, "Good Lord, thank you so much for giving me an awesome boyfriend. Help us both to make it as life long partners, so our favorite place to be is together. One thing you'll need to help with though, is keeping our teenage hormones under control."

Standing there with Matt's hand still in his, and Matt looking like he was proposing marriage, Kassidy looked up at the ceiling, and added to the prayer. "God, you gave me the perfect boyfriend, when I needed it most, when I thought there was no one for me. Do us both a favor and help us become a really close couple, like Prez and Keith, Derrick and Mike, and Chris and Jay."

Standing up, Matt smiled, "You believe in prayer?"

Nodding, Kassidy admitted, "For a few days there, I wondered if it did any good. I guess I just got a busy signal."

"That's a real good way of lookin' at it," Matt chuckled. "I think we got another answer to our prayers too." When Kassidy curiously blinked and tilted his head, Matt giggled, "Somebody's telling me that we've spent enough time here in your bedroom. We're doin' a good job of ignoring temptation, but we're only human."

Heartily giggling, Kassidy revealed, "We never should've mentioned snuggling. I know it too, but I wanted to know where you heading, short term and long term."

Loving that Kassidy was being so truthful, Matt smiled, "I'll go anywhere with you. Show me around this base, please?"

Going to slip into his sandals, Kassidy asked, "What haven't you seen yet?" He then returned to Matt and took his hand again.

"Just about everything," Matt answered, "I got here about two this afternoon. While unpacking, I glanced out the windows of my bedroom." Kassidy led the way out of the room.

Closing and locking his door, Kassidy asked, "Where's your new home?"

"Condo B, unit 7-B," Matt quickly rattled off. And then, while he and Kassidy walked down the hall toward the exit, he explained, "Dad got the best view he could, two floors higher than what was initially offered to us. I've seen buildings and lots o' kids, but don't know much of anything, or anyone."

Kassidy checked, "Since Chris and Derrick brought you to meet me, I guess you met their partners too?"

Nodding, Matt rambled, "Chris is with Jay, Derrick is with Mike, Erik is with Travis, Angelo is with Reggie, and Lance is with Scott. That's everybody I've met. In one night I've met more gay couples than I ever have before. I can't recall most last names though."

Kassidy chuckled, "I know a lot more, but haven't met anyone named Angelo or Reggie."

Stopping short before heading out the door, Matt muttered, "They said they had the last room in this hall." He walked back a few paces, and then knocked on the door to room twenty-six. It took a few moments, but the door opened. Only one bed stand light was on in the room, and soft instrumental music was playing. Standing there shirtless and in a tight embrace were Angelo and Reggie. Matt chuckled, "I'm sorry, guys. You're probably the only two I know that Kassidy doesn't, so I only wanted to introduce my boyfriend to you." He then formally introduced, "Kassidy, the blushing blond is Reggie Combs, and the brunette is Angelo Diaz."

Reaching an arm out to Kassidy, Angelo giggled, "We're learning to slow dance together. It's good to meet you, Kassidy." Angelo and Kassidy shook hands and knocked knuckles.

Recalling Matt's prayer, Reggie offered a hand to shake with Kassidy, said, "Hi," and then asked Matt, "another prayer was answered?"

Nodding, Matt chuckled, "Before falling for temptations, we decided to go for a walk."

Curiously blinking, Reggie repeated, "Temptations?"

Matt sniggered, "Three beds, and alone with a real cutie."

"And no little brothers," Kassidy grinned.

Angelo giggled, "You'll have to let us know how successfully you avoided temptation. I gave up after about two hours and willingly threw myself into the fire." Kassidy and Matt cracked up.

Blushing more, Reggie sniggered, "You're being bad, babe. It was more like two and a half hours."

"No," Angelo giggled, "if I were bad, we sure wouldn't be dancing!" Softly sniggering, Reggie planted a deep kiss on Angelo before anything more embarrassing was said.

Turning to Kassidy, and again seeing the same soft smile, Matt grinned, "More temptations?"

"I'll say!" Kassidy giggled.

Matt smiled, "Get back to dancing, guys. We'll catch y'all later."

Angelo reminded, "Don't forget the cozy cuzzy fuzzy water blaster battle at nine o'clock, dudes."

"The what?" Matt incredulously chortled.

Rolling his eyes, Kassidy loudly laughed, "Temptations!" and then waved, leading Matt to the exit doors.

Rapidly blinking, Matt wondered, "What kind of water blaster battle?"

Opening up the outer door and leading the way outside, Kassidy giggled, "You met Jay. I'm surprised he didn't give you a Mr. Fuzzy puppet." Kassidy led the way down the path that would take them between the pool and soccer field.

"He was supposed to," Matt admitted, "but helping you was higher priority to all those guys."

Suddenly, everything said since they met organized in Kassidy's head. Matt wasn't even on base half a day, and he happened to meet Angelo and Reggie, who brought Matt to the dormitory to meet Jay and Chris. The plans got side-tracked when Chris and Derrick brought Matt to meet him. Kassidy stopped walking, causing Matt to pause. Kassidy carefully wondered, "What were you told about me?"

"That we're from the same State, and that you were feeling a little down," Matt answered. "They couldn't even say if you were gay or not, but I figured, even if you weren't, I could spend a few minutes and maybe gain another new friend."

Kassidy beamed, "You put other plans aside just to meet me?"

Matt shrugged and smiled, "They weren't like the biggest, most important plans in the world. I'm the new guy, tryin' to meet folks, figure out where I am and how I can fit in. You made the change worthwhile, Kass. You might've decided to stay down in the dumps, no matter what I said." Noticing Kassidy wiping his eyes, Matt worried, "What's wrong?"

Kassidy muttered, "They were all concerned about me, so you just went with that?"

Nodding, Matt giggled, "Well, that was another idea and plan running amuck, and the good Lord intervening at the right time for you and for me. I sure didn't expect to find the boyfriend of my dreams standing in the room." Matt reached his hand out and Kassidy took it in his hand.

Turning left to walk between the main pool and rec center, Kassidy giggled, "Don't exaggerate."

"I'm really not exaggerating at all," Matt gushed. "Ask Angelo and Reggie who I was praying for soon after I met them. The entire Holy Trinity must've listened, because you're everything I prayed for, and then some."

Thankful they were outside in the dark, where his blush couldn't be seen, Kassidy softly said, "You're exactly the kind of guy I was wishing for too; I couldn't have molded a better boyfriend if I tried."

Matt grinned, "Admit it, you were bummed about your brothers finding boyfriends before you."

Rapidly nodding, Kassidy giggled, "And that I was obviously doing stuff wrong."

"It might've been wrong for everyone else, but everything you've said and done is perfect for me. I'm seriously attracted to you, Kass. I made a deal with the good Lord, and since he kept his end, I'm keeping my end of the bargain. I'm gonna do good by you, everyday and every chance I get. Dad told me that he and mammy always helped each other; like if one was a little down, the other would haul them back up again; if one needed help, the other was always willing. That's the way I'd like us to be."

Kassidy was about to tell Matt that he was equally attracted, and with two annoying little brothers, he had a high tolerance for daily aggravation. Giggling voices caused him to pause and squint in the darkness.

From over by the townhouses, Kade loudly teased, "All that gum flappin'!"

Karey joked, "It's teenagers, tryin' to be kewl, instead of admittin' they really wanna roll in the haystack!"

Frantically nodding their heads, Brad Triggs and Cameron Combs cracked up.

Sighing, Kassidy mumbled, "They just can't keep from bustin' my hump."

Matt sniggered, "The two red-heads are your brothers?"

Painfully and reluctantly, Kassidy droned, "Yup."

"The other two are their boyfriends?"

"Gross but true," Kassidy smirked.

Matt whispered, "We could catch 'em."

Shaking his head, Kassidy sighed, "My brothers are telepaths. If they didn't catch you saying that, they caught me hearing it." Already, the four younger boys were separating so they could bolt if necessary. Kassidy pointed them out to Matt, and then softly suggested, "Let's get on with the tour." Matt nodded and they started walking.

"Hey bro," Kade hollered, "Brad's spending the night with me in our room."

"And I'm staying the night with Cameron at the Combs' house," Karey shouted.

Releasing Kassidy's hand, Matt spun around and yelled, "Kassidy's with me at our condo. Betchya we have a much better time than any of y'all!" Kade and Karey cracked up. Matt spun around again, took Kassidy's hand in his, and they started walking again.

"Why did you tell them that?" Kassidy giggled.

Matt squeezed Kassidy's hand and smiled, "Because, you don't want to be in the same room with two little kids playing little kid games, and I want to introduce you to my dad anyway. We'll just make a quick stop at your dorm room, so you can pickup whatever you need to spend the night. Brother or not, no telepath is going to read your dreams. You get to tell me about them, the normal way, when we wake up."

Happy shivers raced through Kassidy that pushed him past giggles and into laughter. Softly chortling, Matt drifted dreamily through the sound of his new boyfriend's heavenly laugh. He was taken completely off guard when Kassidy pulled him close and hugged him tightly. Hanging out at the tables near the diving well, many of the teen dorm leadership team and their partners saw Kassidy with a new kid. Matt held his left arm behind Kassidy's back and ran the fingers of his right hand through the thick mop of red hair he had prayed for. As Kassidy's laughter quieted, he locked eyes with Matt.

"I've never felt happier than I am right now," Matt softly admitted. "This is a peaceful feeling that I never expected. Somehow, I always thought I'd jump for joy and completely spaz out. Instead, I feel more calm and content, like the search is over and I can chill out, at last."

Kassidy sighed, "You make me feel great too. All those thoughts and worries I had the last couple of days are gone."

"You shared 'em, with me, and realized they ain't half as bad as you thought. This is only the start too, Kass. I promise, we'll always be the best parts of each other, from now on."

"Oh man," Kassidy groaned. "You feel so good in my arms too." Once again, Kassidy softly smiled. He whispered, "Maybe we've been together less than an hour, but there aren't any fears about being with you, a virtual stranger. This is so kewl, like it should be, but it shouldn't be, because we've only known one another a short time. Weird, but awesome at the same time too."

Matt assured, "The feeling's very mutual, my ginger boy," and sealed it with a tender kiss.

Kassidy liked it so much, he didn't give Matt a chance to pull back for reaction before returning another tender kiss. Since their arms effortlessly moved into position to hold one another, Matt gave up and held the kiss. Another of Matt's dreams became reality. Kassidy hadn't fantasized of kissing another guy and was therefore dreamily purring into Matt's mouth. As moments passed, Kassidy realized how they were standing; one of his legs was between Matt's legs, and one of Matt's legs was between his legs. Kassidy could also feel Matt's package through four layers of cloth. He thought, so this is what it's like to take a step toward intimacy with another guy; kewl! A blissful, euphoric feeling surged within them.

The nearby girls began giggling and the boys applauded, causing Kassidy and Matt to break out of their trance. Realizing they had inadvertently put on a show for other teenagers, they uncontrollably giggled into their kiss. They rested, forehead-to-forehead, knowing that something needed to be said, since the innocent and shy boy act was completely blown away.

Kassidy chortled, "Let me introduce you to some folks."

"Lead the way," Matt beamed.

In the area around the diving well there were twelve patio tables for four, and nine of them were occupied, each with at least two kids. Realizing there were about thirty kids to introduce Matt to, Kassidy began laughing again. He pulled himself together and loudly chuckled, "There's a bunch of y'all out here tonight, so this is gonna take a while. Everybody, this is Matt Thornton. He just moved here today with his dad."

"So naturally, you had to check his tonsils," Nell giggled.

Pete Dano sniggered, "There might've been dangerous explosives down there." All the kids lost it and howled laughing when Kassidy's complexion swiftly matched his hair color.

Sadly shaking his head and wishing for a stronger sea breeze to cool off his blush, Kassidy giggled, "Matt, this is Nell, a dorm leader, and beside her is her boyfriend, Pete. Across from them are Molly and Roy; Molly's a dorm leader too."

Roy asked, "What's your dad's job here, Matt?"

"Housekeeping and maintenance in the boys' dorms," Matt answered. "His primary motivation was me though, so I could go to school here. I play guitar, and hope to get better."

"So Kass was searching for your instrument?" Pete teased. More giggling and evil snickering erupted.

Locking eyes with Kassidy, Matt chuckled, "I already promised to show him my instrument... later." Loud mooing broke free, the loudest was from Kassidy though.

Since Kassidy had clearly lost control of introductions, kids began introducing themselves, starting with Horacio and Sonia. Kassidy and Matt moved around between tables to greet Craig, Felicity, Phil, Owen, Neil, Tad, Carter, Doug, Relud, Inoyra, Susana, Jesse, Adrienne, Bianca, Corbin, Dominic, Heather, Robyn, Mike and Terry.

When the introductions were done, the boys at the tables realized it was twenty of nine. It was time to get ready for the planned cozy cuzzy fuzzy water blaster battle. Neil asked Kassidy and Matt, "Are you dudes going to play?"

Having already participated the prior night, Kassidy smiled, "It's up to Matt."

"There is a dress code," Phil giggled, "or rather, an undressed code."

Evilly grinning, Craig reminded, "They qualify for Mr. Fuzzy G-strings too." He then told Kassidy and Matt, "You'll need to call Alden for your G-strings and water blasters."

Rapidly blinking and widely grinning, Matt checked with Kassidy, "An undressed code, G-strings and water blasters?"

"It's a long story," Kassidy cheekily grinned, setting off all the others at the tables with overlapping remarks.

At a break in the silliness, Owen explained, "Some of the dudes in the long hall of dorm three soaked Craig last night. To get them back, everybody awake in the short hall chased them outside, wearing only their Mr. Fuzzy G-strings."

"There's a video of it too," Felicity giggled, and turned to wickedly smirk at Craig. Most of her questions regarding Craig's physique were answered that morning, from a TV screen in the CIC dining room, where every other straight teen girl could see plenty.

Robyn hollered, "Hey, Alden!"

From the pool house speakers, Alden replied, "Yes, Robyn?"

Robyn blushed and giggled, "Capture video of tonight's battle, and concentrate on Kassidy and Matt. Pipe it to the big TVs in all the girls' common rooms." The jaws of the gay boys dropped. Kassidy and Matt glowed red. All the girls and the straight boys cracked up.

Alden giggled, "I expect five or six times as many battle warriors, but with eight cameras outside the quad, I'll do my best."

Kassidy laughed, "I think I'd rather meet Matt's dad."

"We can do that and this too," Matt chuckled. At Kassidy's curious expression, Matt explained, "At least one of your brothers is in your dorm room. Where else could we get changed?"

Gesturing to the pool house, Kassidy smiled, "That's all that's for, is showering, changing clothes, restrooms, and there's saunas too."

Slowly glancing from Kassidy's hair to his feet, Matt leered, "Saunas too, huh?" Widening his eyes, Kassidy blushed and giggled at his new boyfriend. All the gathered kids cracked up, and stood to leave for their respective destinations. Matt took Kassidy's hand and started back toward the condos. Once they were alone, Matt asked, "After the water blaster battle, how about we get warm in the sauna?"

"You're falling for temptations," Kassidy giggled.

Matt grinned, "We're sleeping together tonight, Kass. During the summers back home, skivvies is the most I've worn to bed in years."

"Me too," Kassidy smiled.

"We're gonna go slow," Matt assured, "but expecting one hundred percent control of our hormones all the time isn't very realistic."

"I already like what I see," Kassidy carefully explained. "I don't need to see you nude to know I'll like that too."

"That's the point," Matt smiled. "You obviously played last night. Tonight's only slightly different for you, and it's turning into one incredible first night at my new home for me. I expected things would be way more fun here, but this night has been awesome in ways I never expected. Everything we've done so far shows me parts of you, and vise-versa. Seeing you blushing before was great for me. If I knew these kids better, maybe I would've blushed more than I did. Now I get to introduce you to my dad, and tell him that I've already met a lot of kids. That'll make his day, probably more than it's made mine. Let's keep it going, until we're both too tired to stay awake."

Widely smiling, Kassidy warned, "We'll be awake most of the night."

"Kewl," Matt cheered. "I've seen three in the morning a couple o' times before. Don't know if I can manage it tonight."

"We could get tours of both bases completed."

"Let's save that for daylight," Matt suggested. Seeing Kassidy brightly smiling, Matt giggled, "You're way more important. I'll see the other base in a couple o' minutes, if only from the outside and at night. You'll see my new home, and we'll see the inside of a sauna later too."

Kassidy chortled, "I'm so not used to this."

"What're you not used to?" Matt wondered.

"The way you're treating me," Kassidy smiled. "With two younger brothers, and a younger cousin, it's been a long time since anyone acted like I mattered."

Coming to an abrupt halt before walking inside the condominium, Matt smiled, "You sure do matter. I've wanted a boyfriend all my life. Even when I was little, my best friends were my boyfriends, and I specifically called them that. You can imagine how I was treated when I got to be about ten and still insisted I had boyfriends."

"Rough, huh?"

Matt shrugged, "Mammy and daddy have always been very kewl about it, but just about everybody else, not so much. I had two things going for me; first is, I've always been one of the tallest in my class, and second, dad got me into exercising. Few people chanced mocking me, but every school year since sixth grade, I've had to prove that gay does not mean pussy, at least once a year. That's why I'm here, Kass; I'm gay, proud of it, but I'd have to hurt guys that I'd much rather hug the stuffing out of. Nobody ever wins a fight, but afterwards, I'd be leaking tears because I hurt them, even though I had no other choice, it just sucked."

Much more enthusiastically, Matt cheered, "Hell yeah, I care about you, and I'll care more tomorrow. For over a week I've been dreaming of moving here, and the best part is, the reality is far better than even my best dreams. Everybody is very kewl, and I'm already making some friends. I can't wait to tell my dad what's been happening since I left the apartment."

Stepping closer, Kassidy wrapped his arms around Matt's waist, softly saying, "I'm sorry it was so difficult, Matt. I can easily picture you doing what you had to, and then being destroyed inside about it. It really is very different here. Of all those kids at the diving well, about half are gay, and they were sitting together; being teen couples in love matters more than who you love here. It's really gonna be so much better for us here, as a couple, I mean."

Brightly smiling, Matt nodded, "I know, Kass. Our days as single and available are over."

"Yeah, it's true," Kassidy gleefully giggled.

"Let me introduce you to my dad," Matt prompted. They went inside condo B, down to the end of the hall, and into the elevator. Matt pressed the button for the seventh floor, warning, "This thing is jet propelled, so hold on." He expected Kassidy to hold the railing in the elevator. When the door closed, Kassidy slid behind Matt and wrapped him up tight. Matt roared laughing, "That works for me!"

"It's working really good for me too!" Kassidy cackled. "I can't wait to see what's under that shirt, hunky bear. If your arms and what I can feel of your belly are clues, I'm gonna crash to the floor."

"Fifty pushups and fifty sit-ups every morning," Matt giggled.

Feeling more than his temperature rising, Kassidy whimpered, "Temptations."

Turning in Kassidy's arms, Matt beamed, "The feeling is very mutual. Everything I see is exactly what I've always hoped for." He leaned in for a kiss that neither of them wanted to ever end. The elevator stopped, the chime rang and the door slid open. Holding the kiss and each other, Matt waddled backwards out of the elevator with Kassidy still attached. Being unfamiliar with the hall, he waddled well past his own apartment door before stopping.

The kiss broke, but before going to the door, Kassidy asked, "What's your dad like?"

"The best," Matt cheered. "You called me hunky bear before. Well, I'm the teen version of dad. He's six-one and about two hundred pounds. He was a running back for KSU, back in the day, as the old folks say. He's also ninety-nine percent heart. Dad gave up an engineering career for me, so he could be a housekeeper and maintenance guy here."

Kassidy grinned, "What's he gonna say when he sees me?"

Matt chuckled, "You're safe, Kass. I'll be bearing the brunt of all his jokes, and lovin' it too, guaranteed." He then checked, "Ready?"

"Ready," Kassidy confirmed.

Matt led the way to his apartment door, put his hand on the security plate and stated his full name. The lock disengaged with a click, and Matt turned the knob. He and Kassidy stepped inside to find Mr. Thornton on the living room sofa and watching TV. Jeremiah Thornton turned to his son. Seeing Kassidy, a wide grin split Jeremiah's face, and he locked eyes with Matt. Unable to control himself, Matt chuckled, "Dad, this is Kassidy Oldcambus, originally from Louisville. He's my boyfriend."

The old man didn't even try to hold back and loudly laughed, stood and went to the boys. Jeremiah first shook hands with Kassidy, and then pulled both boys against him, roaring, "You're not gone a whole two hours, Matt. Granted, that's longer than it might take to check out the view, like you said you were doin', but you obviously did a lot more."

Matt giggled, "That's how it all started. At the other condo, I met a gay couple sweet talkin' on the tenth floor balcony. They took me to their dorm, where I met a couple more guys, got a comm-badge, and then met Kassidy. We started walking around, checking out the base, and Kass introduced me to a bunch of other kids. If I had to guess, I'd reckon I met about forty kids already."

"You're making me happy and very proud," Jeremiah cheered. He released the boys and stepped back, prodding, "Since it's early, I know you have better things to do than stick around here. What's on the agenda?"

"A water blaster war at the other base," Matt sniggered.

Jeremiah gushed, "A water blaster war sounds like fun. Don't let me slow you down. I'm still on Kentucky time, so don't be surprised if I'm already asleep when you get back. Or is that too much to assume? Are you sleeping here?"

"We're both sleeping here tonight," Matt giggled and blushed.

Jeremiah looked up at the ceiling, sighing, "Don't give me no lip, Lord. I taught him the best I could."

Blushing bright red, Kassidy and Matt cheered, "TEMPTATIONS!"

"Gotta love 'em," Matt added.

Jeremiah asked, "How old are you, Kassidy?"

"I'm fourteen, born March thirtieth, 1990, Sir."

Matt smiled, "You're four months older than me. I was hatched August seventh."

Meandering back to the sofa, Jeremiah muttered, "I remember fourteen very well." He sat down and softly recited, "The Lord is my shepherd, I shall not want. He maketh me to lie down in green pastures; he leadeth me beside the still waters. He restoreth my soul..." Thinking, like father, like son, Kassidy turned to the door, covered his mouth with both hands, and quietly cracked up.

"Dad!" Matt laughed, "I already made my promises to God, the Lord, and to Kassidy. It's our first night, and it's already been awesome. How much more do we need to add to that?"

Spinning around, Kassidy giggled, "Sharing a bed together is an awful lot. I'm scared and anxious about it, so I know Matt has to feel a little of that too."

Nodding, Matt assured Kassidy, "I sure do. Not to mention, tomorrow's dad's first day of work at a new job. We're not gonna chance interrupting his sleep." Grabbing Kassidy's hand and starting for his bedroom, Matt giggled, "But after dad's gone in the morning, we know exactly how to greet the rising Sun." Unable to cover his mouth in time, Kassidy roared laughing.

On the sofa, Jeremiah picked up where he left off in the 23rd Psalm.

Behind the closed bedroom door, Matt and Kassidy slammed against each other and digressed into shoulder muffled hysterics. When they started to calm down, Kassidy giggled, "Were you serious about those promises?"

Pulling back to look into Kassidy's gray eyes, Matt smiled, "Completely serious. I'm not gonna screw up the best day ever because of hormones. Hugs and kisses are perfect for me, and you're an awesome kisser too. We have plans for now, later tonight, and tomorrow's another day." Stepping back and releasing Kassidy, Matt pulled his shirt up and off. Kassidy's eyes widened and he gasped. Tossing his shirt onto his bed, Matt giggled, "You like?"

Kassidy leered, "You're a rock, Matt. Sit-ups and pushups did that?"

Nodding and giggling, Matt reminded, "We need Mr. Fuzzy G-strings, and it's your turn." Snapping out of his trance, Kassidy blinked and pulled his T-shirt up and off. "Nice!" Matt cheered, "Exactly what I pictured, wide shoulders, trim waist and a couple of freckles scattered around creamy skin. I like too, very much."

Intensely blushing, Kassidy giggled, "If we finish changing in front of each other, there's going to be at least one large problem, and more temptation than I've ever successfully ignored."

"Because of two large problems, I was plannin' on changin' in the bathroom," Matt cackled.

"Good plan!" Kassidy laughed. He then looked up and called, "Alden, say hello to Matt and get us Mr. Fuzzy G-strings."

"Hi Matt," Alden giggled, and then transported two Mr. Fuzzy G-strings onto the bed, sharing, "Chocolate chip cookies and brownies are still more popular in the Clan, but only just barely."

Sniggering, Kassidy and Matt went to the bed. Picking up a skimpy G-string and figuring out how he would need to put it on, Matt howled laughing, "Who's bright idea was this?"

Kassidy giggled, "Jay's mostly, from what I've been told."

"It's true," Alden giggled. "A silly conversation with Chris, Erik, Travis, Lance and Scott, led to the idea."

Seeing Matt wordlessly checking with him for an explanation, Kassidy grinned, "Alden's an AI, and will be a real guy, in an android body soon enough. He's kewl, Matt." Pointing up at the small camera in the corner of the room, Kassidy explained, "Alden and his brothers keep an eye on all the kids at every Clan Division. Any questions you have about anything goin' on here, Alden can answer."

"You know, fuzzy G-strings are getting to be more popular than jokes about our blond leaders!" Kerry giggled as he joined in. "Good thing too, since blond's my color!"

Alden giggled, "We knew you were blond the minute you came online, little brother!"

"Bite me, surf-boy!" Kerry shot back.

A large dog padded into the room through the far wall, as if he did it every day, growling something that sounded suspiciously like "Be good kids, or I'll sic your Grandpas on you!" He then sat and stared at the nearest speaker.

"Sorry, Slider," both AIs quickly and meekly replied.

The dog, obviously named Slider, barked "I thought so," before turning and trotting through the opposite wall, which lead to the patio.

Matt gasped, "Did you see and hear that?"

Nodding, Kassidy sniggered, "I wasn't here more'n a couple o' hours when floating arms dumped Welsh cakes onto a tray. I guess you figured out we can understand dogs, but we can understand birds, cats and squirrels too. By the way, did you see any of the G-Cats or security gorillas yet?" Matt vigorously shook his head. Kassidy smiled, "There are a lot of amazing things that go on here. Love at first sight, and teasing from regular kids, and wearing fuzzy G-strings are all normal, compared to some other stuff around these parts. You'll get used to it."

"Or develop an addiction to Valium, like many of the adults," Alden giggled.

Going to Matt and wrapping him in a hug, Kassidy loudly laughed, "You're not helping, Alden! I like my boyfriend just as he is! He's starting to turn pale!" Concentrating on his boyfriend, Kassidy gently prompted, "Breathe with me, hunky bear. It'll all seem very normal in a day or two. I love you and need you."

Regaining his ability speak, Matt huffed, "I thought I'd seen it all. Talking dogs walking through walls, gorillas, and what the heck is a G-Cat? I mean, gay guys sweet talkin' and goofin' around everywhere I looked, stuff that I'd never seen back home." After a brief pause,

Matt grinned, "Did you just say you love and need me?"

"There you are, back with me again!" Kassidy giggled. "Yeah, I said it and meant every word."

Matt moaned, "Oh man, you feel so awesome against me too, bare chest to bare chest, like this. A substantial amount of time is going to be spent this way."

Kassidy smiled, "Kiss me, hunky bear." Matt did as he was told, silently praising the good Lord for allowing Kassidy to speak his feelings, and for being the one he'd been searching for. When the kiss broke, Kassidy softly prompted, "Let's finish getting changed. We're already late for the water blaster battle."

Taking a half step back, Matt smiled, "Do you want me to change in here with you?"

Nodding, Kassidy giggled, "Yeah. I like your idea of saving the best parts till later though. To reduce temptations, let's turn away from each other, so we don't see." Matt took another step back and then turned towards his bedroom door. Also turning around, Kassidy began untying his board shorts and called, "Alden, get my water blasters and get two for Matt, please?"

Alden giggled, "Um... your water blasters are being used by Kade and Brad."

"It figures," Kassidy grumbled, and then ordered, "Dunk 'em both, Alden, and get us water blasters."

Matt chortled, "Dunk 'em?"

"In the diving well, for not asking if they could use my water blasters," Kassidy grinned. "That's another thing you'll learn about, Core Rimmer and dorm leader initiations are dunks at the diving well. It also works for bratty little brothers."

Delivering the four fully loaded water blasters, Alden giggled, "Kade thinks it was Karey that ordered the dunk. What should I do when they figure out it was you, Kassidy?"

"Save it for after the water blaster battle," Kassidy giggled. "A cool down before bedtime will be appreciated, I think."

"Most definitely, sexy cinnamon stick," Matt sniggered. He pulled up the G-string, smirking at the cotton cloth and single elastic rimmed port that he was obviously meant to stick his dick and nuts in. He figured that getting into it was far less of a problem than getting out of it again would be. Even if he was careful, a couple of pubes were certain to get caught in the elastic.

"We need to have a semi-serious chat after the battle," Kassidy warned.

"I know it," Matt chuckled. "This idea of not seeing what we both know we'll eventually be seeing is good, and it's really, really bad too."

Adjusting his package into the fuzzy G-string, Kassidy giggled, "What does it really matter? The facts are, you're the sweetest and best boyfriend around, and your dad is so kewl too. At the pools, I'd guess two-thirds to three-quarters of us guys are usually skinny dippin'. I've seen more dicks in four days here than I ever did before. There are three hundred kids on this base, and another eighty at the other base. Being at the pools here is like being at the lake back home, with every guy in town naked and skinny-dippin'. Nudity isn't much of a problem here in the ROH, and it's very kewl. Most teenage guys are in the same size range. There are slight variations in length, width and skin color, all of which I only noticed since arriving here. What you've got needs to be a surprise to me, just like the surprise I felt when Chris and Derrick brought you to my room, and the dozen or so surprises we've both felt since. There's no chance of me suddenly falling out of love with you only because of your dick." Turning around and seeing Matt was already facing him, Kassidy challenged, "Prove to me to me you feel any differently?"

Matt beamed, "I don't, and I'm thrilled with everything you've said."

Kassidy glanced down and then back up into Matt's eyes, before acknowledging, "You fill that real nice."

"I like what I see too," Matt giggled. "Remind me to chat with Jay about the design of this thing."

Nodding and giggling, Kassidy picked up and passed two water blasters to Matt. He then grabbed his water blasters before calling, "Hey Alden, since walking past Matt's dad like this isn't such a kewl idea, and we're already late, could you get us to Oneula Beach?"

"No problem," Alden giggled, and then executed the order.

Arriving at the grassy quad between the dormitories at Oneula Beach, Kassidy and Matt were well beyond the mass of about two hundred laughing and giggling boys. Matt noticed most guys were in their underwear, but many had Mr. Fuzzy G-strings. He also recognized some of the faces of the guys who had been at the tables by the Ewa Beach diving well. Matt turned to Kassidy, grinning, "Circle the group and attack?" With a nod of Kassidy's head, they took off running, making their presence known and firing non-stop.

A chorus of surprised shouts and squeals preceded the returned fire. Kassidy and Matt howled laughing. Warning moos erupted from the cozy cuzzy fuzzy veterans from dorm three. Craig, Phil, Owen, Travis, Erik, KC, Fred, Chauncey, Tony and Ray led the counter attack, blocking Kassidy and Matt, and forcing them to turn fuzzy tail and run away. Reading their brother's escape plan, Kade, Karey, Brad, Cameron cut them off. Jerry Owens and Joey led another group to block their escape. Encircled by the masses, with most of the water blasters aimed at them, Matt and Kassidy leaned against each other, back-to-back, trying to return fire as best they could.

Without warning, the entire group surrounding Kassidy and Matt were fired upon. The twenty Core Rimmers had arrived with all their sons, and their boyfriends. They would've been there sooner, but the five-year-old sons demanded another redesign of the Mr. Fuzzy G-strings, so they would fit their tiny bodies. And if the smallest of them could have Mr. Fuzzy G-strings, then the tweens had to have theirs too. There were now four basic designs of the G-strings; one for little guys, one for tweens, and the two for the teens. Leading the charge and cackling their little butts off, John, Stephen, Bruce, Frankie and Wade hovered about three meters over the crowd, firing down at unsuspecting victims. Seeing five- and six-year-old boys with Mr. Fuzzies covering their unfuzzy bits drove almost all the tweens and teenagers to fits of hysterical laughter.

While chaos erupted around the quad, the Scooby Gang transported to the scene, dressed in full ferret-body-sized Shiny Fuzzies, made from silver and gold tinsel, and armed with super-duper soakers, designed by the chimps, that were fed by fifty-gallon drums of water. Those water-blaster warriors who had arrived promptly at nine o'clock, and now had empty blasters, ran through streams of water to get back to their dorm rooms. Slowly but surely, the crowd thinned down, but Jay's wicked plan to create a feeling of brotherhood amongst all the boys had worked. Regardless of their backgrounds, physical states, or sexuality, all the boys in the division had participated in this battle.

On the way back to Ewa Beach via the dimensional doors, Matt noticed Angelo and Reggie, who were wearing boxer-briefs. Matt called for his two new friends, and then excitedly gushed on and on about all the great things that had occurred since they met. Matt prompted Angelo and Reggie to tell Kassidy the kind of boyfriend he had prayed for. After scanning Kassidy, Angelo quoted part of Matt's prayer, and Reggie swept his free arm from Kassidy's hair and on down. Brightly smiling at Matt, Kassidy glowed. All four passed through the Oneula Beach dining room on their way back to Ewa Beach. When the four boys had stopped talking, Kassidy and Matt unexpectedly vanished. They reappeared ten meters above the Ewa Beach diving well and dropped.

For the first time, Alden didn't hear his name being screamed. Fuzzy free-falling, Kassidy and Matt bellowed, "HOOT!" They splashed down, quickly rose to the surface and cracked up.

From the pool house speakers, Alden worried, "Are you guys angry with me?"

Since Matt was hysterical and splashing around like a much younger boy, Kassidy giggled, "No, I asked you to dunk us later and we expected it."

"Oh," Alden softly said. "Usually people forget."

Kassidy sniggered, "I'll scream your name now, if you want."

"Can we try again?" Alden giggled.

"As soon as Matt gets a grip and stops laughing." Many moments later, Matt waded over toward Kassidy. Noticing his boyfriend's wicked leer, Kassidy cackled, "Now!"

Matt wasn't prepared and his yell clearly showed his frustration. Kassidy's shout was more like a loud laugh, followed by "HOOT! HOOT!" Just before hitting the water again, Matt smirked at his evil boyfriend and Kassidy cracked up.

Immediately upon surfacing, Kassidy found Matt swimming for him and giggled, "Be good, hunky bear."

"I'll let you be the judge of that," Matt leered.

Mooing through his laughter, Kassidy backed away for the nearest ladder. He wasn't really trying to escape, but at least play hard to get and delay the inevitable. Backed against the edge of the well and a fair distance from a ladder, Kassidy cackled, "Fight the temptations!"

Holding the edge of the well and trapping Kassidy between his arms, Matt brightly smiled, "We'd both drown if I didn't. This isn't ending any time soon. I expect we'll last far more than two hours."

"Yeah," Kassidy softly chortled, "I think we'll last a long lifetime."

Matt planted a deep kiss, and then softly asked, "So, what are these semi-serious topics we need to discuss?"

"Let's start with the most simple," Kassidy offered. "You're on Kentucky time. Are you tired, Matt?"

"A little, but not too much; I could probably be awake until eleven or midnight."

"Do you sleep on your back, or on your belly?"

"I fall asleep on my side, and usually wake face up. Tonight, I might just spend the whole night on my side, spooned up with you."

Kassidy giggled, "Me snuggling behind you, or you behind me?"

"We'll have to try it both ways. That's generally how I'd like us to be."

"How long before we get there, do ya think?"

"At least a few days, hopefully we can make it a whole week before landing on home base."

"Why do you want it to take so long? Our feelings are already driving us crazy."

"I never expected love at first sight, Kass. Since that's what happened, we really should try to move along in baby steps. We can do a lot of fun stuff together, but since we're both virgins, that last step is going to take time and repetition to get right. In the meantime, we'll learn a lot more about each other."

"I'm liking your plan more and more."

"I'm glad, because I sure don't want anything we do in bed to damage the best opportunity in the world."

"Have you done some self exploration?"

Matt sniggered, "Far too much. At least I know enough to say its gotta be slow. How 'bout you?"

"Enough to know exactly what you're talking about," Kassidy giggled.

"We can do plenty with our hands and mouths," Matt assured.

"There's so much I want to know about you, and that I still have to tell you about."

Kassidy prompted, "Anything in particular you want to know, just ask."

"Let's start with some basics. I get the impression that you've been scopin' guys and girls, so when did you choose guys over girls?"

"When I saw how gay couples acted here clinched it," Kassidy easily answered. "Before the vacation to Los Angeles, I knew I was as bisexual as anybody could be. All around LA, everywhere we went, there were gay couples. It was way different from home; holding hands was tame, and others were huggin' real tight, and others went for some kisses, little ones and really deep ones. Then a couple of guys here got my attention, but each and every one of 'em was already spoken for. I'd name them all for you, but I can only think of three who you'll know; Jay, Travis and Mike."

Matt smiled, "Yeah, I can understand that easily."

"Of all the girls here, I was never motivated to do more than talk with them. They're really cute and even nicer to talk with, but I never wanted to take a walk alone with one of 'em. Those talks proved that I was sliding further from heterosexual and closer to homosexual." Kassidy checked, "How did you know at such an early age?"

Matt shrugged, "Guys have always been cutest. My dad and mamma taught me the facts when I was nine. Way before that, the first time I saw a picture of a nude girl, I almost screamed in horror." Kassidy cracked up, and Matt sniggered, "She looked like a sexless doll! Where's her wiener? Dang, that's gotta hurt!" They both busted a gut laughing. Then Matt giggled, "Nope, it's always been other guys, dressed and undressed, they're the cutest."

Kassidy smiled, "You've never had a boyfriend before?"

"No one before you," Matt answered. "There were attempts, but no one wanted to hug or kiss, never mind showing me their willies, or letting me touch it. Generally, the friends I hung out with were groups of guys. I reckon they felt safer that way. As far as I'm concerned, it's just as well."

"Why?"

"So I could be the same as you. We have some stuff in common, and some that's about as different as can be. I never had brothers or sisters, but you have two brothers. I lost my mamma four years ago, but you just lost both your parents. How do you feel about them, Kass?"

Rapidly blinking, Kassidy replied, "Ya know, it might sound weird, but I'm really not sure. Both my folks worked full time, and they were okay as far as parents go. Some of my friends' parents were too strict and others seemed to not care at all. My folks were a good compromise, when I think back on it."

More softly, Kassidy revealed, "It was too sudden. They told us to go take care of business in the mens room before the flight. In the minutes the four of us were in there, all four parents and lots of other people were gone. It was chaos, people running away, other people running there with fire hoses. It didn't take long to find out for sure that they had died, maybe two hours. We all knew it though.

"Friday night, I was in shock, but I had brothers and my cousin keeping me grounded. For once in our lives, none of the four of us wanted to take a chance on separating from the other three. Before we went to bed, we were told to choose a Clan Division. Since Friday, it's been like, now I have to be the big brother that they always wanted me to be, and I had rebelled against it. I also gained a cousin in the deal too. So I played that part the best I could. Last night, my cousin hooked up with a boyfriend. Today, my brothers found boyfriends. Since dinner, I'm thinking its time to chill on the big bro act."

"Can you do that?"

"To a degree, I have to; they're growing up and taking their lives in directions that may or may not match mine. I'll say something to them, if I feel it's important enough, something our parents would definitely say. So, I'll still be their big brother, but not their dad, mom and brother, like I've been trying to be."

"What about the life you left behind?"

"This life is better in ways that matter most. There's no acting here; be who you are and strive for your own goals. My parents would've liked it here, I'm sure. We can be boyfriends without anyone mocking us. My folks weren't bigots, but often kept their views private, so bigots wouldn't get upset. I say its time to upset the bigots, and far past time to rock the boat. I think that's why Battle Of Earth happened; bigoted humans teamed up with Romulans to get their way, and they lost."

Matt beamed, "That was wicked kewl, Kass. I loved every word. I hope you meant what you said."

Kassidy nodded and giggled, "Yeah, I did. I do miss my parents, but I don't like having to be everything for my brothers and cousin. Life is good here. There's nothing missing except my folks, and I really think they know we're cared for. And lastly, it's definitely time for the high and mighty to get knocked down a few pegs; they're human beings, just like the rest of us. The galaxy opened up long before we were born, so lets act like one world, and join a bunch of other worlds with common beliefs. There are two Vulcans on this base, an adult man and a twelve-year-old boy. I don't understand all there is about their culture, or them individually, but I really want to learn."

Stifling a yawn, Matt sighed, "I'm really sorry, Kass. The time change is catching up with me. I'd love to stay here and talk more, but I think it's time to move this chat indoors."

Wrapping his legs around Matt's waist, Kassidy pulled him close for a tender kiss. He then smiled, "I hope my ramblings weren't boring."

"The last thing you are is boring," Matt assured. "I was totally into what you were saying, so much so that I relaxed even more. Now I'm even more certain it's you that the Lord's been saving for me."

Madly giggling, Kassidy's legs pulled Matt closer again. Once in range, they locked lips. Matt held onto Kassidy, and Kassidy released the side of the diving well to hold onto Matt. They sank. Needing oxygen, they bobbed to the surface. Matt prompted Kassidy to climb the ladder out of the well and instructed, "I left the sliding door in my bedroom unlocked. Dad won't ever see us wearing our fuzzy G-strings, if I can help it. I've got no problem with him seeing me nude, but this thing is far more embarrassing."

Rapidly nodding and evilly snickering, Kassidy swam for the ladder. As soon as Kassidy's bare butt was in view, Matt mooed and snuck in a few gropes. Laughing hysterically, Kassidy flew out of the well, grabbed his water blasters and started running toward condo B. In seconds, Matt was out and chasing his boyfriend around the quad, past the townhouses, around condo A, and up the exterior staircases of condo B to the seventh floor. Only a small night stand lamp was lit in Matt's bedroom. The clothes left scattered on the floor were picked up, making it obvious that Matt's dad had at least peeked in the room, organized things, and turned off the overhead lights.

As soon as Matt closed the sliding door and blinds, they were embracing and helping each other peel off their G-strings, and succumbing to the temptations of the last couple of hours. Matt was as giddy as a five-year-old with a new, long-expected present. At the same time he was pushing Kassidy's G-string down, he was grabbing kisses and licking water droplets off of his new boyfriend's shoulders and neck. Elastic in Mr. Fuzzy was preventing the skimpy G-string from dropping off, and that prompted Matt to ask, "Do you wanna... or shall I?"

Kassidy giggled, "Whether you remove it or I do, a couple o' pubes are gonna be tugged. You go for it, but I get to return the favor for you."

Reaching down, Matt used his hands like shovels; four fingers followed hair to flesh and then stretched the elastic. Slowly pulling Mr. Fuzzy forward, Matt grinned, "I never dreamed the first time I touched another guy's dick would be like this."

Nodding, Kassidy warmly smiled, "You did great too. A few hairs were pulled, but I don't think any were lost. Now it's my turn."

Holding Kassidy's shoulders, Matt asked, "Do you want to hear my plan?" Concentrating on painlessly removing Matt's G-string, Kassidy nodded. Matt said, "We'll get to know every inch of each other. The goal is to make our dicks bounce, to see what really feels the best. The last thing we'll do before kissing goodnight, only because we'll have to, is to finish off."

Delightfully shivering, Kassidy giggled, "You said hands and mouths."

"No blow-jobs tonight, Kass. Touch and taste only, until the very end. Then we'll finish with our hands. Even that's a learning experience; teaching each other how to make that the very best it can be. Kewl?"

"That sounds like a great idea."

Matt giggled, "It's been a dream of mine. Now I'm going to love my dream boyfriend." Taking one step back, Matt scanned Kassidy from head to toe. He chuckled, "Yep, the good Lord has definitely intervened. Even our cocks are almost exactly the same length and girth. Yours is paler than mine, but that was expected." Acknowledging that with a nod and a smile, Kassidy reached for Matt's arms. Gently and slowly, Kassidy began examining the feel of his new boyfriend's body. Matt gushed, "You're good at this! I thought I'd be showin' the way."

Shaking his head, Kassidy giggled, "I have a few ideas of my own that won't break the rules. I'm getting more ideas the more I look at you and touch you."

With goosebumps popping, Matt softly giggled another prayer of thanks, and began his own careful examination.

* * * * *

Near the end of the water blaster battle, Alden made a report to the majority of Core Rimmers' sub-vocals. Stevie made a different report to Reyes. Since most of the boys were scattering for their dorms, Reyes had Stevie transport Ryan and himself back to their flat. Moments later, Prez had the remaining group of Core Rimmers and their sons transported to the Rapid Response Base.

Arriving dripping wet before the desk of Colonel Cody Wilkins, the Rimmers softly chortled and giggled, waiting for their host to stop laughing at them. Many moments later, Cody locked eyes with Prez, wheezing, "Now I know why I couldn't reach your comm-badge!"

Prez chuckled, "There's really no place to put it, is there?"

Keith smiled, "We were giving a lesson in brotherly love."

In an attempt to diffuse the situation, Derrick grinned and began introductions, starting with Jonah, Randy and Dillon, and then moving on to the other Core Rimmers, who introduced their sons and boyfriends. Lastly, Prez introduced his sons. He then asked, "What's the scoop, Cody?"

Pointing at the Admiral's bars on Prez's Mr. Fuzzy, Cody grinned, "I wanted to show you your fleet, Admiral Fuzzy." Off to the side and out of Prez's reach, Jay and Chris began sniggering.

"Fleet?" Prez queried, "What fleet?"

"The Clan's Pacific Fleet, Sir," Cody smiled. "We already have Clan Short Crest flags, and were wondering what we might use for a Pacific Rim Division flag. That's been answered now."

Prez blinked and wondered, "What's your suggestion?"

Pointing at the groins of the Core Rimmers, Cody sniggered, "Feral Fuzzies, of course!"

Smirking, Prez looked over at Jay and Chris, who were slinking behind Troy, Sean, Lance and Scott.

Chris giggled, "Jay's got a doctor appointment." The younger boys began giggling.

Tapping his sub-vocal, Jay sniggered, "Alden, take me and Chris to Doc Andrew's office." They disappeared.

Prez sighed, "Put rings of fire around the Feral Fuzzies and I guess we're set."

Nodding, Cody asked, "Would you like to inspect your fleet?"

"I'd like to have a look," Prez replied, "but first, explain to me how this could be useful, post-Battle Of Earth?"

Without delving into too many specifics, Cody answered, "We now have additional mobility, in the form of two destroyers, two submarines, two cruisers and the aircraft carrier Abraham Lincoln, including her twenty-five hundred aircraft." Seeing all the Core Rimmers' jaws dropping, Cody continued, "Explaining to his superiors how ineffective his weapons were against the Warbird, Admiral Noonan had a melt-down Friday afternoon. On any other day, under almost every other circumstance, Admiral Noonan would've been relieved of duty, but President Powell was part of the conference call. The only way to meet the Admiral's demands for more sophisticated weapons was to make his new strike group part of the Clan. Now he's got his weaponry, and many specialized enhancements only available to Starfleet and Clan Short, like micro-fusion generators to power his ships." Since everyone seemed dumbfounded, Cody sniggered, "Personally, I can't wait to see an aircraft carrier hit eighty knots."

"Alden," Keith hollered, "why is it we're just hearing of this now?"

"It's honestly not his fault," Cody interjected. "Until all the orders were signed, and the strike force could officially be considered the Pacific Clan Fleet, Alden had little to report. As of twenty-hundred hours today, they're yours."

Alden giggled, "Thank you, Cody," and then dimmed the lights. A moment later, an image of the Iowa, most of her black hull above the waves, zooming at maximum speed, appeared on the wall.

A chorus of excited expletives erupted from the Core Rimmers. All their sons cracked up laughing. Softly whimpering, Cody went back behind his desk to send his partner, Sheldon, a racy warning message. In return, Sheldon sent an image of only his Mr. Fuzzy G-string covered crotch to his lover. It suddenly became imperative to get the Rimmers to the docks, and get his fuzzy butt back home as quickly as possible.

* * * * *

Sullivan's Island, SC

Wednesday, November 10, 2004 3:27AM EST

Paul Owens lifted his suitcase and walked out of the room he had once shared with Ryan. When he had accepted the Owens' hospitality weeks earlier, he had guessed it would be temporary. What he never could have foreseen was leaving without his brother. Ryan had chosen Reyes though. There was no chance of changing Ryan's mind, and Paul couldn't see himself ever apologizing for anything he had done. Without Ryan, there was no reason to remain on Sullivan's Island. By morning, he fully expected another confrontation with Danny anyway. When Paul was gone, the Owens family would be able to reunite. Jerry, Joey and KC would return home, so his disappearance would be better for everyone. Paul walked out the back door and kept walking past Marc's house to the beach. Not one of the AI Division's security had noticed him leaving. Paul reasoned, either they hadn't noticed or they chose to not notice him.

Following the beach, Paul breathed in feelings of freedom with each autumn breeze. Going forward, Paul could easily take care of himself. He would effortlessly return to his streetwise ways, and try to forget that he had ever accepted a home within the AI Division of Clan Short. Paul would forget the names Danny Page and Marc Furst, the two people that he had argued with because they wanted to "fix" Ryan.

Arguably, meeting Reyes was the best and worst parts of the entire Clan Short experience, as far as Paul was concerned. Ryan had a good boyfriend that had an even more positive outlook than Ryan. It was then, as Paul followed route 703 off Sullivan's Island, that he recalled Reyes ordering the homophobes executed for what they had done. Reyes could take care of Ryan and they would be happy without him. Now his bro could be safe and Paul wouldn't have to deal with their naivety.

At the intersection of route 703 and highway 17, Paul turned around, stuck his thumb out and started hitching rides. A few cars passed him. Less than a minute later, an eighteen-wheeler approached and flashed his high beams, signaling the driver's intention to stop. Grinning and running along the roadside, Paul thought, some things never change. At most, this ride would cost Paul a blow-job or two and he could get many miles away. With luck, Paul might even get back to Columbia soon after daybreak. There, he could disappear into the city he knew very well. The young driver called over, "Where ya headin', kid?"

"Columbia would be awesome," Paul replied.

"It's on the way," the driver replied, and instructed, "Jump on in." Doing as he was told, Paul got settled in the passenger side seat, with his suitcase at his feet. The driver said, "My name's Dan."

"I'm Paul."

After pulling away and getting his rig back on the road, Dan asked, "Have you got relatives in Columbia?"

"No."

Thoughtfully humming, Dan wondered, "You've got friends there?"

"Not really; it's a city I'm familiar with." After many minutes of silence, Paul asked, "What's the cost for the ride, dude?"

"Cost?" Dan chuckled. "There's no cost, Paul. You're not taking me off my route. The drive's easier with someone to talk with. If conversation can be considered payment, then chat up a storm."

Paul muttered, "I just left a guy named Danny. He was a jerk." He then double-checked, "No ass, cash or grass?"

Dan laughed, "I don't need any of the above. My wife would kill me if I touched a kid, never mind fucking a young boy; she'd castrate me. Grass and driving these big bitches don't mix, and you probably don't have enough cash to even worry about that. You know far too much for a kid. How old are you, thirteen going on thirty?"

Paul grinned, "Thirteen going on fifty."

"Stay thirteen as long as you can and enjoy it," Dan recommended. "Then again, so much has changed the last few days, maybe you can remain a teenager through your teen years. The Battle Of Earth shook everyone to their souls, it seems. It's sad that it took an alien invasion and hundreds of thousands of lives to cause the change. Everyone seems to be learning from them Clan Short kids. Let's hope folks don't forget and fall back into their old habits."

"Uh... people are learning from the Clan?"

"Hell yeah!" Dan cheered. "Kids around the world fought in cities everywhere, when adults were creating big problems, making the Romulan's job easier. Don't you watch TV, browse the Internet or read the news?"

"Generally no, and these last few days, I've been busy with other stuff."

"Well, the new deal is for everyone to simply give a damn," Dan shared. "That's why I stopped for you, if the truth must be known. A kid your age shouldn't be walking the streets in the middle of the night. Since you're carrying a suitcase, I figure wherever you were was bad enough to want to leave. I'd be much happier if I knew you had people to be with in Columbia, but I'll do my part and get you where you need to be. I know a few people there too, other drivers, like me, making out like a bandit, delivering goods to places that desperately need it. This rig is filled with construction materials destined for Washington, D.C. Everybody is trying to get the city cleaned up and rebuilt. Once this trip is complete, I'll reload and head up to New York City. I'll reload again on the trip back, drop more off in Washington, then head home for a day off with my pregnant wife."

Paul smirked, "You make it sound like there are no bad people anywhere."

"I'm sure they're still out there, but last night's news mentioned substantially reduced crime rates in every major city across the nation. For instance, in my own little corner of the world, neighbors are watching my wife. It didn't used to be that way last week; my wife and I only knew one other young family in our apartment complex. It started changing Saturday, with people saying more than hello and spending time getting to know us. Of course, we got to know them too. Now I know that one old woman is a retired nurse. I was gone Sunday and came back late that night to a completely different neighborhood, where everyone was watching out for one another. Now I can work without worrying quite so much about my wife. My first born kid is going to have a promising life.

"Our country's president is talking about changing economic and societal standards. If half of what President Powell wants to see changed actually does change, my kid's going to have opportunities I never had. It's really hard to believe some of this, but the changes have already impacted my life and my career. I used to drive six days a week. I was off Friday when the shit hit the fan. I worked Sunday, had Monday off, and here I am working another day, but I've been told I'll be off when I get home, and I won't have to work again until Friday. My boss says it'll be a day on and a day off. If I have to work two consecutive days, then I'll get two consecutive days off. I haven't had two days off in a row in more than three years. The best part is, when I become a daddy, my schedule and routes will change so that I can be a father, and my pay won't change."

"That sounds nice for you, but how can you say that it's all because of Clan Short? It seems to me that it was you and your neighbors."

Danny smiled, "What came first, the chicken or the egg? Well, before the Battle Of Earth, Clan Short was helping kids. Those kids who have been helped were the ones helping others all day Friday and into Saturday. Some joined League and federal forces militarily, while others acted to provide homes for the many thousands of refugees. People helping people was the lesson learned, and it's funneled through to many communities. Washington, New York and Los Angeles got screwed over because the people didn't help one another. Why wasn't Boston screwed too? Why not Chicago, or Cincinnati, or Charleston, or Columbia, or dozens of other cities that are large enough to have had similar problems? The only answer is because people pulled together as teams. We sure as hell didn't learn it from our government. Congress needs to spend years debating whether or not people should wipe their asses when they shit, for Christ's sake!"

Paul couldn't help softly chortling.

Dan grinned, "You'll see for yourself, Paul. Everything has changed and it seems like it might just continue down a better path."

"I'll believe that when I see it. It'll probably take seeing it dozens if not hundreds of times."

Sadly shaking his head, Dan mumbled, "You're far too cynical for a young man. You're far too cynical for thirty, or for fifty." After a pausing to collect his thoughts, Dan asked, "Do you have hobbies or interests?"

"Not really," Paul shrugged. "Camping, hiking and mountain biking are the closest things, but it's been a long time since I've done any of the three."

"How long?"

Knowing what kind of response he'd get, Paul grinned, "Over twenty years."

Dan howled laughing and slammed a palm against the steering wheel.

Deciding to test Dan's perception that people had changed, Paul waited until the man was softly chuckling, and then stated, "I'm an android. I was first activated June fourteenth, 1951. My original parents were Lance and Miriam Coplin. My dad was a maintenance technician for Vision Industries. My mom was a secretary for Vision Industries. They always wanted children, but couldn't have any. We lived in Chapin, near Lake Murray, off of route 76, until my parents died in September of 1984. I lived on the streets of Columbia until October twenty-sixth, doing everything I needed to survive. Where I've been living since didn't work out, and I'll leave it at that. I don't have any grass, or much cash, but I would've given you head for this ride."

Dan stopped laughing and glanced to his right several times before softly asking, "You're serious?"

"Completely," Paul flatly answered. A crushing minute of silence passed before Paul asked, "What's the cost now?"

Dan assured, "There's still no cost. I've never met an android before, not that I know of anyway. You've shocked the shit out of me. I don't even know what to ask or say that wouldn't be misinterpreted as insulting."

Digesting that for another silent minute, Paul muttered, "You've shocked me too. I expected you to stop this rig, pull over for quick, meaningless sex, and then toss me out on my ass."

Shaking his head, Dan smiled, "All I said is true. My wife of four years is pregnant with our first born. I love her. Since I don't find boys or men attractive enough to even get it up, you're getting a free ride. Judging by what you've said, you've had it rough. If there was something more I could do, I would, but our two bedroom apartment is set for our baby. You don't need a temporary place, but a permanent one, with people that care enough to make right what's been wrong."

"The ride is plenty, Dan. I survived before and I'll survive again."

* * * * *

Oneula Beach, Taylor Residence

Tuesday, November 9, 2004 9:42PM HTZ

After the water blaster battle, Ralphie, Richie, Robbie, Ronnie, Billy, Carrol and Pat invited Theo Triggs back to the house. Since the afternoon's concert, Richie was falling for Theo. Richie had invited Theo to eat dinner with the family at the CIC dining room. Ralphie, Robbie and Ronnie knew Richie liked Theo a lot. Theo liked Richie too, but was still struggling with the idea of another boyfriend. The impressions implanted by Theo's parents left the kid feeling abundant self-doubt. As far as the quadruple Rs were concerned, it was time to include Theo in the family fold.

Still wearing damp underwear and Mr. Fuzzy G-strings, the group of boys went down to the basement. Robbie went to turn on the radio. Ralphie and Pat began dancing. At first, Billy tried to telepathically share his history with Theo. Giggling at the slightly younger and shorter boy before him, Theo wondered, "Is there something you want to say?" making it clear that Billy's words went unreceived.

Billy grinned, "Who do you think I am?"

Theo blushed and giggled, "Robbie's main squeeze." The other boys in the basement began giggling.

Nodding, Billy softly shared, "A week ago today, I was naked, with my brother Jason, and we were being filmed by our now ex-foster parents." Theo's jaw dropped. "We had to do stuff, just to get a can of soup or a frozen dinner," Billy continued. "Even my littlest two brothers had to do stuff."

Ronnie added, "I lived right next door to Billy, and the deal was the same in our house. A week ago seems more like a month, since I met my other three bros."

Billy offered, "Saturday afternoon, me and my three brothers were adopted by Sean and Troy. It was right after Keith and John went to Ewa Beach, for you and Brad."

Carrol stepped up beside Billy, telling Theo, "Most of the kids here have bad pasts. When our old foster started his freaky shit with Trevor, Richie and I got him out of there that night. We were part of the Clan Desert Division for a few days, until Richie was called here to meet his brothers for the first time. Now we're part of a real family. Billy's got his family. Garrett's got his family in Des Moines. No matter how bad things were for you and Brad, it's better now."

"And we're going to make it even better," Richie softly but firmly said. He moved closer to Theo, sighing, "I want to spend a lot of time with you, dude. You don't need to be scared of me, because I won't choose someone else, especially not over some grown-up's messed up thoughts and actions."

Fighting to control his emotions, Theo sadly muttered, "It barely took him a week to find someone else."

"I won't do that," Richie stated. "We had a good time dancing at the concert, and you seemed to enjoy being with our family at dinner."

Theo said, "I did, but..." and trailed off, looking at the floor, as if the words he needed to say were printed there.

'All I wanted was someone to dance with,' Richie silently confessed. 'I didn't know that I'd start feeling stuff, or that I would invite you to have dinner with us. Did I make you change into a Mr. Fuzzy G-string with me and my bros? No, I showed you to a bathroom, where you could choose what you wanted to wear. I won't ever force you to do anything, Theo. All I want is for us to try our best...'

'Like I'm doin' with Pat,' Ralphie interjected.

'And I'm doin' with Garrett,' Ronnie added.

'And I'm tryin' with Billy,' Robbie finished.

Richie grinned at his three mirror images, impatiently huffing, "Heaven forbid I should finish a thought on my own." Everyone in the basement broke down in giggles. Facing Theo again, Richie assured, "Trying is how we'll grow past friends that had a good time together, and into boyfriends."

Turning around with Ralphie, so he could face Theo, Pat explained, "Boyfriends are two different people that choose to do everyday stuff together. I met Ralphie last Friday. Later that afternoon, he needed some time alone with his brothers. I easily said yes, and then wished I hadn't, because I missed him being with me. It gave me and Ralphie time to think though, so it worked out in our favor when we got together again Friday night. The next thing I know, Saturday afternoon, I'm in Des Moines with this set of quadruplets, and with Ronnie's foster brother, who is half of one set of double twins. I lost one family, but within a little more than a day, I had two full families; the Taylors and the Morrisons. All day and into Sunday, we bopped from Ewa Beach to Des Moines, back and forth a couple o' times."

"We followed the smell of food and never missed a meal," Ralphie sniggered.

Trying to learn to dance with Carrol as a fill-in partner, Ronnie giggled, "We want you around too, because Richie does, and because our extended family traverses five time zones."

Rapidly blinking at Ronnie dancing with Carrol, Richie chortled, "What are you two trying to do?"

"We need to learn how to dance too," Carrol giggled.

Ronnie sniggered, "Without stepping on each other's feet."

"There's still lots of space between 'em," Robbie smiled.

Billy giggled, "Try dancing like us. Move your whole body, and not just your feet."

In time with the music, Robbie called out, "Left foot and shoulders, right foot and butts. Billy's leading; he learned from Sean and taught me." Ralphie rested his arms on Pat's shoulders, and Pat held Ralphie's hips. They began imitating Billy and Robbie. Then Ronnie and Carrol duplicated the dance.

Without hesitation, Richie went and put his hands on Theo's hips. Theo draped his arms over Richie's shoulders, silently worrying if he would hurt him or be hurt by him. 'Ain't gonna happen that way, not this time,' Richie sent. 'Your parents interfered and caused everything to fall apart last time. Yeah, I know, since the first time you thought about it, in the auditorium. I didn't mind talk with you much before now just to give you a chance to tell me on your own. We're gonna take our time and really get to know each other, the way we're supposed to. Think about what you'd like to know about me, and I'll tell you everything.'

After a brief pause to read Theo's first question, Richie silently replied, 'No, I never did anything with Carrol or Trevor. Our old foster was the prime definition of a pussy; he liked hurting hairless boys, because he was too much of a fag to face his homosexuality with men his own age. Next question?'

Richie giggled, 'What's there not to like about you, dude? The best part is that we're about the same age and will grow up together. Yup, I'm uncut too, just like you. I've got exactly six long pubes scattered around down there. You'll have to count them and tell me how many you have. Yeah, I wanna see for myself, but that's a couple o' days away. I don't know, I never measured it limp or stiff. There's a whole bunch of other fun stuff we'll try.'

Theo giggled, "Like?"

Richie dropped his arms and stopped dancing. He moved around and behind Theo, put his hands on his new boyfriend's hips, and then leaned forward to taste the brown hair hanging down by his neck. Cringing, Theo cracked up, getting the attention of Robbie, Billy, Ralphie, Pat, Ronnie and Carrol. Soon, all six were laughing as hard as Theo and barely dancing.

Ralphie giggled, "What's it taste like, bro."

"Sweet milk chocolate," Richie evilly snickered. "More like cake than a cookie or candy." The other seven in the basement howled.

"It's a family trait," Pat cackled.

Spinning around, Theo dove for Richie's long blond hair and tasted a mouthful. His lips only brushed the side of Richie's neck, but it was enough for an intense shiver to race up and down Richie's spine.

Squinting at Ronnie, Carrol warned, "No way!"

"Garrett says, if you keep that up, he's gonna order a four-way!" Kerry's voice stated over their giggles. "If you're really good, I'll make it a five-way!"

Seven sets of eyes focused on Carrol. Intensely blushing, Carrol giggled, "Not ever in any group larger than two, Kerry. Even then, we'd start having problems when I'm a teenager and you're still a hairless tween."

Noticing the time, Richie asked Theo, "Do you want to go back to the dorm or stay here?" Six other voices softly moored.

Grinning slightly, Theo answered, "I think we have a lot more to talk about, without company. Let's go for a walk first." Louder provocative mooing erupted.

The one thing Theo didn't say, Richie read telepathically. Theo's brother, Brad Triggs was spending the night with Kade Oldcambus, so they might still be alone after the walk. "Kewl," Richie nervously squeaked. His brothers began sniggering. After clearing his throat, Richie said, "Let me tell my folks and we're gone."

Theo took Richie's hand and led the way back upstairs. The whole way, Richie heard his three brothers telepathically teasing him. Breaking out in a nervous sweat, Richie paused in the kitchen to splash cold water on his face. Theo checked, "Are you okay?"

"Fine," Richie smirked. "I just got paybacks for all the teasing I dished out to my brothers." Grabbing a towel to dry off, he sent, 'Part of me thinks I should apologize, and the other parts says, nah, just get even another time.'

Understandingly nodding, Theo asked, "Do me a favor?"

"Sure."

"Talk to me the normal way," Theo gently instructed. "When we're alone, there's no reason to mind talk, is there?"

Richie asked, "Does it freak you out?"

"No," Theo answered, and then sighed, "One of the things I missed most was just hearing my other boyfriend's voice. If we're not alone and you want to send me stuff privately, that's kewl, but it's not necessary when we're alone."

Widely smiling, Richie tossed the towel on the counter and offered Theo a clean hand. After having his hand taken, Richie led the way into the living room, where Jason and Trinity, his new mom and dad, were lounging together on the sofa.

Seeing Richie in his Mr. Fuzzy G-string again, and Theo in almost dry blue boxer-briefs, Trinity covered her eyes and began giggling. Richie giggled, "Sorry mom. We're just gonna go for a walk and chat for a while."

Waving his free arm at both boys, Jason sniggered, "Like that?"

Shrugging, Richie giggled, "It's something, and more than most dudes wear around here."

Jason smiled, "Are you coming back home tonight?"

Richie shrugged and turned to Theo, who replied, "After we talk more, we'll know the answer to that question." He faced Richie and added, "I can't deal with one bad ending, never mind two, and I won't go there. If we're both ready and can deal, we'll spend the night here, or at my dorm room at Ewa Beach. It only depends on which is closer, and how both of us feel about spending the night together. We'll meet at the dining room here in the morning, no matter what."

"Good enough," Jason said, "have a good talk, and a good night."

Trinity warmly said, "And good luck, to both of you."

The boys said, "Good night," and walked hand-in-hand to the front door.

Soon after stepping off the porch, Richie prodded, "Will you tell me his name?"

"I'm surprised you don't already know."

"I'm not telepathically interrogating you, Theo. You're my boyfriend, not some future employee with a dirty history."

"Bryant Engelman was his name."

"What made him special to you?"

Theo scowled, "Why does that matter?"

Richie shrugged, "It don't matter that much. It's just that you still miss him, so he must've been special somehow."

Theo sighed and then struggled to calmly explain, "He was a school friend. We never hung out much together until the end of last school year. Soon after school ended, we started hanging out together, with his friends, or with mine, and then more often alone, at his place or at mine. The first hugs were easy, completely natural, and got to be constant. It's just that he was the first, ya know? We didn't talk about becoming boyfriends, and just did what we wanted, when we wanted. I didn't even realize how much he mattered to me until I wasn't allowed to be alone with him. Suddenly there's no more hugs, no more kisses, no one to talk with or hold close at night. I've barely gotten over the fact that I gave my heart away without knowing it, and now I'm with you, wondering if it's going to happen again. This time I have to pay attention, Richie. Another short friendship that leaves me feeling all alone again can't happen; the first one hurt too much."

After a brief pause, Theo pulled himself together and smiled, "When you reached for my hand in the auditorium, I was fighting myself, saying no, and then yes, over and over again, even when I took your hand and went to dance with you. How much of that did you know?"

Richie giggled, "They were your surface thoughts, so about all of it. Now I know the reason why though, and that makes what I read even better."

Trying to understand, Theo scowled, "It's even better?"

"You said it yourself," Richie smiled. "Bryant was automatic and it simply happened, without thought or trying. I am thinking, Theo, a lot, about you, me and us.

"Imagine me," Richie prodded, "coming here to meet two long lost brothers, just knowing that they'd hate me, because I'm gay. Come to find out, they're gay too. We've got something in common and a reason to be friends as well as brothers. Then, a few hours later, Robbie showed up with his mom and dad. That was Thursday night. I wanted Carrol and Trevor here, with me and my brothers, so we made it happen. By lunch time Sunday, we're a real family, and it's nothing like I ever thought it might be. I was scared to death of my old foster. My new mom and dad haven't frightened me or any of my brothers. Ralphie finds Pat and almost flipped right where he stood. Ronnie has Garrett, and Robbie zeroes in on Billy. Are any of us jealous? Nope, we're proud and thrilled. Are the new mom and dad bothered in any way that four of their six sons are gay? Nope, they're happy that we're happy, and we're bringing more to the family. Dad's not the slightest bit gay, but he has no problem with a bunch of gay sons, and even more gay guys scattered around both bases. Do you know why?"

Shaking his head, Theo grumbled, "I'd really love to know, since my folks have attitudes about it."

"Dad used to coach football, and he wants to do it here," Richie explained. "That tells me he likes guy stuff, just like every other guy. The one thing that makes a gay dude different from a straight dude is the sex part. Dad doesn't need to prove anything to mom. And he'll have no problem coaching football with a team that's half gay and half straight. Look at the Core Rimmers, and their dads. There's bunches of other grown men here that aren't looking at any kid like some kind o' conquest. I know that there's two men, 19 and 21 years old, and they're a gay couple. Nobody is trying to prove how manly they are, or wondering if they need to prove it to any one."

Pausing in the middle of the outdoor rec area field, Theo blinked, "You're saying my dad needs to prove it?"

Richie shrugged, "To some extent or another, for some reason that only he knows, having gay sons made him feel uncomfortable. He kept you away from Bryant, and Brad secluded from other dudes his age. Or maybe it was your mom that was uncomfortable. It could also be that they both were, and agreed completely that grounding you and Brad was the way to cope, so they wouldn't have to face the fact that it's them with the problem."

Watching Theo process the information, Richie sighed, "Being gay means one thing to me; that I always prefer being with other dudes, and when it comes to sex, dudes have the equipment I prefer. I know how sex should never be done, Theo. I also have a good idea how to make it the best, from a straight father and three awesome brothers. I already care about you. When its time, I won't ever do any of the bad stuff that was done to me; it's gonna be careful and slow, like my dad and bros said. If both of us ain't havin' fun, then what's the point?"

Seeing Theo wiping tears from his eyes but also widely smiling, Richie was confused. Feeling like he had screwed up majorly, he groaned, "I'm really sorry."

Shaking his head, Theo moved closer and took Richie in his arms. "Thank you," Theo softly wept. He rested his head on Richie's shoulder and tried to stop crying.

Thankfully, Theo couldn't see Richie scrunch his face while he took the time to process. After a few moments, Richie whispered, "What for?"

Squeezing Richie tighter, Theo giggled, "I wish you had said all that earlier; it would've made things easier for me."

Not knowing exactly what he had said that made the difference, but happy enough with Theo in his arms, Richie carefully offered, "I couldn't say it in the auditorium, or while we were having dinner either. I sure wasn't gonna go there with my brothers and their boyfriends around."

Giggling insanely at the images implanted, Theo squeezed Richie tightly, slid his face around and planted a deep kiss. Richie still had no clue what he said that made the difference, but the tongue invading his mouth tasted really good, so he had no problem waiting until the kiss finally broke to pose the question. When the kiss did break, Theo prompted, "Read my thoughts, Richie."

Immediately closing his eyes, Richie giggled, "Nope, you'll have to tell me the old fashioned way."

Now that he wanted his thoughts read, Theo couldn't believe Richie had closed his eyes. Smirking, Theo got in the first opportunistic rib tickle. Opening his eyes wide, Richie laughed and brushed away the tickling hands. Laughing his ass off, Theo turned and ran for the diving well. Richie took off after him, but couldn't catch up. By the time Richie got to the diving well, Theo was naked and almost all the way to the top of the five-meter high ladder.

Richie loudly cackled, "I am not diving from way up there!"

Theo cracked up and then playfully instructed, "Take off that Mr. Fuzzy and meet me under water." Richie's eyebrows shot up and he quickly began peeling off his Mr. Fuzzy. Before Richie could get the Fuzzy on his fuzzy completely off, Theo dove. He did three awesome summersaults then straightened up and hit the water on an incline, making a big splash. Richie quickly followed, with his Mr.

Fuzzy G-string still clinging to his right ankle. They found each other under water, embraced and locked lips.

Relaxing on lounge chairs near the diving well were Carter, Doug, Neil and Tad. The four teenagers were chilling after the cozy cuzzy fuzzy water blaster battle. Used to their level two orphanage lives, the four teens knew how to carry a whispered conversation. Away from any lights, they weren't noticed by Theo and Richie. All four smiled, glanced at one another, and then returned to their prior conversation regarding their new home.

Theo and Richie surfaced and began giggling. Richie wondered, "What did I say to deserve a kiss like that?"

Theo giggled, "What I needed to hear. They almost had me believing there was something wrong with me, Richie. Thanks to you, I know now that it was them. I'm thinking clearly again, like a dude that likes being around other dudes. For a while there, I thought..."

"No," Richie interrupted. "Don't say that... don't even think it, Theo. You're my boyfriend; you just proved it. What's hangin' between our legs makes us male; and since there's no third sex you can be, then you're a dude. Being a nice guy don't make you a fem."

Nodding and allowing the topic to drop once and for all, Theo clung on to Richie, warmly saying, "And you're my boyfriend."

Getting up from their chairs, Carter, Doug, Neil and Tad applauded. Separating to see who was clapping their hands, Richie and Theo blushed and giggled. The four older teens didn't even look back; they gathered their water blasters and walked to their dorms, to leave the younger dudes alone.

Still giggling, Theo asked Richie, "Would you come back to my dorm room with me?"

"Are you sure?"

"There's still a lot more to say and hear. I wanna fall asleep in your arms, talking, hearing about your thoughts, and telling you mine."

"We don't have to... ya know, do anything more than that."

Theo nodded, "With Bryant, we didn't fool around that much. Talking ourselves to exhaustion, kissing and hugging were our favorite things to do. It took us almost two months before we started messin' around. At first we could talk, hug and kiss without either of us getting hard. When we started feeling the other was boning up, that's when we showed, and when everything really started." He paused and giggled, "After what you said, it probably won't take us two months. Not to mention, Bryant didn't dance near as good as you."

Richie giggled, "I was only having fun; imitating what some of the teenagers were doing."

"Then we're gonna have lots of fun with our clothes on, cos I really like dancing," Theo revealed.

Richie prompted, "Let's go back, get our clothes, and tell mom and dad what we've decided." Theo nodded, and they swam for the ladder.

* * * * *

Ewa Beach, Dormitory 3, Room 26

Tuesday, November 9, 2004 10:05PM HTZ

After the water blaster battle, Angelo and Reggie changed out of their damp underwear and got dressed again. They needed to go back to their homes to get the belongings they needed and wanted in their new room; namely, their clothes, Angelo's electronic music gear, and Reggie's art supplies. Most of the clothing that Alden got for them earlier, when they thought they would be hiding their new love, was returned. They kept only the new shirts and boxer-briefs that they had already worn. The unused computers in the dorm room were also returned to the warehouse. Once the dorm room was prepared, with closet doors, desk and dresser drawers left open, for Alden to transport everything, Angelo and Reggie left the room for the townhouses.

They went to the Combs' home first. Playing video games in Cameron's room, Cameron and Karey were in dry briefs and sitting on the floor. Pausing at the open door with Angelo at his side, Reggie wondered, "Where's mom and dad?"

Paying more attention to the game, Cameron answered, "Over at the Hundses' house, I think."

Without looking up and over at the two teens, Karey offered, "That was their plan, anyway. All the grown-ups are meeting over there, getting to know each other, like ol' fogeys do."

"They'll probably be home soon," Cameron finished, and then giggled, "What're you dudes doing here?"

Karey teased, "Don't you have better stuff to do?"

Angelo broke down in giggles. Reggie smirked, "We're moving, getting our stuff from here over to the dorm." After a brief pause for remarks, Reggie sniggered, "Don't get all emotional or anything, bro."

Sparing a glance up at his big brother, Cameron laughed,

"PLEASE! You're moving a few hundred meters away! It's not like we won't see each other a dozen times a day!"

Angelo giggled, "So, are video games the way ten-year-old boyfriends play?"

"You're just jealous," Karey cackled. "You teens make such a big to-do about everything. We're not holding hands now b'cause we can't, but we have, and we've hugged and kissed and done everything you've done, and didn't make a mess, or need a shower when we were done. Cassidy's around somewhere, with Matt, hoping he loses his virginity, and hoping he doesn't, AT THE SAME TIME!" Cameron cracked up. Karey giggled, "Chill about it, and just have fun."

Angelo checked with Reggie. The two teens grinned and nodded. Reggie teased, "I'll remind you of what was said tonight in about three years, when you dudes are able to do more than shiver and shake." Cameron and Karey howled laughing. Reggie led Angelo into his room. Before Reggie was anywhere near ready for it, Angelo gave him a whopper of kiss. Groaning and losing himself in the affection, Reggie let his hands roam around Angelo's torso. A few moments later, they heard giggling. Cameron and Karey were just beyond Reggie's bedroom door, trying to imitate the kiss and hand roaming, but only managing to tickle each other into hysterics. Rolling his eyes, Reggie sniggered, "Chill about it, and just have fun," and then closed the door.

Returning to Angelo, Reggie asked, "Take care of the desk for me, babe?"

Nodding, Angelo called, "Alden?"

Alden giggled, "Ready when you are, babe!"

"He's my babe, Alden," Reggie chortled, and went to his dresser.

He began opening drawers.

Angelo called, "Take the computer, Alden." It vanished and Angelo began opening the desk drawers. A few meters behind him, Reggie had Alden take drawers of clothes to the dorm dresser. Curiosity got the best of Angelo, and he began browsing another drawing pad while ordering other drawers to be transported. Running across an incriminating drawing, Angelo began giggling.

Reggie wondered, "What's so funny," and had the final dresser drawer transported. He then turned to see what his lover was giggling at. Finding Angelo red-faced and almost hysterical, Reggie blushed, "I said that I never gave any dudes a second glance. I said nothing about girls."

Angelo giggled, "So, how much did you like her?"

"Enough to sketch her, like she asked me to," Reggie giggled. "I was doing it to give to her, but she told me to keep it. That was last June, before the school year ended. When school started in September, she had a boyfriend. Before we moved here, she had a different boyfriend; better lookin' than the first, but still kind o' blah, as far as I'm concerned."

Angelo giggled, "Do I detect a little jealousy, or is it remorse?"

Cracking up, Reggie shook his head, wrapped his arms around Angelo, and sniggered, "She was searching for Mister Right. I lucked out, and found my Mister Right by moving. Some cutie carrying a box said hi to me, and I almost tripped over my own two feet." Angelo provocatively mooed. Reggie giggled, "Are you going to help, or just glance through all my sketches?"

"I think I'd better do both," Angelo suspiciously smirked.

Reggie laughed, "Okay, later tonight, I'll sit there nude and draw my fantasy girl. You'll see for yourself that there's not much reaction, if any. Then I'll draw you again, this time all of you, in the buff. You'll see where my interests are, but you can't complain when I go bonkers and won't let you sleep."

"That sounds like fun to me!"

Reggie grinned, "Do you really need proof, babe?"

Rapidly shaking his head, Angelo smiled, "No, but it still sounds like an awesome way to spend some time alone with you. While you work on your fantasy girl, I'll start writing a song for you."

Reggie nodded and stole a tender kiss. He went to his closet, opened it, and had the contents transported to the dorm. Seeing the rest of the room was emptied of his stuff, Reggie began closing drawers, and Angelo followed his partner's lead, but still held onto the pad in his hand. They left the room, heard Karey and Cameron giggling beyond the other closed bedroom door, and went downstairs. Before walking out of the house, Reggie muttered, "Ya know, I think I am jealous." When Angelo scowled at him, Reggie shrugged, "If I had known you, and if we were boyfriends when I was ten or eleven, puberty might've been easier for me."

They stepped outside and Reggie closed the door. Walking down the steps, Angelo said, "I would've bent over backwards to make it better, Reg."

Nodding, Reggie smiled, "I know. You've done enough today to make that obvious. I still can't quite get over the other dudes in the shower though."

"As couples, they were occupied," Angelo reminded. They walked up the steps to townhouse number five, where Angelo held his hand on the security plate and stated his name. The door unlocked and they went inside. In her robe and PJs, Cecelia sat on the couch watching TV. She didn't say a word to Angelo or Reggie, even after they had greeted her. Untroubled, Angelo lead Reggie upstairs to his room.

As they had in the unit next door, Angelo concentrated on the desk while Reggie emptied the dresser. Angelo had a good Yamaha 61-key keyboard workstation connected to his computer that he had Alden transport. Occupied with the task at hand and softly chatting about their hopes for their first night alone together, they didn't hear Laxmi and Eugene come home, until they heard Cecelia loudly bitching, "You're letting him move out, with Reggie? What about me?"

Mrs. Diaz calmly asked, "What about you?"

"What're kids gonna say? My big bro is queer!"

Loudly, Eugene Diaz ordered, "SHUT IT AND SIT DOWN!" Up in his room, Angelo's eyebrows shot up and his mouth formed a cute little circle. Knowing his sister had crossed several lines, he went to Reggie and held him tight until the storm front passed.

"We have given you, and your brother, every chance, and tried to make your lives easier," Laxmi shouted. "You still haven't stepped foot out of this house either. Your brother took a chance today..."

"Several chances, actually," Eugene added.

Laxmi continued, "Not only has he found a boyfriend that cares for him, he met many other boys and made friends. He made his bed, he cleaned up after his breakfast, he even gathered the trash and took it out at some point. But here you sit, glued to the TV. Are you afraid?"

"No," Cecelia meekly offered.

Eugene asked, "Do you think your better than all these other kids?" There was silence.

Laxmi sighed, "It's a good thing that we've moved here then, not only for our family, but for you in particular. You're starting school tomorrow, so you can mix in with the other kids, and hopefully realize that you're no better than any of them."

Cecelia incredulously squealed, "You're punishing me?"

Eugene sighed, "The fact that you see school and mixing with the others as a punishment proves that we erred somewhere along the line. Your actions and language upsets us. Angelo is not queer, or any other derogatory expression; he is in love. He's proved responsibility at home, so what excuse could we give him to keep him home? Whomever makes him happy, makes us happy, and it would be the same with you, whether you find a boyfriend or a girlfriend, makes no difference. To us, all that matters is that our kids are happy."

Laxmi more calmly said, "If you had taken a trip out of the house, maybe you would've met Lindsay Gibbons. Lindsay is your age, has two loving parents, several newly adopted siblings, and her big brother is in love, and married to another fine young man. Michael Gibbons and Derrick Seibert were my students, and are now leaders of this Clan, just like Preston and Keith. Without the help of those boys, we would've lost our home, before your father completed his internship. Instead, we're here, employed and living in a house that's at least as large, and much nicer than our old house. We're selling our old house, without rushing because we have to sell and move.

"I don't know who taught you that being gay is bad, but you certainly did not learn it from us. Tomorrow, you will meet Lindsay, and many other girls your age. If you learn nothing else, you'll learn that you are no better than any other girl here."

Weeping, Cecelia whined, "I don't wanna. I miss my friends. I don't want to be here."

"I'm sorry you feel that way," Eugene sincerely said. "The fact is that your mother and I are employed here, and are quite happy with our home, with the other adults we've met and gotten to know, and with the orphaned children that we've met. This is a nice community. If you'll just try, I think you'll like it here too."

"Please try," Laxmi begged.

Shaking her head, Cecelia hurried up the stairs and into her room. Eugene and Laxmi sighed, turned the television off, and followed their daughter up the stairs. Seeing lights on in both of the smaller bedrooms, they realized that Angelo was home, most likely with Reggie, and the boys had heard everything. Laxmi went into the second room, found her daughter laying across her bed and still weeping. She set the alarm clock in the room and reminded, "We're going to eat at the CIC in the morning, and then we're going to school." The door closed for a brief mother-daughter chat.

Eugene went into his son's room. He found Angelo and Reggie still in a tight embrace, and softly offered, "I'm sorry for what she said. As I'm sure you both heard, that's not what we taught her."

Angelo looked up at his dad, frowning, "It was her friends, it had to be. Some kids don't like the Clan, and just don't get it."

"We do get it," Eugene assured. "Every kid deserves a decent chance, even your sister. Please don't hold her words against her; together, we can correct those misconceptions."

Genuinely willing, Reggie asked, "How can we help?"

"Little things make the biggest impact," Eugene smiled. "Come home once in a while, just to show her that we're still a family, and how two young men in love act. Eventually, she'll learn that her friends were wrong, and that the world is full of different kinds of people. Differences used in a negative manner are what caused Battle Of Earth, and caused your mother to lose her job, for that matter. We can allow our differences to separate us, or we can use them to make us stronger."

After checking with Reggie and receiving a firm nod, Angelo said, "We'll do that."

Coming into the room, Laxmi smiled, "So, how many friends did you make today?"

Reggie giggled. Angelo chuckled, "It started with four this morning; Erik, Travis, Lance and Scott. Then we met Ray and Tony."

"And then Reyes, Ryan, Chris and Jay," Reggie grinned.

Angelo continued, "We wrapped up lunch with Nate, Prez, Keith, Troy and Sean. By dinner, we added Phil and Owen."

Reggie explained, "The day seemed pretty complete at sunset, but then we met another new kid, Matt Thornton. He just arrived today with his dad. Through Matt, we met Kassidy."

"That's nineteen total," Angelo cheekily grinned. "Almost all of 'em live at dorm three."

"A full first day," Eugene chuckled. He hugged both boys, and then stepped back to allow his wife to kiss the boys good night.

* * * * *

Ewa Beach, Dormitory 3, Room 118

Tuesday, November 9, 2004 10:22PM HTZ

After the water blaster battle, Tony and Ray played with the dildos as they had planned. They took their time and enjoyed the intimacy. Since that was so much fun, Ray tried mounting Tony. He tried several times in various positions, but Tony was a fair bit larger than the five-by-four dildo. Embarrassed, frustrated and feeling very sad, Ray sincerely apologized, believing he had completely destroyed their budding partnership.

Seeing Ray on the verge of tears, Tony gently shushed him and then rolled to reach for one of the dildos. He lined up the toy with his bone, to show Ray that there was a considerable difference. Once Ray agreed that Tony had near seven-by-five inches, Tony lined up the dildo with Ray's erection. Again, there was a fair amount of difference. Ray was about six inches long and visibly thicker than the toy, near Tony's circumference. Lastly, Tony lubed Ray's bone, and then mounted him. Even though he was older and Ray wasn't quite as large, Tony still had some challenges. Getting all of Ray inside, Tony remained very still for a while, until he got used to the new sensation.

Smirking at Tony's varying twisted expressions, Ray implored, "You don't need to exaggerate."

Remaining perfectly still, but panting like he was exerting himself, Tony smirked, "This ain't an exaggeration, pretty boy. An inch difference might as well be a foot." Slowly, Tony rode up and more slowly lowered down, causing Ray to gasp. Wearing a mischievous smile, Tony huffed, "Woof!"

Ray giggled, "Please don't move again. I'll cum."

"Omigod!" Tony cheered, "I can barely believe you feel this good! By the time I'm fourteen and you're thirteen, I'm gonna be your slut! Six months from now... WOOF!"

Taking hold of Tony's stiffy, Ray digressed into a giggling fit. Only Tony would've gone to such lengths to prove there was no reason to be frustrated or sad. Tony wore the widest smile and the dreamiest eyes, like none of what he was experiencing was real, but it was pure ecstasy. In a rapture induced stupor, Tony softly whimpered, "Omigod. This is awesome! It's gonna get so much better too. My bi days are officially over."

Barely controlling himself, Ray giggled, "It really feels that good?"

"Omigod!" Tony cheered. "The dildo was cold. You're so warm. The dildo didn't give even a tiny bit. I can feel your bone pulsing. You're so much better, I can't begin to describe it all." Carefully and slowly, Tony leaned down closer to Ray so he could whisper, "I really love you so much."

"I love you too," Ray whispered. With less of Tony's weight on his hips, and feeling like only half his erection was inside his new boyfriend, Ray thrust up. Tony gasped, and then began placing a series of tender kisses around Ray's lips, encouraging him to keep going. Again and again, Ray pumped, Tony gasped, and the kisses became more urgent. Ray released Tony's erection and held his head firmly in place for the grande finale tonsillectomy. Feeling throbbing and extra moisture, Tony helplessly chortled into their kiss. Needing to breathe, Ray turned his head and puffed, "Omigod! That was amazing!"

Evilly snickering, Tony gushed, "I agree; it was better than I ever expected."

"I can't wait to get you inside me," Ray confessed.

Locking eyes, Tony smiled, "I can wait. It don't matter if it takes days, or weeks, or months. I won't risk hurting you, and I absolutely loved the ride."

Ray confirmed, "You really won't mind waiting?"

"Course not," Tony giggled and squeezed his new partner tight. He pulled back a little to share, "What made this day totally awesome to me was everything we've done since lunch. Nate hugging us while we were dancing during the concert proved that he's genuinely happy for us. We ate together as boyfriends for the first time. Then we hung out in the rec room, making it obvious to everyone that we're not just buds and roommates any more. Then we played in another water blaster battle with almost every dude at both bases, wearing only Mr. Fuzzy G-strings. Topping off all that awesome stuff is what we've been doing alone."

Lowering back down again, Tony whispered in Ray's ear; "Three orgasms each this afternoon, and tonight, two for me and three for you. Your three took longer tonight than the three you had this afternoon." Ray began giggling. Tony chuckled, "And let me remind you of something else, pretty boy; it's no accident that I didn't unroll a rubber on your bone. I wanted it natural because I wanted you to have my virginity. You made me yours, in the very best way. When it's your turn and you succeed, you'll feel exactly how I feel; like it's not just words, or hopes, it's real. You're the best part of me now."

Giggling insanely, Ray gushed, "Just this morning, I used to think you always went out of your way looking for new, fun and interesting stuff; that you were rarely ever serious." Noticing Tony's wide eyes and mischievous grin, Ray laughed, "It's just you, Tony. Even when you're being seriously super romantic, telling me all this awesome stuff, you say it like it's the newest, most interesting, most enjoyable thing you've ever discovered. Can you tell me how you do that?"

Tony chuckled, "It's you, me and us. In this case, all I was doing was trying to get you inside me. When I managed that, it really was the newest, most amazing feeling I've ever experienced. There was a point when I thought that I wouldn't manage it. I only thought, I need to know that I can be your bottom, and you needed to know that you can be my top. A minor adjustment and the ache faded, only to be replaced with the most awesome feeling ever. This time, entry seemed to be damned near impossible, but once you got far enough inside, suddenly it was easy, and so beautiful. I wasn't exaggerating, Ray, not in the slightest." He stole a tender kiss then backed off slightly and giggled, "Woof, pretty boy! I've got you now, and I ain't ever lettin' go!"

Knowing that Tony had just done it again, Ray howled laughing. Making matters worse, Tony began munching on Ray's neck, and softly giggling, "Gonna make you hard. My butt needs filling again."

"Oh no!" Ray cackled, "It's my turn to try, and you're still hard too, you lunatic!"

Playfully, Tony checked, "You know I'll love you no matter what?"

Knowing what Tony was asking, Ray giggled, "Yeah."

Lowering down on top of Ray, Tony snaked his arms underneath his love and rolled them over. Before releasing Ray to try again, Tony softly suggested, "Why not wait until tomorrow morning? Right after we wake, you'll be relaxed. Take your time, but please don't be disappointed if your body isn't ready. I know your heart and that you're trying. That's all that matters."

After grabbing a deep kiss and hugging Tony tight, Ray smiled, "I really love you."

"I know," Tony dreamily sighed. "You've gotta be totally relaxed. Pushing, like you're taking a dump, I learned doesn't work. When I tried that, I almost pushed you out. Remember, you told me to stay still, but I would've anyway, because I was trying to stay relaxed. Once you were all the way in, it changed to a full feeling. Even the little movement I made to lean forward, closer to you, felt good. When you took over, it felt awesome. Stay relaxed, and remember, I'll always love you, no matter what, okay?"

Ray nodded and stole another kiss, and then admitted, "I feel kind o' weird."

"Why?"

Ray shrugged, "I guess it's a couple o' reasons. Everything's been so kewl with us as roommates and friends; I don't wanna be the reason that changes. I'm the gay boy and I really want to, but couldn't do what you did." He briefly paused, and then giggled, "Bi boy."

Before Ray could say more, Tony grinned, "Let me deal with this one at a time?" Ray smiled and nodded, so Tony offered, "You just told me what you were thinking and feeling. That really matters to me; it's what I want most of all. It's what I've wanted since we met. Do you know why it means so much to me?"

Shaking his head, Ray muttered, "I'm not sure, and I'd rather hear what you have to say."

"Okay," Tony smiled, "let's start at the beginning, when we met. I was attracted to you from the start, and since you told me that you felt like you had known me longer, that says you had some level of attraction for me too. All I was thinking was, 'Damn, he's cute! I'd like to get to know him.' At the same time, what were you thinking?"

"He's nice, and social, and fun," Ray giggled.

Tony nodded and explained, "Immediate attraction, covered. So becoming roommates and following up on the attraction was good for both of us, but that didn't make us boyfriends, it made us friends, anxious and willing to learn about each other. Saturday, Sunday and yesterday we did everything together, because we wanted to, not because we had to. Look back and rewind the little, every day things, like eating and goin' to the bathroom. We shared meals, but there were times that I wanted a drink or a snack, and you went to the CIC with me, even though you didn't always want something. When nature calls is different for everybody, and that's the only times I can honestly recall minutes of separation. Am I right?"

Ray giggled, "Pretty much."

Tony asked, "Was there ever a time where you purposefully did something with me that you really didn't want to do?"

"I warned you that I sucked at basketball," Ray giggled.

Tony sniggered, "And your dad told you that you're too young to lift weights, which we proved was at least partially correct."

Ray softly confided, "I didn't want to be alone, Tony. There were so few reasons to do anything other than go home after school. I always wanted things to be different, to do something more than homework and watch TV. My first few months of junior high were lonely. The best part of it was spending more time with my dad."

Already aware of Ray's prior lifestyle, Tony shared, "And I wanted things different too. I had six good friends, but I was the common link between all of 'em. Two despised each other, and two put up with each other. There was never a time where all seven of us could be together. The point being, the two of us haven't been lying to each other. We hid a little bit, until today, but there was enough honesty to allow us to break through the hidden facts. Honesty is what got us here, Ray. I'm not the tiniest bit angry or frustrated right now. You're still here, naked and sharing with me. Today's our first day, our first times as boyfriends, and tomorrow's another day for us. Everything's gonna get better, every day. Someday soon, first times will be over, and then we'll be able to make love easily."

After a brief pause, Tony checked, "Is there anything else buggin' you?"

Ray shook his head. He gave Tony a short but deep kiss, and then asked, "Wanna watch TV?"

"If there's something good on, and I can hold you close," Tony answered. Ray rolled off Tony and reached for the remote control on the night table. After checking the channel listing, they found 'Phenomenon' had just begun on one of the movie channels. Ray had seen it once before and liked it, but Tony had never seen it. Kicked back against the headboard, they watched the flick. Softly talking during the movie, they shared even more when movie plot points stirred memories. They also chatted about Angelo and Reggie, and about Phil and Owen; agreeing that they had a growing circle of close friends. Afterward, Ray changed to a music channel, lowered the volume and set the timer. For the first time, they fell asleep spooned up together in Ray's bed.

Down the hall, in room twenty-six, Angelo had started his ballad for Reggie and gotten pretty far along in the composition. At the same time Angelo was working, Reggie was sketching his bikini clad fantasy girl and proved that his dick hadn't changed in the slightest. He then started another masterpiece, of Angelo reclining naked on a bed. Only minutes into the drawing, Reggie was softly giggling. Angelo turned to his new boyfriend. Before he could ask what was funny, Angelo noticed Reggie's dick was stiff and bouncing. With his concentration destroyed, Angelo played the ballad he had written, went to Reggie and knelt down between his legs. It was almost midnight when Reggie paused work on the drawing, and then pulled Angelo up onto the bed so they could make love.

* * * * *

Columbia, SC, I77 and Shop Road Intersection

Wednesday, November 10, 2004 5:47AM EST

The truck driver named Dan took the Shop Road exit to drop off Paul Owens. Paul thanked Dan for the ride. Dan wished Paul the best of luck, and watched the teen android walk off to the Northwest, toward the city. Paul was still in Dan's sight when he dialed the phone number of the first of his four friends that live close to the intersection. Whether Paul thought he needed help or not, the man was not about to let a thirteen-year-old boy, android or not, walk the streets and fend for himself. Before getting off of the I77 loop and continuing his way north, Dan had awakened each of his four friends, gave them descriptions of Paul and what he was wearing.

Paul had a two mile walk on Shop Road to get to the center of town, where he could find work, hopefully a place to sleep and disappear into the city. Relieved of the heavy weights he had been burdened with for more than a day, Paul kept a brisk pace during his walk into the city. However, Paul had been awake all night and the stress of the prior day was wearing him down. Being alone was very different as well; Paul couldn't help wishing Ryan was beside him. Logically, Paul knew Ryan was safe and happy with Reyes, but now, on the familiar streets of Columbia, memories surfaced.

Approaching the intersection of Barlow Road, Paul stumbled. Two pairs of hands caught Paul, saving him from a potentially nasty spill. On Paul's left stood a woman and on his right stood a man. Both were middle aged, probably in their early forties, Paul reckoned. He softly thanked them both.

"It was no trouble," the man warmly smiled. "We were here, on our way to breakfast, and happened to be in the right place at the right time."

The woman purposefully took on the over-protective mother role, impatiently huffing, "You're coming to breakfast with us, young man. What in the world you're doing wandering around with a suitcase, this early in the morning, I don't even want to know."

The man grinned, "Bea, you're a terrible liar. Of course you want to know, but you're attempting to be nice about it."

The banter between the married couple continued, only allowing Paul to get one word in - his name. They walked with Paul and led him to a cafe. Of course, Paul had little choice but to accept the invitation to breakfast. What Paul didn't know was that the man and woman were friends of Dan's. Also, Paul didn't know that the woman had gone to the ladies room mostly to phone the other three couples to let them know where Paul was. During his first hours away from the Clan, Paul was being watched, guided and cared for by regular 'normal' citizens of Columbia.

Another thing Paul failed to realize was that in his haste to pack, the Clan comm-badge on the shirt he was wearing fell into his suitcase. When Paul left the Owens' home, Stevie immediately contacted Reyes and Ryan, who had just completed the cozy cuzzy fuzzy battle.

Changing into some dry boardies, Reyes and Ryan discussed the situation. Their first instinct was to immediately transport to Sullivan's Island, but they also realized that Paul felt trapped. Intercepting him wouldn't help that perception. Clan Short was not a prison, so Reyes told Stevie to track Paul and display all available camera feeds to their flat's TV. At almost every intersection Paul walked past, Reyes and Ryan saw him. They didn't see Paul get in Dan's truck, but they did see the eighteen wheeler from Interstate highway cameras, and they did see when Paul got out of the truck, and his walk on Shop Road. Through Stevie and Alden, Reyes and Ryan learned that Ark had monitored the phone calls the truck driver had made.

At midnight in Ewa Beach, Ryan asked Stevie to wake his new parents, Jon and Mary, and also wake Marc and Danny. It was minutes after six in the morning at Sullivan's Island when Reyes and Ryan explained their decision to Jon, Mary, Marc and Danny via teleconference. Now Reyes and Ryan could go to bed, knowing that Paul would be monitored from Sullivan's Island.

* * * * *

Ewa Beach, Dormitory 3, Room 118

Wednesday, November 10, 2004 4:56AM HTZ

Having a nightmare of Battle Of Earth, Ray Varga softly whimpered in his sleep. His dad had died, much more savagely than he had in reality, but none of the sheriffs acted like Ray mattered. Instead of taking him directly to a refugee center, and insuring he was safe under Clan Short care, Ray was left to wander the streets in a grief induced daze. Rather than getting help, Ray was another casualty; robbed, stripped, beaten and raped. Left in an unconscious state to die in an alley, Ray was repeatedly kicked about the body by passersby. With a jolt, he woke in the dark room. The only thing he saw was the digital clock display. He reached over to where Tony was still sound asleep and softly called his name.

Getting a soft hum in response, Ray whispered, "I need to talk, Tony."

Barely aware, Tony pulled Ray close, asking, "What's wrong?"

"I had a nightmare," Ray sorrowfully admitted.

Taking a deep breath, Tony forced his eyes open, prompting, "Tell me about it."

"Friday was bad, and everything stayed bad, and then got horrible," Ray shared. "My dad... chopped up into pieces. I was beaten to a pulp, raped and left to die."

Tony sighed, "I'm sorry. A nightmare was bound to happen."

"I wish it hadn't," Ray groaned.

"Friday was horrible," Tony reminded. "I was there too. Dodger Stadium was our closest evac center. I was walking in that direction, but couldn't get there by foot. I couldn't find anyone to help me, and wound up asking some street gang dudes for help."

Ray smirked, "You were lucky they were kewl, Tony. Instead of getting you to the Clan, God only knows what another gang might've done."

Tony smirked, "Beaten to a pulp, raped and left to die?"

Staring at Tony in shock, Ray asked, "Are you saying..."

Tony interrupted, "Think about it; you haven't had a nightmare the last four nights, when a bunch of other kids did. What makes tonight different from the last four days is us, together as a couple."

"So I changed your nightmare into my own?"

Tony nodded and grinned, "The mind works in really weird ways, usually when we least expect it. You know I was scared. The main difference between you and me is, you spent more time at home, where I went home to eat and sleep." Chortling, Tony teased, "You put yourself in my shoes, pretty boy. I guess this means that you love me, huh?"

Ray giggled, "I do, but right now I'm torn if half, wanting to smack the shit out of you, for taking chances that caused my nightmare."

Widely smiling, Tony provocatively joked, "Whip me, beat me, make it hurt so-oo-oo good!"

Bounding up and onto Tony, Ray tickle attacked, giggling, "You could've been killed, you jerk! Where would I be then?"

Half-heartedly blocking Ray's hands, Tony cackled, "Tickling someone else, no doubt, you pretty gay boy!"

"Oh yeah," Ray sarcastically giggled, "there's such a long list to put my slick moves on too."

"There's long lists and then there's long dicks," Tony roared.

"Ooo, yeah, Vaziik!" Ray giggled.

Tony sniggered, "Do you think it gets greener when it's hard?"

Pausing his attack for a moment, Ray grimaced, "I hope not."

Tracing a fingertip along the side of Ray's erection, Tony giggled, "Your lips say no, but I think you liked something an awful lot."

Reaching back for Tony's bone, Ray reminded, "Technically, it is morning."

Tony smiled, "Your nightmare proved how much you love me; that's plenty proof for one morning."

Nodding, Ray said, "That's part of why I need to do it. I really do love you very much."

Ready, willing and able, Tony guided Ray down for some kisses and dry humping. After a couple of minutes, Tony whispered, "You know everything's perfect as it is, right?"

Ray smiled, "It's perfect for you because you got some already. I need to be there with you, Tony."

Indifferently shrugging, Tony promised, "We'll keep trying until it's right. If that's not now, then we'll try this afternoon, and again later tonight. There's no rush."

Pushing up off Tony, Ray giggled, "Being as awesome as you're being is only making my decision."

Reaching for the bottle of lube on the night table, Tony then handed it to Ray, instructing, "Use a lot, on me and in you. If you're not able, don't worry about it; we can try again any time."

Nodding, Ray did as he was told. During the preparations, Ray leaned over for more kisses, and Tony reached down to gently massage Ray's butt hole. Grabbing a final kiss, Ray pushed up and reached back. Tony held his stiffy at the base, keeping it in position. Ray closed his eyes and thought only of Tony; his best friend and roommate for going on the fifth day; the one he cared so much about that his imagination and subconscious went off on frightening tangents.

In small increments, Ray tried, backed off and tried again. With each attempt, Ray got more of Tony inside him until, at last, many minutes later he had his cheeks pressed firmly against Tony's hips. For the first time in his life, Ray felt like he was completely alive and aware. Tony's whispered words of pride seemed to be shouts. The light breeze coming in from the windows felt like Arctic blasts. And lastly, Tony's pubes felt like velvet against Ray's butt. Both remained motionless for about another minute, and then Ray wiggled his butt around, making Tony gasp and groan.

Now that he had success, Ray let his body take control and rode Tony for a while. Watching Ray's torso bend fluidly, like that of a snake, Tony could barely believe his eyes; his cute boyfriend looked so damned hot. Completely amazed with how good he felt, Ray wanted to experiment with alternative positions. He got up and turned around to face Tony's toes, and then lowered down again. Entry was easier and the ride every bit as good. Not wanting it to end too quickly, Ray got up and lay beside Tony. Chuckling insanely, Tony rolled over for more kisses and to express his extreme pleasure.

Much to Tony's surprise, Ray wanted more. Pulling his legs up, Ray prompted Tony to take control. Soon after Tony did so, they discovered it was a lot different from going for rides. Working it out together, they found another new method; shallow entry and complete exit felt good for both of them. Reaching down, Ray guided Tony's erection. Tony controlled entry, which was a monumental effort for any thirteen-year-old. They started kissing and desperately calling one another's names, leading directly to the first set of orgasms.

Panting and sweating, Tony collapsed beside Ray. Carefully watching Tony catch his breath and cool down, Ray began giggling. Turning only his head toward Ray, Tony grinned, "Woof, pretty boy."

Ray laughed, "You were amazing! Now I know how you felt last night."

"It only lasted two or three minutes," Tony sniggered.

Rolling to Tony and grabbing a kiss, Ray giggled, "They were the best minutes of my life! Slow don't mean stop, Tony."

"I was already going slow," Tony cheekily grinned. "Besides, if I didn't stop once in a while, three minutes would've been more like thirty-seconds." Giggling insanely, Ray rolled on top of Tony and stole many kisses.

Thrilled with one another, Tony decided it was his turn to get some of Ray. Already on his back, Tony lifted his legs and playfully prompted Ray to take him. Ray laughed his ass off. He had never gotten off more than once in a day, and rarely more than twice in a week, but in one day he had surpassed a months worth. Yet, he pushed up and prepared to do his duty for his boyfriend.

What they lacked in experience, they more than made up for in passion and silly pleasure. The first signs of daylight were seen from beyond the window blinds. They swapped twice more, this time each tried it doggie style. Again, they found a way to make this position work, allowing the bottom to take complete control and do most of the work.

Afterward, in a semi-conscious stupor, they decided to take an intimate shower together, before other dudes woke. While soaping up, they discovered that their butts were sore, leading to the reluctant decision to limit themselves to masturbation or oral sex for the rest of the day. Cackling hysterically between kisses, they realized that they'd be lucky to walk comfortably to the dining room and back. They finished cleaning up, got dressed, and then went to the CIC for breakfast.

Surprisingly, the Core Rimmers were awake, and so were their sons, and so were most of the telepathic kids. Not expecting anyone awake at half past six in the morning, Tony and Ray waved at the quadruple Rs, Lance and Scott, and Chris and Jay. The Stoeher twins began giggling, which set off the quadruple Rs and their boyfriends. John sent one short message to the new couple; 'Can you turn down the glow a few notches? It's early and you're brighter than the rising Sun.' With that, almost everyone in the room began chortling. All the Core Rimmers flashed thumbs-up at the couple.

Turning beet red, Tony and Ray realized that John's message wasn't private. Madly giggling, they went to the kitchen. Tony ordered pancakes, scrambled eggs, bacon and sausage patties, and then went to get a bowl of fruit and a large glass of pineapple-orange juice. Equally famished after the pre-dawn romp around the bed, Ray got waffles, a breakfast sandwich with an over-easy egg, bacon and cheese on an English muffin, and a medium chocolate shake. When Tony and Ray left the kitchen for the dining room, the large group were gone.

In the now barren dining room, Ray and Tony chose a small table and sat across from each other. Tony teased, "Everybody knows everything about us now, pretty boy."

Nodding and giggling, Ray forcefully pressed down on his sandwich, making yoke squirt out across the plate and onto the tray. Tony's eyes almost shot out of their sockets. "I'll lick that up too," Ray giggled.

Tony loudly cracked up. Softly giggling, Ray wagged his tongue at his lover. Breathlessly, Tony softly sniggered, "That's all it took for me to sprout wood."

Through giggles, Ray whimpered and then leered, "Don't tell me your hard?"

"Mostly," Tony smiled.

"After lunch, I promise."

Tony groaned, "God, I love you."

Buttering his waffle, Ray said, "You were so careful; that made what could've been uncomfortable really excellent. I'm devoted to you, Tony, because you're obviously devoted to me. You proved that yesterday and this morning."

"I am, completely. Maybe I was a little Saturday, but definitely every day since."

Softly, Ray prodded, "Please tell me how you feel?"

Tilting his head slightly because he had already shared a lot the last day, Tony wondered, "What do you mean?"

Shrugging, Ray giggled, "We've changed everything. In your opinion, what were the best and worst parts?"

Putting his fork and knife down, Tony reached both hands across the table. Beaming, Ray took Tony's outstretched hands. "Until yesterday afternoon, I only had hopes," Tony began. "I hoped that maybe you'd be into a little experimentation. I agreed with Nate's plan just to prove to you that trying stuff is normal. I hoped that maybe we'd become a little closer; two bi dudes willing to offer a helping hand. We'd grow up and always have that closeness, best buds and a little more. Instead, I got a dude who knows exactly what he wants and needs; a dude who is more mature than I am, at the very least in this respect. I'm really very proud of you; I was before lunch yesterday, and it's only more intense now. Even though I kept telling you it could wait, you wanted intercourse, and were determined to succeed. That tells me a lot more about you; because there really wasn't much reason to be that determined before today. I'm the bi dude who's decided to go completely gay, for the best partner in the world; the one I'm committing myself to, the one I'm devoted to, and the one I'll love the rest of my life."

Most of the time Tony was speaking, Ray sat there brightly smiling. Reaching up, Ray wiped away stray happy tears. Tony bounced his eyebrows, pushing Ray into soft mooing, and then a giggling fit.

They ate breakfast, softly talking about other thoughts and feelings their new relationship made necessary. Tony asked, "Now that you've experienced gay sex, how do you feel? Is it what you thought it would be?"

Although chewing his breakfast sandwich, a wide smile split Ray's face. When he swallowed, Ray giggled, "It's better in lots of ways, mostly because of you."

Tony chuckled, "I didn't do anything special."

"Com'on, Tony!" Ray cackled, "Everything was special! Because you said you're bi, I didn't expect anything you did."

Shrugging, Tony mumbled past the food in his mouth, "Maybe some bi dudes are closer to the straight side. I think I was straddling the center and could easily go either way." Lifting his glass of juice, and swallowing a mouthful, Tony then grinned, "For you, I would do anything you want, anytime. All I need to know is that you love me. The best parts weren't sex; it was you snuggling up to me. Each time you did that, I got hard again. That's a pretty clear indication of what I like."

Leaning over the table, Ray warmly smiled, "Did you really like everything we did; your not just saying it to make me happy?"

Pausing his breakfast, Tony smirked and softly explained, "I won't lie to you, ever, especially about how I feel. Before I ever got to hug or kiss you yesterday, I loved you. Yes, I loved when my pretty boy went for it orally, and I loved when you got determined this morning, but what I love the most is holding you and being held by you. When we hugged in the rec room last night, we were close enough to feel everything, from heartbeats to limp dicks under our clothes. That's as much of rush as everything else; feeling my lover's goods in his normal limp state. Did you notice that?"

"Yep," Ray giggled.

"We're both sore from this morning's games," Tony continued. "I'm not bothered at all about limiting our private games today, because I'll be getting and giving away lots of hugs and kisses all day. Give me an excuse and I'll grope your pretty butt, in front of everybody. Feel free to do the same to me, dude. Nothing I've said or done is fake, Ray. I want to make us last forever, but I need you to want that too."

"I do!" Ray gushed. "It's just a big surprise, Tony. Part of me still thinks that I must be dreaming. I've got a boyfriend, one that's my best friend, one that's a little older, who I can talk to about anything. I never dreamed this could happen; I barely ever thought about it. Only when I saw a Core Rimmer couple would I think, 'that would be real nice'. Instead, I've been awake over an hour with my boyfriend; we made love in our room, and we showered together again, taking the time to bathe every inch of each other. We live in a hall that's full of dudes my age, all of whom I like, but they're nothing like you." Pausing, Ray sighed, "As happy as I am, I guess I need to know that you are too; that all this won't end because of something dumb I say or do."

Slowly shaking his head, Tony chuckled, "I am very happy with you. As for saying or doing something dumb, let me ask what you would do if you saw me gazing at Melonie's awesome knockers?"

Cracking up, Ray laughed, "Nudge you to wipe the drool off your chin!"

"The point being, I'm not perfect and I'm just as likely to do stupid shit as the next dude. I'm not perfect, and neither are you, but we're falling in love and kind o' forget that nobody's perfect. I'm very willing to work out a life time full of dumb stuff with you. Can you do that?"

Ray giggled, "Yeah."

"Even if Darren jogs by and my eyes are wagging in time with his dick?"

Ray cackled, "You'd definitely get smacked!"

"I'd deserve it," Tony sniggered, "and give you deep kiss, to remind you that I don't want him. I want you."

Returning to his breakfast, Ray giggled, "What if I don't get a nine-incher?"

"It don't matter," Tony grinned. "Your six-incher filled me real nice, and I can take it all into my mouth. Have you noticed any major change in your dick yet?"

"No," Ray giggled.

"One day, probably from a mirror, you will," Tony smiled. "If you don't notice, then I will. We'll probably miss breakfast and lunch that day." Intensely blushing, Ray howled laughing. Tony stoked the fire by teasing, "I'm sorry to say, I've already had that day. Looking down at it to take a leak, you won't notice, but in the mirror you will, which means that I'll probably notice before you do. Heaven help us both that day, pretty boy. If you think we're sore now, just wait."

Ray roared hysterically. When he finally chilled, and was about to return to his breakfast, Ray giggled, "You think a lot about dicks for a bi dude."

"Cos my pretty boyfriend has a nice grower that I really like playing with," Tony chortled.

Ray loudly laughed, "Tony!" He gestured to his plates of food, giggling, "Please stop, I can't eat."

"I'll be good for now," Tony chuckled. "And then after lunch, I'll be even better, when I try out some of my other wicked fantasies on you."

Concentrating on their breakfasts, Tony shared many evil glances and lots of giggling. Other kids began walking into the dining room, so Tony and Ray had to chill out. They were still there when constant streams of kids came into the room, so they took their trays to the dishwasher. Dorm brothers and other friends were greeted. All the twelve-year-olds from the short hall of dorm three got a large table together. Phil and Owen invited Tony and Ray to sit with them.

* * * * *

Ewa Beach Townhouse #1

Wednesday, November 10, 2004 6:00AM HTZ

Into Prez's sub-vocal, Alden softly called, "Prez? Yoo-hoo, Head Rimmer?"

Sleepily, Prez groaned then quietly wondered, "What's up, Alden?"

Alden sighed, "I'm sorry to have to wake you, bro, but there's a problem. Danny Page and Marc Furst would like to speak with you. I have a video teleconference pending. You can take the call at the computer in your bedroom."

Becoming more aware, Prez double checked, "A problem, and from Danny and Marc?"

"Yeah."

"Where's KC?"

Alden giggled, "Asleep with Fred Eckhart, over at dorm three; KC's not the problem for once in his life."

Forcing his eyes to open, Prez grunted and rolled away from Keith to the edge of the bed. He stood and staggered across the room to the computer workstation in his master bedroom. Dropping onto the chair, Prez wiped the sleep out of his eyes and yawned, "Go ahead and connect us."

The large monitor flickered, showing Danny and Marc sitting in a conference room with an adult man. All three were wearing standard white doctor smocks over their clothes. Danny quickly said, "I'm sorry to have to wake you, Prez, but I did wait a few hours, rather than wake you at three in the morning your time."

"It's okay," Prez smirked, "we got to bed before midnight for the first time in over a week. What's going on?"

Danny sighed, "It's the level three orphans, Prez. We've got thirty of the eighty here at Charleston. These thirty are kids that needed amputations, ranging from fingers and toes to partial limb removals, from the various gangrenous wounds."

Picking up where Danny left off, Marc said, "Physically, the new android parts are healing perfectly, but the kids are scared to death. They're so lethargic, we can't get them to go beyond the beginning stages of physical therapy, because they simply don't want to try. Beside me is Doctor Arthur Hubbard, our top child psychiatrist here. I'll let Doctor Hubbard explain further."

Leaning forward and resting his arms on the table top, Doctor Hubbard pleasantly said, "Good morning, Director O'Brian."

"Good morning, doc," Prez replied. "What's the situation there?"

Doctor Hubbard explained, "The children have gone from one frightening environment to another. We are treating all of the kids in our care appropriately for their physical and emotional states, given where they came from, but they're shutting down. My colleagues at Blank Children's Hospital, and at Children's Hospital of Philadelphia are witnessing the same recovery stagnation. Our original plan to begin getting kids to you this weekend is in jeopardy, unless we do something about this quickly."

Prez called, "Alden, why haven't you been showing these kids the same as the level two kids?" Keith woke from his husband's voice. Dazed, Keith looked around his new bedroom.

"We didn't know," Alden quickly replied. "The level two kids asked their doctors and nurses to be shown who saved them and where they would be going."

"Start the audio and video relays immediately," Prez ordered. "Begin the same process you and your brothers did with the level two kids. They don't get to watch regular television again until they're here with us. Until then, they watch us."

"We're on it," Alden, Kerry, Stevie, Jack and George announced.

Thoughtfully scowling, Danny wondered, "What's goin' on, Prez?"

Prez sighed, "It's a difference in the orphanage kids, guys. The level one kids showed here, cleaned up and looking great, but a little disoriented, because they were only treated over night. The level two kids, slightly worse off than the level ones, had the curiosity and presence of mind to ask, the very next day, who saved them and where they were going. Given the horrors of their lives, loved ones lost and those atrocious homes they were in, and then the confusion of the raids, I'd bet that at least half the rescued kids thought it was all a dream. Suddenly, they've got professional care givers treating them like people, and not insignificant annoyances. Alden and the AIs fed our base's surveillance audio and video to the level two kids. Those kids learned directly from us, and from the AIs, what to expect. For three-and-a-half days, those kids were introduced to each of us and this base. Upon arrival, they knew all of us and our parents, and what their first days would be like."

"Our children never asked," Doc Hubbard quickly interjected. "We've been dealing with them individually as severely traumatized children."

"Keep reading them individually," Prez recommended. "I've learned the last week, from all the kids here, that each responds differently; some may take more time and care, and others, like my first two sons, know exactly what they need and want. Even less traumatized kids sometimes take a few days to comprehend how their lives have changed. Remember, these kids were locked away in their rooms most of the time. The kids that are talking need to be talked to, so start grouping them together. Let them talk to one another and watch the television feeds our AIs are sending."

"This could work," Marc brightly smiled.

Nodding, Danny huffed, "If only we had known, we might've avoided every delay."

Smirking, Prez huffed, "I wish I had thought of it before now too."

"The children are barely speaking, giving us yes or no answers," Doctor Hubbard reminded. "We can't read minds, but we can understand what's meant when a child turns away and doesn't want interaction."

Sitting up in bed, Keith loudly called, "Alden, wake all the Core Rimmers, all our sons, and all our empathic and telepathic kids. We want the quadruple Rs, Inoyra and Relud Glith, Ida and Caitlan Durand, the Steib brothers and the Stoeher twins. Tell them to meet us in the CIC within half an hour. You might as well get Doc Wiener to join us too. Even if the kids aren't ready for him, he can consult with the doctors. After we brief our kids, we're going to start visiting our level three kids at the hospitals, beginning with Charleston."

Alden replied, "It's in progress, Keith."

Prez added, "It's obvious we won't be making it to school this morning, Alden. Let Jason and Trinity Taylor know what's going on, so we're not expected."

Kerry answered, "While Alden's doing those tasks, I've informed Julio and Jesse to gather the Des Moines empaths and telepaths. George is passing the word at Orlando headquarters. The Teddy Bear Brigade at Camp Little Eagle has been notified."

"Let's keep this organized," Prez ordered. "Pacific Rim Division will start at Charleston. Des Moines can start at Blank. HQ and Camp Little Eagle can start in Philadelphia. We'll swap around hospitals daily as necessary."

Clearly showing his relief, Danny giggled, "You guys are awesome, Prez."

"We're a team, Danny," Prez smiled. "Every division will help, as much as it can, I'm sure."

Joining Prez at the workstation and stopping behind his seated husband, Keith smirked, "We went through hell Wednesday night rescuing those kids. They'll get all the help we can give them." Keith then went to check on Dee, Gage, Richie and Sammy. Of course, Keith was naked and inadvertently gave Danny, Marc and Doctor Howard a brief show as he walked away from the camera. Danny and Marc widely grinned, but Doc Howard showed no visible sign that anything surprising had happened.

Prez nodded, "If the kids need extra time, they can have that too, but we want them here with us, as soon as they're able and ready. Right now, they have video in their rooms showing very little activity, because it's so early here. Once we get showered, dressed, and brief our kids, we'll be there, dudes. If you want to tell the level three kids anything, tell them help is on the way. Kewl?"

"Very kewl," Danny and Marc chorused.

"We'll see you soon. Prez out." The video connection ended. Prez turned in the chair to find Richie squinting at him. Prez chuckled, "Are you gonna count down, Richie?"

Going to his poppa, Richie complained, "I was havin' a real nice dream when Alden woke us."

Prez lifted his son, parked him on his lap, and grinned, "Was Jimmy in the dream?"

Richie smiled, "Course!"

Nodding, Prez sniggered, "You've got a really good boyfriend already. How kewl is that?"

"The kewlest!" Richie cheered.

Standing in the doorway and listening to the conversation, Keith quickly announced, "All you AIs are to refrain from waking mini-Rimmers who are having nice dreams about their significant others."

Alden giggled, "Yes Sir!"

"Does that mean that you are authorizing us to go on flagpole patrol?" Kerry asked with a wicked giggle.

Keith chuckled, "Tents in the middle of the sheet are the best clues."

"Daddy!" Richie incredulously giggled, "Jimmy don't gimme a stiffy all'a time; only when we're kissin'!"

Struggling to hold back his laughter, Keith nodded and giggled, "Lesson learned."

"You and Jimmy will be our secret weapons," Prez smiled. "We've got lots of really scared kids that need our help."

Sliding down off Prez's lap, Richie nodded, "What're we waitin' for?" and went into the master bedroom to run his bath.

Taking Prez in his arms, Keith softly giggled, "Everything poppa does and says, Richie imitates. You need to be really careful, T'hy'la."

Nodding, Prez sniggered, "I already am. He'll never see me having a hissy fit." After a quick kiss, they went into the bathroom to relieve themselves.

While his daddy and poppa were standing at the toilet, Richie sat in the tub and asked, "Tell me again why Jimmy couldn't sleep over last night, and why Gage and Sammy needed breaks too?"

Prez answered, "It's real simple, Richie. Think of a couple as two separate people. As a couple, you act as one, doing stuff together, right?"

"Right."

Prez explained, "And then there's you alone, and Jimmy alone, so really, there are three separate states you can be in. Me and daddy started as friends at seven, and had to be apart way more than we wanted. So we decided the best way to encourage you to be yourself, as well as half of a couple, is to split the time in thirds. You and Jimmy were together Saturday at the beach house. By Sunday, we saw you guys were serious. So, Sunday and Monday night you and Jimmy got to sleep together. Last night was your night to be only you, with us and with your brothers."

Finished at the bowl, Keith went to Richie at the tub to add, "Think of it as sharing your time with both families, Richie. Me and Poppa talked with Sean and Troy, so that we all get to be happy and spend time together. Since Dillon's with Scott, Derrick and Mike were part of the same conversation. We love seeing our boys hookin' up together, but at the same time, we want family time too. By splitting the time in those three ways, you and Jimmy can be here one night, then with Sean and Troy another night, and then home with us and your brothers the next night. It's a compromise, so that we all get to have the best times together."

Keith went to the shower and stepped inside. Prez checked, "Do you understand, Richie?"

Nodding, Richie sighed, "I guess. I still dreamed about him. That means I missed him."

"Me and daddy only got to have sleep-overs Fridays and Saturdays," Prez patiently reminded. Heading into the shower with Keith, Prez offered, "We missed each other and dreamed of each other too. We think this compromise is best for everyone. Instead of only two nights a week together, like me and daddy had, you and Jimmy only have two nights a week apart. So you and Jimmy can grow in our family, and in Sean's and Troy's family, and as a couple and as individuals. It's all good because we all get to have time together and be happy."

Soaped up and starting a slippery grind with Prez, Keith said, "All the Core Rimmers really love their sons. You guys make our jobs so much easier, especially when we're greeting newbies. These kids we're about to go meet are really scared, Richie. Since all of us are different ages, we can approach this job as a really big team. Maybe some of the kids need hugs. So, we all get to give them hugs, and show them what their new life will be like here. That's our job today; to show these kids they've already got friends. Before we get them here, we can show them that we're family, brothers and sisters."

Chapter 26

Charleston, SC, AI Hospital

Wednesday, November 10, 2004, 12:19PM

While the Core Rimmers prepared for their day, Marc, Danny and Doctor Hubbard made the rounds. Danny walked into a semi private room where two eight-year-old boys lay in beds, intently watching the television mounted high on the wall across from them.

Pretending to check the charts and not saying a word, Danny listened to Alden's voice on the television, calmly and gently saying, "This is the lavatory in dormitory three at Ewa Beach. Those four boys at the sinks are four of the Pacific Rim Division leadership team. The tallest and largest, brown haired boy is Jason Montigua. We call him Jay, just like his partner of three years, the blond boy beside him, whose name is Christopher Stokley. Beside Chris is Scott Shetley. Jay, Chris and Scott are fourteen years old. Beside Scott is his boyfriend, Lance Kinchen. Lance is thirteen years old. All four were made leaders yesterday. They're awake now and brushing their teeth, preparing to come visit all of you kids here. Visiting you guys is their first real mission, so they're anxious about meeting you. Of course, being anxious, that means they're a little afraid too. Are you afraid of meeting them?"

Not realizing Alden was an AI, or that he could see and hear them, one boy shrugged and the other nodded. To the boy that nodded, the four naked teens were huge and very muscular. Even thirteen-year-old Lance, the shortest and least developed of the four, was intimidating. Pouring on charm and understanding, manners that Danny had never heard from any of the Clan AI's, Alden pleasantly encouraged, "Please don't be scared. Let me assure you, all the Clan kids you'll be meeting this afternoon are the kindest, most caring people in the whole world. Some of them are responsible for rescuing you."

Alden paused to ask, "Danny, which orphanages are these boys from?"

After scanning both charts, Danny answered, "Los Angeles and San Jose."

"Perfect!" Alden cheered, and changed the audio/video feed to the bedroom where John and Stephen could be seen dressing. Alden introduced John and Stephen, and then added, "They were leaders of the team that rescued kids from San Jose. They're very special boys. Stephen is an empath, which means he can pickup and understand what you're feeling. That means he'll know what you need moments after entering the room, without either of you saying a word. John's an empath and has learned telepathy. That means he can feel your feelings and read your exact thoughts. Of all the very special people you'll meet today, you'll meet others that are exactly like John and Stephen. None of you guys will have to worry about anything anymore. They'll know exactly what scares you and make it better. It sounds too good to be true, doesn't it?"

Danny saw both boys mutely nod before moving on to the next room. Out in the hall, Danny softly muttered, "Un-fucking-believable. If I didn't know better, I'd swear that wasn't Alden."

Into Danny's sub-vocal, Alden giggled, "VI interfaces, Grandpa. Be nice or be wet!"

Danny grinned, "Which body of water are you planning on dropping me into now?"

"How embarrassed would you like to be?" Alden evilly snickered. "Prez and Keith are almost done making love in their shower. Next door, Derrick and Mike are also getting busy. I could drop you into either shower, or maybe you'd rather see for yourself that Sean Moorhead has one of the longest and thickest cocks in the Clan. Of course, you'll only see the half that Troy doesn't have in his mouth."

"A Rimmer isn't rimming?" Danny giggled, "I am surprised."

"That's Drew's and Jerry's preferred activity this morning," Alden sniggered.

Danny giggled, "Save the dunk for after our kids get helped, Alden," and stepped into the next room. Another two boys were being introduced to Kaleo and Tory, who were busily helping their youngest sons towel off. Mark and Marv were delightfully squealing, while Leonard and Russ laughed at their brothers and dads. For the first time in a week, Danny saw two small smiles form on two of his California Orphanage patients. From across the hall, Danny heard giggling.

Danny hurried to see which patients were actually giggling. Marc stepped out of the room, leaned against the corridor wall and uncontrollably laughed, "I retract my previous assumption. This not only could work, it's already working."

Danny grinned, "Who's giggling?"

"Greg Harmon started and Clark Pope joined him," Marc giggled. "It was the little guys that set them off, or Kaleo's evil cackling, I think."

Danny nodded and smiled, "I've only been in two rooms, but all four boys showed more interest in what they're seeing than anything else I've witnessed."

"Your four plus my six," Marc smiled.

Coming down the hall, Doc Hubbard added, "Plus the six girls I was just with. What completely confounds me is how none of us here even considered this solution."

Danny shrugged, "It wasn't a medical or psychological method."

Marc offered, "Paul, Reyes and Ryan never mentioned the level two kids while they were with us Monday."

"I knew the level two kids were expected at Ewa Beach," Danny smirked, "but something this simple never occurred to me."

From the room Marc had just left, both boys yelled, "OMIGOD!" No similar outburst had been heard from any of the kids, so Danny, Marc and Doc Hubbard hurried into the room. In the bed closest to the door, fourteen-year-old Clark was weeping. In the next bed, fifteen-year-old Greg pointed at the screen and shouted, "THAT'S HIM! HE'S THE ONE THAT SAVED US!" He then began crying and panting like he had expended all his energy.

Danny, Marc and Doc Hubbard turned to the television. Partially hunched over and pulling up his boardies over boxer shorts was Prez. Alden giggled, "Please meet Family Clan Short Pacific Rim Director, Preston O'Brian. Everyone calls him Prez. He's my boss and your leader, as soon as you're all well enough to join him, and his husband, Keith, at Ewa Beach."

Clark whimpered, "He's coming here... today?"

"OMIGOD!" Greg hollered, "We're... but... When? He can't! Not like this!"

From nine other rooms up and down the hall, nurse call buttons were pressed. Danny and Doc Hubbard raced out of the room. Noticing blood pressure monitors spiking, Marc firmly ordered, "Take it easy, guys."

"You don't get it!" Greg impatiently panted.

Covering his face, Clark sobbed, "We was dirty and naked when he saw us."

"We're not any better now either," Greg cried.

Gesturing at the beeping monitors, Marc pleaded, "Guys, slow down. You are better now than you were last week; you're clean and healthy. I've met Prez, and all the Pacific Rim leaders. If you treat them how you're acting now, you'll embarrass them, causing them to blush and giggle. They'll tell you that they're just regular guys. In every respect, they are normal teenagers."

Marc paused to hear Danny in his sub-vocal saying, "Every kid from San Francisco went nuts the moment they saw Prez. Believe it or not, we've got to calm these kids down."

"Alden," Marc loudly called, "find a Platinum Habits concert video and play that for the San Francisco group."

Danny loudly laughed, "Do not play 'Knocking At Your Back Door', Alden!" Remembering the beach house performance and three Rimmers shaking their tushes for the audience, Marc uncontrollably cracked up.

In every room that had a San Francisco kid, the video feed switched to the prior afternoon's concert of ballads and love songs. Almost immediately, kids began to relax to the music. Soon after Reyes began singing 'Just My Imagination', Clark Pope, a fair skinned African-American boy, went completely limp and slumped in his bed.

Checking Clark's vital signs, and then glancing at the television, Marc quickly confirmed that the boy had fainted. He pressed the button to lower the top half of the mattress so blood could return to Clark's brain, allowing the boy to come around naturally.

Greg wondered, "Is he okay?"

Nodding, Marc giggled, "Yeah. He'll be fine."

"That dude singing is really cute," Greg purred.

Marc giggled, "Yeah, but he's got a boyfriend already." He made a mental note to tell Reyes to be extra slow and careful around Clark. All the level three orphans were doing much better, but sudden changes in blood pressure could cause another fainting spell.

"Lucky guy," Greg grinned.

Marc gently asked, "Would you tell me a little about yourself, Greg?"

"My parents died June of 2000," Greg flatly answered. Looking back up at the television, Greg sighed, "I was put in that place, and it was worse than I imagined. The kids fought over food. I had to teach them to share. I never went to school again. Some of the kids never saw a school in their entire lives." Beginning to cry again, Greg muttered, "I tried and tried, but the adults wouldn't listen and didn't care. They locked us in our rooms, about twenty hours of every day, only letting us out to eat, clean up after ourselves and go to the bathroom. Even when we were together to eat, we weren't allowed to talk. We had a bucket in the closet if we needed..."

Reaching for tissues to wipe away the boy's tears, Marc softly said, "That's plenty, Greg. You must realize that you saved kids at your orphanage."

"I didn't save 'em all," Greg bitterly wept. "Some of the worst kids were taken away from there. I don't know where they went."

"I can tell you did your best though," Marc assured.

Wiping his eyes and trying to pull himself together, Greg whimpered, "Doctor Furst?"

"Yes?"

"Could I please put on regular clothes?"

"Are you ready to try and stand on your new foot?"

"I have to be. I don't want Prez seeing me like this, in a gown."

Taking off his white smock and laying it on the edge of the bed, Marc instructed, "First of all, enough of Doctor Furst. My name is Marc. I'll support you, get you in the shower and stay with you until your done. Then we'll get you into clothes, the quick and easy way."

Greg scowled, "Which quick and easy way?"

"Transportation out naked, and back fully dressed," Marc grinned. Thoughtfully humming, Greg began to turn and pull his legs off the edge of the bed. Marc wondered, "Is something wrong, Greg?"

Shrugging, Greg blushed, "I'm gay. Don't freak out if I pop a woody."

Marc smiled, "I promise, it won't be a problem for any doctor here."

"Without knowing it or really trying, I probably made all the dudes in our orphanage room gay."

Reaching around the teenager to untie the knot in his hospital gown, Marc explained, "You didn't make anyone gay, Greg; that's simply not possible. Guys may be homosexual, or bisexual, or completely heterosexual. Being a teenager, you can't always control it. As far as I'm concerned, you simply gave the boys some enjoyment in an otherwise dismal situation."

"We did everything though," Greg sorrowfully mumbled.

Marc shrugged then asked, "Did you force anyone to do anything?"

"No."

"Then you did what almost every boy does, and with the boys you were closest to. You don't need to feel guilty about that or anything else. The only guilty people at your home were the adults."

Greg wondered, "What happened to them?"

Marc called, "Alden?"

Over Marc's comm-badge, Alden flatly replied, "For fifteen violations against the Safe Haven Act, multiplied twenty times for each kid in the home, they were executed on the spot."

Greg blinked then smirked, "All the kids from my orphanage need to know that. I've had nightmares, so I'll bet other kids have too." He started wiggling his buns off the bed and Marc quickly took his left arm, to support the side that now had an android foot attached. When the foot hit the floor for the first time, Greg grimaced and moaned.

Pulling the boy's arm over his shoulders, Marc asked, "How does it feel?"

Greg scowled, "Kind o' asleep, but really cold."

Marc smiled, "Perfect. That's exactly the answer I hoped to hear." Marc guided Greg and pulled the IV stand along with them. They went into the room's bathroom, where Greg took his first shower alone in four years. In the bathroom with Greg, Marc at last got to explain that he had an android replacement foot that would grow with him. Supporting himself on the IV stand, Greg also got the standard Clan orientation lecture while Marc toweled him dry.

Coming into the room and greeting Clark, who was now awake and watching the Platinum Habits concert, Danny peeked into the bathroom to cheerfully tell Marc, "They're not even here yet and ten other kids with new toes, fingers, hands, arms, legs and feet are out of bed, getting cleaned up and dressed. One of those ten isn't even from San Francisco!"

"I wanna shower and real clothes too!" Clark yelled from his bed.

Gesturing to the main room, Greg giggled, "Guess who's awake. The whole time we was in that hell hole, he barely spoke."

Clark called, "Greg?"

"Yeah?"

"The next time you take a shower with a cute blond doctor, but without me, you'd better hope you can run and I can't!"

Watching Greg and Marc turn redder by the millisecond, Danny cracked up laughing. Danny was about to ask a question before Clark and Greg proved they had voices and could speak, but now he had to wait to stop laughing.

Sadly shaking his head, Marc tossed the damp towel over Danny's head and smirked, "Since you can speak, Greg, would you care to tell me why you haven't said much for a week?"

Nodding, Greg grinned, "I didn't trust you." Losing his smile and becoming very serious, Greg softly explained, "At our orphanage, there are three other boys like me and Clark, who were there less than four years. There's only one other girl who was there about two years. Other than the six, almost all the other littlest kids have been there too long to remember much other than hell. It's those littlest kids I'm worried about. They can barely understand and hardly ever speak. Without us oldest six, the other fourteen won't budge for nobody."

From beyond the bathroom doorway, a deeper voice asked, "What do you need to do, Greg?" A step inside the bathroom, Danny turned to the familiar voice, smiled and wrapped an arm around his Clan brother. Further in the room, just outside the shower and supporting Greg, Mark turned his head. Standing there naked before Prez, as he had been a week earlier, Greg whimpered, started breathing quickly and heavily, and then began to uncontrollably cry. Prez tapped Danny on the shoulder and stepped into the bathroom, softly asking, "Give us a few minutes alone, please, guys?"

Danny nodded and went out to the room, where Keith was leaning over the bed and consoling Clark.

On his way out of the bathroom, Marc briefly instructed, "It's his first minutes on a new foot, Prez."

Nodding and forcing a small smile, Prez took Greg in his arms, and assured, "I've got him." Marc closed the bathroom door behind him, then he and Danny went to check other rooms.

The floor of the new Charleston AI hospital that had been deathly quiet for a week was bustling with activity. The Rimmers had invaded the hospital with more than sixty helpers, not including Doc Wiener. Up and down the hall, Core Rimmers, their sons, boyfriends, and the gifted empaths and telepaths were checking on their newest brothers and sisters. Televisions played Platinum Habits ballads. Doctors, nurses and med-bots scurried from room-to-room, ensuring that the orphans didn't over extend themselves.

Gently and carefully, Prez tried to quiet the teenaged boy he had rescued and talked with the prior week. Already somewhat aware that Greg had tried to help kids in his orphanage, Prez had specifically told Alden to transport him to where Greg was. Similarly, Derrick and Mike transported to another room where a teenage boy from Los Angeles was recovering.

The first words from Greg that Prez barely understood were "Thank you," and "I love you."

Shedding quiet tears, Prez softly assured, "And I love you, and about four hundred and eighty other brothers and sisters. Do you believe me, Greg?"

Nodding, Greg sobbed, "I do. Only someone that has that much love could do what you did."

Purposefully conveying certainty and enthusiasm, Prez reminded, "You did the same, loving the kids in your home, under the worst circumstances."

With his face still buried against Prez's chest, Greg muttered, "Not like you though."

"Yeah, you did," Prez gently insisted. "I saw it for myself. Every kid in that kitchen was huddled up to you, as close as they could get. That tells me nineteen kids trust you. That's why I asked, what do you need to do?"

"I need to talk to the kids, but I can barely stand or walk. Marc about carried me in here."

"Then supporting you is my job. All you have to do is tell me when you're ready to start, and if your foot hurts. Then we'll park your butt in a wheelchair to finish the job. Kewl?"

Looking up at Prez with the immediate trust and love of a much younger boy, Greg wiped his eyes and smiled, "Kewl, Prez."

"Are you ready?"

Greg nodded and smiled up at his new friend, nervously admitting, "I'd do anything you told me."

Prez smiled, "We're a lot alike, bro. I do for every kid at two bases now, and I love the challenge." Reaching one arm over, Prez pulled a hand towel off the shelf and wiped Greg's face dry of tears. Prez then called Alden to get Greg dressed in "proper Pacific Rim Division attire." Leaning onto his IV stand, Greg phased out naked and back in wearing boardies and a Hawaiian button-down sport shirt.

"Awesome!" Greg excitedly gushed.

"I'll share something with you, so we can share it with all the other kids."

"Uh oh, that sounds serious."

Nodding, Prez leaned closer to help Greg stand, and to whisper,

"Every kid is awesome. It's only asshole adults that make kids believe their not awesome. Adults that have some major inferiority complex make kids believe they're awful, only so they can feel superior. What you kids are going to start learning today is that you're very important to us; each of you have value and worth."

"How can you know that, and say it like it's true?"

"It is true. It's so true that I brought a team of sixty here, and my brothers from Des Moines and Orlando are at two other hospitals. We want you kids as part of our Clan. Thousands of kids around the world are our brothers and sisters."

Shivering and shedding happy tears, Greg whimpered, "Why?"

"To change the world, bro; so what inferior adults have done will never happen again."

"You make me believe it's true."

"That's the key word, Greg - believe; believe in yourself and believe you can achieve a goal. Have a little faith and try, then watch the results."

Prez took Greg's left arm over his shoulder and led the way out of the bathroom.

As soon as Greg and Prez stepped into the room, on queue and as planned, Keith and Clark suspiciously huffed, "HARRUMPH!" Of course, Clark couldn't hold his suspicious glare and began giggling.

Keith evilly grinned, "Now I get to help Clark in and out of the shower."

"WHAT?" Clark incredulously squealed, "You didn't tell me that!" causing Prez and Greg to crack up.

Nodding and softly chortling, Keith told Clark, "You're my brother... my recovering brother, with a new right leg, from the knee down, according to Danny. It's a slippery job, but someone's got to do it."

Prez told Greg, "Keith's my husband. I completely trust him. The question is, do you trust Clark?"

Nodding, Greg giggled, "If he's got half a brain, he'll pop a bone, but will only wash it."

Wide-eyed, Clark gasped, "I don't believe you said that!"

Prez chuckled, "Find me a teenaged dude that doesn't get a chubby in the shower, and I'll have Danny prescribe Viagra to correct the issue."

Standing in the doorway, Marc sniggered, "The old man has a renewable prescription."

From the ceiling speakers, Stevie giggled, "I'm tellin' Grandpa you said that."

Effortlessly, Keith reached behind Clark and pulled the correct string to untie his gown.

Greg grinned, "It took Marc way longer than that!"

Prez nodded and chuckled, "Keith's really good at untying knots, and opening buttons and zippers."

"And Prez is good at flashing national officials, like Presidents and Kings!" Alden playfully offered.

"I wish I had seen that," Marc giggled.

Suddenly, the TV flickered and showed a video loop of Prez, talking to Colin Powell, Gordon Rice and King Aalona, from Friday morning, where his robe repeatedly slipped open. Marc, Greg and Clark cracked up.

Bouncing his eyebrows, Keith sniggered, "That was an interesting day for our entire Clan."

Through his chucking, Prez sweetly called, "Alden?"

"Yeah, I know," Alden giggled, "my first day with a body will be spent in the diving well and with Grandma Morrison."

Obviously confused, Clark and Greg asked, "You don't have a body?"

"No, I'm the much improved, better, faster, and cuter version of that ancient doctor standing with you!" Alden replied.

Unexpectedly, Greg groaned and pulled his left foot up off the floor. Concerned, Prez asked, "Are you okay?" Hurrying over, Marc knelt before Greg.

Greg shrugged, "It was a sharp pain, like stepping on glass."

Looking up, Marc reminded Greg, "The foot is making connections with your nervous system. This time it was sharp, another time it might be heat, or a tickling sensation." He then ordered, "Wiggle your toes a little." Greg did as he was told. Then Marc used a pen to tap around the top, sides and bottom of Greg's foot, checking that each tap was felt. Standing again, Marc smiled, "It's kewl. When you feel stuff like that, take a break to wiggle your foot and toes."

Prez asked, "Is Greg good to take a walk around with me? We need to visit some of the other kids, like he said."

"He's perfectly fine and should be able to put more weight on it as he walks around," Marc assured. "By the end of today, it'll be a little like a twisted ankle. Tomorrow, I'll be complaining because he won't stay in bed."

"Just like he complains about Great-Great-Great-Great Grandpa Danny!" Kerry giggled.

Clark asked, "What about my leg?"

Marc answered, "You'll feel similar sensations all the way up to your knee. It's completely normal, and will dissipate with continued use. It would help if you wiggled your toes, rotated your ankle or flexed your knee joint."

Slowly walking toward the doorway, with Greg carefully hobbling along beside him, Prez wondered, "How're you going to deal with the kids?"

Stepping out into the hallway, Greg shrugged, "It depends on the kid. With some, I can just tell them how it is. With others, I'll have to whisper in their ear. Now that I think about it, seeing you again might make them freak out."

Prez asked, "How can we correct that?"

Grimacing, Greg blinked and muttered, "I'm not sure. You'll need to hang back a bit, Prez. Maybe I could use crutches?"

Having an idea, Prez grinned, "How about a piggy-back ride?"

Greg gasped, "No!"

Prez playfully sang, "Yes," and maneuvered to stand in front of Greg, mindful to keep supporting his left side.

Embarrassed to near mortification, Greg squealed, "No, Prez!" Reaching back, Prez lifted Greg's left leg first, and then his right leg. Shedding happy tears, Greg held Prez around the shoulders, giggling, "No wasn't a good answer?"

"Think about it," Prez grinned, "the kids need to see you trusting me, so I'm not some major super-hero to them. That's the kind of attitude that nearly drove me insane."

Greg giggled, "Nearly?"

Carrying Greg down the hall, Prez sniggered, "So, I play bizarre video games and walk into girls' changing rooms. I know another Clan leader that blows up trees for grins and kicks."

"I really don't know about this!" Greg cackled.

"I'll explain it to you some time soon."

Back in the room that Prez and Greg had just left, Marc watched Keith helping Clark to stand on his new leg for the first time. While Keith supported Clark, Marc quickly unsnapped the gown sleeve, so it could be removed without interfering with the IV. Tossing the gown onto the bed, Marc softly said, "Your leg's going to feel a little like it's asleep, Clark. Keith, he's going to need almost constant support to stay balanced in the shower. All three of us are going to get wet in the process."

"I noticed you're damp and already figured that, Doctor Furst," Keith sniggered. "What I can do in under ten-seconds, Alden can do in less than a second."

Seeing Marc getting undressed, Clark squealed, "I'm so embarrassed! All I want is real clothes and to be normal again."

Keith chuckled, "When we're done with this shower, you'll see on TV that normal in Hawaii means being naked. You've got the same goods hangin' as every other dude, Clark. Chill, bro." Marc took over supporting Clark. Keith quickly ordered, "Get me in my birthday suit, Alden." Keith phased out and right back in again.

Covering his eyes with one hand, Clark whimpered, "Which one's cuter than the other? I'm gonna die!"

"No," Marc giggled, "that possibility has already been avoided, which is why you've got a brand new leg. I spent most of the day Saturday naked in Hawaii, with Keith and all the Core Rimmers, and all their sons."

Nodding, Keith took over for Marc, gently telling Clark, "Keep your hands on my shoulders, bro. You step forward and then I'll step back. About your ex-care givers in California, those fuck-wads kept you naked because they were too greedy to give you clothes. In a couple o' days, you'll have plenty of clothes. Then you can choose to stay dressed or get naked, just like the rest of our Clan. The only place we've told our kids that they have to be dressed is at our kitchen and dining room. Guys in our dorms decide what to wear, and if they want to wear anything at all." Keith gradually walked backwards toward the bathroom, softly instructing, "Slow and easy, bro."

Wobbling unsteadily and feeling Keith's strong arms supporting him, Clark wept, "I can't believe... after all you've done... you're doing this too."

Marc called, "Stevie, tell Clark what else is going on around this floor."

Stevie answered, "Prez is carrying Greg into another room, piggy-back. AJ, Kaleo, Jay, Mike and Sean are all in showers with other boys that have new feet and legs. Using their Mr. Fuzzy puppets, the Rimmers' sons are all talking to the youngest kids. John, Stephen, the quadruple R's, Caitlin and Ida Durand, the Steibs, and the Stoeher twins are all doing their empath and telepath things. It's very quiet, but those orphans are grinning and giggling, so it must be kewl. Nurses are helping some of the girls adjust to their new fingers, toes and limbs. Doc Hubbard is briefing Doc Wiener about the kids in a conference room." He paused to giggle, "Grandpa is talking to himself, but me, Kerry and Alden keep offering silly answers to his sillier questions."

Marc sniggered, "Danny will need therapy tonight."

Stevie sarcastically giggled, "Do you really think that might help?" Softly chortling, Marc and Keith slowly shook their heads.

After all that, Clark was still shedding nervous tears. With a nod from Keith, Marc turned on the shower. Keith shivered, "The water's still cool, Marc. Prez would be bitching about shrinkage."

Marc giggled, "None of you Rimmers need to worry much about that!"

Keith locked eyes with Clark and explained, "The best way for this to get done is for you to trust us. Can you do that?"

Nodding, Clark whimpered, "I have to."

"You hold my shoulders to keep yourself steady," Keith instructed. "I'll wash your front, Marc will wash your back, and it'll all be over really quick."

Taking his place behind Clark, Marc shared, "Keith, you need to know, the boys in their orphanage had sex, as a way to have some enjoyment and fun."

"This is not a bad thing," Keith replied, and started soaping up a washcloth.

Clark sniffled and sobbed, "It's not?"

Shaking his head, Keith began washing Clark's neck and shoulders. He sighed, "That orphanage was bad enough for Prez and I to execute those two assholes. Anything you kids did that didn't cause you more pain and suffering is kewl." Looking past Clark, Keith asked, "They have no sexually transmitted diseases?"

"None," Marc assured and soaped up a second washcloth, adding, "A few boys had to be circumcised and kept anesthetized for three days. Clark and Greg are among that group."

"That's because the fuck-wads didn't let them bathe or keep their willies clean," Keith grumbled. Seeing Clark crack a small smile, Keith grinned, "Prez is circumcised and has a sex drive that matches mine. I'm sure we'll all agree, it's better to lose the foreskin than lose the desire to get an erection and have sex." Seeing Clark crying again, Keith asked, "What's wrong, bro?" Clark blushed and looked away, at the shower wall to his right.

Noticing that Clark had a stiffy, Keith asked, "It hurts?" Clark shook his head.

Keith sighed, "That's completely normal and understandable. Like I told you before, at our base, you and all you dudes are going to learn about real loving relationships. If Greg is your best friend and not simply a convenient sex buddy, you'll be free to become real boyfriends and partners. Please don't be embarrassed. I know those fuck-wads taught you guys nothing of any value. We'll teach you all you need to know and be the best examples we can possibly be."

Marc prompted, "Tell him why, Keith."

"Prez is my husband," Keith began. "Derrick and Mike, who you'll meet later, are our best friends and our lovers. The four of us grew up together, became musicians together, and learned about our bodies together. The four of us, my two brothers and their partners were made Clan leaders. That gave us the ability to be big brothers for everyone that needs big brothers.

"We didn't raid those California orphanages because we had to, Clark. We wanted to correct obvious problems. We wanted more brothers and sisters. As happy as we were two weeks ago, before becoming Clan, we're even happier now. What makes us happier are four hundred happy brothers and sisters. When all you guys get out of the hospital, it'll be four hundred and eighty brothers and sisters. Anyone with a heart that had the resources, tools and training we have, would do what we're doing for all the kids."

Clark sobbed, "I'm a worthless orphan!"

"No, you're not," Keith and Marc chorused.

Keith firmly explained, "The orphanage made you feel and think that way, Clark. Every kid everywhere has worth. All you need is to be shown that you're valued. I value you; Marc does, Prez, Danny and all the doctors here value you. I'm certain that Greg values you too. Soon, you'll have so many brothers and sisters who will think you're really kewl. Then you can start showing them that you think they're really kewl too."

Coming into the bathroom with Stephen at his side, John teased, "You know, I could've done this, without embarrassing Clark into an early grave."

Marc cracked up. Keith smirked, "Tell me you're not levitating kids."

"I'm not levitating kids," John innocently giggled, causing Stephen to crack up and turn around to walk back out of the bathroom. John cackled, "Now look what you did, bro! You broke my husband!"

Keith smirked, "Clark Pope, this is my youngest brother, John."

Clark whined, "I need to lay down and ask for a doctor."

"Why don't I count?" Marc giggled.

With a chance to poke fun at the damp teen android doctor, John joked, "You're still wet behind the ears, Marc."

"I must've been in that orphanage too long," Clark whimpered.

"Nah!" John giggled, "We got you out before serious damage occurred to any of you." The soapy washcloth Keith had been using flew up before Clark. It then dove down, wrapped itself around Clark's stiff dick and quickly washed it. John smiled, "There, this whole drawn out shower can be ended, quick as a bunny." From the other room, Stephen roared. John giggled, "Alden, give Clark the special dry and dress treatment, and then let him land in front of me, bro."

Alden laughed, "One dry cleaned future Rimmer, comin' up!" IV stand and all, Clark phased out of the shower and phased back in, completely dry from his hair to his toes, and dressed, standing directly before John. Gasping in shock, Clark's hands dropped onto John's shoulders.

Smiling up at Clark, John assured, "I held up a forty story building, bro. I can easily support you." To prove the point, John levitated a few inches so he was looking Clark in the eye. Stepping out of the shower, Keith handed Marc a towel then pulled the last one for himself. John asked, "Marc, have you done swimming pool therapy with any of these kids with new limbs?"

Drying off, Marc answered, "It was on the list of things to do Sunday or Monday, but the kids weren't ready to try, and then we figured that many of them never learned to swim. With three extra days recovering, they're ready to stand and walk. Our intention was to get them able to jog and run before sending them to their new home. We're short on physical therapists around here, so doctors will be helping with that recovery process."

John nodded and smiled, "We'll start right away with no impact therapy." Rising up off the floor a few inches, Clark nervously squealed and whimpered. Backing out of the bathroom, John instructed, "Move your legs like you're walking, Clark. Let's get that new leg and foot moving right." Seeing Clark trying, John encouraged, "Good, dude. Wiggle your toes, bend and twist your ankle, and then try to bend your knee again. Once you can manage the basics, I'll put you down on the floor, but still support most of your weight." Leading Clark out of the bathroom and into the room, John introduced Stephen to Clark.

Half dressed and holding his shirt, Marc wondered, "When did you learn physical therapy, John?"

Pointing to his sub-vocal, John grinned, "Alden's feeding me summaries. I never knew how important a toe was for balance, especially the big toe, until a little while ago." Calling for Stephen,

John asked his husband to demonstrate leg, ankle and toe movements. As soon as Stephen agreed, he rose up off the floor, slightly higher than Clark, so the newbie with an android leg could see and reproduce John's requested actions. Marc quietly left the room to check on the other patients.

A boy about John's age popped into the room, causing John, Stephen and Clark to pause. "Hi ya!" the sandy brown haired boy cheerfully said, "I'm Skylar Richardson. My daddies said I could come stay with you guys for a while. Whatchya doin'?"

Noticing pale purple eyes, John giggled, "Your daddies are Kyle and Tyler?"

Rapidly nodding, Skylar giggled, "No fair peeking, John! I don't go gallivanting around rooms in your head... yet anyway."

John grinned, "I never gallivant in public places. It was your eyes and your surname that gave you away, Sky."

"Oh! Well, then how can I help?"

"We have a timing issue to resolve with our newbies."

"Time-shmime! I can fix that."

John sniggered, "I know you can."

Coming out of the bathroom and seeing Clark and Stephen floating, and John with a new kid, Keith asked, "Who's this, bro?"

"Hi ya, Keith!" Skylar cheered and hurried over to give the teenager a quick hug. Stepping back and looking up, he giggled, "My daddy says you're gonna teach me how to surf."

Seeing purple eyes, Keith grinned, "Not in hospitals and not without sedation."

"I promise to keep all the waves under ten feet," Skylar giggled. "Of course, if my bro is there too..."

"That's how we got in trouble last time!" Keith laughed.

John wondered, "Which brother are you referring to, Sky?"

"My twin, Xavier. He's helping at Des Moines."

Keith and John incredulously chorused, "Twin Mikyvis?"

Nodding, Skylar giggled, "My daddies was usin' rubbers, so we figure we bounced into twins. That's our story and we're sticking to it!"

Sighing, Keith stepped out into the hall and tapped his comm-badge, urgently calling, "Julio, come in, please."

"Des Moines insane asylum; where problems appear out of mid-air!" Julio giggled in reply.

"You're telling me!" Keith laughed, "You've got the other twin by now, I assume?"

"Are you sure there are only two? This kid's bouncing around here like a super ball that was shot out of a bazooka in a gymnasium!"

"I'm calling an emergency meeting," Keith sniggered. "When we're done at the hospitals later, all available Clan Leadership teams are requested to gather at Maui."

"Bring cots for us; Xavier is wearing us out just watching him running up and down the halls to bring stuff to everyone!"

Keith queried, "Running?" and peeked back inside the room. Skylar had transformed himself into a teenager. Inside a time bubble with Clark, John and Stephen, Skylar had taken over for Stephen and was exercising his legs, showing Clark the therapy routines. From outside the time bubble, it appeared that a movie projector was running amuck at quadruple speed, and everyone inside was scurrying around at ridiculous speeds.

"Yeah, running... nonstop... as in never even stops to take a breath or a drink."

Feeling somewhat woozy, Keith turned away from the room and leaned against a wall, reminding Julio, "The meeting's at Maui. We'll meet you there. I'd suggest a time, but I can't seem to get one stabilized."

"Xavier said that Sky would work out the time; he's gonna be busy helping Mini and Alien with some gardening," Julio stated, his tone reflecting his amazement at the events around him.

"That figures," Keith sighed. "We'll need relaxation and recovery time anyway. I think I'll go find something more normal to keep me occupied, like bungee jumping. I'll see you later tonight, bro."

"Kewl," Julio weakly muttered, "Later, Keith."

A moment after Keith ended the communication, John, Stephen and Skylar walked out of the room. Skylar appeared as a ten year old boy, once again. Keith asked, "Where's Clark?"

"Resting in bed," Stephen grinned, and held up his left arm to show Keith the time on his watch. It was still set to Hawaii time, but obviously almost two hours had passed inside the time bubble. Sadly shaking his head, Keith began softly chortling.

Skylar giggled, "What? Daddy said to help, but not fix everything for everyone. Clark did all the work. I only sped up his therapy in this timeline. To him, it was still almost two hours of work."

Looking up at his brother, John smiled, "Clark's able to stand and walk. Now he's hungry, which is an even better sign. We're gonna find Prez and the rest of the team, so we can introduce Sky to everyone. Then we'll get some more kids through physical therapy." Knowing what his older brother was thinking, John huffed and then smirked, "I don't know what you're so worried about. Sky can help our division in so many ways, I can't begin to count them all. Besides that stuff, how'd you like to talk music composition with Mozart, or go back to 1962 and hear The Beatles perform, before the crazed screaming girls drowned out the sound? Not to mention, a bunch of these level three kids will definitely be home with us in Ewa Beach this weekend. By this time next Wednesday, we'll have all of 'em."

Nodding and then focusing on Skylar, Keith grinned, "I'm really glad you're here to help with these kids. Anti-energy beings that can do just about anything make some of us nervous, especially our parents. A perfect example is your brother, Xavier, zooming around Blank Children's hospital. Julio sounded like he was becoming exhausted just watching him."

Partially covering his face with one hand, Stephen giggled, "Look down the hall, Keith."

Doing so, Keith saw Chris and Jay walking in extreme slow motion. Behind the two teenagers, Keith saw a small boy pulling his IV stand and reaching for the Mr. Fuzzy puppet hanging out of Jay's back pocket. Gage and Jonah stepped out of another room, turned to one another and seemed to freeze where they stood. Obviously, Skylar had put the four of them in a time bubble.

"Wasting time just became a worry of the past," John sniggered. "Sky's a Period Rimmer!"

Sky giggled, "Sweet! Now that I've got a Rimmer handle, I can do the time bubble thing whenever I want, ya know? We can get these kids caught up on therapy pretty easily."

John nodded, "We'll do that." He turned to Stephen and asked, "Do you wanna help or join Frankie and Wade?"

After thoughtfully humming, Stephen said, "I'll find our sons, hon." He planted a quick kiss on John's cheek, then giggled, "If I keep doin' physical therapy with kids, I'll sleep from the time we get home until tomorrow morning."

"Sky and I are working on some ideas so we can all decompress a little when we're done," John shared. Knowing Keith's next concern, John said, "We won't need security. Don't worry about a thing, bro."

Rather than think about it, Keith went back into the room with Clark.

Further down the hall, Jay remained behind the wall, but stuck his Mr. Fuzzy past the doorframe and into the room, squeaking, "My Fuzzy instincts tell me there are future Rimmers in this room."

The two tween boys in the room grinned at the hand puppet, and then at each other. Hearing nothing from inside the room, Chris slid in close to his lover, displayed his Mr. Fuzzy into the room, and squeaked, "Even un-fuzzy future Rimmers are allowed to giggle before initiation."

"We'll have to get them fuzzy fast," Jay squeaked, and then led the way into the room. Pausing only two paces inside the door, Jay introduced himself and Chris, telling the newbies that Chris was rescued by the Clan on Friday, and he was rescued on Saturday. He had Alden transport Mr. Fuzzy puppets on each bed, and then asked the boys their names.

Both boys quickly put on their Mr. Fuzzy puppets. After checking with each other, the blond boy in the closest bed whispered, "I'm Vernon Williamson." He then turned to the boy in the other bed. That boy seemed more interested in the Mr. Fuzzy puppet on his left hand. It clearly said that the boy hadn't had a toy of any sort to play with in a very long time. Vernon softly told the two teenagers, "That's David Walsh."

Holding up his Mr. Fuzzy, Chris grinned, "You guys need some stuff." He then ordered, "Alden, get our two new Rimmers the toy replicas of the Enterprise, bro."

After the toys appeared on the boys' laps, Alden replied, "There ya go, Chris. So you know, Vernon has a new left arm, from the elbow down. David has a new right hand. They're from Los Angeles, and were rescued by Derrick and Mike."

Nodding, Jay said, "Then we'll need some special toys, that will help them exercise their hands."

"I've got it covered," Alden replied. A second later, small rubber balls landed on both beds.

In moments, each boy had several toys to help exercise their hands and arms. To try and get the boys more comfortable, Chris said, "We're here so you guys are ready to join us in Hawaii in a few days. These toys are just the start of your new lives. Soon, you'll have big beds in big dorm rooms."

"Most rooms have only two guys in them," Jay continued, "but sometimes younger kids choose three or four to a room. Each room has beds, chairs, desks, dressers and computers for each occupant. You'll also have a television and a stereo. Whatever else you guys need, just ask and we'll do our best to make it happen."

At last, David asked, "Why?"

"Because we're family, as of this moment," Chris answered. "We're your brothers, and you're our brothers, right now."

Vernon asked, "Whadda we gotta do?"

Jay answered, "Only your best, for yourself, your brothers and sisters, and in school."

Chris gently explained, "This is the second room we've been in. We know what your old lives were like. You weren't allowed to talk; you weren't allowed to go to school; you weren't given enough food to eat. All of that has already changed. Here and at Ewa Beach, you're allowed to eat all you want; just go to the kitchen and get whatever you want. Here and at Ewa Beach, you're allowed to talk. When you're ready, at least a week after you get to Hawaii, you'll be allowed to go to school and encouraged to do the best you can."

Jay smiled, held up his Mr. Fuzzy and squeaked, "Do you guys understand?" The boys only shrugged, obviously reluctant to believe anything could change so drastically. Jay's Mr. Fuzzy squeaked, "Then let's practice with our Mr. Fuzzy puppets." He displayed the cast on his right wrist, squeaking, "I'd like to know how old each of you are. If you want to tell me, that's kewl, or you can have your Mr. Fuzzy tell me."

Vernon held up his puppet and squeaked, "I'm twelve."

"Eleven," David answered through his Mr. Fuzzy.

"We're fourteen and originally from Washington, D.C.," Chris offered.

Jay asked, "What would you guys like to know about our Clan, or Ewa Beach?"

Again, both boys clammed up and remained silent. Turning to his partner, Chris raised his Mr. Fuzzy and giggled, "That's too big a question, lover." Facing the boys again, Chris called, "Alden?"

Alden giggled, "Yes, Mr. Fuzzy Chris?"

"Can you help us out with some satellite images?"

"Sure I can."

Moving between the two beds and watching the television, Chris instructed, "First, let's show Dave and Vernon where they are in Charleston." A satellite image of the hospital and surrounding streets came up on the TV. Chris called, "Now let's take them on a quick tour cross country. Show them downtown Los Angeles, where they came from." On the TV, the image of Charleston AI hospital zoomed out, showing the coast of South Carolina, and then the image went west until it arrived at Southern California. During the moments it took for Alden to cross the United States, Chris reminded the boys, "It would take a five hour plane ride, or about five days of driving to cross country." The view zoomed in on LA. Checking to his left and to his right at Dave and Vernon, Chris instructed, "Now let's go further west and show our newbies all the islands of the Republic Of Hawaii. This is another five hour plane ride, guys." The image zoomed out and raced across the Pacific Ocean to an image of the Hawaiian Islands.

Jay smiled, "That's our home and it'll be yours too, as soon as you're well enough." He then instructed, "Alden, zoom in on Oahu, then give these guys a slow tour from Waikiki, to Pearl Harbor, and then zoom in on our base at Ewa Beach, and lastly, show us the Oneula Beach base." All four boys watched the television monitor, but Chris and Jay occasionally glanced at Dave and Vernon. Alden got good close ups of Ewa Beach, where only a few adult employees were roaming, and of Oneula Beach, where almost all the level two orphans were seen waking and getting ready for the day. Jay explained, "Oneula Beach is going to be your new home. It's warm, like summer there in Hawaii. You'll be free to go between bases, eat what you want and when you want, play at the pools, or do just about anything you want. The concert you were watching is where we were yesterday afternoon. In four days, Platinum Habits put on two concerts for us; one Sunday night and another yesterday afternoon. About a week after you arrive, you'll be attending school with the rest of us, at Ewa Beach."

Chris asked, "What do you guys think; does that sound like fun?"

Dave grinned and nodded. Vernon giggled, "Yeah, lots."

"All we need you to do is get well," Jay's Mr. Fuzzy squeaked.

"How?" Dave wondered.

Chris answered, "By letting us help you, and by letting the doctors and nurses here help you."

Jay checked, "Can you guys do that?" Dave and Vernon nodded. Finished with the satellite tour, Jay had Alden return to the prior afternoon's concert. For the next twenty minutes, Chris helped Dave exercise his new right hand, and Jay helped Vernon with his hand and then with his arm. During that time, both of the Core Rimmers talked to the newbies. Dave had been at the orphanage six years, and Vernon had been there five years. Dave had never set foot in a school, but Vernon had only got as far as first grade.

Marc Furst walked in during the school conversation. His presence freaked out Dave and Vernon. The two boys immediately put their toys down and clammed up. Chris and Jay hadn't met Marc, but had heard of him from Reyes and Ryan. Without delay, Jay got up and gave the teen android doctor no end of shit for disrupting the newbies. Jay towered about six inches over Marc. In moments, Marc was in Jay's headlock and getting his platinum blond hair messed up. At first, even though Marc was giggling his ass off, pleading with Dave and Vernon to play with their toys, it freaked out the small tween newbies, but Chris assured them that Jay and Marc were only feeling fuzzily foolish and playing. Dave and Vernon saw Jay's mouth moving as if he were speaking, but heard no words.

Once released by Jay, Marc giggled, "I'll come back to this room after..."

"You get appropriate doctor clothes," Jay finished. Marc phased out and back in again wearing a full-body Fuzzy. An oversized fuzzy stethoscope, hanging below Marc's knees, completed the image. At last, Dave and Vernon cracked up. With his professional demeanor destroyed, Marc walked out of the room, shaking his fuzzy head and muttering nonsense about radical Rimmers.

To help Vernon with his new arm, a four-way game of catch began. During those few minutes, Jay ordered, "Alden, get drawing paper, composition notebooks, crayons, pens and pencils for Dave and Vernon, bro. That'll help both of 'em to use their hands again."

"Add PADDs with appropriate learning materials," Chris interjected, "so we can help our new brothers learn to read and write." While they were still tossing the balls around, the requested items materialized on the night tables beside each bed. The ball was heading to Dave when he looked over at the growing pile of goodies on his night table. Dave was hit in the chest by the ball. At his surprised expression, the others in the room couldn't help softly chortling. Of course, an eleven-year-old kept in confined quarters didn't see much humor in getting hit with a ball, even though it was very softly thrown, and pouted. Chris hurried to him and offered a hug, giggling, "It was the look on your face we were giggling at, Dave. When you're playing catch, you have to pay attention. Luckily, this was a soft rubber ball only being tossed around a room. A baseball would've really hurt. Kewl?"

"Kewl," Dave softly replied.

Still giggling over Marc's ranting and body Fuzzy, Danny Page walked into the room with his white doctor smock tossed over his arm. Wearing blue jeans and a polo shirt, Doctor Page had transformed into thirteen-year-old Danny, and didn't disturb the newbies in the slightest.

Vernon started another game of catch with Danny and Jay. Danny said, "Down the hall we have a room prepared for all the kids. There are PlayStations and X-Boxes set up, so everyone can learn hand-eye coordination. Most of the kids at every Clan base play video games, so you two guys can start getting with the program as soon as you're ready."

Dave asked, "When can we do that?"

"Any time you want," Danny shrugged.

Vernon excitedly squealed, "You mean we can leave this room?"

Jay chuckled, "Of course you can. Your old orphanage life is over, guys. You'll never again be locked in your room. Your dorm room will be yours, to use whenever you want, and to come and go as you please. We'll show you what's inside all those buildings you saw at Ewa Beach and Oneula Beach." He called, "Alden, get back to our base surveillance, so these guys can see where they're moving to."

At both bases, kids were motivating. On the television, Dave and Vernon saw kids of various ages; some were still in their rooms getting ready for a shower, and others were already in the lavatory. After the two newbies had seen many rooms and three lavatories bustling with activity, Chris prompted Alden to show one of the showers. In the Oneula Beach shower were two very little guys, three tweens and two teens; Neil and Tad. At this point, Chris and Jay made sure that Dave and Vernon understood they would always be safe at the Pacific Rim Division's bases, because they were family. They pointed out that the teens and tweens weren't bothering the two little boys, in fact all seven were chatting about breakfast, and pools and playgrounds.

A couple of minutes later, Ralphie, Pat, Theo and Richie entered the room. Ralphie and Richie telepathically spoke with Dave and Vernon. Pat told Jay and Chris, "We're gonna get these guys cleaned up and dressed. At the same time, Ralphie and Richie can get some of our new brothers' thoughts unscrambled." Chris and Jay hugged Dave and Vernon, and then walked out of the room.

As soon as the two teenagers were gone, Ralphie, Richie, Pat and Theo began speaking to Dave and Vernon like equal tweens. The first thing Pat and Theo did was teach Dave and Vernon how to differentiate Ralphie and Richie by where they parted their long blond hair.

Ralphie and Pat got Vernon ready for a shower. During the process of helping get the gown off and helping Vernon out of bed, Ralphie and Pat eased their new brother's worries by also shedding clothes. The real surprise for Ralphie, Pat, Richie and Theo was when Vernon's feet hit the floor and he stood up; Vernon was about six inches shorter than Ralphie, who was exactly sixty inches tall. Pat was sixty-one inches tall. Knowing his boyfriend was about to toss a fit, Ralphie concentrated on relaxing Pat while the three of them padded naked into the bathroom.

Being an ex-model and used to seeing naked tweens and teens, Ralphie made the shower as fun as he possibly could, by 'accidentally' making the bar of soap shoot out of his fist and across the bathroom. Ralphie had Alden get them a new bar of soap. Pat picked up on his boyfriend's silliness, but when Pat squeezed the bar, it shot up and out of the shower, and landed with a plop into the toilet. All three howled laughing.

Out in the main room, Richie, Theo and David heard Vernon laughing hysterically, and Ralphie and Pat madly giggling. Richie knew what was going on and shared that with Theo and David. Naturally, David wanted to see for himself. Richie and Theo helped David out of bed and walked him to the bathroom. In seconds, another bar of soap went flying and almost beamed Richie in the face. Automatically, Richie's arm flew up and deflected the soap missile. A minute or so later, Richie, Theo and David were naked and having some shower time fun. The bathroom was soaked. Bars of soap were all over the place; in the toilet, on top of it, around the floor and on the shelves where towels were kept. Very little bathing was actually done, but Vernon and David were having more fun than they had ever had.

It was during the shower fun that it became necessary to identify Ralphie and Richie again, since their hair was wet and parts had disappeared. The two brothers were the same height, but Ralphie was better fed and had a little more muscle on his legs and arms. Being tweens, Pat and Theo also knew physical details that weren't usually apparent, like exactly where their boyfriends had pubes growing. All four Rimmers gave Dave and Vernon their first lessons about growing up and puberty. They told the newbies about the vitamin fortified shakes available at their new home. Dave and Vernon admitted that they were getting small milkshakes each day.

Pat smiled, "That means your already getting what every kid at home gets. It also means that you guys are gonna grow and get healthier faster."

"Keep drinking them, and ask for more whenever you want," Theo instructed.

Around all the rooms of the Charleston AI Hospital, the same kinds of things were happening. Level three kids were being greeted, talked with and cared for, helped with physical therapy, and given toys and games. Above all, they were constantly reminded that they were already part of a huge family.

* * * * *

Ewa Beach, Condominium B, Unit 7-B

Wednesday, November 10, 2004, 7:32 AM HTZ

Used to waking early, Kassidy Oldcambus inhaled deeply and opened his eyes. Matthew Thornton had his left arm flung over Kassidy's belly, but was still sound asleep. Remembering how they met and spent hours together, Kassidy pleasantly sighed.

The prior night, all through dinner and for a painfully long hour afterward, Kassidy really believed he had some rare, uncategorized social disease. Over dinner, Nate, Stu, Paul, Rob, and even Vaziik told Kassidy that he simply hadn't found the right person yet. It wasn't Kassidy's fault; it wasn't anyone's fault, but Kassidy couldn't fully believe them. So he sulked in his room, wondering what he might change and even if he should change anything, listening to country music until a knock on his door changed everything. Standing between Chris and Derrick was a really cute teenaged guy, with brown hair, brown eyes, the widest shoulders, and a cheerful smile.

When Matt Thornton walked into his room, Kassidy thought, 'Dang! He's even a tiny bit taller than me too!' He hoped that Matt wouldn't try some cheap, over used pick-up line from the movies on him. Kassidy couldn't quite recall if he had said goodnight to Chris and Derrick, but closed the door and focused completely on Matt, making small talk that would generally lead nowhere, or so he thought.

However, everything Kassidy said was received enthusiastically by Matt. Even when Kassidy tried to blatantly get suggestive, by mentioning cuddling under a blanket, Matt reacted perfectly, seriously telling him that he wanted them to know each other before getting too cuddly. Test after test was passed, and it made Matt a good friend; one completely worthy of being cared for. Kassidy tried to be calm and cool about everything, but by the time they had met Matt's dad, and then changed for the water blaster battle, Kassidy couldn't fight the fact that he really was falling in love.

Matt was a sensitive Christian and a strong personality who enjoyed playing in the water blaster battle. Matt hadn't said much about the goofy Mr. Fuzzy G-string. Although Matt had skinny dipped often before arriving at Ewa Beach, Kassidy expected Matt would refuse to wear it. It proved Matt was a confident teenager, and definitely had a playful, silly side. Although Matt and Kassidy were about the same height, Matt had the stocky build of a high school football running back. He had awesome shoulders, a powerful chest, a nice four-pack abdomen, a cute, muscular tush, and large thighs for his age.

Kassidy fondly recalled his first ever sexual experiences. It started about ten-thirty, as soon as the Mr. Fuzzy G-strings were peeled off. Matt was a gentle, compassionate and silly lover. Given what Matt had said about using only hands and mouths during their first times together, Kassidy expected masturbation and oral sex. However, Matt's suggested game to see what would make their bones bounce the most was much more fun. Matt explored every inch of Kassidy with his hands and mouth, teaching Kassidy how to worship a male body. Learning his tactile lessons, Kassidy returned exactly what he had been given.

During this time, Matt and Kassidy shared a lot verbally too. It started with simple questions about when puberty started. Both remembered clearly that the changes had started the summer of 2003. Kassidy was already thirteen and Matt was a few months away from his thirteenth birthday. Matt's voice changed first. Kassidy noticed underarm hairs and then searched for more and found a few sprouting. Both started junior high school with new voices and typical body hair growth.

Everything two new teenage lovers could share was freely shared. Matt was five-feet-eight inches tall and weighed in at one-hundred-forty-two pounds. Kassidy was half-an-inch shorter and eleven pounds lighter. Considering Matt's muscle mass, Kassidy was surprised there wasn't a larger difference in their weight. Both boys shaved with razors once a month. They looked forward to December and being able to shave together. Even what was between their legs was very similar in length and girth, flaccid and erect, and both were uncircumcised. Again, Matt praised the Lord for making their male bits virtually identical, except for hair color and skin tone.

Most amazing were the inspections done on their hands and knees. Matt could've done so much more than look, touch and taste Kassidy's body, but he didn't. Matt even went as far as crack slides, but he never tried anal penetration. When Matt flung himself into the same position for Kassidy to look, touch and taste, he did it with the knowledge that Kassidy could take him all the way, but secure it wouldn't go that far. Kassidy wasn't even sure he could control himself, but Matt made the whole experience so much fun, he couldn't destroy the trust his boyfriend had placed in him. When the games were done, Matt and Kassidy lay on their sides, facing one another, whispering affirmations between kisses and slowly stroking their erections. After all the time they had played, and the sweet whispered words of affection, it didn't take too long for them to climax.

In those first few groggy minutes awake, Kassidy heard the apartment's front door open and close. Matt had obviously heard it too, because he rolled onto his back, but only inhaled deeply and stayed asleep. Kassidy knew his boyfriend had been awake close to twenty hours before he turned off the night table lamp and fell asleep. Now that he was free of Matt's arm, Kassidy slid out of bed and padded naked to Matt's bathroom.

Standing at the bowl relieving himself, Kassidy realized that he and Matt forgot to return to his dorm room. All Kassidy needed was his electric toothbrush. His mom was a dental hygienist, so Kassidy had always taken good care of his teeth. Matt had even commented that he had never seen anyone with a brighter, more perfect smile. At the time, Matt was licking the remaining water droplets off Kassidy's shoulders and chest, making Kassidy beam like a lighthouse.

After washing his hands and face, Kassidy strolled around the two-bedroom apartment. The main living room and dinette were plenty big for a family of three or four. The kitchen breakfast counter only had three stools before it, causing Kassidy to assume these apartments were generally for smaller families of two or three. He would have Karey check that with Mr. Combs at the first opportunity.

Down the other end of the apartment was another bathroom and bedroom. Jeremiah Thornton had already made his bed and the room appeared spotless, devoid of any clutter. There was a wedding photo on the dresser. Matt's mother was a beautiful woman, with the high cheekbones of a Native American, that she had clearly passed down to her son.

Kassidy crossed the apartment to return to Matt's room. His intention was to put his boardies on and then go to the living room to watch TV until Matt woke. Soon after Kassidy stepped in the room, Matt sleepily yawned, "G'mornin', sexy cinnamon stick."

"Is likely to pop major wood every time you say that," Kassidy playfully warned, and then purposefully glanced down to Matt's morning wood beneath the sheet.

Matt smiled, "I already promised that I'd have no problem taking care of your every desire."

Crawling onto the bed, Kassidy gave Matt a deep good morning kiss, and then reminded, "And I promised you the same, hunky bear."

Matt whispered, "Is there anything you desire this morning?"

"Breakfast and my toothbrush," Kassidy smiled, and then prompted, "Com'on, let's go to the CIC for breakfast. You won't believe it until you taste it, but the chefs here will make you a real southern style feast."

Matt chuckled, "After last night, you could've asked for anything, and I would've gladly obliged, but no. My boyfriend just wants to spend time with me."

Pushing the sheet down and off of Matt's body, Kassidy took the job of laying on his lover and kept him warm, sniggering, "Okay, how about this; ya want some sausage gravy, biscuits and grits, hunky bear?"

Pumping his hips up, Matt giggled, "I love it when you talk dirty breakfasts!"

Grinding down, Kassidy cackled, "I'll even have 'em sprinkle cinnamon on yer grits!"

Matt howled, "I'm cumming!" and rolled over on top of Kassidy. Right there on the bed, Matt started doing his morning push-ups, giving Kassidy a tender kiss with each trip down. He never made it to fifty push-ups. At the tenth kiss, Kassidy lost control, held Matt down on top of him and gave into the temptation again.

After making love, they took an extended shower together, and then got dressed. Leaving the apartment in the giddiest moods, they took advantage of alone time in the elevator, slamming together for another lip lock. Glowing, they stepped out of the elevator and walked down the hall.

Soon after stepping outside, Kassidy watched his boyfriend, carefully saying, "Before you woke, I looked around your apartment this morning. Your mom was really pretty."

Matt's smile never faded. He only nodded and easily replied,

"Yeah, she was. You saw the wedding picture?"

"It was the first thing I noticed in your dad's room. I can see some of her features in you."

Matt evilly grinned, "Are you trying to make me randy again? It sure seems that way."

"Talking about your mom makes you randy?" Kassidy giggled, "You're scaring me."

"Comparing me to her did it," Matt admitted. "Others have too, like her parents, but it never meant so much before. Thank you, Kass."

"You're welcome," Kassidy giggled, and then added, "It is true though. Another thing I noticed is how neat your apartment is."

"That's dad's OCD," Matt sniggered. "Even before mammy passed, dad's always been a neatness freak. His mammy and daddy were that way too. They said it goes back a few generations, to the coal mining days, when getting clean enough to enter the house was a big deal. Since mammy, dad's been doing all the housework, with aprons and with tool belts. That's prob'ly how he got the job here; he can clean anything within an inch of its life, and fix anything that's broke."

"I guess I expected half-emptied boxes and some sign of the move."

"We brought what we absolutely had to have with us; clothes, pictures and memorabilia, my guitars, dad's mandolin, banjo and guitar. Everything was transported for us, and we spent the day unpacking. All the furniture and everything else in there was already here when we arrived. The last of our stuff will be transported, later today, I think. Since dad had made arrangements to fly from Kentucky to here, and then Battle Of Earth messed up those plans, Federation Youth Services arranged alternate transportation for us. We got to take a shuttle trip, Kass. The flight was at a hundred-thousand feet; the daytime sky was black and we could see the curve of the Earth. We left Kentucky at five in the afternoon and arrived here in under two hours. It was wicked kewl; the first of many wicked kewl things that happened yesterday."

Giggling at Matt's enthused tone, Kassidy wondered, "Whadda you wanna do after breakfast?" They walked inside the CIC and directly into the kitchen chow line. Kassidy picked up two trays and passed one to Matt.

Taking the tray, Matt smiled, "I'll be with you all day, so just show me around and introduce me to some kids."

"How about we do part of that on trikes; we'll take a ride around the base, and then we can check out whatever you want?"

Nodding, Matt grinned, "That sounds like a good plan."

Kassidy then proudly introduced Matt as his boyfriend and a new arrival to the kitchen staff. Once they had filled their trays, they walked out to the dining room. Crossing the room for a small, private table where they could eat and chat, they overheard that the entire group of Core Rimmers and most of the telepaths had left the base earlier that morning for Charleston AI hospital.

Soon after Kassidy sat down, Kade and Karey came running over to their big brother and gave him big twin-style hugs. Watching Kassidy's eyes suspiciously shift, and with his mouth full, Matt began chortling. When his brothers stepped back, Kassidy grinned, "What was that for?"

Kade giggled, "Does there have to be a reason?"

"What you've done for us since Friday is enough, I think," Karey smiled.

Kade nodded, "We saw you two at the water blaster battle last night."

Karey giggled, "Think of it this way; we know what you've been thinkin' since we got here. Since you were thinkin' of a boyfriend, we started thinkin' that way too. Now we got way more than awesome boyfriends, we've got Cameron's mom and dad, Matt's dad, and Jay's a Core Rimmer, all lookin' out for us too."

"In one day, Taron, you and we got boyfriends, bro," Kade explained. "It wasn't all because of you, but it was partly because of you." He then turned to Matt, widely smiled, then leaned closer to whisper, "Do that, right after breakfast. Kass'll love it." Matt blushed crimson and locked eyes with Kade. Nodding, Kade winked at Matt, then abruptly changed the subject, giggling, "By the way, your dad was assigned to dorm three. He's over there now."

Knowing what Matt was thinking and what his twin had sent, Karey beamed, "We'll see you guys later." Kade and Karey waved then walked away, back to where Brad and Cameron were waiting.

Leaning back in his chair, Kassidy tried to recall the last time his brothers had spontaneously hugged him. At Kassidy's perplexed expression, Matt grinned, "Eat up, Kass. For showing that they really do appreciate you, your bros made points with me."

Sliding his chair closer to the table, Kassidy lifted his fork and knife, muttering, "They always surprise me lately. It was only after we arrived here that I learned they were telepaths, and they could read me. I'm blown away."

"For the first time this morning," Matt giggled, "the next time, it'll be my doing."

Feeling his face flush, Kassidy softly chortled, "You're ready to go there?"

Matt smiled, "I was ready last night, but I'm purposefully moving slow, Kass. Last night, we got to really enjoy each other, but that was only first base. Since our first night was that extremely awesome, don't you wonder what the rest will be like?"

Nodding, Kassidy assured, "Last night was practically religious. Being with you turned a fair day into the best day I've ever had." He slipped a sandal off his foot, and sent that foot over to caress Matt's nearest foot. Matt began giggling. They ate a little more, and then Kassidy leaned over to whisper, "I'll always love you. I promise you and the Lord, there's no one I'll ever love near as much as you." Matt stopped giggling and locked eyes with Kassidy. "Faithfully, I'm all yours, only tempted by you, hunky bear," Kassidy promised.

A soft groan escaped from Matt that turned into a high pitched whimper. Since Matt seemed stuck in the moment, Kassidy sliced off a chunk of biscuit and sausage gravy then fed it to Matt. Obviously, the two new lovers started feeding each other. Smiling kids at nearby tables noticed them and softly giggled, but Matt and Kassidy never noticed anyone else.

Across the dining room, Dulce's attention was grabbed by the three glowing forms standing behind Matt and Kassidy. There were two women and one man. This wasn't new to Dulce, but it was the first time she'd seen risen spirits returning to their loved ones at Ewa Beach. Dulce's first instinct was to go tell Matt and Kassidy that they were being visited, but she only happily giggled and decided to save it for later. She searched the dining room for the Nash brothers. Craig was with Felicity at a table of level one orphanage girls. At a table with Ray, Tony, Jake, Terry and other boys, were Phil and Owen. Finding no spirits near either Nash brother, Dulce returned to her breakfast.

* * * * *

Columbia, SC, Hampton Street Cafe

Wednesday, November 10, 2004, 1:41PM EST

Another pair of Dan's friends caught up with Paul Owens a few blocks north of downtown. Claire and Lowell Perry, a married couple in their mid thirties, brought Paul to the cafe. Awake for almost twenty hours, Paul was more exhausted than hungry. He ordered a small salad and listened to the couple bounce ideas around to help Paul get off the street, and into a place where he could rest. To keep up appearances, Claire first called the couple that found Paul and bought him breakfast that morning. She then called the third couple Dan had notified, knowing very well that they didn't have the space for one more in their small home. Appearing desperate, but knowing that the next call she placed would provide Paul a temporary residence, Clair called Billy and Maryann Hart. The Harts were in their late fifties and both their children had moved on to start their own lives and families.

The Harts' son had built a garage loft and convenience apartment after finishing high school, so he had a private place to be with friends when he started college. For four years, before moving on to start a career, young Sherman Hart lived in that loft, only coming into the main house for Sunday dinners, and to do laundry. As far as Billy and Maryann were concerned, the loft was never truly finished. Sherman was happy with bare, unpainted plasterboard walls. In the years since Sherman moved out, Billy had managed to do little more than add decorative molding and install better insulation above the ceiling.

As if all this hadn't been prearranged that morning, Billy and Maryann came to the Hampton Street Cafe to meet their friends and the 'hard luck case teenager'. Billy explained when and why the loft was originally built and what little he had done, but dressed up the loft apartment as being comfortable enough for their son, and was now very well insulated, so the space heater would be sufficient during the coming colder months. All Billy and Maryann asked was for Paul to finish the apartment with paints that they would supply. For his work, Paul would get free room and board. Once the apartment work was completed, then Paul could do common lawn and yard work for room and board.

It seemed too easy to Paul, but being tired, he accepted a ride from Claire and Lowell to the Hart's residence. From the back seat of the Perry's sedan, Paul saw an unattached, double-car garage set back away from the main house. There were outdoor stairs on the left side leading up to the loft apartment. Getting out of the Perry's car and dragging his suitcase along, Paul followed Billy and Maryann up the steps. Billy unlocked the door and led the way inside with his wife, and Paul, and then the Perrys. Maryann started complaining about the shabby state of the apartment, but Claire began imagining paint colors and window treatments. Billy showed Paul the bathroom and the kitchen area. There was even a microwave, a small refrigerator, a set of four plates, bowls and silverware still in the cupboards.

Barely keeping himself from falling into an android coma, all Paul saw was a very small dinette table and two chairs, a nice sofa, a coffee table, a television, a small stereo clock radio, and most importantly, a twin size bed. A set of sheets, a blanket and a pillow were neatly piled at the foot of the bed. All four adults knew that Paul had been awake all night. Maryann turned on the space heater. As soon as Paul accepted the loft, they welcomed him to his new home and started to leave. Billy passed Paul the key to the loft's door and said they could discuss more the next morning, after Paul got some rest.

By quarter of three in the afternoon, Paul was alone in a comfortable place. Quickly making the bed, Paul could barely believe his luck. He never considered that the truck driver who had given him a lift might've set all the wheels in motion, simply to give an android a place to sleep indoors. Paul barely got his jacket and sneakers off before collapsing onto his shabbily made bed and dozing off.

Inside the Hart's home, Claire and Billy were making quick phone calls to let everyone know the teenage boy was safe. Included in the call list was Dan, the truck driver who had set the trusty wheels of Southern hospitality in motion. Maryann also called Dan's wife, who was really the only one left out of the loop that day. With the help of neighbors, she set about making certain that her husband would return the next afternoon rewarded, with a fabulous candle lit dinner, an extra sweet desert and an even sweeter wife, dressed as nicely as possible given her condition.

* * * * *

Ewa Beach Trike Garage

Wednesday, November 10, 2004, 10:20 AM HTZ

Kassidy and Matt took trike rides around the base perimeter and then down driveways and paths. Kassidy showed Matt everything there was to see, including the school, and they even saw the families of squirrels living on the Southwest side of the base. During the course of the ride, they saw fewer and fewer kids around the base. Only base security, gorillas, G-Cats and adults seemed to be around. Finished with the tour, they parked the trikes and climbed off. Kassidy scowled, "This is just too weird." He tapped his comm-badge, and called, "Alden, what's goin' on, and where is everybody?"

"Over at Oneula Beach," Alden answered. "Erik and Travis gathered the kids here and brought them there. With the Core Rimmers busy, kids were a little confused, but everyone's together and happier now." He then giggled, "You're all alone, guys."

With that knowledge, Kassidy and Matt smiled at each other. Matt leered, "I know how to take advantage of this," and took Kassidy's hand.

Surprised that they were passing the condominiums, Kassidy wondered, "Where are we going?"

"To the sauna at the pool house," Matt grinned. "We didn't make it there last night. We're guaranteed privacy."

Cracking up, Kassidy playfully asked, "We get each other plenty hot, so why in the sauna?"

Matt chuckled, "Just to be different. Since you share your room, that's gonna be rare, which means my room is going to get really familiar, unless we purposefully make some variations."

"Flawlessly logical," Kassidy giggled.

"I wanted you while you were brushing your teeth."

"But then your dad walked by, and saw you holding me, from behind."

Nodding, Matt continued, "I wanted you during our trike ride."

"But then a security gorilla in a tree began chuckling at us."

"If I get delayed or interrupted again, I might shoot in my shorts and start crying like a baby in soiled diapers."

Kassidy giggled, "What's tempting you, hunky bear?"

"You," Matt simply stated.

"We'd best hurry," Kassidy giggled, and then released Matt's hand and took off running.

Taking off after Kassidy, Matt loudly laughed, "Dear Lord, help me treat my cinnamon stick really good. Don't let me wuss out at the last second." Kassidy howled laughing and never heard the last line of Matt's prayer, asking for the patience and strength to follow an awesome blowjob with an even more awesome rimjob.

Kassidy got to the sauna first, and got Matt naked first. Proving once again they were like minds and souls, Kassidy was already thrilling Matt to loud coos, giggles and moans before all his clothes were off. Once he had Kassidy naked, Matt lay down on one of the wooden benches. Without delay, Kassidy went right back to work, hovering over the bench Matt was laying on. Lifting his lover by the hips, Matt got Kassidy in position so they could progress orally together.

Cuddling together afterward, Matt softly wondered, "What's the plan for this afternoon?"

"Well," Kassidy peacefully sighed, "we could spend some time at Oneula Beach with the rest of the kids."

Hearing something unenthused in Kassidy's tone, Matt said, "That sounds good to me, but I think you have something else on your mind."

Kassidy giggled, "Yeah, but I'll compromise."

Matt begged, "Don't leave me alone, Kass, not even for a minute."

Earlier that morning, before taking a shower together, Matt stood before the bowl but still held Kassidy's hand, and chatted. It was amazing and thrilling to Kassidy that Matt had easily done it, and Kassidy even commented on it. After all, Matt had no siblings, but Kassidy had shared the toilet with his brothers on many occasions.

In between tender kisses, Kassidy softly assured, "That'll never happen, hunky bear." After landing a deep, passionate kiss, Kassidy asked, "What made you think I needed to be somewhere without you?"

Matt shrugged, "You need and want to see your brothers and cousin, don't you?"

"We can do that together," Kassidy stated. "What I want is to know more about you."

Matt blinked, "What's left that you don't already know?"

Kassidy smiled, "In your room, I saw an acoustic guitar on a stand, an amplifier, and an electric guitar in a case. My boyfriend is a musician that hasn't serenaded me, or given me a single clue if he's mediocre, good, really very good, or a virtuoso, like our Core Rimmers."

Matt chuckled, "Somewhere between good and very good, but it depends on the song."

"Not good enough," Kassidy giggled. "I need to hear to know for myself."

"Is that really what you want to do?"

Eagerly nodding, Kassidy beamed, "Yeah, for a while, and then we can check on my brothers, their boyfriends, and you can meet some of the other kids. So tell me, how long have you been playing?"

"Since I could hold a child-size guitar, eight years. First, it was dad teaching me, and then it was mammy encouraging me to learn songs, and now dad does both. By nine-years-old, I was playing bluegrass with dad and his buddies. I started playing at our church soon after mammy passed."

"That's what we're doing right after lunch then. After we digest, and you've played for a while, then we'll hang out with the other kids."

Matt confirmed, "Is that really what you want to do? It's fun for me, but not so fun for you."

Kassidy enthusiastically giggled. "I love listening to music. Sunday night, I saw my first concert, right here. Platinum Habits, that's our leaders' band, played for over two hours. At three-thirty yesterday, there was another concert, that they called a rehearsal. Every song was great and really well done, but it was all rock, no country rock, and no bluegrass. I'm not a musician, but I did know guys at my old school that had bands. They couldn't play or sing anywhere near as good as Platinum Habits. Do you sing?"

"Yeah," Matt giggled.

"Give me an example of a something you sing really well."

After thoughtfully humming a moment or two, Matt smiled, "I like country rock most. Do you know Creedence Clearwater Revival, The Eagles, 38 Special, Lynyrd Skynyrd, or Pure Prairie League?" When Kassidy nodded, Matt answered, "Just about anything by those bands, as long as the vocal range isn't too high." Kassidy provocatively moaned and started a forceful grind. Instinctually thrusting his hips up, Matt giggled, "Why didn't you tell me how hot you get for musicians?"

"Not all musicians," Kassidy gently corrected. "There's only one; the one who taught me the meaning behind every ballad lyric ever written. The way you are, since I first locked eyes with you, and the way you were last night were lessons I'll never forget." Continuing his grind, Kassidy dove for Matt's neck.

Matt encouraged, "Yeah, Kass; do it, hold me tighter and kiss me harder as you get closer too."

"And then we'll use the shower here before lunch."

"I really want this, here and now. The temptations are too much to resist."

Laying all the way down, with his head over Matt's shoulder, Kassidy whispered, "Finger my hole, hunky bear. We've gotta get each other ready for the best of it. I can barely wait."

Reaching down Kassidy's back to his buns, Matt moaned, "Oh, man, I love you so much, Kass."

"I'm lovin' you back," Kassidy panted.

* * * * *

Charleston, SC, AI Hospital

Wednesday, November 10, 2004, 5:30PM EST

Via sub-vocals, Alden reported Paul's whereabouts to Reyes, Ryan, Danny and Marc. Stevie reported to Jon and Mary. With Ark's assistance, it was determined that Billy and Maryann Hart were outstanding citizens who were born and raised in South Carolina. They had lived in the home where Paul was for approximately thirty-six years, since 1968. Neither had ever been in trouble with the law; they hadn't even had a traffic violation or automobile accident in over twenty years. Of course, Reyes shared this information with his dad, pop, Prez and Keith. Everyone that knew what was happening was absolutely amazed that one truck driver had done so much for an android he had only known for about two hours.

Many of the level three orphans were either napping or eating. Televisions in the room were now showing the kids at Oneula Beach. All the Rimmers began congregating in the hall. Danny and Marc were ecstatic that the kids they were so worried about earlier that morning had made important gains in one afternoon. Equally enthusiastic, the Core Rimmers who had been to level three orphanages the prior week were thrilled with the kids overall condition. As it stood then, it seemed that the level three orphans could be split into thirds, based on their physical and emotional states; those who would be ready for Ewa Beach by Saturday, or Sunday, or Monday.

On the other hand, the majority of Rimmer sons, the empathes and telepaths were emotionally drained. Prez was carrying Richie. Troy had Scott Deaver in his arms. Sean had Jimmy Carr sitting up on his shoulders. Stephen had Wade on his hip. Kaleo and Tory had all five of their young sons gathered around them. All the telepaths were gathered around Relud and Inoyra, being praised for jobs well done. John Hundser confirmed with Doc Wiener that the entire team needed time to decompress.

Unnoticed by many on the team, Skylar popped out of the hallway gathering. He returned less than a minute later with Doctor Dan Richardson and another middle aged gentleman. Dan introduced the new addition as Doctor Jared Yates, child psychiatrist. He would become another part of the Pacific Rim's FYS Team. When the Core Rimmers were done meeting Doc Yates, Skylar said, "It's time to unwind, guys. I know you want to go back to Ewa Beach for lunch and school, and we'll get there, when everyone is less stressed out. All the doctors are going to join us."

Prez asked, "Where are we going, Sky?"

Impishly grinning, Skylar giggled, "My daddies and brothers showed me a real nice place. I promise, you'll love it!" The Core Rimmers began saying goodbye to Marc and Danny. When all the farewells were complete, Skylar teleported the entire group out of the hospital hallway. Immediately after the Rimmers vanished, so did Danny.

Materializing naked at Oneula Beach, about ten meters above the diving well, Danny screamed, "ALDEN!"

"But you told me to save the dunk, grandpa," Alden giggled over the pool house PA.

The kids hanging out barely heard Danny grumble, "Shit," before hitting the water.

Standing naked on the five-meter board, Erik loudly called, "Hey, Champ! Do you know who that was?"

Also naked and sitting at the edge of the well, with his feet dangling in the water, Travis sniggered, "No idea, but Alden obviously does!" When the unknown brown-haired teen surfaced, Trav chuckled, "Hello."

"Hi," Danny spluttered, and swam to the edge where Travis and another dozen or so grinning teens watched him.

So he wouldn't have to shout, Trav waited until Danny was nearer before saying, "I don't think we've met."

Hoisting himself out of the well, Danny replied, "We haven't." He sat at the edge of well, beside Travis and then offered his hand, smirking, "I'm Danny Page, director of the AI Division, in South Carolina." Now that the well was clear, Erik dove.

Introducing himself, Travis shook hands and knocked knuckles with Danny, and offered, "Our leadership went to South Carolina today, or I'd call someone to greet you." Gesturing to Erik, now swimming over to his boyfriend's side, Trav quickly introduced them.

"No need," Danny smiled, "I just left them, when I had clothes on. Since it's warmer here than there, I'll enjoy it, at least until I drip dry." When Travis nodded, Danny glanced around, saying, "So, this is Ewa Beach?"

"Oneula Beach," Travis corrected. "There were only about sixty of us not at school, so we all came here."

Danny nodded, "Keeping everyone together is good. Prez will be impressed."

"Kind o' necessary," Travis explained. "It's the first time all the Core Rimmers and their kids left us alone. The group in school was probably better off than we were; at least they're occupied. Since everyone at both bases felt weird, we decided to consolidate the masses."

Erik offered, "Now it's like any other day; little kids are at the playground, some are playing volleyball, another group are learning soccer, and the rest are hanging at the pools."

Travis grinned, "There's a small group missing, but since they're all new couples, we're pretty sure we know where they are."

Danny giggled, "Rimmer couples."

"Everyone needs a hobby," Erik cackled.

* * * * *

Universe Gamma Seven

Everyone in the group of sixty-five looked around. They were standing amongst trees just off of a beach. The sun seemed fairly high in the sky. It seemed very familiar to those who were more used to living at Ewa Beach. Keith wondered, "Where are we, Sky?"

"It's Ewa Beach!" Skylar giggled. Since no one else was laughing, but only uncertainly smirking, Skylar explained, "This is an Earth in an alternate universe. This is what might become Ewa Beach, in about a million years, give or take a couple o' millennia." Pausing and pointing east, Skylar giggled, "That's Diamond Head, before erosion wears it down to what you're used to. For now, this island is uninhabited. There are birds and plant life, but not much else. It's about one in the afternoon and it's June thirtieth, by our reckoning. We'll be safe here. I've got a barrier set on land and in the sea, so nothing the slightest bit dangerous can approach. Everyone can talk, chill out, go swimming and even take naps, if you feel like it. Let me just go get you guys lunch and a few other niceties, and you'll be set."

Skylar popped away. The Rimmers began walking down to the beach. Many of the boys took their shirts off. Amongst the trees, a large tent was pitched. Seconds later, an even larger tarp, about ten square meters, was erected near the dunes. In the blink of an eye, chairs and patio tables appeared under the tarp. Watching their big bro Leo, rapidly blinking at all the changes being made, Geoff and Lenny howled laughing. All around the group, blankets appeared on the sand, a pile of surf boards and boogie boards landed, and cafeteria carts filled with food and drinks materialized.

Pointing at the speeding Mikyvis, Jay sniggered, "I like him!"

Popping back, directly between Jay and Chris, Skylar giggled, "I like you too!" After giving the two teenagers quick hugs, he popped back out and returned again with piles of Mr. Fuzzy G-strings and water blasters. "There," Skylar giggled, "that should be enough for now."

Chris, Jay, Lance and Scott cracked up. Prez chuckled, "Okay, let's eat." Leading the way with Richie still on his hip, Prez loudly said, "All you guys and girls were completely awesome in every way. Even some of the youngest and quietest kids were starting to speak and laugh." He put Richie down on a chair and watched the rest of the group approach the make-shift dining area under the tarp, sharing, "Believe me, I'm just as wiped out as any of you. We're here to talk it out, amongst ourselves and with the Docs, so we can go back home when we're ready and not a moment before."

Going to prepare a plate of food for Richie, Prez shared, "Those level three kids look so much better than the last time I saw them, but I'm still bothered that they needed so much medical care just to get to where they're at. Greg, the dude I was with most of the time, is fifteen years old. He's about an inch taller than Drew, but weighs so much less that I could easily give him piggy back rides from room to room. As sad as I am about what he went through, I'm really happy that he's going to be another brother in our Clan very soon. And he was a leader at his orphanage. I'll be keeping an eye on Greg, because I know he'll be a Core Rimmer someday, when he's ready."

Bringing the plate and a small cup of milkshake over to Richie, Prez encouraged, "Talk it out, but remember, all of you did great today; you made thirty very scared kids know that they're now cared about; that they'll soon have a home where they can feel safe and loved."

Richie sighed, "Poppa, one of the boys me and Jimmy was with has some new fingers and toes. His name is Marty. He was older than us and smaller than us."

Squatting down, Prez gently told his youngest son, "Try to remember, I was sad about your past, and Dee's and Gage's and Sammy's pasts. Not too long ago, I thought my situation with my parents was the very worst it could get for anyone. You and Jimmy, and really everyone believes their personal pasts were bad. Now I'm a happier father. Now you're a happier boy, a brother and a son. Soon Marty will be like you, much happier and trying his very best, like you did today. The way you'll feel better is by remembering how sad you used to be compared to how much happier you are now. Very soon, Marty will feel and think the same way."

On their own and walking down to the water line, giving the youngest kids the opportunity to get food first, Jay, Chris, Lance and Scott spoke softly about the level three kids. Chris admitted, "Yesterday morning, I was freaked out when Prez made us Core Rimmers, but now..." He shook his head and scowled.

Slightly smirking, Jay finished, "Now I don't know whether to be happy, sad or go pound the living shit out of some scumbag. Somebody deserves an ass whoopin'."

Slightly out of sync, Chris, Lance and Scott huffed, "Yeah."

In their heads, John said, 'The adults that hurt those kids have already been dealt with. Some were sent to prison planets and others were turned to dust. This is another reason why we wanted all four of you on this team; because your sense of right, wrong and justice is already strong.'

The four teenagers turned away from the ocean and back toward the tarp, where John was standing with Stephen and getting plates of food prepared for Frankie and Wade. Only briefly looking up, John sent, 'You have every right to feel everything you're feeling. The only thing I can suggest is a swim to work off the stress. I can guarantee everyone here will eventually go swimming or surfing for the same purpose. And we'll all get some time to rest too. Also remember, I'm an N-Gen empath, and you're Core Rimmers. I've got rooms in my head for all of my brothers, including the four of you now, so I know what you're thinking and feel what you're feeling. None of us are leaving here for home until all of us are ready for the other three hundred and thirty-something kids.'

Scott muttered, "I hate to admit it, but John's right." He kicked his sandals off and began taking his boardies off.

"I couldn't eat right now anyway," Lance smirked, and followed his partner's lead. Nodding silent agreement, Chris and Jay began stripping. Soon, all four were running into the water and dove into an oncoming wave.

The next set to choose to swim instead of eat were the quadruple Rs and their boyfriends. They walked away from the tarp and stripped off their clothes. Ryan prompted Reyes, "Come on, Casanova. Between Paul and thirty orphans, you need to swim first. Then we'll eat."

Nodding and walking with Ryan toward the water, Reyes sighed, "I can barely believe Paul felt so threatened that he felt the need to leave."

Ryan smiled, "Here's a little inside information for you. Paul acts and then thinks, almost all the time. He's the one that was thrilled over a video conference call last week. Paul told me everything that had him spazing out. I thought about that and your affect on Paul. You're good for us, Reyes. Yeah, Paul is being stubborn and flying off the handle again, acting before thinking. I, on the other hand, thought about you and the three of us together every chance I got, before you even mentioned you were interested, for five days. I'll bet you that Paul spent about one-fifth the time I did actually thinking about it, and most of that time was me talking to him about it. All I can suggest is to let him think. Away from anyone's interference, he'll figure out that he needs us as much as we need him."

Stripping off his boardies and underwear, Reyes chuckled, "He doesn't even realize that he has a Clan comm-badge in his suitcase. He's gonna shit popcorn when he figures that out."

Cracking up and stumbling in the sand as he got undressed, Ryan laughed, "That'll be the first smack upside the head. The next ones will be in quick succession; why hasn't anybody come to get him, or transported him back home, and why hasn't anyone even called him?"

Reyes grinned, "He'll figure out it was you, ya know?"

Shrugging, Ryan giggled, "He probably believes he's been imprisoned the last two weeks. The real kick will be when he tries to throw the comm-badge in the trash. It'll keep reappearing in that loft until he does something about it. I'm only wondering who he'll talk to first; me, Stevie or you?"

Leaning over, Reyes planted a deep, lingering kiss, and then whispered, "I love you, Ry."

Ryan giggled, "I know, and we're taking care of that issue while we're here," and then raced into the surf.

Barely a meter behind his wicked boyfriend, Reyes laughed, "Of course! No cameras or AIs listening!" Ryan roared laughing. In waist deep water, he suddenly spun around. Reyes nearly slammed into Ryan. Attached at the mouth, they fell into the water.

Out in deeper water, Chris, Jay, Lance and Scott saw Reyes and Ryan playing nearer the beach. Treading water, Jay chuckled, "That's it. We're completely screwing ourselves over."

Scott blinked, "What do you mean?"

Pointing at Reyes and Ryan, Chris grinned, "They were there and saw those kids too, but they've been talking about Paul every spare moment they had. A large problem is overshadowed by the smaller one nearer to their hearts."

Jay reminded, "We went there because those kids needed to see us; to know that the hospital isn't the end of the journey. Here we are, barely maintaining because they were screwed over so severely, but those kids are better off now than they were this morning. We went there for them, and they'll be home with us this weekend. Don't pity them, and don't feel sorry for them; feel happy for them, because they're healing."

"So we're fussing over history," Chris summarized, "stuff that's all over with. They're better off now than they were last week and this morning. Yeah, it sucks they had to go through it at all. In a few days, they'll be with us, even better off than they are now."

Smirking, Lance reminded, "Little kids barely speak. Kids our age have new android limbs. Clark is fourteen, like you three, but much shorter than any of us."

Scott nodded, but reminded, "Did we make them that way, SLB?"

"No."

Jay grinned, "Did every kid there get and use a Mr. Fuzzy?"

"Yeah," Lance chuckled.

Chris prompted, "Then why feel bad, Lance? We're not the cause of their problems, we're the solution."

On the verge of accepting it, Lance sighed, "I guess I know too much. All I keep thinking of, and what I'll probably have nightmares about, are the guys that had to be circumcised. It was done to me as a baby, not as a teen. I couldn't imagine that kind of pain."

Scott reminded, "Again, we didn't cause that. According to the docs, all those guys were unconscious for three days, so they never experienced the worst of the pain. I know how you feel, but if I were in their shoes, I'd definitely go for the operation, rather than lose interest in having sex."

Almost at once, Chris and Jay chimed, "Me too."

"There ya go," Scott cheered. He then brightly smiled, "We talked about this Monday and yesterday, Lance. Having foreskin only adds a little bit extra, because all the important feelings come from the head of our dicks. You and every cut guy have it way easier than us, because you don't have to worry about keeping it clean, or getting an infection that creates a need for a painful operation. If you have a bad dream about it, wake me up."

Chris offered, "Jay and I take notice of circumcised dicks, because they're different from what we see every day. Judging by what you're saying, you take notice of uncut dicks for the very same reason; they're different from what you're used to. I'd still love Jay if he was snipped, so I can guess you'd still love Scott if he was." When Lance nodded agreement, Chris shrugged, "Foreskin, or the lack thereof, is just another attribute all us gay guys notice; it's really not so important."

Jay added, "That fold of skin isn't as important to me as getting this cast off. I can totally relate to the guys with new fingers and hands. About two hours after we got to Charleston, Chris and I had to return to Ewa Beach and see Doc Andrews, because of my busted wrist, so I can be fully useful sooner rather than later. We weren't gone more than ten minutes, but it was a task that had to be done, just like those kids."

Pointing toward the shore, where the quadruple Rs, Reyes and their boyfriends were playing Frisbee, Chris smiled, "Give it up, Lance. We're here to mellow out. If you're not ready to face the rest of the kids at home, John will know it and keep us here."

Without warning, Lance started rising up and out of the water. Chris, Jay and Scott sniggered, watching Lance begin bouncing in the air. Lance excitedly hollered, "What the fuck?"

From shallower water, Reyes yelled, "The game is called 'Toss-a-Kid'. It's better with a Sehlat, but John does a pretty good imitation. He's only bouncing you to figure how much you weigh, so he doesn't throw you a mile out to sea."

"John is doing this?" Lance giggled.

All four of the quadruple Rs hollered, "He's N-Gen!"

Reyes waded out further, and shouted, "Compared to a forty-story tower, your skinny butt is easy, Lance."

Turning to Chris and Jay, Scott sniggered, "I wish I had a camera. He'll never believe that his dick was floppin' in the opposite direction as the rest of him." Chris and Jay cracked up.

Far louder yet much further away than the laughing quadruplets, Sean, Troy, Kaleo and Tory roared laughing. Abruptly, Lance bounced a final time then flew out over and into the ocean. Scott was next on John's list, and was hoisted up out of the water. As Scott bounced, he watched John, who was seemingly paying more attention to his sons and the other younger kids under the tarp. After about half-a-dozen bounces in the air, Scott went sailing. Continuing on with his version of Toss-a-Kid, John gave Chris, Jay, Reyes, Ryan, the quadruple Rs and their boyfriends something else to think and laugh about.

Other kids finished eating and raced into the water to be tossed, starting with the Stoeher twins. When the youngest kids finished eating, they raced down to the beach to get tossed and play in the water. The teens and tweens that first went swimming walked up the beach to the food. The four doctors remained under the tarp to talk out any remaining issues with the older group. Relud Glith remained at the tarp to assist the doctors, and to help his new brothers. Empathically reaching out to each of the boys while they loaded their plates, Relud felt that they were all in a good state of mind. Taking their plates to the table, the giggling quadruple Rs got Relud's attention.

'There's really something wrong when only one guy under the age of thirty is still dressed,' Ralphie sent.

Robbie grinned, 'Maybe Betazoids are shy? Is that the right word? Is it Betazoids, Betazedoids or maybe just Betas?'

Far more interested in the double cheeseburger with massive amounts of toppings he was munching on, Ronnie teased, 'Or maybe they've got teeny weenies?'

'That would make them Beta-weenies, wouldn't it?' Richie added.

Widely grinning, Relud started to undress, broadcasting to the four telepathic clowns, 'The correct term is Betazoids. Compared to my home planet, this planet is sexually repressed. Our custom is for everyone to be nude during our marriages.' Removing his shorts, Relud grinned, 'As you can see, my dickie measures up to every other teenager here. The best part is, it would take a great deal more for me to get physically aroused than it would for you four.'

The thought had barely been processed by the quadruple Rs when suddenly all four stopped eating, got up from their table, stumbled over and past one another, and raced back into the ocean, leaving their boyfriends behind and curiously smirking.

Widely smiling, Relud told the four doctors, "The quadruplets seem to be processing what they've witnessed of the level three orphans fine."

Reyes giggled, "What did you do, Relud?"

Shrugging, Relud grinned, "What needed to be done to a team of teasers. The vision I implanted in their minds will take quite a while to wear down, if you get my drift." Rapidly nodding, Reyes, Ryan, Billy, Theo and Pat cracked up.

When the laughter had dwindled to giggling, Jay prompted, "Doc Yates, since you'll be joining our Clan, tell us about yourself. Are you single?"

Doctor Yates smiled, "No, I've been married for twelve years. My wife's name is Alyssa, and she'll be joining the education staff, as an art teacher."

Scott asked, "Have you got kids of your own?"

"No," Doc Yates replied.

Doc Richardson interjected, "Skylar brought two very qualified psychiatrists to meet with me; Doctor Yates and another gentleman. Doctor Yates was the better choice for Pacific Rim Division. The other candidate will be offered the position at other divisions, so he can choose where he'd like to live and work. When I learned that Doctor Yates' wife was a qualified teacher, and that they would be open to building a family of their own, it made choosing simple."

Doc Yates grinned, "Two children at Charleston have already caught my attention. Of course, Alyssa will need to meet them, and the kids will either bond with us or they won't."

Jay asked, "So we know, when there's a troubled kid, how do we approach it?"

Doc Wiener smiled, "Hopefully, you'll never be in a position where you'll have to worry about that. Your job is to be big brothers, which you've done very well, ye of the fuzzy Fuzzies." The four new Core Rimmers chuckled. Doc Wiener suggested, "In the event that you do witness something that concerns you, then chat with either Doctor Yates or myself."

"The plan is for Doc Wiener to remain at Ewa Beach and I'll move to Oneula Beach," Doc Yates explained. "The only difference in our training is my additional time in medical school, so I can prescribe medication. Doctor Wiener and I are both against using medication, except in extreme circumstances. Since the medical staff is already in place, I'll simply be another resource, monitoring kids at Oneula Beach as Doc Wiener has been doing at Ewa Beach."

The conversation came to an abrupt end when Relud ran full tilt for the water. By the time everyone turned to watch him, Stephen screamed, "Frankie! NO!"

Believing something was horribly wrong, Prez, Keith and Drew dove into the ocean and swam directly for their nephew. John simply levitated himself and ran above the sea for his eldest son. Wade was pitching a fit because he wanted to go help his big brother too, but Stephen wouldn't let him go.

"STOP!" Frankie yelled, "They're only dolphins, daddy! They don't know people and you're freaking them out." Then Frankie disappeared under the waves. Changing direction, John ran toward his brothers. Since they were mostly under water, John had to telepathically tell Relud, Prez, Keith and Drew to slow down and chill out, because his dolphin loving son had just met his first wild dolphins in their natural environment. Now Frankie was trying to learn to communicate with the pod of cetaceans.

Stephen relaxed, and immediately Wade stopped struggling to be free of his poppa's grasp. Turning and looking up, Wade giggled, "You thought Frankie was playin' with sharks?"

Knowing that he couldn't lie even if he wanted to try, Stephen shrugged, "This isn't our home world. I didn't know what Frankie was doing, but I saw that dorsal fin, bigger than your bro's head."

Skylar popped over to where Stephen and Wade were standing. "I told you we're safe," Skylar giggled. He pointed out to sea, explaining, "There's a barrier about a kilometer out. If it can harm you guys, it won't make it any closer than that. Not even crabs or lobsters can get past it. All the other fishes and stuff that can't hurt are kewl to come closer."

"There are some jobs a father can't ever stop, no matter how safe his sons are," Stephen told Skylar. Happily giggling, Wade slammed into his poppa and held on tight.

Walking above the waves with a purposeful stride toward the beach and his husband, John loudly laughed, "We're here to decompress, but what does my hubby do? HE FREAKS OUT! AND FREAKS THE REST OF US OUT!"

Giggling his little butt off, Wade backed away from Stephen. Rising off the sand, Stephen shrieked, "John, don't you dare toss me!"

Listening to Frankie's thoughts more than his husband's warnings, John began bouncing Stephen. To the soft chortling of everyone on the beach, Stephen went flying out over the sea, screaming, "JO-O-O-OHN!"

Wading to shore with Relud and Keith, Prez sniggered, "You aren't getting any lovin' tonight, bro."

Looking up at his big bros, John smiled, "Frankie's learned to speak basic dolphin; at least enough to send part of the pod after Stephen. He won't have to swim back, unless he absolutely refuses help from the dolphins."

Skylar popped between John and Prez, giggling, "And a million years from now, dolphins save people from drowning, because they think it's a game."

Moments later, Stephen could be seen trying to hold onto a dolphin's dorsal fin and getting a ride back to shore. When Stephen's grip failed, another dolphin held him up, like it would a baby dolphin needing their first breaths of air. A third dolphin slowly came around for Stephen to hold onto, and brought him closer to shore.

The rest of the team's break time was spent as planned; surfing, swimming, napping, and teen couples getting some intimate time. Dolphin rides were a bonus unplanned activity, but everyone got to spend time with Frankie's friends.

* * * * *

Oneula Beach

Wednesday, November 10, 2004, 12:00PM HTZ

After their chill time, Skylar transported the entire group just outside the Oneula Beach dining room. Starting to walk inside, they found almost every kid from both bases was gathered together, and applauding their return. Back in the furthest corner of the room, Kassidy and Matt sat at a small table for another intimate meal. It seemed that only the adults working at Ewa Beach weren't at Oneula Beach. The Rimmers' sons and their various additional helpers scattered to join the rest of the kids in the room. Still clapping their hands, Erik Kendricks and Travis McAuley walked across the room to the Core Rimmers. Travis grinned, "We all know you needed to go to Charleston. Alden's told us that you did a great job. The kids are doing better, and they'll be watching us the next couple o' days."

"In the meantime," Erik giggled, "the two of us were the only dorm leaders not in school, dealing with a hundred and fifty or so kids."

"With help from Craig and Phil Nash, Felicity, Owen, Tony and Ray, we gathered the sixty-something kids from Ewa Beach and brought them here," Travis explained.

"Tony and Ray organized some volleyball teams and taught the kids the game," Erik added.

Travis nodded, "Craig and Phil had another group learning soccer, but the bottom line is, we barely kept things kewl around here." Seeing all the Core Rimmers grinning, Travis turned to Erik. Both boys shrugged.

Softly chortling, Prez turned to Keith and the rest of the Core Rimmer team.

"It's a tough decision," Corey giggled.

Almost in sync, Erik and Travis wondered, "What decision?"

Keith smiled, "The key word used in this instance was 'barely'. The fact is, you did manage. Just like the rest of the kids managed last Friday during Battle Of Earth. And what happened during dinner Friday night?"

AJ waved and Jerry sniggered, "Two new Core Rimmers were christened."

Sadly shaking his head, Troy chortled, "And all of our dorm leadership, present company excluded."

Sean grinned, "Instead of acting like a new couple and choosing to spend time alone, you gathered everyone together, where they could enjoy themselves."

"And support one another," Chris added. "Being in the same boat, feeling the same things, all it took was direction to change sad to glad."

Over the PA system, Prez prompted, "All Rimmers who believe that Erik and Travis should be promoted to Core Rimmers, please raise your hands and voices?" Almost every hand rose in the air and the sound of cheers from four hundred kids reverberated around the room. "And who believes that Tony Lanning, Ray Varga, Craig and Phil Nash would make good dorm leaders?" More loud cheers and agreements burst forth from the adults and kids in the room. When the sound dwindled, Prez instructed, "You can lower your hands."

Keith asked, "Craig, Phil, Owen, Tony and Ray, would you consider taking on new roles? And also with these roles, would two of you consider moving from Ewa Beach to here?"

Standing up, Tony answered, "Ray and I will take the job, and we'll move." More applause erupted with shouts of congratulations. Craig, Phil, Owen and Felicity softly discussed the possibility.

Drew prompted, "What we really need are two girl leaders here at Onelula Beach."

Getting up and leaving Craig and the table, Felicity hurried over to where her roommate, Elise Blas was sitting. Moments later, a lot of positive chatter erupted from that table. Within a minute, Felicity stood up and hollered, "We'll take the job, Prez." Drew and Corey clapped their hands and cheered the teenage girl they had rescued from an Anaheim level one orphanage.

Prez smiled, "Craig, Phil and Owen will take over for Erik and Travis at Ewa Beach dorm three."

Noticing that Craig's expression was very similar to when he got soaked Monday night, Phil and Owen roared laughing. Craig chuckled, "That takes care of that." Giggles broke loose around the dining room.

Tony sniggered, "We had other helpers, Prez."

"Very important helpers, in fact," Ray grinned. John, Stephen, Frankie and Wade cracked up.

"And who might that be?" Prez wondered.

Tony replied, "Angelo Diaz and Reggie Combs were the last to wake and have breakfast. They found us here, at the volleyball courts, and then kept an eye on the kids at the playground, and helped referee volleyball games, but they're not here right now."

Prez tapped his sub-vocal, asking, "Alden, where are Angelo and Reggie?"

"At the Diaz's townhouse," Alden replied from the ceiling speakers. He then asked, "Would you like them informed they're needed?"

"As quickly as possible," Prez answered, and then asked for Mr. and Mrs. Combs, and Mr. and Mrs. Diaz to report to the Oneula Beach dining room.

Alden replied, "Mr. Diaz is in surgery, boss. As an intern, he can't leave right now, so I won't bug him."

Prez nodded, "Thanks, Alden." Within a minute, Mrs. Diaz, Roy and Monica Combs came in through a dimensional door. As they approached, Prez smiled, "Your sons had a busy morning, I heard."

The three adults nodded and agreed. On her way to lunch, Mrs. Diaz had heard from Angelo and Reggie, learning that they were bringing a group of little ones to the dining room. Moments later, Angelo and Reggie appeared, hand-in-hand, before the Core Rimmers and their parents. Reggie muttered, "That's still a weird feeling."

"You'll get used to it," John sniggered, and scanned the two teenagers. As John processed and weeded through their thoughts, he passed the important information to the remainder of the team.

Locking eyes with his mom, Angelo explained, "We were finishing lunch at home. We cleaned up and loaded the dishwasher, but Cecilia's not happy that I asked her to wipe the table, so we could get here quickly." He focused on Prez, giggling, "It's not every day the director wants to see you, ASAP."

Mrs. Diaz nodded and smirked, "I'll talk with your sister."

Still processing what John had dumped in his head, Prez grinned, "We have a very serious situation here." The other Core Rimmers evilly snickered and nodded agreement.

Lance softly giggled, "They broke Erik's and Trav's time." Scowling, Erik and Travis glanced at one another, silently wondering how that could be possible. Chris, Jay, Lance and Scott sniggered and nudged their friends around a bit.

Prez confirmed, "Since nine-thirty this morning, I heard that you two helped our Clan at the playground?"

Blushing, Reggie nodded. Angelo smiled and shrugged, "It wasn't a problem. The kids just needed to be shown stuff to do."

"Playing with little kids is easy," Reggie seriously admitted.

Sixteen Core Rimmers loudly grunted, "Uh oh!"

Angelo offered, "Game rules and stuff, refereeing, and stuff like that."

Prez sniggered, "But did anyone ask for your help?" Angelo and Reggie shook their heads, getting the distinct impression that they had overstepped their bounds.

The other sixteen Core Rimmers laughed, "This is extremely serious!"

Shaking his head, but unable to hold a straight face, Prez shared, "To make matters worse, two of our little tikes banged their heads together in one of the trampolines. You two didn't even know our doctors' names, but each lifted a crying kid, and transported them to the doctors' office. They stayed with them until they were checked, and then brought them back to the playground again."

"SAY IT ISN'T SO!" Chris, Jay, Scott and Lance yelled.

Sean and Troy playfully droned, "Fahgedaboudit."

Around the dining room, a dozen other New Yorkers and their friends hollered, "FAHGEDABOUDIT!"

Prez lost it and cracked up. Keith giggled, "For doing all the right things at the right time, when nobody asked you to do diddly, we have no other choice except to announce two new Morale Rimmers, Ensign Angelo Diaz and Ensign Reggie Combs." All the kids applauded and cheered; the loudest were those that hadn't been in school that morning. About halfway across the dining room, Tony and Ray were completely hysterical.

Mrs. Diaz and her son, Angelo incredulously shouted "WHAT?"

At his son's stunned expression, Roy Combs began laughing. He didn't notice his son or his wife turning pale. Luckily, John felt weakness in the group. He telepathically warned several of the oldest Core Rimmers and Doc Metzger just in time. Monica Combs crumbled and was caught by Jay. Reggie Combs fell backwards against Chris and Scott. Angelo barely had time to gasp before realizing Reggie was already safe. In moments, Mrs. Combs, Jay, Reggie, Chris, Scott and Doc Metzger had all disappeared.

Turning to Erik, Travis, Sean and Lance, Troy sniggered, "Well, the rest of the team decompressed, so I guess its proper, however untimely." The former four nodded and laughed.

Palming her forehead, Mrs. Diaz sighed, "Preston, do you know Angelo or Reggie very well? We've only been here five days."

Shrugging, Prez smiled, "How well I know them isn't the issue. Angelo and Reggie did what needed to be done without instruction or prompting; they saw what Erik, Travis, Tony, Ray, Craig and Phil were doing and helped. Everything else they need to know, they'll learn, just like the rest of us have. Also, they're a team, which is how this division and the Clan operates. Eighty level three orphans at three hospitals needed our help, so three divisions split up to make those kids feel wanted and welcome. Lastly, with five bases and a third of the planet to cover, we need all the help we can get."

Keith gestured an open palm to John, grinning, "Thanks to our Intel Director, we know almost as much about Angelo and Reggie as their parents do, and a few additional things that we'll speak with them privately about."

Locking eyes with his mom, Angelo grinned, "Believe it or not, we talked about ways we could help the division." He helplessly giggled, "Reg and I thought we'd need to ask what we might do."

Looking up at the two adults, John giggled, "Mrs. Diaz and Mr. Combs, I already told my mom and dad. After school, while we're chatting with Angelo and Reggie, you and your spouses are invited to meet with our parents. If you want, I can have a doctor there too, so you can get your Valium prescriptions?"

Glancing around the remaining group of Core Rimmers, Angelo giggled, "I guess we'll need to take classes and stuff."

"Go take care of your boyfriend first," Drew grinned. All the other Core Rimmers agreed.

Looking up at Angelo, John innocently smiled, 'You've already been trained, bro. Your partner will be trained when he's a little more stable, later today. You and Reggie can take tonight and tomorrow to let it sink in. The only classes you'll need to take are for phaser training. Prez will get that scheduled for you.'

Nodding agreement, Prez prompted Angelo, "Go check on Reggie. Catch up with Lance, Scott, Erik, Travis, Chris and Jay while we're at school. After school, the entire team will get together and we'll get you dudes situated."

Nodding at Prez, Angelo chirped, "Kewl," and then asked, "Mr.

Combs, would you like a quick trip to check on your wife and son?"

Roy Combs nodded and grinned, "Yes, I think so, or I'll be joining you and Reggie in the dog house tonight. With a little luck, I can talk her out of becoming the first Clan mother to indefinitely ground her leader son and his boyfriend."

With that, Angelo tapped his comm-badge and giggled, "Alden, to the doctors' office again, please."

"It's becoming habit today," Alden giggled, and executed the order. The remaining Core Rimmers split up to spend time with their Clan.

* * * * *

Ewa Beach, Condo B

Wednesday, November 10, 12:20PM HTZ

As soon as lunch was finished, Kassidy and Matt left Oneula Beach and returned to the Thornton condo. Matt was thrilled with Kassidy's interest, but thought his new boyfriend was just being extra nice. On the elevator ride up to the seventh floor, wrapped in each other's arms, Kassidy seriously asked, "Did you really want to play guitar?"

"Yep, always have, as far back as I can remember," Matt answered. "Daddy's been playing bluegrass with friends all my life; it's something I was raised with."

Knowing the sort of response he might get, Kassidy smiled, "Does your playing really suck that bad?"

Matt cracked up and then laughed, "No, I really can play and sing. I've been doin' both at church almost every Sunday for more'n three years."

Squeezing Matt tighter for a moment, Kassidy giggled, "I love music as a listener. Believe me, I've heard some really horrible garage bands. I really want to hear you play. You must really want to be a good player or you wouldn't be here. Pick whatever songs you like, and I'll give you my honest opinion."

Matt shared, "I want to play music for a living, Kass. Right now, dad says I've learned all he can teach me. He's even said that some of the songs I play are more than he could match. I feel like I'm limiting myself though; there's so much more that I could learn and eventually be able to play." The elevator stopped and they stepped off. On the way to his apartment, Matt continued, "That's why dad chose to work at this division. I wanna do good, for myself, for him, and now for you too."

Kassidy wondered, "Are you feeling pressured?"

"Yes and no," Matt replied. He put his palm on the security plate, stated his name and opened the door, leading Kassidy inside.

"Am I pressuring you?" Kassidy asked.

Grinning, Matt shook his head and answered, "No, its like anything else you really want badly, I guess. Am I really good enough to make a career in music, or is it just wishful thinking?"

Kassidy gently prodded, "Let's find out," and took Matt's hand in his.

Matt stole a tender kiss, and then they walked down the hall. "I'll play a little bit solo for you, and then pull out some CDs and play with the recordings," Matt summarized. They stepped into Matt's bedroom, immediately noticing that the bed sheet and blanket they had quickly straightened out before leaving was now perfectly made. Sadly shaking his head, Matt giggled, "Dad's been home," and released Kassidy's hand to get his acoustic guitar.

"I almost hate to sit on it," Kassidy smiled.

Matt giggled, "Well, I was thinkin' the living room would be a better place. The better stereo is out there. Not to mention, seeing you sittin' on my bed might be too much of a distraction, and I'll forget all about the music."

Kassidy teased, "After doin' it in the sauna, your living room is tame in comparison."

Mooing through more giggles, Matt joked, "We won't leave wet stains on the new furniture. Now that we've gone oral and finished the job right, I have a new favorite dessert."

"Me too, hunky bear," Kassidy smiled. Seeing Matt reach for his electric guitar case, Kassidy prodded, "Let me help carry stuff?"

Nodding, Matt put the electric case down before Kassidy and handed him the acoustic guitar. He then said, "I'll grab a few CDs and the amp."

Lifting the electric guitar, Kassidy scowled, "How can you do both?"

"The back of the amp is open, so I can put the CDs in there," Matt replied and then easily chose seven compact disks from the rack. Once Matt had stowed them in the amp, he lifted and carried it to Kassidy. Leading the way into the living room, Kassidy asked, "Where should I put these guitars?"

Matt grunted, "The acoustic goes on the couch, and the electric on the floor."

At the end of the hall, Kassidy turned and asked, "Is the amp heavy?"

"About seventy-five pounds, but it's awkward," Matt replied. They went into the living room. Kassidy put the guitars down. Matt put the amp down near one of the surround sound speakers. Red in the face, Matt grinned, "Dad's gonna put casters on this amp so I can just roll it around."

Kassidy worried, "Are you okay, Matt?"

Nodding, Matt smiled, "I'm fine, Kass. It's a 60 watt tube amp with two twelve-inch speakers. The wooden box without the innards would be an awkward bitch." He then leaned over to pull the power cord and plug the amp in. While he was still haunched over, Kassidy went to him and started a gentle back massage. Getting the cord plugged in, Matt laughed, "For the boyfriend that likes to touch as much as I do, thank you, Lord!" He spun around, grabbed Kassidy around the waist and kissed him hard. They held the kiss a long minute.

When the kiss broke, Kassidy giggled, "You're so tempting."

"Right back atcha, sexy cinnamon stick," Matt smiled. He then danced Kassidy back a few steps and sat him down on the sofa. He picked up his acoustic guitar and played a few chords to make sure it was in tune. Backing up another few steps, Matt played the Credence Clearwater Revival song, Down On The Corner. He started with the introduction bass riff, and then strummed chords and then began singing. At Matt's loud, clear voice, Kassidy's eyes widened. He was expecting better than the garage bands he'd heard back in Kentucky, but he wasn't expecting anything any where near as good as Matt's enthusiastic playing and singing.

When the song ended, Kassidy burst into applause and cheers. Matt giggled, and then started playing the introductory licks to Southern Nights. Again, Matt bopped and played and sang. Kassidy's brain was spinning. His new boyfriend seemed to be as good as any of the guys in Platinum Habits. As soon as the song ended, Kassidy applauded and told Matt exactly what he had been thinking.

Matt smiled, "Thanks, Kass, but I really hope they're way better than me."

"What makes you say that?"

Matt answered, "How can I learn anything if they're as good as me? They've gotta have something to teach me. I'd be really disappointed if they don't." He then started strumming his guitar again and sang Sundown.

At the end of the song, Kassidy proudly beamed, "You can sing and play really well. You haven't sung a bad note yet."

Matt giggled, "I played and sang at church. I'm used to performing now. This next song was a favorite of my mamma's. I wish I could've played it for her before she passed. Because I couldn't, I make a point of playing it every time I pick up a guitar." He then began finger picking his acoustic guitar, and sang, I'll Have To Say I Love You In A Song. Kassidy enthusiastically applauded another great performance. Matt began strumming his guitar again. This time he played and sang Amie.

At the end of the song, Matt took his acoustic guitar off and rested it on the couch beside Kassidy. "Intermission," he grinned, "and then I'll play another couple on the electric, with some CDs." He went to power on his amp, and then offered Kassidy his hand.

Taking Matt's hand, Kassidy bounded up off the sofa and into Matt's arms, repeatedly stealing tender kisses. In between those kisses, Matt tried to ask, "Do you... want anything... to drink or eat?" Breaking down in giggles, Kassidy made Matt's neck and throat his after lunch snack.

Soon, Kassidy had one hand snaking up under the back of Matt's shirt, and the other hand squirming its way into the back of Matt's shorts. With Kassidy's gray eyes peering deep into his own, Matt giggled, "We will make love again, Kass, before we leave here to do anything else. I need to wet my whistle before I sing another couple o' songs for you."

"You're so good!" Kassidy cheered. He goosed Matt's butt, and then seriously said, "I really hope you're not disappointed, but this audience of one thinks you're just as good as any of the guys in Platinum Habits." Kassidy pulled his hands out of Matt's clothes.

Leading the way to the kitchen, Matt shared, "I'm sure there's a bunch of stuff I don't know." Seeing Kassidy's curious expression, Matt said, "There are songs I've repeatedly tried to play, but they didn't sound right. As long as I stick to country and country-rock, I do all right. Everything else is still a challenge, and I'm not sure what it is that I'm doin' wrong." He opened the refrigerator and offered, "Cola, iced tea, pineapple juice, or water?"

Kassidy smiled, "I'm good with water." While Matt got them tall glasses of refrigerated water, Kassidy prompted, "Name some song you've tried but couldn't play."

"There's lots," Matt replied. "Like the whole end of 'Stairway To Heaven', from the guitar solo on, I can't touch. Its like, some of the notes are right, but the tone is wrong; it picks up a country twang. It's not only hard rock and metal that I struggle with, its funk and rhythm and blues too." Matt handed Kassidy a full glass and leaned against the counter beside him.

After taking a sip, Kassidy recalled, "Platinum Habits plays a lot of that; at least they did during Sunday night's concert. Yesterday afternoon, they played a lot of ballads, and rock power ballads too."

Matt asked, "How often do they perform?"

"I've only seen those two concerts, but kids that've been around since the start say, about every other day."

"What are the leaders of the Division like?"

Kassidy smiled, "They're kewl. A couple of 'em are our age; Prez, Keith, Derrick, Mike, Troy and Sean. Chris and Jay too, but they were just made Core Rimmers at breakfast yesterday." Matt began evilly snickering. Kassidy giggled, "Yeah, I know. They call themselves that around their parents too. Lance and Scott were made leaders yesterday afternoon, just before the concert. They live in my dorm, and so do Chris and Jay. Kaleo and Tory are another couple. AJ and Jerry are thirteen-years-old. They were just made leaders Friday night. It was Kaleo, Tory, AJ and Jerry that greeted me at lunch Saturday. Those four are all rescued kids. Then there's Drew and Corey. Drew's twelve, and Corey's eleven; they greeted my brothers and cousin.

"Last but certainly not least are John and Stephen. It was them that brought us here from Des Moines. I guess I should mention that John's an N-Gen; short for next generation human. His gifts are empathy, telepathy and telekinesis. John's a trip! He'll walk past you, chattin' with someone else, but then you'll hear his voice in your head, talkin' about whatever you were thinking of when he walked past."

Kassidy cheerfully continued, "John's parents and Stephen's mom were in Des Moines when we were brought here. The first thing we did was take a trip to the store so we could get clothes and stuff. While we were there, we met Mike's mom and dad. During the day Saturday, I met Corey's and Derrick's parents. Derrick's dad showed us the trike trail we were on earlier. Corey's mom, Aunt Lanna is the group mom. She spends most of the days at the pools and playground with us kids. Mike's dad is a cop. He works at the FYS building with some of the other adults. Troy's mom is a housekeeper at the dorms. She stopped and talked with me too. I give your dad another day or two, and he'll be like all the other adults here, roamin' around and chattin' with kids."

Matt grinned, "I can tell by your voice that you really like it here."

Kassidy gushed, "It's different, but it's great! A good example is yesterday afternoon. Just before dinner, Kade and Karey told me that they were having dinner with their boyfriends, at the Combs' townhouse. I'm blown away that my eight-year-old cousin and two eleven-year-old brothers have boyfriends. A bunch of guys in my dorm hall had dinner with me, since I was alone and bummed out. There are telepaths all over the place, so there's not much of anything that can be kept a secret. When the guys I was eating with took off to do other stuff, Derrick's mom and dad hijacked me for a chat. They noticed my expression during dinner and after. There's these two adults who I barely know, asking me what I really want, talking just like my real parents would. The bottom line is, everybody here watches out for everybody else."

Pausing for another mouthful of water, Kassidy asked, "What else is on your mind?"

Matt chuckled, "Only you, sexy cinnamon stick." Kassidy began giggling. Matt smiled, "Most of what I always wanted is you, right beside me. The other part comes when school starts next week. Everything else would be nice, but not requirements."

Kassidy wondered, "What sort of everything else are you referrin' to?"

Matt shrugged, "I've heard and read about Clan Short. Anything else I can do to help the community and the Division. I played at church services on Sundays, and at church picnics, and at any other gatherings they planned for the Christmas Holidays and Easter."

Kassidy nodded, "There's lots of stuff you can do, if you want. There are odd jobs posted on the Division's web site. We'll take a look at that later too, if ya want?"

"Sure," Matt smiled, "we'll check it out, after I play a little more and we make love." Giggling and putting his water glass down on the counter, Kassidy slid in front of Matt to plant a tender kiss.

In between kisses, Kassidy softly said, "Later, I'm hopin' to introduce you to Prez and Keith."

"They're the leaders?"

Nodding and running his hands up Matt's arms, Kassidy smirked, "Finding any of them without a bunch of kids lined up around them is the trick. Maybe at dinner they'll be free for thirty-seconds. Leave your dad a note to tell him we'll be eating at the CIC. He don't need to cook every night. Tell him that he's already worked enough today."

Widely smiling, Matt giggled, "Is there somethin' about my arms you like?"

Brightly smiling, Kassidy replied, "You've picked me up and moved me around a couple o' times, and now I know that you're a good musician too. These arms are so strong, but at the same time they can be gentle when you touch me, and these fingers are nimble enough to play guitar. What's amazing is how much I like the idea of havin' a pickin' boyfriend."

"It means practicing, Kass. Once school starts, I hope to be practicing every moment that we're not together like this. I wanna be able to play everything and anything I hear; if I like it, then I can play it, without spending an hour slowly rippin' apart every chord and lick in a four-minute tune."

"Is that what it takes?"

"That's what it takes now. It used to take longer, a couple o' hours over days to learn a single song."

Kassidy prodded, "Show me." Nodding, Matt turned and picked up both glasses. Kassidy led them back to the living room. Matt put both glasses of water down on the coffee table.

He went to get his electric guitar, saying, "I'm really proud of this guitar. Dad found it at a garage sale before my twelfth birthday." Pulling the blonde Fender Telecaster guitar out of the case and putting the strap on, Matt turned and beamed, "It's a rare, classic axe, Kass; vintage 1960. Dad dropped a couple o' hundred bucks on it, but on the way home, he told me that it's as old as he is, and could've easily cost five times more."

Kassidy gasped, "Guitars cost that much?"

"Some really old guitars cost more," he answered, and unraveled the cord, plugged it into the guitar and then the amp. Leaning over, Matt pulled the CDs out from the back of the amp and put them on the coffee table. He chose one disk, put it in the CD player and powered up the rest of the sound system. Before turning around to face Kassidy, Matt turned up his guitar a little, checked the tuning, and then played a couple of chords and licks. Kassidy mooed. Spinning around, Matt giggled, "I know this song opens with an acoustic, but I'm gonna play that on electric, and then switch parts." He turned slightly to start the CD player and began finger-picking Marshall Tucker Band's Can't You See. Soon, Matt was enthusiastically singing and playing the licks along with the recording. At the guitar solo sections, Kassidy could barely believe what he was seeing and hearing; Matt was playing note-for-note perfectly and singing just as well.

At the end of the song Kassidy applauded and cheered, "I'm gonna make love to you until yer pecker won't get hard again!" Matt cracked up. "Okay," Kassidy giggled, "it might get hard, but you won't be puttin' out very much."

Getting the message loud and clear, Matt giggled, "Just a few more songs, sexy cinnamon stick." He quickly changed disks and then began playing Flirtin' With Disaster. Once again, Kassidy was pleasantly surprised. At the end of the song, Matt again switched disks and performed Gimme All Your Lovin', complete with swiveling hips and soulful eyes peering directly into Kassidy's eyes. Kassidy mooed and began rubbing his crotch, and flicking his tongue. Matt laughed at least half of the lyrics, but had two more songs that he worked countless hours on that he wanted to play.

At the end of the song, while Matt again switched disks, Kassidy playfully warned, "Gonna eat ya up, hunky bear. You rimmed my ass, and your turn is only minutes away!" Without commentary, Matt played and sang, Caught Up In You. Burning up and barely maintaining, Kassidy stood to show off his tented shorts and started dirty dancing. The more provocative Kassidy got, the more Matt put into his guitar playing and singing. At the end of the song, while Matt's back was turned and dealing with the CD player, Kassidy wrapped Matt up.

Matt giggled, "One more song, just for you, Kass." Kassidy whimpered. "Let me get the disk loaded, play this song for you, and then it's a mad dash for my bedroom," Matt giggled. Kassidy backed away and onto the couch. Matt got the CD loaded and started, and then played and sang, Love In The First Degree.

I once thought of love as a prison
A place I didn't want to be
So long ago I made a decision
To be footloose and fancy free
But you came and I was so tempted
To gamble on love just one time
I never thought I would get caught
It seemed like a perfect crime

Baby, you left me defenseless
I've only got one plea
Lock me away

Inside of your love and throw away the key
I'm guilty
Of love in the first degree

I thought it would be so simple
Like a thousand times before
I take what I wanted and just walk away
But I never made it to the door
Now babe, I'm not beggin' for mercy
Go ahead and throw the book at me
If lovin' you is a crime, I know that I'm
As guilty as a man can be

Baby, you left me defenseless
I've only got one plea
Lock me away
Inside of your love and throw away the key
I'm guilty
Of love in the first degree
Love in the first degree
Oh yeah

Oh yeah

From the ceiling speakers, seven AI's provided backup vocals and sang along with the repeated chorus.

Baby, you left me defenseless

I've only got one plea

Lock me away

Inside of your love and throw away the key

I'm guilty

Of love in the first degree

Love in the first degree

Oh yeah

Having waited long enough and knowing the song was nearing its end, Kassidy stood and starting taking his shirt off. Two steppin' and swaying, Kassidy took his shorts off, proudly displaying his briefs covered bone and dancing for his lover. Matt longingly stared at his boyfriend's package and continued singing;

Love in the first degree

Love in the first degree

Oh yeah

Love in the first degree

Love in the first degree

With the song fading out, Kassidy slipped out of his underwear, tossed them at Matt, and jogged to Matt's bedroom. Taking his guitar off and putting it on the couch, Matt continued singing, "Love in the first degree, Love in the first degree," and chased after Kassidy. Barely across the doorway threshold and in his room, Matt was attacked, stripped and pushed onto his bed by a ravenous redhead.

Chapter 27

Oneula Beach, FYS Building.

Wednesday, November 10, 2004, 12:30PM HTZ

After Reggie had fainted, and had been brought to Doc Metzger's exam room, Scott checked with Jay and Chris, asking, "You're hangin' here for a while?"

Nodding, Chris grinned, "Until Reggie comes around."

Jay offered, "We'll make sure he's okay and glued to Angelo. Then we'll probably all need some time alone, before we get together to educate the new Core Rimmers."

"Kewl," Scott smiled, "I'll go find Lance. I'm pretty sure that there's something running circles in his head." Noticing Chris and Jay waiting for some additional explanation, Scott shrugged, "I can tell. Before we left that other Earth, he was getting those thoughtful, detached expressions; just kind o' phasin' out and back in again."

Jay nodded and grinned, "Go take care of it. When it's time to go into Core Rimmer orientation mode, I'll give you a call."

"Kewl," Scott grinned, "I'll catch ya later."

Chris and Jay chorused, "Later," and then Scott turned and started out of the exam room. In moments, he was walking out of the Oneula FYS building.

During the short walk back to the base dining room, Scott tapped his sub-vocal, whispering, "Hey Alden, what's Lance doin'?"

"He's with Travis and Erik," Alden answered. "They're at a table, chatting with some other teenage guys; Charlie Fortenberry, Mike Busse, Terry Parkinson are at the same table, and there are other guys at the next table, Neil Green, Tad Markell..."

"I don't need a roll call," Scott interrupted. "Is Lance talking too, or not?"

"Not at the moment," Alden replied. "He's there listening, but not really participating." He then wondered, "Is there something wrong, Scott?"

"It's probably nothing," Scott muttered.

Alden suggested, "If I can help, let me know."

"I'm just a little worried about him," Scott admitted. "It's prob'ly not a big deal, just somethin' he's not said anything about."

"You're acting like a suspicious, jealous boyfriend," Alden giggled.

"No," Scott sniggered, "I just know my sexy lover boy; he gets an idea in his skull and it bounces around there."

"I'm not sure I get what you mean," Alden prodded.

Scott sighed, "Consider how we hooked up. All I had to do was show a little interest in him, and he tried to suck my tongue out of my mouth." Alden began giggling, and Scott grinned, "It's part of being in love, Alden. Once you get a body and boyfriend, you'll start getting the idea; some people hold stuff inside, for a little while, or for a long time, until someone says, 'hey, what's up with that?' He's my boyfriend, and I really do care a lot about him. If something's bugging him, I want to know what it is, so I can at least try to help."

"Well, he's still following the conversation around two tables, but not actively participating," Alden offered.

About to walk into the dining room, Scott smiled, "Just watch and learn." He went inside, found Lance and went in that direction. Seeing Scott approaching, Lance excused himself, got up and went to his boyfriend. Lance was beaming brightly, like they had been apart for far longer than fifteen minutes. Scott silently mouthed, "God, he's so cute!" and Alden cracked up laughing.

Lifting his arms in preparation to give Scott a hug, Lance giggled, "I missed you," and then wrapped him up tight.

They tenderly kissed, and then Scott softly admitted, "I missed you too, SLB." Taking Lance's hand in his, Scott turned and led the way from the dining room.

"Where are we going?" Lance giggled.

Scott smirked, "That depends on you. I get the impression there's some ideas brewing that I can't wait to hear."

Blushing, Lance nodded, but didn't say a word. He never could hide anything from Scott. Even though he hadn't said a word aloud, Scott knew that something was going on.

Before they walked out of the dining room, Scott wondered, "Is it about the kids at the AI hospital?"

The moment they stepped outside, Lance sighed, "No."

"Let me try and help," Scott softly begged. They followed the walkway towards the new condominiums, seeing the construction workers and the tech-bots adding another story to each of the structures.

Lance squeezed Scott hand briefly, and then huffed, "We spent almost six hours at the hospital, and then another six or more hours at that other Ewa Beach. Both messed with me, and now I'm thinkin' about stuff I couldn't help noticing at the other Ewa Beach."

Scott smiled, "I'm all ears."

Giggling, "You are not all ears," Lance looked over at Scott with a playful sparkle in his green eyes.

Scott chuckled, "Uh oh." Beginning to lose it and laugh, Lance released Scott's hand and took off running. Scott ran after him, off the walkway and into the trees. Scott chortled, "I'm catching up to you, MSLB!"

"It's all your fault!" Lance cackled.

Closing the distance between them, Scott playfully reminded, "You started running away. Do you think I won't chase after your pretty butt?"

Roaring laughing and slowing down, Lance ordered, "STOP! You're making matters worse!"

Caught up with Lance, Scott jogged around him, giggling, "It's always worse before it gets better. Now, tell me what you noticed at that other Earth."

Pausing and standing still, Lance panted, "You, Chris, Jay, Keith, Prez, Derrick, Mike, Relud, Kaleo, Tory, Sean, Troy, Reyes and Ryan. Hell, even Drew, Corey, John and Stephen caught my eye."

Stopping before Lance, Scott asked, "What about them?"

Locking eyes with Scott for a few seconds, Lance then blinked and sadly shook his head, frowning, "You know I really love you, right?"

Scott nodded and smiled, "I love you too, Lance, but why do you seem sad all of a sudden?"

Waving Scott to follow, Lance started walking further amongst the trees. He started rambling, "You're my best friend, my lover and my life partner. Things I never noticed about anybody, anywhere, I noticed in you. Please don't believe for a second that I want anything changed or different, but I can't help noticing and thinking. I don't want to lose you over my stupid thoughts, okay?"

"You won't ever lose me, SLB," Scott promised.

Pausing again and locking eyes with Scott, Lance whined, "Even if I said I'm completely gay, like trollin' the Village, three dollar bill gay?"

Scott blinked and then grinned, "We're gay, Lance, as in both of us, you and me. I distinctly recall leading you off to a private spot so we could make love. Then we went surfing, and then we decided to nap in the tent, with Chris, Jay, Kaleo and Tory. When we woke up, three couples got busy."

"That's part of the problem!" Lance incredulously laughed.

"What problem?" Scott sniggered. "When the six of us left the tent, Prez, Keith, Mike, Derrick, Troy and Sean went into the tent. All I learned is that we're all the same; we made love our way, and Chris, Jay, Kaleo and Tory seemed to be doing it the way they wanted too. So, where's the problem?"

Partially covering his face with his hands, Lance giggled, "In my mind." He lowered his hands, revealing a deep red blush, giggling, "For the first time, today I realized that I like dicks - all dicks, Scott, even the younger guys have the cutest, tiny peckers, and I feel so damn guilty, because I'm yours, and you're mine, and there shouldn't be any reason to notice, but I did notice, and I know that I can't ever stop noticing, but now I don't know what to even think of myself."

Widely smiling at the ranting and rambling, Scott snorted and then howled laughing.

"STOP LAUGHING!" Lance roared. Scott only grabbed his stomach and laughed louder. Lance giggled, "I'm serious! I never noticed before that every variation is beautiful, and I'm surprised you didn't notice me gazing, making all sorts of comparisons, and taking mental notes. Even cut guys like me, they're all different and still beautiful. Uncut guys, like you, got a little more attention, because their foreskins were all in various states, exposing less or more of the heads." Pausing briefly, Lance smiled at his lover, and asked, "Did you notice the younger guys? When they came out of the water, their nads were almost invisible, they were so shriveled up, and their foreskin covered their dicks completely, making cuter, little points?" Sputtering, Scott lost it again and rapidly nodded. "What's up with that?" Lance giggled. "Is it because they're so young, or because they were that cold? None of the older uncut dudes came out of the ocean looking like that." Uncontrollably bellowing, Scott gasped for breath. Sadly shaking his head, Lance smirked, "There's something really wrong with both of us. You should be angry as hell, but no, just laugh it up."

Taking hold of Lance and squeezing him tight, Scott placed tender kisses and tried to stop laughing. When he caught his breath, Scott admitted, "I've been noticing dicks for years, but just never did anything about it, until you. I've had a couple of years to think and deal with it, but obviously you're only just now realizing that you're a sexual creature, just like every other human being. Of course you're noticing other dicks, and comparing them to your own and mine, the two you know very well."

Looking up into Scott's eyes, Lance smiled, "It's normal?"

Nodding, Scott said, "Tell me if this sounds familiar; little boys have cute, little dicks, that make us wonder what they'll have when they hit puberty, and if they'll be straight or gay."

"Very familiar," Lance giggled.

"Do you want to mess around with a little boy?"

Lance hollered, "Hell no!"

"Why not?"

"There's not enough meat there for me, they can't put out, and I would hurt them."

"Excellent reasons. Now, what about Kaleo's dark meat?"

Lance giggled, "Gorgeous, limp and erect!"

Nodding, Scott sniggered, "I completely agree, and he's a heck of a great guy, but his pretty pecker isn't for me; it's for Tory. Would you rather Kaleo or me?"

"You, every day, several times a day."

"Why?"

"Because it's that good and there's so much more than your dick that I love."

"That's the difference, Lance;" Scott smiled, "two dudes in love making love are doing it for way more than just to get off. Let's take it to every variation, gay, lesbian and straight; two people in love making love are showing how much they appreciate and enjoy every moment they're together. It's physical and emotion sharing. Our first times Monday, I was scared, at least as much as you were, but everything we did was so good that all my fears completely dissipated. Even when we're taking our time, examining every bit of each other, we're sharing bodies, hearts and minds. Earlier, when I led you off the beach so we could be alone, I wasn't thinking about me, it was to remind you that I love you. I loved that you were so upset about those kids at the hospital. My sexy lover boy has a huge, caring heart in his chest, and he deserved everything I enthusiastically gave him."

Nodding, Lance warmly smiled, "It's never been about what I could get from you, it's always been about what I could give you."

"Every couple feels and thinks the same," Scott reminded. "It was proven fact in a tent on an alternate Ewa Beach. Don't worry about noticing dicks, SLB. I notice 'em too, but here I am, alone with you, not searching for Kaleo or anyone else's dick. Here's another random thought for you to consider; what could you get from anyone else's dick that you couldn't get from mine?"

Rapidly blinking, Lance muttered, "Nothing. It would be an act, with far less real emotion, nothing like when we're making love. I can't imagine any of 'em replacing you."

"Precisely," Scott smiled. "I don't want anyone else touching my dick. All those great guys and awesome kids, that we spent a good part of the day with, would have to work really hard to come close to what you mean to me. It would take years for anyone else to accomplish what you did in only three days."

Lance giggled, "Do you really notice dicks too?"

"Course I do," Scott chuckled.

"Got a favorite?"

"Other than yours?"

"Yeah."

"It depends on my momentary qualifications," Scott chuckled.

"Such as?"

"Who I would consider a real possibility, like musicians who could become a close enough friend to even think of it, puts Prez, Mike and Troy at the top of the list."

Lance scowled and wondered, "Why only them and not Keith, Derrick or Reyes?"

Bouncing his eyebrows, Scott grinned, "Prez, Mike and Troy are guitar players that have cut dicks, just like my chosen mate."

Mooing through his giggles, Lance warned, "That's gonna cost you."

Scott laughed, "I'll pay your price, SLB."

Silently, Lance ordered Alden to transport them to their dorm room. Glancing around and realizing where they were, and then noticing Lance's wicked leer, Scott cracked up. Stepping back and reaching for the drawstring on Scott's boardies, Lance grinned, "So, what was the deal with the younger guys?"

Shrugging and resting his hands on Lance's shoulders, Scott giggled, "I'm really not sure. My dick changed when I hit puberty, but during New York winters, my foreskin would crimp up, just like those kids' units."

"Really? I've never seen you like that."

Nodding, Scott kicked his boardies aside, and smiled, "It was below freezing out. After a fifteen minute walk to or home from school, my dick was turtled up. To prove that we're all the same, I'll guess that you looked a lot like Jonah when you were about nine or ten. True?"

Moving closer for a kiss, and pushing Scott's boxer-briefs down, Lance then smiled, "I guess it is; the length seemed about right, but he's uncut."

"There was a kid on the beach that looked very much like I did, once upon a time. Can you guess which kid?"

Scowling thoughtfully, Lance started taking Scott's polo shirt off. When it was off, Lance tossed it aside and shrugged, "I can't really imagine what you looked like at ten or younger." He then scanned his partner from head to toe, giggling, "I sure love what I see now."

Grinning, Scott planted a tender kiss, and then stepped back to give Lance a fuller view, reminding, "Lose the wide shoulders, and pubes, and picture me almost a foot shorter, boy sized and not man sized. Redistribute everything you see."

Humming for a few moments, Lance then muttered, "Either John or maybe Gage."

"Gage," Scott grinned. "Did you notice the three Hundser brothers?" When Lance nodded, Scott said, "They're obviously brothers, and what's hangin' between their legs shows all three stages clearly, from pre-pubescent to pubescent to teenaged young man. In two years or so, John will have hair down there, and his boy-sized wiener will be gone, replaced with something more like what Drew has. And Drew will be where Keith is. Keith will be shaving weekly, if not more, and prob'ly have chest hair too, like his dad. Give Jonah another two or three years, and he'll be a low hanger, like you, SLB."

Lance smiled, "Were you really that attracted to me during our first shower?"

Nodding, Scott chuckled, "There's a wide assortment of thirteen-year-old guys on these bases. Some are still hairless and look more like boys than teenagers. You've got the wide shoulders, trim waist, long legs, with a fair amount of hair below the knees, of a teenager. I love everything about you, and was well on my way before Friday's shower, Lance. If you weren't already well into puberty, I'd have had lots of other worries during Monday's early morning hours. How the hell could I have admitted that I was falling for a guy that was still an undeveloped boy? I would've never gotten any sleep. Instead, my pal had all the signs that he was well into puberty. I could love you, and I could tell you how I was feeling. Our first times together were awesome, and somehow it keeps getting better."

Lance giggled, "I wanna see your dick turtled. Can you imagine being very cold?"

"Not here," Scott laughed. "In the ROH, it's always warm."

"Alden?" Lance giggled.

Before Scott could utter a word of warning, he was free-falling. Lance was still in front of him, now also naked and free-falling. Off to their sides was the Statue Of Liberty and the skyline of New York City. "Happy now?" Scott cackled, "We're both gonna be turtled up."

Lance grumbled, "He is so gonna get it!"

Into both sub-vocals, Alden giggled, "Fair is fair; Scott's gotta see you turtled too, Lance. You'll start warming each other up as soon as you get back home."

Way up above the clouds, where both free falling boys could not see, was a passing Vol'Kier. He, however, could see them, quite clearly. For a brief moment he worried about this odd and inexplicable sight, but at a quick message from Alden (via Draco and then Reliquary), this particular Earth-Guardian decided that all humans were grade A nuts and kept flying.

* * * * *

Ewa Beach, Pacific Rim Division School

Wednesday, November 10, 2004, 1:02PM HTZ

Signaling the start of that afternoon's music appreciation class, Derrick glanced around the full room. Younger and smaller kids were close to the front of the room. As he looked back, taller and larger kids intermingled, and everyone had comfortable chairs behind long tabletops that were equipped with power outlets for the laptop PCs. In the back of the room were several of the security gorillas, other Core Rimmer security boys, and a few guests, including KC, Jerry and Joey.

Derrick clearly told the kids, "Yesterday, we quickly covered about three hundred years of classical music history. Before we move forward and into the twentieth century, let's do a quick review. Can anyone tell me what the name was of the earliest form of classical music?"

Kids began chattering. All five of the teachers heard the correct answer being softly and uncertainly muttered. To give the kids a hint, Keith sat at an electric keyboard, set it as an organ, and began playing 'Toccata and Fugue In D Minor'. It jarred some memories and kids began calling out, "Bach - Baroque."

"Excellent," Derrick smiled, and quickly asked, "When did baroque music start and end?"

Knowing his brother was in the room as a guest speaker, Jonah giggled, "A couple o' years before Reyes was born." Ryan, KC, Joey and most of the class roared laughing.

"That's one dunk in the North Atlantic," Reyes sniggered. Moos erupted around the room.

Gage chuckled, "Sixteen hundred through seventeen-fifty."

Derrick smiled, "There you have four answers for the quiz at the end of the week. Baroque was the earliest form of classical music. Bach is one of the most popular Baroque composers. Baroque music started in sixteen hundred and ended in seventeen fifty."

Leaning against the upright piano, Prez reminded, "Remember to transfer your notes into the Genius application. Genius is your electronic flashcard program; it'll present you with the question and answer to help you study. You can study alone or with your friends."

Watching kids taking notes and waiting until everyone looked up, Keith said, "There are two other big composers from the Baroque period that are extra credit questions on the quiz. Remember how we work our quizzes; there will be twenty primary questions and twenty extra credit questions. All the questions are worth four points, so you can get an A plus just by exceeding a score of one hundred. Does anyone recall those two composers?"

Around the room, some kids softly rambled names. None of the five instructors heard the correct names. Mike went to the chalkboard to give them hints. As he wrote, he said, "The first composer wrote the Four Seasons, and the second wrote Messiah, which many of us know as a song heard mostly around Christmas time."

John Huth loudly called, "Handel did Messiah."

"Good job!" Mike cheered, and wrote the name on the board, chuckling, "It's spelled, H-A-N-D-E-L. George does not have a handle, so let's let the old dude lie in peace."

Glancing around the room, Troy grinned, "The composer of Four Seasons has a difficult name to remember." He went to the board and wrote a large letter V before Four Seasons. He turned around and waited for more chatter to dwindle. He reminded, "The composer's name was Antonio Vivaldi," and wrote out the name on the board.

While kids took notes, Derrick's seven-year-old brother, Chad Bunting wondered, "How're we supposed to remember that?"

Derrick answered, "Yeah, it's a rough one, bro. Instead of just memorizing, how about if you think of it as the way you form your mouth to make an F sound, like the title is Four Seasons, and you make the same mouth form for a V sound. Now you've got the first letter, and can eliminate all the other possible answers that don't start with V." Around the room, many of the youngest kids were making the F and V sounds.

Strolling around the classroom, Prez offered, "Remember, this class is music appreciation. All we're trying to teach you is that music was made many thousands of years before anyone could write it down, and when making instruments was a craft that couldn't be easily reproduced. In other words, a guy in China made something that looked like a horn, and so did another guy in Germany, and so did another guy in Egypt. None of the three could easily make duplicates of their horns, and none of them sounded anything alike. Since you come to our rehearsals, it's obvious that all of you guys like music. All of you have your favorite styles of music. But maybe some of you never heard of Bach before yesterday. Some of you liked it and some didn't, but now you've heard 'Toccata and Fugue In D Minor' and 'Air On A G String'. All that really matters in music appreciation is hearing something new and deciding for yourself if you like it or not."

Sitting down at a rack of electronic keyboards, Troy added, "Those of you who want to learn an instrument will only go as far as you really want. Maybe playing sing-a-long songs for your friends is all you'd like to do. Not every musician wants to stand on a stage before hundreds or thousands of people. This class is only opening your mind and ears to stuff you might not have heard before. With what we've already discussed and played, you can choose your favorites." Troy began playing the introduction to Beethoven's Fifth Symphony. A lot of kids began shouting the composer's name and some even recalled the title. Pausing, Troy smiled, "That's probably the most identifiable piece of popular music and it's two hundred years old. Let's see a show of hands for those who heard it before yesterday."

Only about twenty hands raised, and most were teenagers. Keith nodded and asked, "Everyone who knew before yesterday that it was Beethoven and which symphony it was, put your hands down." Only one hand lowered; thirteen-year-old Gerry Mayers' hand. Keith chuckled, "Okay, lower your hands. That's all this class is about, and you've all learned a little something in a day. For the quiz, Beethoven wrote his symphony number five in 1804, two hundred years ago."

"Those are the only questions you'll see on the quiz about classical music," Mike told the class. Picking up an acoustic guitar, he continued, "We covered way more than that yesterday, only to familiarize you with Chopin, Brahms, Mozart and other famous composers. Now we can get into how we went from classical music to popular music. Basically, there were songs that we now consider folk classics."

Mike began strumming and singing, "She'll be coming around the mountain when she comes. (Choo choo!) She'll be coming around the mountain when she comes. (Choo choo!) She'll be coming around the mountain. She'll be coming around the mountain. She'll be coming around the mountain when she comes. (Choo choo!)"

Over the giggling kids, Troy loudly chuckled, "That's a song about some new fangled invention called trains. There are six verses that repeat the same melody over and over." He quickly sang, "She'll be riding six white horses when she comes. (Whoa back!) We'll all go out to meet her when she comes. (Hi babe!) She'll be wearing red pajamas when she comes. (scratch, scratch!) She'll have to sleep with Grandma when she comes. (snore) We'll all have chicken and dumplings when she comes. (Yum yum!) We'll all play hide and seek when she comes. (Home free!)"

"There were literally hundreds of similar songs that were popular in the late eighteen hundreds like that," Prez told the class. "Folk music tells stories everyone can relate to; the story might be about a person, or a new invention, or about some fabled event."

"There was a really big problem," Keith seriously shared. "It's really hard to go from place to place with your piano in your pocket." The kids cracked up. Keith grinned, "Suddenly, during the mid to late eighteen hundreds, people wanted some instrument that was easy to play, and above all, it had to be portable. Guitars had been around in the classical world for a while, but they were generally frowned upon, and they weren't loud enough for groups around the living room fireplace."

To demonstrate, Troy picked up a gut string classical guitar and strummed the chords to 'Coming Around The Mountain'. After only a few seconds, Mike strummed his steel string acoustic guitar. Mike's guitar almost completely drowned out Troy's guitar. Acting extremely irritated, Troy stopped strumming and squinted at Mike, causing another eruption of giggles and laughter. Reaching into his pocket, Troy pulled out a harmonica and played along with Mike. Soon, they were speeding up the tempo and began improvising, trying to out-play each other. It was all an act, but one that the kids loved and laughed at. Mike and Troy finished their little folk performance and the kids applauded.

Now wearing an acoustic guitar, Prez softly finger picked, roamed around the room and took on a mysterious tone, telling the class, "So here we are, in the eighteen hundreds. Electric light was rare. Most folks still used candles and fireplaces to light their homes at night. Only the rich could afford electric lights, or a piano. Only the extremely wealthy could afford the first radios, and they primarily played classical music, news and talk shows. But there are all these catchy little tunes that people liked to sing. The first two very popular and portable instruments were the acoustic steel string guitar and the harmonica. American cowboys driving their herds of cattle now had ways to entertain themselves."

Adding a mandolin part in harmony to Prez's finger picking, Mike half-sang, "After the American Civil War, freed slaves began getting guitars and harmonicas. They weren't singing the popular folk songs though; they were making up their own music, that told of their lives as slaves. People that had the hardest lives sang with emotion about things that were important to them, on the farms, on the plantations, in the factories and in the mines."

Shaking a tambourine in time, Derrick reminded, "The people of America were making this very free and natural music called 'the blues'. Now let's add in some French Creole beliefs in the Mississippi River city of New Orleans." Using a syncopated rhythm to his melody, Troy began blowing into his saxophone. Derrick explained, "The sound traveled up and down the river with the merchant ships and the river boats. It flowed into the Southern Baptist churches and into the countrysides. The blues became spiritual praise music, and it became country music. In the last ten years of the nineteenth century, the radios once only owned by the wealthy were now in the hands of the middle class common people. By the dawn of the twentieth century, we still had radio stations playing classical music, but we also had country music stations, and we had blues stations, and spiritual praise music, and this new bouncy kind of music called jazz."

Adding a keyboard part to the guitar, mandolin, saxophone and Derrick's tambourine, Keith gently sped up the tempo, telling the class, "Jazz led to ragtime. Jazz made kids want to dance."

By this time, Keith was stationary at one side of the room. Derrick was over on another side, and Prez, Troy and Mike had each paused at different sides of the room. Keith grimaced and loudly explained, "The problem we have is how well we can hear and what we can hear. Five of us are as spread out as we can be in a class of about a hundred and eighty. So what happens when we want to play for three hundred, five hundred, or a thousand dancing kids? We're simply not loud enough."

Slipping behind the full drum kit, Reyes began softly playing and had to shout to tell the kids, "Enter the big bands, with their huge horn sections. Usually, those bands had about six trombone players, about six or more trumpet players, a sax section of at least eight and up to twelve players, consisting of alto, tenor and baritone saxophonists, and another eight or ten clarinet players. Right now, we still have a very big problem. How many of you can hear me over the six piece band now playing?" Only about thirty kids closest to Reyes raised their hands.

Derrick, Mike, Prez and Troy walked toward the front of the room, where Keith and Reyes were. With a silent instruction to Alden, Reyes voice traveled from his subvocal and through the room's PA system. "Enter technology," Reyes explained. "The first radios used only a watt or two to amplify sounds. By the nineteen twenties, ten watt radios were common, not just for the wealthy anymore. So let's get a group of three, four or five vocalists to sing into a microphone and through a PA system of about forty or fifty watts, to keep up with the blaring big band. For comparison's sake, the PA system in the auditorium our band uses has twenty stereo amps that drive one thousand-five hundred watts each." The kids gasped. Reyes further explained, "On the left side of the auditorium are twenty full-range speaker cabinets and each of them is capable of handling seven hundred and fifty watts each. The same situation is on the right side."

Standing up, Drew told the class, "Each amp has a left side knob and a right side knob. Each goes up to twenty. For the wedding concert last week, for an audience of about four thousand, each knob on all those amps was turned up to six; that's less than a third of their maximum. Those are the full-range speakers; there are also subwoofer cabinets, that only reproduce the lowest bass tones. Those amps are larger, two thousand five hundred watts each. Less than a hundred years ago, a fifty watt PA system was a big deal." Drew sat back down again.

Not moving from where he was standing and playing guitar, Mike asked, "Hey, why should we pay forty or fifty guys in a big band if we can amplify it? Can't we reduce the size from fifty down to ten?"

"Sure we can," Reyes answered. "By the nineteen fifties, that's exactly what happened, with the introduction of the Bossa Nova latin beats. We'll keep the piano player, and the drummer, guitarist and bassist, and cut our horn section down to four or five guys, playing trombone, trumpet, tenor and baritone saxes, and maybe clarinet too. Most famous and popular for this type of smaller band was Ray Charles. For your quiz, remember Ray Charles. Now we can split five hundred bucks a night eight ways instead of fifty ways. Now, instead of making ten dollars a night, the band members are making sixty-two fifty a night. Everyone chips in two dollars and fifty cents a night to keep the PA system maintained and functioning, so we can play the next weekend, and we're still making six times as much as we did before."

The four musicians suddenly stopped playing and the lights dramatically dimmed. Over the PA system, Mrs. Diaz played a recording of Glen Miller's 'A String Of Pearls'. Half the kids jumped in their seats, and the remainder giggled at the shock. Reyes moved over to a set of congas. Derrick sat behind the drums. Pulling over an upright bass, Prez began playing along with the walking bass line. Keith added the piano part. The drum part came in from Derrick. Simultaneously, Mike strummed the jazz chords and Troy played along with the recorded baritone saxophone part.

Since none of the boys had sheet music before them, Mrs. Diaz assumed that either they had memorized the tune or perhaps their ears were that good. At the end of the recording and the performance, Mrs.

Diaz asked, "Did you boys memorize that tune?"

Almost at once, Troy and Prez admitted that they had memorized their parts. Derrick, Mike and Keith were playing by ear and improvising.

Handing a remote control to Reyes, Mrs. Diaz shared with the class, "I've been playing piano for twenty-three years and flute for twenty years, but I could not have done what your five teachers just did." She prompted, "Go ahead, Reyes."

After thanking Mrs. Diaz, Reyes activated the slide show and began his review with an old, nineteenth century photo of African-American cotton plantation workers. "The Blues started here, with ex-slaves singing in fields." Switching the photo to another picture of an extended family sitting on the porch of an old shack, Reyes said, "At the end of the day, they sang of their lives; their woes, and their joys. Notice the wash basin, the wash board and the wooden barrel that are being used as percussion. Take a good look at the old acoustic guitar. Compare it to the one my pop is holding."

"It's way smaller in the photo," Jonah quickly said.

"Exactly right, bro," Reyes grinned. "The body of the guitar works as a resonance chamber. Sound from the strings bounces into the body and back out again. During the big band days, the guitar was a part of the rhythm section. It was way in the background and could barely be heard."

The slide advanced to a young African-American man playing another guitar. Mike picked up the story, saying, "Check out this guitar. The body is much larger. The big sound hole is gone, replaced with two F shaped holes, and it has one of the first developed pickups. The man's name is Charlie Christian. He's the first guy to play what would become the electric guitar, so take note of his name. With an electronic pickup and a wire into a small amplifier, the guitar could be heard as a primary instrument in the band."

Reyes continued, "Charlie played with the Benny Goodman band. What was usually happening was, the big band would play for kids to dance to until midnight. When that show was over, some of the band members would go out to jazz clubs. In the Benny Goodman Sextet, the six man group that played until the wee hours of the morning, Charlie was a soloist, along with Benny on clarinet, Gene Krupa on drums, and the trumpet, trombone, and saxophones. Jazz is all about improvisation, so all six members of the band got to shine before the audience. Today, Charlie Christian is considered the father of the Bebop style of jazz. Charlie was born in 1916 and sadly, he died in 1942 from tuberculosis. He was only twenty-five. In the three short years that Charlie played with Benny Goodman, he left a huge mark on music. Six years later, when I was first activated in 1948, Bebop was the popular style of jazz. So, it can be said Charlie started something that he never saw become the preferred style."

All the while Reyes was speaking, Mike was setting up another demonstration. Mike explained, "Charlie played a Gibson ES-150 model guitar. That model isn't manufactured anymore, but this is a Gibson ES-175 and very much the same sort of hollow-body jazz guitar. It has two modern pickups compared to the one on Charlie's axe." He prompted, "Keith, play the basic version of Stella By Starlight, bro." After about three minutes, Keith's piano version completed and the kids applauded. Mike grinned, "Now, here's how Charlie might've played Stella By Starlight." Mike played the same song in a solo Bebop style; Mike's version lasted about as long, and all of that was improvisation on the harmony and melody. Again, the kids applauded.

When the applause diminished, Mike put the guitar on a stand, off to the side of the amplifier and said, "Here's another problem that we'll talk more about tomorrow. This little Fender Mustang amp is fifteen watts, which is much smaller than the hundred watt Marshall amp I play on stage with Platinum Habits. The amp was turned up to about three while I was playing for this class. Listen to what happens when I turn the amp up louder." Leaning over, Mike began turning up the amp's volume. In no time, the guitar began feeding back. Over the sound, Mike shouted, "That's between five and six, only a little more than half way." He turned down the volume all the way, explaining, "Acoustic and hollow body jazz guitars get that noise all the time. It's called feedback; the sound of a string vibrating bounces around inside the guitar body, and the sound from the amp vibrates the body even more, so the tone that started the process keeps ringing. Back in the days of jazz, it wasn't easy to play for a club audience of two- or three-hundred and be heard without getting that sound. Playing for an audience of a thousand dancing kids was almost impossible. We'll talk more about feedback tomorrow and Friday."

Troy took over, saying, "Another topic we'd like to discuss is popular music, or pop. We think that pop shouldn't be considered a valid genre. For three hundred years, classical music was popular, and for some people, that still is what they prefer to listen to. Then folk music was popular; then it was country, and then the blues, and then jazz, and then the big bands. As we move along in this class, you'll learn that each of those genres became popular again when rock and roll was considered pop, and when disco music was pop, and punk was pop. Today, you can turn on a radio and hear any of those genres, plus more newer styles, and all the international and interplanetary musics from Andorians, Klingons and Tesnians, to name a few. For now, just remember that historically, classical music was followed by folk, country, the blues, and jazz."

Roy asked, "Is it safe to assume all you guys prefer rock over the other styles, since that's what your band plays?"

"I wouldn't say it's a preference," Prez offered. "In my own case, I like rock and jazz, but all the styles that grew out of the blues are favorites. I also like listening to Keith playing classical piano pieces."

Derrick smiled, "As a band, we've each added our favorites to our repertoire, but at the same time, half of what we're thinking of is what the audience might like to hear. Some music we like is technically intricate, polyrhythmic and challenges us as musicians, but it couldn't be considered popular in any genre. An example might be a tune by Mahavishnu Orchestra. During last week's wedding concert and again last night, we played primarily ballads. Normally, we would play more upbeat songs and toss in ballads to break it up."

Mike said, "I'd love to play classical pieces and solo jazz guitar a lot more than we do, but in a band, I'm part of a team. I could play classical guitar for an hour, but how many of you might still be awake afterward? As much as I love the sound of a classical guitar, I also love playing solo jazz guitar, and I like to crank it up to play rock too."

"Another thing, for those of you who would like to learn an instrument, is what style you might prefer to play," Keith prompted. "There will be group lessons for all the piano players, to begin the learning process, and then there will be specialized classes to learn songs and styles. Swap piano players out for bassists, drummers, guitarists and horn players, each going through the same process I outlined for piano. That's why we're starting with music appreciation, so you have a foundation to say, I like that style."

Kaleo wondered, "Why don't you guys include occasional solo stuff in your shows?" Each of the six band members shrugged, causing most of the class to break into giggles. Kaleo sniggered, "In this class, in only two days, we've seen each of you do things we haven't seen you ever do before. Until yesterday, we had no idea that Prez could play piano. The way Troy played 'Bridge Over Troubled Water' yesterday wasn't the same as the way it was played last week."

"He plays it solo for me," Sean softly giggled.

Smirking at Sean, Kaleo and Tory chorused, "Lucky you!" and the whole class began laughing again.

Blushing and sadly shaking his head, Troy sniggered, "Why do I get the impression none of you are thinking of the song?" Everyone cracked up.

Reyes asked, "Since we have almost half the division here, plus personal security and friends, would you like to hear more solo performances by the band members?" It seemed that everyone in the room vocally agreed. Nodding and walking to the front of the classroom, Reyes asked, "Would you like to hear more than rock or rhythm and blues; maybe some jazz or classical standards?"

Cassie Cornwell reminded, "For every one song that any of us know, you dudes probably know dozens," and then quickly added, "I say, yes." Almost everyone in the class agreed, especially loud were the sons of the band members, the personal security, Joey, KC and Ryan.

Tapping his comm-badge, Reyes called, "Alden, get me a vibraphone, for here and another for the auditorium. I'll need four mallets for each location too, please." He then told the class, "Back in the jazz days, vibes were used a lot in jazz. It's really the only percussion instrument I can play that allows me to play a melody and a little harmony. I'm no Lionel Hampton, but I can manage."

Sadly shaking his head, Derrick chuckled, "Reyes, when did you learn vibes, and why didn't you say anything before?" More giggling erupted in the room.

"I started in 1952," Reyes giggled. "I didn't say anything before because Keith and Troy can get the same tones from their keyboards, and it's not really necessary in the songs Platinum Habits plays. In this class, our kids want to hear a jazz combo. If they like what they hear, we've just added several dozen standards to our repertoire."

Joey raised his hand. "Bud Weyes, even dhough keyboawds can do id, dhe weaw insdwumend sounds beddew, 'cause of hawmoninics. Dhat's what Bonzo dowd me!"

"For those who don't know, Joey's mentioned John Bonham, the drummer for Led Zeppelin," Derrick shared with the class, and then wondered, "What year did you meet Bonzo?"

"Ninedeen-sevendy," Joey answered.

"In the seventies and even part of the eighties, that was probably correct," Keith said. "However, today's synthesizers and electronic keyboards use ninety-six kilobit per second sample rates and twenty-four bit depth. It's digital instead of analog. For reference, the CDs we listen to every day are forty-four-point-one kilobits per second and sixteen bit depth. Platinum Habits also has hybrid analog-digital synthesizers on stage. There are some things that we can't easily reproduce, like certain techniques that strings and wind instruments easily do, but thanks to electronic effects, volume pedals and wah pedals, we usually manage pretty well."

Several students had curious glares and more were blinking uncertainly, but the original eighty-seven that knew of Mikyvis were widely grinning and giggling. Moving over to the upright bass, Prez decided to return to the subject, chortling, "What are we playing, Reyes?"

Humming thoughtfully while moving to stand behind the vibraphone, Reyes then suggested, "How about a medley? There's only about twenty minutes left to the school day, so let's fill the time with real jazz improvisation. We'll play 'Night And Day', 'I've Got You Under My Skin' and 'You Make Me Feel So Young'."

Playing vibes, Reyes led the band into and through each song, changing the tempo as necessary with walking bass lines. From the left side, Reyes stood at the vibraphone; then Keith sat at the upright piano, then Derrick sat at a drum kit, then Prez stood playing the upright bass, then Mike stood playing the ES-175, and lastly was Troy, alternating between saxophones and the clarinet.

In the back of the room, Mr. Stevenson, Miss Perez and Mr. and Mrs. Taylor joined Mrs. Diaz. Once again, Jason and Trinity Taylor started dancing. This time they danced the Lindy Hop. Mrs. Diaz called for the parents of the band members to join her at the school. In pairs, Jim and Jen Hundser, Laura and Rob Gibbons, Anna and Carl Seibert, and Bill and Lanna Seaver transported into the room. Lastly, Judy Faris transported in. Troy switched from clarinet to tenor sax and to baritone sax with ease; sometimes following the melody and other times adding accents with Keith's piano chord stabs. Mike often played jazz chords, but occasionally switched to improvising the melody. For the first time in their lives, the kids in the classroom were hearing a jazz sextet playing without any sort of sound system, as if the room were an intimate night club in the 1920s.

Horacio leaned over to ask Sean, "Have you ever heard them play these songs before?"

Shaking his head, Sean replied, "Not once. The rehearsals at Archnania were a lot like this. One of them would start playing or singing some song, and then the others join in. If they decide to keep it in the band's set list, they'll iron out the rough spots."

Sonia incredulously giggled, "What rough spots?"

Sean shrugged and grinned, "You can tell, they're just having fun."

In another couple of minutes, just slightly after three in the afternoon, the band created an ending to their jam. All the adults at the rear of the room loudly applauded and so did the class of kids. Standing at the piano, Keith asked, "Would you like to hear that sort of music occasionally?" The resounding response was affirmative.

Troy chuckled, "Okay. I guess the next question would be, how often?"

A bit of chatter erupted. Before it dwindled, Sean stood. He locked eyes with Troy, suggesting, "Why not whenever you guys want? The truth is that most of your 'so-called' rehearsals are filled with songs you've already practiced, to some extent or another, anyway. You guys enjoying yourself matters to us, so mix in those kinds of tunes."

"And some of the solo stuff you did in class too," Kaleo quickly offered.

Tory nodded, "Yeah, definitely mix in solos too. I was near Lance and Scott yesterday afternoon when they asked Mike to wail. If Mike had played just one solo guitar song, they'd have been plenty happy. That little medley was as awesome as any performance in the auditorium." A lot of positive chatter erupted from the kids, parents and teachers.

"That's the way it'll be," Prez announced. "And we're past three o'clock. School's out!" With that, everyone packed their laptops, got up and started out of the room. Troy and Mike began packing their instruments. Derrick chatted with Reyes about his vibraphone experience. Prez and Keith talked with Mike and Troy about expanding their repertoire to include a little jazz and classical music.

Skylar popped into the classroom, before Mike, holding a battered old guitar case. He giggled, "This is for you, bro," and put the case down.

Mike blinked and smiled, "I can't imagine what this is." He squatted down to open the case and the rest of the band members gathered around. All six of them gasped when the case was opened. Mike looked to Skylar for explanation.

Skylar giggled, "I heard what you said earlier about Charlie's old guitar. I checked the history and learned the family gave it away, and it would've been broke beyond repair within ten years of Charlie's death."

"This guitar has been lost for over sixty years!" Mike excitedly wailed.

"Well, yeah, but it wasn't lost," Skylar giggled. "I saw Charlie on his death bed in Staten Island. When he learned it would be given away and busted, he about had a coughing hissy fit. I told him that I knew someone who would take real good care of it, so it's yours. It wasn't lost, it just took a sixty-two year leap into the future."

Derrick playfully warned, "Your afternoon is booked, Sky. I want to check out Carl Palmer's drum kit so I can reproduce it."

"I want a sixties vintage Hofner bass," Prez chuckled.

Keith grinned, "I want a seventies analog Moog synthesizer. We'll get two, so Troy has one too."

Giggling his butt off, Skylar turned to Troy. "I really don't know," Troy grinned. "I mean, we can go back and get whatever we want, so what do I get? In the last week since joining this band, I've got more access to gear than ever before. I've gone from the beat old acoustic guitar I came here with, to an awesome 12-string acoustic, and a 50th Anniversary Stratocaster, and a Les Paul Standard, and a sweet Jackson with a Floyd Rose tremolo, not to mention the harmonicas, saxes and keys. I can't even think of anything I might want that I don't already have."

"Let me know when you decide," Skylar giggled. He then took Derrick's hand and they popped out of the room. Barely two-seconds later, they returned.

Derrick roared, "Holy shit! Nobody's even moved and we were gone for an entire afternoon!"

Skylar took Keith's hand and they disappeared. Skylar returned alone. Prez asked, "Where's Keith?"

"At the auditorium, getting the Moog's set up," Skylar smiled. Focusing on Troy, he giggled, "He got two Moog Modular 55's."

Excited to see what Keith had brought back, Troy prompted Sean, "Let's go help, Tiger."

Sean took Troy's hand and had Alden transport them to the auditorium. Derrick, Mike, Corey, Drew, Reyes and Ryan also went to the auditorium, with Charlie Christian's ES-150, intending to set up the drum kit and percussion. That's all Joey and KC needed to hear. KC went to get Fred and then the four of them would go to the auditorium.

Skylar looked up, asking, "Ready, Head Rimmer?"

Prez nodded, "You're helping us so much on your first day. Make sure you take time off, Sky."

"I already did," Skylar giggled. "Daddy said, if I wanna learn to play guitar, that's kewl, but I really should do it like you guys did, over time." He took Prez's hand and popped out of the school. They returned to the auditorium with two Hofner bass guitars; one right handed model and the other was one of Paul McCartney's left handed Hofner basses.

The left handed model had been severely damaged during the 1965 world tour, Prez told his friends. It was beyond repair, but during the moments that Prez was sharing his visit with a living legend who didn't have a clue what he would become, Skylar had already time-regressed the splintered instrument to like new condition. Prez had Alden transport the repaired vintage bass to his townhome's master bedroom.

* * * * *

Oneula Beach

Wednesday, November 10, 2004 3:02PM HTZ

Meanwhile, lounging out by the Oneula Beach pool and diving well, with Erik, Travis, Chris, Jay, Lance and Scott, Reggie and Angelo could barely believe what they were told of their new Core Rimmer jobs. Since lunch time, Angelo and Reggie learned all the basics, and what had been done at Charleston AI Hospital that day. Most amazing to the two new lovers was that their relationship was considered to be equal with all the other Core Rimmer couples.

Reggie softly wondered, "How can that be?"

Chris grinned, "You talked to each other and told the truth. Although Jay and I have been a couple about a year longer than Prez and Keith, they're the same as us. Given their history with Derrick and Mike, there's no way I could say anything degrading about any of 'em. The same goes for Drew and Corey, and John and Stephen. Every couple is the same in their hearts. Prez, Keith, Derrick and Mike have managed what very few ever try. Becoming friends and lovers at such an early age made what they have possible."

Sadly shaking his head, Jay smirked, "John's telepathically confirmed what Erik and Trav told us at dinner last night; it took you days to follow your hearts, and once you did, you tried to share lifetimes with each other in a single day."

Scott shared with Angelo and Reggie; "Lance and I are sort o' like you guys; we knew each other for three days before acting on it. We committed in one day, so did Troy and Sean, and so did Trav and Erik, and so have you two. Last night after dinner, the six of us talked about getting married. We already know Troy and Sean are ready to marry, and so are AJ and Jerry. All you two have to do is say yes, choose a date, and you'll be married too."

"All this seems like an awful lot at first, but the idea grows and feels very right," Lance smiled.

"The simple fact is, you spent the day building on an attraction you only hoped could be," Chris explained. "You did exactly what we tried to explain to six younger boys on Monday night. Now a solid foundation is set for you to build on. All that's left is spending time together."

"We're the same as you dudes," Erik chuckled.

Angelo grinned, "Probably not exactly the same."

Lance giggled, "If you're referring to sex, I'll say that making love only intensified what I already felt for Scott. Each and every step took us from best friends, to boyfriends, to committed partners, and lastly to soul mates. I never dreamed what was already awesome could get better, but it does. We didn't learn from John exactly what you did together or when, but we did get the complete explanation of what each of you felt during all of it. That feeling is something that each and every couple experiences. Tell me if any of this sounds familiar; he knows me and loves me even more; I cried in his arms and he didn't mock me, or say a word about the tears." Angelo and Reggie smiled at one another and then nodded at Lance. Shrugging, Lance offered, "John and Stephen may be younger, but they're just like us too. The fact is, I was the one that couldn't tell Scott what I was feeling."

"You showed it, SLB," Scott smiled. He then told Angelo and Reggie, "There I am going slow, so I wouldn't freak out Lance. Then he lays a whopper of a kiss on me that pushed me back, and he kept pushing me back until the rear of my legs were against the mattress of my bed!" Angelo, Reggie, Erik, Travis, Chris and Jay cracked up.

Lance giggled, "I wanted Scott naked first, but he won the match for my clothes. Now, it's not wrestling, it's helping each other undress. That's the most awesome thing in the world! I'm not talking about touching his dick, but his hands, or arms, and just about everything other than his dick. If you haven't tried it yet, just take each other's shirts off really slow, and concentrate more on the feel of his torso than the shirt. Now I know I can touch him and he loves it as much as I do."

Reggie blushed and sniggered, "Yeah, we did that too. I never thought I'd admit that to anyone besides Angelo. You dudes don't keep much very private, huh?"

Travis shrugged, "I'm sure we've all kept plenty private; specifically, what's been said. Let's face it, that's where two people really click. What we're talking about is nothing new, but alone with Erik, it seems like everything we talk about is brand new. Everything sexual is the same."

Jay shrugged, "We're brothers, and there's nothing surprising being said. Sometimes making love is fun, other times it's romantic and slow, and sometimes it's desperate. It's all intense and another way of sharing, just like all the talking that got you there in the first place. Not to mention, since last night's post-concert chat, we're beyond all that now, Reggie."

Since Lance and Scott didn't participate and were clearly confused, Chris carefully said, "Reggie is between Lance and Darren, seven plus inches hanging, and about eight erect."

Turning wide-eyed to Reggie and then to Angelo, Lance giggled, "I'm six inches long and grow to just a little over seven. Scott's got four thick inches that grows to seven thicker inches. I don't know whether to be impressed or jealous. Talk about excessive!" Blushing intensely, Angelo and Reggie giggled. Erik, Travis, Scott and Chris evilly snickered.

"That's not excessive," Jay grinned. "Now, if you want, I can easily exaggerate a few completely awesome..."

"NO, JAY!" Chris, Lance and Scott loudly laughed. Picturing another mob shower grind-fest with all four couples, Lance lost it and cracked up.

"I guess we could go find our Head Rimmer then," Jay sniggered.

Chris told Angelo, "Tap your new sub-vocal and ask Alden where we can find the rest of our team."

Always eavesdropping, Alden waited for Angelo's call, and then giggled across eight comm-badges, "Most of the team are in the Ewa Beach auditorium. Kaleo, Tory, John and Stephen are with the kids at the playgrounds, here and at Ewa Beach. AJ and Jerry are at the Rapid Response Base, getting their phaser training."

Scott scowled, "Prez and the rest of 'em are in the auditorium, but didn't announce a rehearsal?"

"I don't think they consider it a rehearsal," Alden seriously answered. "Each of the band members went with Skylar, back in time, to get instruments that they otherwise couldn't. They're just fooling around with their new stuff."

Jumping to their feet, Scott and Lance hollered, "Transport us there now!" They vanished.

Alden giggled, "Would the rest of you like to stand, or shall I just transport you into seats at the auditorium?"

Jay grinned, "First row seating, please, Alden." Erik, Travis, Chris, Jay, Reggie and Angelo disappeared from poolside chairs to the Ewa Beach auditorium.

Of course, other kids at the pools overheard some of what was said. Starting with the quadruple Rs and their boyfriends, kids got dressed and raced across the Oneula Beach base destined for the Ewa Beach auditorium. Stan, Kenny, Jason and JD raced to the playground to gather their brothers and the little kids to bring them to Ewa Beach.

Upon arrival, Lance and Scott stood before center stage. Angelo, Reggie, Erik, Travis, Chris and Jay materialized in seats, listening to Platinum Habits playing an impromptu jam of Pink Floyd's Us And Them, with Mike singing lead vocals. Unseen up in the PA booth, Drew and Corey precisely applied delay effects to Mike's vocals. Laser lights were bouncing off the spinning mirrored ball way above them, and another set shone out from the stage to the audience like a multicolored misty array. Derrick's drum set now included double bass drums, three Roto toms, two more mounted tom-toms and additional cymbals. Troy was playing tenor sax. The PA system was turned up as loud as it had been Sunday night.

Regardless of the Clan kids showing up, the band continued as they had planned. The growing audience applauded and cheered. Seeing lines of kids entering the auditorium, Kassidy and Matt followed them inside. The band pushed onward with Any Colour You Like, during which Troy switched to his Stratocaster. Playing his new Moog synthesizer, Keith was totally involved in what he was playing. During Brain Damage, Prez sang lead vocals, with Mike and Troy backing him up. Freaking the audience out, Keith, Derrick and Reyes sang the harmony vocals, and occasionally laughed and giggled, exactly like the recorded masterpiece. And lastly, Eclipse, completed the last four songs from 'Dark Side Of The Moon'.

During the synthesized heartbeat at the end, everyone noticed it was Derrick softly chortling, "There is no dark side of the moon, really. As a matter of fact, it's all dark."

During the applause and cheers, Keith chuckled, "We're just playing with our new toys, dudes."

"We don't care! Play more!" Chris and Jay hollered.

Scott yelled, "That was awesome!"

"It was as good as any live version I've ever heard," Lance laughed.

Troy smiled, "It's the first time Reyes and I sat in on those tunes."

Lance and Scott incredulously hollered, "You've gotta be kidding!"

Shaking his head, Troy giggled, "Old Habits messed around with it, and I've played with the CD, and of course Reyes is familiar with it, but we've never played it together before. It needs some work still, and a few female backup vocalists."

Seeing Lance and Scott slump, Jay tapped Angelo, softly sniggering, "Lance and Scott are going to set their guitars ablaze any minute now."

Nodding, Angelo chortled, "I can foresee two fewer Core Rimmers, because they'll be awake around the clock, practicing until they drop."

Troy walked toward the drum risers to gather with the rest of the band. Stepping away from the group, Mike approached the edge of the stage with his Alhambra classical guitar. Sitting cross-legged on the stage before Scott and Lance, Mike played Dee effortlessly, and then followed that up with Mood For A Day and Spanish Fly. Cassidy and Matt took seats in the first row. Although he had been playing for years with his dad and others, Matt was spellbound. When he was done, Mike smiled, "You can play those tunes too." He stood and walked back toward the drum risers, passing the classical guitar to Prez, who took Mike's place, cross-legged on the stage before the two heavy metal headbangers.

"There's an awesome guitarist named Rik Emmett that played for a band named Triumph, from Canada, in the seventies and eighties," Prez said. "He wrote this little diddy titled Petite Etude," and began playing the piece. When finished, Prez took a deep breath, and then explained, "Another awesome guitarist is Craig Chaquico. He made his name rocking out with Jefferson Starship. He wrote this piece titled Center Of Courage \(E-Lizabeth's Song\)." Prez then played them the song.

Having just heard Matt playing and singing, Kassidy thought his boyfriend was as good as the Platinum Habits guitarists. Kassidy asked, "What do you think, hunky bear?"

Matt smiled, "I've got a lot to learn." Noticing Kassidy curiously tilting his head, Matt explained, "I've been practicing the songs I played for you for a couple o' years. I couldn't have played what Mike or Prez did, not without spending a long time learning the tunes and then practicing."

After watching flying fingers on both of Prez's hands, Lance softly wondered, "Why do you play bass if you can play guitar like that?"

Prez chuckled, "Because our band needed a bass guitarist. Pull the bass out of any of your favorite songs and you've lost the most important part; that goes for almost all of the blues, jazz and rock music. If you think the bass is a lesser instrument, I'll have the band prove otherwise, kewl?"

Rapidly nodding, Lance and Scott chanted, "Kewl."

Madly chuckling, "Here we go," Prez stood, turned and called to the band, "Heart Of The Sunrise."

Staring down at the two newbie Core Rimmers, Keith laughed, "What did you dudes say?"

Pulling his lover close, Scott sniggered, "Lance wanted to know why Prez plays bass if he can play guitar so well." Almost all the members of the band moaned, except Mike.

Sadly shaking his head, Mike laughed, "I play bass! Where's the groove that sets the feel for the entire song? It's in the bassist and drummer working as one. Without that, most music becomes formless noise. Three major power trios are Cream, Rush and Triumph, and all three are bass, drums and guitar." After putting the classical guitar down, Prez slipped the Rickenbacker bass over his shoulder.

Nodding, Troy sniggered at Lance and Scott, "After this song, Reyes, Keith and I will step back to take a break." He looked over to his right and suggested, "YYZ is next."

Prez, Mike and Derrick evilly grinned, "Very kewl."

Glaring down at Lance and Scott, Keith laughed, "You couldn't wait for school to start next week?"

Shaking his head, Scott grinned, "Maybe we can absorb something we need right now."

Once all the band members were in place and ready, Derrick counted off, and the band played Heart Of The Sunrise. Derrick talked Reyes into remaining on stage to play the electronic drums along with his acoustic drums. At the edge of stage right, Troy played the Hammond organ. Keith was at his rack of keyboards on stage left, and eventually sang the lead vocals. Mike remained in the back, near the drum risers. Prez stayed at forward center stage, proving himself to Lance and Scott. Prez, Reyes and Derrick started off with blindingly fast cadence. For a few moments the entire band joined in, and then the song returned to drums and bass guitar. After a three-and-a-half minute amazing introduction, Keith sang and Mike played guitar. Soon, Prez came back in with more great bass guitar. For the entire eleven and a half minute song, Lance and Scott carefully watched everything Prez played.

Barely pausing for applause, Keith, Reyes and Troy walked off stage. Derrick counted off again to kick off YYZ. At the start of the song, Prez played bass with only his fretting hand, and used his right hand to play the keyboards at stage right. He then moved back to center stage and stood with Mike at his side. Unexpectedly, and only to prove the point, about two minutes into the song, Prez stopped playing, during one of Mike's wailing lead lines. Prez's intention was to let Lance hear what the song sounded like without the bass part. Derrick and Mike never flinched or paused. Four bars later, and smirking at Lance and Scott, Prez picked up precisely where he needed to be, playing without any issue at all.

Near the end of the song, Prez played bass and keys simultaneously once again. When he stepped back from the keyboard rack, Keith, Reyes and Troy returned to the stage. Keith went to his stage left keyboard rack and fiddled with the Moog. Reyes went to the electronic drum kit, and Troy picked up his Stratocaster. With the final notes of YYY, the audience erupted. While they were still clapping and cheering, Keith began playing the spacey introduction to Steve Miller's Book Of Dreams, Threshold. Up in the PA booth, Drew made the synthesized sounds travel around the auditorium. Corey darkened the stage, except for the strobe light on Keith. Timed perfectly, Derrick and Reyes came in with the opening three bass drum hits of Jet Airliner. During the introduction, Prez showed off to Lance and Scott. Mike sang lead vocals, with Troy and Derrick backing him up. Spontaneously, dozens of kids rushed the stage, including Kassidy and Matt.

Making use of the new Moogs, the band then played Jungle Love, with Mike again covering the lead vocals. Lined up playing their guitars across center stage were Prez, Troy and Mike. Electro Lux Imbrolio was the next tune Keith played. They wrapped up their set with The Stake. Lance and Scott enthusiastically applauded, proving they had learned a valuable lesson.

At the end of the songs, when the audience applause and laughter had died down, Prez cutely waved bye-bye at Lance and Scott. Furiously clapping their hands, Lance and Scott disappeared from the auditorium. They reappeared, naked, ten meters above the Ewa Beach diving well, for their Core Rimmer initiation. Knowing nothing of this ritual dunking, Angelo and Reggie asked Jay where Lance and Scott went. Seconds later, the two newest Core Rimmers were naked and falling into the Oneula Beach diving well.

All the remaining Core Rimmers evilly snickered. The band members gathered around the drum risers. A few moments later, while the band members were deciding what to play next, the movie screen began lowering to the stage. Watching Lance and Scott drop, and then Angelo and Reggie, the rest of the much larger audience cracked up. Prez and Keith disappeared from the stage, but the bass guitar Prez had been wearing appeared on the guitar stand. Knowing it was Lance and Scott getting even, Derrick and Mike howled laughing. The sound was abruptly cut short when they also disappeared from the stage.

On the movie screen and over the PA, video and audio of the dunks were presented. Kids in the audience became hysterical and roared when Core Rimmers began disappearing as couples; Erik, Travis, Chris, Jay, and then Sean, Troy, Reyes and Ryan all vanished.

At Ewa Beach and Oneula Beach, naked Core Rimmers fell into diving wells like rain. The next four Core Rimmers, John, Stephen, Kaleo and Tory were pulled from the audience and dropped into the wells. The last couple, Drew and Corey vanished from the PA booth, leaving Leo giggling hysterically. The last Core Rimmer dunked was Nathan Hayes, who had been manning the CIC. Without warning, the male dorm leadership vanished from the auditorium too; Tony, Ray, Craig, Phil, Owen, Horacio, Dominic and Corbin were watched by the rest of the kids as they helplessly dropped naked into the diving wells.

Not knowing how to begin turning any of the gear off, Leo left the PA booth and started walking out of the auditorium. Before getting very far, it suddenly dawned on him that the spirits of his parents were close by. Deciding to pull another prank on them, and wondering if ghosts could get wet, Leo tapped his comm-badge and ordered Alden to transport him over a well.

* * * * *

Ewa Beach, FYS Building.

Wednesday, November 10, 2004 4:25PM HTZ

Now that all the dunks were complete, and with AJ and Jerry back from the Rapid Response Base, Prez decided to have a meeting with the entire team. With twenty-four team members, Prez chose to use one of the large conference rooms on the second floor of the FYS Building. This conference table was circular, with a small space to allow seating around the interior of the table. There was space for sixty around the table; thirty-six around the exterior of the table, and twenty-four more could sit around the interior. Before every chair, there were touch sensitive computer display screens built into the table.

Prez started the meeting with virtually the same introductory talk he had in Kaleo's and Tory's dorm room, more than a week prior. The trip to Charleston AI hospital made the importance of the job crystal clear. Everyone needed to think 'outside of the box' about things that weren't always obvious, like rescued kids needing something more from them than what was evident; like simply visiting them in hospitals. Prez got phaser training requests entered for Reyes, Chris, Jay, Erik, Travis, Lance, Scott, Angelo and Reggie. He then reminded the team that there were two more hospitals, and forty more level three kids to visit the next two days. Since the number of kids was smaller, there was no need to have the entire team present, but Prez wanted Erik, Travis, Angelo and Reggie to participate. As assumed, all the Core team members that had gone to California wanted to go to the other two hospitals. That left AJ, Jerry, Chris, Jay, Lance and Scott free to decide if they wanted to go to the hospitals on Thursday and Friday. All they needed to do was let Prez know before morning.

Starting a new Pissed Off Chickens game, Prez opened the floor to the team. Jerry immediately asked if he and AJ could be excused to find their sons. Prez's expression softened dramatically and he prompted, "Go ahead, bros. We'll catch y'all at dinner."

Once AJ and Jerry had left the room, Angelo wondered, "Why have you pulled us onto the team, Prez?"

Only glancing up from his PADD for a moment, Prez grinned, "We need the help, and you two made it clear that you can easily do the job."

Trying to ignore the sounds of exploding eggs, Drew chuckled, "Picking up a couple o' rescues is just as easy as playing with little kids. Rescues are a relatively rare part of the job. The biggest part is just being available for big brother time."

"What the kids might want varies," Corey seriously said. "It might be a little kid wanting to do something that he or she really shouldn't, like trying to lift weights at the rec center. Explaining why they're not ready for that, and then showing them what they could easily do instead, like calisthenics, is simple."

Paying little attention to Prez or the sounds of exploding eggs from his PADD, Keith offered, "Or maybe a kid just wants to play. You'll be joked with or teased, proving that all the kid really wants is to be tickled, or picked up and tossed into the pool."

Lance wondered, "What scares you about the job?"

Reggie smirked, "The California orphanages and the Hyatt."

Shaking his PADD and playing his game, Prez reminded, "The latter, or anything like it, won't ever happen again."

Derrick said, "California was one rescue operation out of at least ten. Reyes picked up three sets of kids last Friday, got them through the store and oriented, by himself. Generally, it's all common sense stuff and nothing to be worried about."

Paying more attention to Prez and the sounds emitted from the PADD, Mike grinned, "The best part of every day is the time spent with our kids, family time, which now includes everyone on this team, and our sons' boyfriends."

Slowly shaking his head, Reggie muttered, "Angelo and I just hooked up yesterday. We're not like any of you dudes. I can't help wondering if we're really as ready as you all seem to think we are."

Turning to Chris, Scott and Lance, Jay smirked and sighed, "I guess that chat we had by the pool accomplished very little."

Stephen, Corey, Lance and Angelo uncontrollably giggled at Prez's scowling, disgusted expression. Locking eyes with Reggie, John chortled, "Do you really think that I'm being saintly alone with Stephen? Before you answer, check this out." In the blink of an eye, Reggie was alone with John on the beach, and they were both nude. Mooing through giggles, John reached for Reggie's dangling pecker.

Swatting John's hand away, Reggie cackled, "There's no way!" and took off running down the beach. Reggie laughed, "I never even saw you tap your sub-vocal. How'd you get us on the beach?"

Unexpectedly, John appeared a few meters before Reggie, reaching both hands out to grab some long meat. Slamming on the brakes and squealing, "What the fuck?" Reggie found that no matter where he turned and looked, John was there reaching for his dick.

John giggled, "Stephen hangs like you, bro. Now I have a really good idea what he'll look like in another two years. I have plenty of fun with him in real life, and in my mind, just like this, but he won't run away from me. We may be shooting blanks now, but I promise you, we're not virgins."

Reggie gasped, "We're in..."

Nodding and dropping his hands to his side, John giggled, "Now you're gettin' the idea. Everything you need to know is already in your mind, Reggie. In a couple o' hours, by morning the latest, it'll be like you subliminally learned a bunch of kewl stuff. And it all came from me, without you knowing I was doing a thing. You can do this job, and you're gonna rock at it. Do you know why?"

Answering, "Because I've got Angelo," Reggie realized he had said that in front of the entire confused team in the conference room.

Reaching his hand over to take Reggie's hand in his, Angelo giggled, "Yeah, and I've got you too, but that wasn't the answer we expected to hear."

Squinting at John, Stephen giggled, "Did you just..."

"I had to show Reggie," John innocently grinned.

Scott, Jay, Erik and Trav wondered, "What did you show Reggie?" The instant the question had been posed, the entire gathered group found themselves standing on Ewa Beach, except Prez, who remained seated in the sand playing Pissed Off Chickens, and all were nude.

John sniggered, "Who wants to go surfin'?"

Completely into the idea, everyone except Prez, John, Stephen, Drew, Corey and Keith grabbed surfboards and hit the waves. Prez was too into his game to surf, but the other four were noticing that the sand, sea and sky seemed just a little different; a little too perfect.

Noticing that Keith was about to ask the question, John grinned, "They think all I can do is play 'Toss-the-kid' and float stuff. When everyone's ready, we'll be back in the conference room." Having only just learned how to surf during the trip to an alternate Earth, Lance was amazed that he was standing on his surfboard for entire rides. A few minutes later, with his lower leg scraped and bleeding, Lance came up onto the beach. He stood behind Prez and watched the two-player game of Pissed Off Chickens. After about thirty minutes, the remainder of the team had had their fill of their second surfing excursion that day.

Everyone was again dressed, dry and sitting around the conference room table. At the priceless expressions, especially Lance's, who was no longer bleeding, Keith, Drew, Corey, John and Stephen cracked up. Still playing his game, Prez looked up, chortling, "It felt like an hour, but only twenty-seconds has passed."

Almost everyone in the room looked at the digital clock on the wall, except Lance. "Pay attention to the wolves and your chicks!" Lance cackled.

Prez grinned, "They're not my chicks. It's Kyle's turn."

Only Derrick, Keith, John and Mike weren't surprised. The rest of the team blankly stared at Prez, causing the former four to howl laughing. Giggling his ass off, Corey wondered, "When did Kyle move into your head, Prez?"

Shrugging, Prez smirked, "I have no idea; maybe at Anahola Bay or maybe after. He didn't really make it too obvious until I started playing this game. He likes it though, so..."

The rest of the team hollered, "OH! MY! GOD!" and then cracked up laughing.

Red in the face and completely hysterical, Keith wheezed, "Meeting adjourned!" Everyone got up and staggered out of the conference room except Prez.

Still shaking his PADD and letting Kyle play the game, Prez giggled, "I'm supposed to say that. Wait a minute, Kyle's almost finished his turn. Dudes? Hello?" In the order in which they left, Core Rimmers popped back into the conference room. Still hysterical, everyone tried leaving again. Prez evilly snickered, "It's good to have a King Mikyvis in your head."

When Kyle's turn ended, Prez allowed the team to leave.

Everyone left the FYS building and went to the pools. Most of them remained there, relaxing and spending time with their Clan, until about five-thirty, when it was dinner time.

* * * * *

Ewa Beach, FYS Building

Wednesday, November 10, 2004 5:05PM HTZ

At the end of the business day, Jen Hundser gathered in the reception area with some of the other adults, including her husband Jim, Rob Gibbons, Anna Seibert, Bill Seaver, and Doctor Elaine Howard. She shared, "The last three days, I've been checking up on Alec Triggs. He's been at school, but he has quit the soccer team and student council. Given the history of his parents, I have a bad feeling that Alec is being told to quit his extracurricular activities. Yesterday, I considered going to the home with only Jim, but we discussed it and decided it would be best if we all went, to determine what's happening. In our little group, we have legal, police and medical experience. We can make judgement calls regarding Alec's welfare and take whatever action is necessary and appropriate."

Unexpectedly, John appeared in the reception area, dripping wet and naked, with Skyler Richardson, also naked and wet. Jen smirked at her youngest son and Jim sighed. "Oops!" John giggled, and turned to Skyler. In a blink, both boys were dry and clothed, and the wet carpet beneath them was also dried. Looking up at his mom, John giggled, "A little warning next time would be nice. Yeah, your security are trained telepaths and empaths, but I'm director of Intel for this division. It's your show, but I'm going too." He then introduced Skyler to the group of adults, and finished by saying, "Sky can make it so we can get this done and still be back in time for dinner."

Anna, Bill and Rob began softly chuckling. Jen, Jim and John called for everyone's personal security to meet at the front of the building. "What?" Skyler giggled, "Would anyone rather waste time and have a late dinner?" Seeing shaking heads, Skyler giggled, "Then let's go."

"And our security?" Anna helplessly giggled.

John cheekily grinned, "They're waiting outside for us."

Bill Seaver laughed, "They were just called!"

Sighing, John revealed, "From inside Sky's time-bubble, that we've all been in since we arrived. Not to mention, they're pros, who grabbed what they needed and Alden transported them. Sky will get us where we need to be too, so this whole process will take only a minute or so in real world time. In the meantime, Prez and all the rest of the Core Rimmers are hanging out with the majority of the Clan, at the pools and rec center. Only Stephen, Frankie and Wade know I'm gone, but none of the rest have noticed, because I don't want them to notice. When we get back and there's something definitive to report, I'll let them know."

Finished and ready to go, John spun around and walked out the doors, with Skyler right behind him. The rest of the adults followed. Seeing John revert to a ten-year-old boy, who greeted Blake and Lucky, and then jumped into his gorilla's arms, the adults watched in silent amazement. As serious as the task was, John wasn't the least bit disturbed. From atop Lucky's shoulder, John pointed and smiled, "Doc Howard, this is Mitch and this is Bond. They're Stephen's security, but for this mission, they're protecting you."

Going to his personal security, Jim smiled, "After dinner tonight, let's gather all the parents and other available adults, to spend some normal time together."

Knowing he was just playfully jabbed, Skyler giggled, "I'll put you all in a time bubble, so two or three hours becomes more like eight or nine. You deserve it." He then looked up at his new Auntie Jen, nodded and popped the entire group of twenty-two, including himself, to the sidewalk in front of the Triggs' residence. It was a nice two-story house in a well maintained neighborhood of middle class homes.

The group took in their new surroundings for a few moments. Rob happened to notice a car rounding a corner at an incredibly slow pace. Rob then said, "Give me and my team a minute to inspect the property, Jen."

Seeing a teenage boy bouncing a basketball that seemed to be hovering in mid-air, Jen nodded, "Let us know when your ready."

Rob sniggered, "Depending on your perspective, a minute or a few milliseconds." He and his security walked around the left side of house.

With little else to do, Doc Howard waved her tricorder over Skyler. While she watched the crazy readings, Skyler made himself slowly grow to full adult size and then shrink back down to about the size of one of the four-year-old boys. Sadly shaking his head, John giggled, "You're so bad, Sky."

Returning to his normal appearance, Skyler giggled, "I got hug lessons from Peter too!" and then lunged for Doc Howard's waist.

Hugging the boy back, Doc Howard beamed, "A heckova good hugger too."

Turning to his gorilla mounted son, Jim asked, "Are you feeling anything from inside the home?"

Nodding, John answered, "Alec's up in a bedroom, laying on a bed, bored out of his mind. His parents took the TV, computer, radio, and everything that could be considered fun. There's not even a ball to toss in the air. He's got his school books to read, but nothing else." After a brief pause, John smirked, "The parents are very sad and very angry. As far as they're concerned, Alec has destroyed the family. They don't know what to do or how to deal with this new situation, so they're frustrated too."

Anna asked, "Has the boy been hit or threatened physically?"

"Not hit, but threatened," John replied. He then grinned, "Alec's given them no reason to do more than scream and yell. I can feel that Alec knows he did the right thing for Theo and Brad, so his parents can flip out all they want, and he's still pretty satisfied."

Bill wondered, "How long do the parents intend to keep this up?"

John shrugged, "Until further notice. As far as they're concerned, how they raise their children is nobody else's business. We didn't have the right to take custody of Brad or Theo." He then turned to his mother and raised his eyebrows.

Annoyed to her limit, Jen tapped her comm-badge, calling, "Rob, are we clear to enter the premises?"

"Everything seems good," Rob reported. "We're coming around the north side of the house, and we haven't even been noticed."

Looking back and up at John, who was still sitting on Lucky's shoulder, Jen said, "I want you to go get Alec. He'll recognize you."

Flashing a thumb up, John offered, "And I'll start telepathically reading him too."

Jen ordered, "Go knock on the back door, Rob. Let's separate them, to minimize trouble of any sort. Let us know when you're there and ready." She then marched to the house, up the two steps onto the porch and waited there with Tanya at her side. Glancing at his teenaged security, Jim received a nod from Barry, who then jogged up onto the porch and stood at Jennifer's left side. The remaining adults went as far as the porch steps and stopped. At the rear of the group were John, Lucky, Blake and Skyler. Jennifer dug her FYS ID from her purse.

From Jen's comm-badge, Rob said, "We're ready when you are."

"Let's do this," Jen sighed, and then knocked on the door. Rob knocked on the back door a moment later. She held her hand up to display her ID card.

From inside the home, they could hear a woman loudly saying, "Both at once! Get the back door, please, Gordon." A moment later, the door swung open. Seeing the larger group behind Jen, Barry and Tanya, Mrs. Triggs asked, "Can I help..." She then saw the name on the ID card, and shrieked, "YOU! YOU TORE MY FAMILY APART! HOW DARE YOU!" She then took a swing at Jennifer, which Tanya easily blocked, and then shoved the irate woman several steps back into her home.

"The pleasure is mine," Jen flatly said, and stepped inside with Tanya and Barry. In the back of the house, a skirmish and growled obscenities could be heard.

"GET OUT!" Mrs. Triggs screamed, and again lunged at Jennifer. This time Barry blocked her and shoved her back, down onto the floor. In the rear room, the sounds of cracking and a man's grunts were heard.

Shaking her head and stepping further inside to allow everyone else in, Jennifer said, "This is a Federation Youth Services Health and Wellness inspection for the youth Alec Triggs. From what we've learned telepathically, and from this gracious greeting, you've already failed, but let's see what else we can discover, shall we?" Bill Seaver and his security went to check on Rob in the back room of the house.

Leaning over and holding Mrs. Triggs arms behind her back, Barry softly pleaded, "Please don't struggle. You'll dislocate your shoulder."

Holding a pair of handcuffs out, Tanya smirked, "It appears to be a well kept home for a happy family, but looks are often deceiving." She went behind Mrs. Triggs, squatted down and snapped the handcuffs on the woman's wrists.

Upon entering with Lucky and glancing at Mrs. Triggs, John said, "Mom, Alec is upstairs."

Jen nodded, "Go get him." John climbed down off of Lucky and then went upstairs with Blake. Glaring at Mrs. Triggs, Jen firmly assured, "If our doctor finds one welt on that boy, your sentence will be far worse than you've ever imagined." She only paused because she saw Rob and Bill coming into the room with the bound Mr. Gordon Triggs. Seeing Mr. Triggs was bleeding from his nose and mouth, Jen asked, "What happened?"

Sadly shaking his head, Rob smirked, "He tried to forcibly remove us. When that failed, he came at us with a wooden table chair. After that, it was all blurred by Rick shoving me aside and the almost simultaneous splintering of the wooden chair." He smiled at his fifteen-year-old enhanced personal security, and then softly chortled, "I've never seen anything like it. The damned chair practically exploded. If I had jumped up and down on that chair for five minutes, maybe I would've cracked a leg."

Guiding the already handcuffed Mr. Triggs onto a living room easy chair, Rick chanted the teachings of his Master Chang, "Peace has two spellings and meanings."

While telepathic scans of the two parents began in the living room, upstairs, John loudly called, "Alec?"

Alec replied, "End of the hall on the left side."

John and Blake hurried to the last door. They found sliding security bolts at the top and bottom of the door, and the knob was turned to be locked from the outside. John slid the bolts open and Blake unlocked the knob. Before the door was opened, they could hear Alec softly chortling, "I warned 'em. I said that I was expected to visit." The door swung open. They found Alec shirtless and pulling up board shorts over his boxer-briefs.

Simultaneously scanning Alec's mind, John smiled, "How're ya doin', dude?"

Somewhat surprised that it was John standing beyond the door, Alec chuckled, "Well rested, you might say," and then reached for his shirt.

"Leave your shirt off, bro," John ordered. "There's a doctor downstairs that wants to look you over."

Picking up his shirt, Alec reminded, "They've never touched us, and still haven't." He then sighed, "Neither of them can even look me in the eye anymore."

Blake blinked, "This isn't your room?"

Shaking his head, Alec replied, "It was Theo's, and already had the extra locks on the door." He pointed at the room across the hall, saying, "That's my room."

John impatiently huffed, "Dude, what if you need to go to the bathroom?"

Joining the two smaller boys in the hall, Alec shrugged, "I go when I get home, after dinner, and before they go to bed. Honestly, it hasn't been a problem. They don't want to see me, and I'm just as happy not seeing them."

Blake grimaced, "Lucky for you and them that you didn't need it more often, huh?"

Walking back down the hallway together, John spied a second door with the security bolts. He glanced at Alec and immediately knew that room had been Brad's. Shaking his head, John told Alec, "Ya know, I've been sent to my room, and grounded, but my folks never put up bolts or turned knobs around to lock us inside. That's not normal, and it's not acceptable, and I'm surprised I haven't learned about it before today."

"It's normal to us," Alec softly said.

"What if there was a fire?" Blake asked. Alec only shrugged, and led the way downstairs.

Telepathically, John was telling his mother what was found upstairs. Alec, John and Blake entered the living room. Jen Hundser was busily typing on her PADD. Alec saw his parents handcuffed, sitting in chairs, and his father had a bloody nose and lip. Blinking tears away, Alex softly said, "You couldn't just let them in, could you?"

"Don't you DARE talk to me and your father that way!" Mrs. Triggs spat. "This is all your fault!"

Alec sighed, "No mom, it never was, and I refuse to take any blame off of you."

Jen warned Mrs. Triggs, "Another word from you and I'll have your mouth taped shut. Your fifteen-year-old son has more maturity and wisdom than you and your husband combined."

"Try it!" Mrs. Triggs hissed.

Sadly shaking her head, Jen called, "Elaine, if you would, please?" Skylar gave Doctor Howard a roll of surgical tape. The woman struggled and snapped at the doctor, continuing her loud complaints. Doc Howard pulled a hypo-spray and injected Mrs. Triggs with a sedative, and then taped her mouth shut.

While that was going on, John introduced Alec to everyone in the room, concluding with Doctor Howard.

Alec was scanned by Doc Howard's tricorder and visually inspected for any sign of physical abuse. Purposefully trying to make Alec flinch, Doc Howard moved quickly through her examination. Alec never once ducked or flinched. Sitting beside his wife, Jim took the PADD, silently advising Jen on some legal ramifications of this case. When they had left the FYS Building, neither knew how bad things had been for Alec, Theo and Brad. What had begun as a simple health and wellness inspection, that might've cost the Triggs financially, or possibly cost them custody of their eldest son, was now turning into a criminal case. Finished sharing with his wife, Jim passed the PADD back to Jen and stared at John. Reading his dad's thoughts, John slumped briefly and then nodded. Completing her examination, Doc Howard cheerfully proclaimed, "You're fit as a fiddle, Alec."

Standing up, Jim said, "Let's step outside, Alec. I'll fill you in on some details." He then asked, "Elaine, why don't you come with us?"

"Thank you," Doc Howard smiled, "I could use some fresh air." She then gave Mrs. Triggs a second hypo-spray that caused the woman to sit up straight and become more aware.

Slipping his polo shirt on, Alec nodded, but asked, "What's going to happen to my folks?"

"That's a big part of what we'll be discussing," Jim assured. Wrapping an arm around the boy's shoulder, Jim led Alec to the front door, and they stepped outside. Following close behind, Doc Howard closed the door behind her. Jim and Elaine would gently break the news to Alec that his parents had been emotionally abusing their children all their lives. Although it didn't seem to be abuse to Alec, or Theo, or Brad, their parents had clearly been manipulative. In the case of the locked and bolted bedroom doors, they had unreasonably imprisoned all three boys, and at any time the imprisonments might've been life threatening.

Once the door closed, Jen stood to face Mr. and Mrs. Triggs. "When I thought of visiting this home, I honestly did not expect a pleasant welcome," Jen began. "What we have found, beyond two obnoxious adults, who mistakingly considered themselves capable parents, are eleven violations of the Safe Haven Act.

"Violation one, from Section 10.5, conditions that have a high probability of impacting the minor; Section 10.5.1, locks on the exterior of doors preventing egress in the event of fire or emergency. Violation two, from Section 11.2, there were threats of beating. Violation three, three counts against Section 12.2, isolation of children from their peers and normal socialization. You incarcerated Brad and Theo for months, and ordered Alec to quit the soccer team and the Student Council. Violation four, three counts against Section 12.2(c), any history of actions which prevent children from being afforded the same freedoms and opportunities afforded the general populace of the same age. Brad and Theo discovering their sexuality is not grounds for punishment or imprisonment. Alec did the right thing bringing his brothers to us, whether you want to believe it or not. Violation five, three counts against Section 12.2(d), excessive depriving of normal interactions as punishment that is a result of a violation of another section of this act. Refer back to all the prior infringements. You locked your sons away! For that alone, I would castrate him and rip your ovaries out with my own hand!"

John softly called, "Mom?" As soon as Jen turned to her youngest, she immediately felt his hug and relaxed.

Much more calmly, Jen continued, "Violation six, Section 12.3, depriving children of necessary interaction with close family members without justification. Violation seven, Section 17.4, parent involved in actions which place children's physical or mental health in jeopardy. Violation eight, from Section 17.7, the failure to support children which have differing genetic makeup than what the parent wants, as in the case of Bradley and Theodore. By the way, Brad has an adorable boyfriend, and Theo has found the son of one of our core families, and both are extremely happy. Violation nine, from Section 17.15, the isolation of children from siblings. Violation ten, from Section 17.21, punishment of children for normal developmental stages. Violation eleven, three counts against Section 17.22, unreasonable incarceration, defined by Section 17.22(a), placing children in an enclosed environment which prevents them from interacting with other members of their species without local judicial involvement. All of the previously mentioned infringements have been substantiated by Section 67.1, observation by trained local officials, namely every person that has been in this room from Clan Short Pacific Rim Division has been trained, some in multiple disciplines, as Mr. Triggs has learned, quite painfully. Addition substantiation, Section 67.5, verifiable statements made by subject children. And finally, Section 67.6, testimony provided via Vulcan Mind-Meld or certified Vulcan trained telepaths. John, Barry and Tanya are all trained telepaths."

"Fortunately, for me that is, Federation Youth Services requires an impartial judge in these situations," Jen stated before smiling the vilest smile John had ever seen cross her face. "Unfortunately, for the two of you, the violations of Article 17, Section 17.22 are serious enough to warrant a transfer to an authority which is trained to deal with such situations in an expedient manner for the safety of the children. Commander Johnny Hundser, at this time I cede jurisdiction to Family Clan Short."

Squirming where he stood, John whined, "MOM! I hated Johnny when I was five!" Anna, Bill and Rob softly chortled.

Jen giggled, "Oh, Grandma Morrison can call you Johnny, but I can't?"

Sighing loud and long, John then turned to the accused, stating, "In California, I executed four adults for crimes similar to yours. In their cases, physical abuse was also present, in some extreme cases. Only now, do I sense some fear from both of you, but neither of you believe that what you've done to your sons was too terrible. Tell me, if there had been an earthquake or fire, and any of your sons were hurt, but you couldn't get to them because of jammed locks, how would you feel then?"

He paused to read the two adults thoughts, then sighed, "You just don't get it, do you? The fact that they weren't hurt and trapped isn't important. They're your flesh and blood. Locking them in their rooms is just as bad as if you had hit them. Since I sense no remorse in either of you, I sentence you to life imprisonment at a Level 3 Federation Penitentiary. Now I get to tell Alec, Brad and Theo that neither of you even want to say goodbye to them. In your ignorant opinions, this is all their fault. Being attracted to other guys is nobody's fault; it's simple genetics. The fact is, you tried to change who Brad and Theo are, by locking them away. Alec's not at fault either; he protected his brothers, from you! You make me sick, really nauseous."

John tapped his comm-badge, calling, "Commander Hundser to Terra Main, Starfleet Security."

The nervous and quaking voice of a young teen replied, "Sir, Cadet James Johnston here. How can I assist you?"

"At ease, Cadet," John grinned, thankful that he could grin and this would all be over soon. "Please send down a detail for two prisoners. They'll be enjoying your high security holding cells, until they reach their destinations."

Gordon Triggs repeated, "Destinations?"

"That's right," John smirked, "at level 3, men and women are separated. Your 'so called' family was over when you first locked your sons away. Since you can treat your sons so coldly and inhumanely, you get to spend the next few hours saying goodbye to each other, and then living out the remainder of your lives alone, just like you did to your three sons. The only good that came from both of you are three awesome guys. We'll take care of them, and keep them happy."

From John's comm-badge, Cadet Johnston confirmed, "The detail is to arrive at your location, Sir?"

"Yeah," John huffed, "the quicker the better." Four shafts of sparkling light appeared in the dining room, materializing two men and two women. "Excellent work, Cadet," John cheered, and pointed the detail to Mr. and Mrs. Triggs. John ordered, "Let them spend their remaining time close together, so they can talk but not touch each other, until the transports split them apart once and for all." The detail hauled Mr. and Mrs. Triggs onto their feet. John went to his mom. Jen and John waved at the couple until sparkling shafts of light vanished. John tapped his comm-badge with his free hand, calling, "Cadet Johnston?"

"Still here, Sir," the cadet formally replied.

"Do you have a partner?"

"Yes, Sir."

"Male, by any chance?"

The cadet meekly replied, "Yes, Sir."

"At the end of your shift, your orders are to get your partner and sit between the couple that just arrived, making out together. They seem to think there's a problem with dudes like us loving one another. You can prove them wrong."

The cadet squealed, "Seriously?"

"Very seriously, on all counts. I have a husband, and those two made my stomach turn. As a matter of fact, get all your gay friends and their partners to put on a show for them. My stomach is feeling better just thinking of that."

"Yes, Sir!" Cadet Johnston cheerfully giggled.

"Commander Hundser, out."

The moment the Cadet called, "Out," John looked around and whined, "Please, not Johnny, ever again."

Anna giggled, "Does Johnny-wonny wanna pway wid his boys?"

Gritting his teeth, John cackled, "I want my husband and my sons, quickly!" He hurried to the door, flung it open and yelled, "Dad! Make them stop talking like Joey and calling me names!" All the remaining adults chortled.

Whistling innocently, Skylar looked around the house. He pulled a bag of cookies out of thin air and started munching on them. The house started to disappear one section at a time. He started with the roof, then one-by-one walls just faded away.

With a crying teenager to deal with, Jim Hundser's gears nearly stripped, hearing his N-Gen boy acting like a normal ten-year-old; an all too rare occurrence in recent days.

Holding an invisible door knob, John swung around to Skylar, laughing, "You'd better stop! Alec might want a few things before you make the house vanish!"

"I'm leaving the stuff!" Skylar giggled around a mouthful of cookie. He pointed at a shelf hanging in mid-air, with a picture floating just above it.

Sadly shaking his head, John giggled, "Get Stephen, Wade and Frankie here, please? And check with your dads to see what you can do about Alec, so he's not spending his first week on base with Doc Wiener. I suspect I might need some couch time, and I don't want competition."

Skyler phased out and back again in seconds, with Stephen, Frankie and Wade. Seeing the mostly vanished house, with various items hanging on nothing, Stephen rapidly blinked. Frankie giggled, "Hi, daddy," as if nothing were amiss, and Wade howled laughing. Skyler phased out again, and then returned near Jim, Elaine and Alec. All four phased. Moments later, all four phased in, and brought Theo, Richie, Brad and Kade with them. At least Alec had stopped crying though.

Alec led his brothers to the house. They climbed invisible steps and helped Alec gather the things he needed. Jen asked Jim, "What happened?"

Jim answered, "Skyler brought Alec, Theo and Brad to visit their parents, a few weeks in the future. They're worse in the future than they were here today. The boys know what none of us could actually teach, from their parents own filthy mouths."

"I encouraged the three boys to lay it right back on them," Elaine smiled. "They did a great job; left their mother in tears and their dad banging his head against the cell bars. They can all move on now."

"I have a question," Rob carefully offered. When everyone turned to him, Rob wondered, "We're standing on a floor that isn't here, so where is it, exactly?"

Skyler giggled, "On another Earth the homes in this neighborhood haven't been built. They're there, partially, at least until we leave."

"Ask a silly question," Rob softly muttered, and started walking for where the door used to be, with his security trailing along and quietly sniggering.

Rick warned, "To your right," but Rob walked into an invisible wall anyway. "Don't do that," Rick giggled.

"I haven't," Rob grinned, and altered his course, feeling around for the space where the open door used to be.

Rick giggled, "I never saw a thing."

"Neither have I," Rob chuckled.

Rob made his way down the steps and out to the street. The steps and sidewalk melted away behind him, which threw Wade into a major giggling fit. Widely grinning, Frankie shared cookies with Skyler.

Jen glanced up through the invisible ceiling. Alone in his old bedroom with Kade, Brad pulled some of his old games off the invisible closet shelf. In the next room, Theo and Richie Taylor were making out in the closet. Seeing this clearly from his room, Alec laughed, "Gimme a break, bro! Now's a hell of a time to be in the closet!"

Pausing his make-out session, Theo giggled, "Can we really be considered in a closet, when the only clue it is a closet are the clothes hanging from hangers on an invisible bar?"

"Besides," Richie giggled, "neither of us have ever really been closeted. Now we can both say we at least tried it."

Alec hollered, "Uncle Jim?"

"Yes?"

"I still get to choose whether I want to live with my brothers?"

"Yes."

"Is there a temporary place I could think about it?"

Jim sniggered, "With visible walls and floors too."

Alex gushed, "Sweet!"

Stephen told John, "Its like he was made to be Clan."

* * * * *

Ewa Beach, Dormitory 1, Room 1

Wednesday, November 10, 2004 5:08PM HTZ

John, Stephen, Wade and Frankie arrived with Alec Triggs and showed him the room that used to be Kaleo's and Tory's. Brad and Theo went over to dormitory three with their boyfriends and the stuff they had retrieved from their old house. Alec had two suitcases and a gym bag full of miscellaneous personal belongings, including awards and his soccer ball. Commenting on the room, Alec began the unpacking task. The first thing he did was roll his soccer ball to Frankie and Wade, so the two youngest boys wouldn't be too bored. John and Stephen gave Alec a brief overview of the Clan orientation. John informed Alec that he would be able to take a few days off and start school the next Monday with about a hundred and fifty other kids.

Surprising everyone, a kid with multicolored hair appeared in the room and waved. The new kid and John smiled at each other for about five-seconds, and then John chuckled, "Your brother Dylan was just here yesterday, to meet the band, Ezzy; Troy's been searching for temporal tranquilizers ever since."

Ezra giggled, "Has anyone given him one yet?"

Shaking his head, John sniggered, "Doc Andrews has no idea what Troy keeps asking him for."

"Later tonight, none of y'all will need 'em," Ezzy giggled. "Before that though, we need you and Stephen to help move a house."

Stephen whimpered, "Move a house?"

Nodding at his hubby, John returned his attention to Ezra and asked, "How far?"

"From Pennsylvania to Fort Lauderdale," Ezzy giggled, "but Peter's there to expedite the flight. Eli and Benji are there to assist with lift off. Y'all gotta do that orbiting thing again; that was way kewl to see." Again, Stephen whimpered.

John told Stephen, "We haven't seen Eli and Benji since last Thursday night. It sounds like fun, and a heck of a lot easier than holding up a forty-story tower."

Ezzy giggled, "And some of the Intel reports you've read the last couple o' days will start making sense, ya know, as much as possible, I guess."

Raising his eyebrows, John asked, "Tracy and crew are there too?"

Ezra nodded and giggled, "Yep. I'll have you back here in time for dinner. Ready?"

Signaling a pause, John squatted down to tell Frankie and Wade, "You be good and help Alec get settled, then take him over to Uncle Prez and Uncle Keith at the pools. We'll meet you poolside, before dinner, kewl?"

Wade and Frankie nodded and giggled, "Kewl, daddy," and gave John kisses on the cheek. As soon as John stood, Stephen kissed his sons and reminded them to be good.

"Ready?" Ezra confirmed.

Taking Stephen's hand, John said, "Ready."

"Saturday, here we come!" Ezra giggled.

"SATURDAY?" Stephen incredulously hollered, and then they were gone, with Stephen's last word reverberating around the room.

Alec asked Frankie, "Do I want to know what just happened?"

Shrugging, Frankie cackled, "Do you wanna know about Mikyvis, or which Saturday they're going to? Mikyvis I can answer, but not which Saturday."

Thoughtfully humming, Alec returned to unpacking. Wade cracked up and Frankie hysterically giggled, "We got our own Mikyvis too. That's how Sky got you, Brad and Theo around."

"It was all pretty normal when we were moving around," Alec grinned, "but seeing and hearing someone else do it isn't normal at all." For the next minutes, while Alec finished his unpacking, Frankie turned the television and stereo on. Excitedly telling Alec about all the kewl stuff on base, Wade hunkered down on the floor and powered up the Playstation. Wade and Frankie played video games until Alec was done. Minutes later, the Playstation, TV and stereo were turned off, and then the two little boys led the teenager out to the pool.

Once outside, Frankie paused and looked up, telling Alec, "This is dorm one, near the townhouses and condos and the CIC." He pointed at the nearest building, saying, "That's dorm two," and continued pointing out the other two dormitories.

Alec wondered, "Where do you dudes live?"

Pointing over by dorm four, Frankie answered, "In a house with our grandmas and grandpa, and daddy and poppa, and Bruce, Dewi, Kokaku, Carmella and Rene."

Wade asked, "Where's Sky gonna live, Frankie?"

Frankie giggled, "Pretty much wherever and whenever he wants!" Wade cracked up and staggered around.

Leaning over to pick up Wade, Alec chortled, "Frankie, don't tease your little brother." He put Wade up on his shoulders.

"Think about it," Frankie giggled. "We could give him a bed in our house, and watch him lay down on it, but every time we look away, he's gone off, who knows where, and when we look back again, there he is!" Up on Alec's shoulders, Wade hysterically squealed and clapped his hands. Reaching one arm up, Alec held Wade's back so the little guy didn't fall backwards.

Since he had his little bro laughing, and Alex wondering if he was better off locked in a room, Frankie started telling tales about Archnania while they walked to the pools.

Meanwhile, John and Stephen returned from their house moving mission with a new boy. Rather than upset the newbie with several hundred new brothers and sisters gathering around, John had Ezzy deliver them to the pool house boys' room. Ezzy hugged the three of them, and then phased out, leaving some multi-colored sparkles in his wake. Immediately, John telepathically called for Nathan Hayes to join them.

"Umm... does someone have to go?" Corbin Reid grinned.

Seeing his puffed-up, out-of-control auburn hair in a mirror, Stephen gasped at his reflection, and then whimpered, "I need a hair brush."

Shaking his head, John told Corbin, "There's about two hundred kids outside. I thought it would be easier for you if we weren't surrounded." John then told Stephen, "Wet your hair in a sink or in a shower, baby." When Stephen sighed, nodded and went to a sink, John returned his attention to Corbin. "The guy we promised would look after you is on his way. He's bringing his boyfriend too, Brice Glotzbecker. We'll get you set up so you're completely safe and comfy here, dude."

Nodding, Corbin said, "Thank you." He then softly asked, "Do I have to tell... ya know, what was happening... what I was used for?"

Stepping closer to Corbin and taking him gently into his arms, John revealed, "Our first group of 87 kids were just like you. They were between four and fifteen-years-old, getting filmed and being sold to perv adults. Another group are ex-street prostitutes. Did you hear about what we did in California last Thursday?"

"Yeah," Corbin shivered, "saw it on the news."

"The level one and level two orphanage kids are here," John said. "There's nobody out there that will give you a rough time, Corbin. You'll learn soon enough that you're just another eleven-year-old dude to all the kids."

Opening the pool house door, Nathan loudly laughed, "Sorry, John!"

A moment later, Dee ran into the boys room, with his hands already ripping open the Velcro fly on his boardies, giggling, "Nathan tried to make me go home to pee, John!" He stood at a urinal, sighed in relief, and looked over his shoulder at Corbin, giggling, "Hi! That was a close one!" Still fighting with his hair, Stephen howled laughing.

John giggled, "Corbin Reid, meet my nephew, Dee Vanderwood."

Opening the boys' room door, Nathan grinned, "Remind me to not get in Dee's way when he needs to leak."

"He about knocked us both over," Brice sniggered.

Dee laughed, "There are two major rules here; wear clothes in the dining room, and don't pee in the pools!"

Extending an arm to shake hands with Corbin, Nathan smiled, "We've been waiting a few days to meet you."

Shaking hands with Nathan, and barely believing what was said, Corbin squeaked, "Me? Really?"

Nodding, John said, "We read the reports from Intel Division.

The one thing we didn't know was when you'd show up. When Dylan showed up last night, and again when Skylar showed up this morning, I thought it was about to happen then. When Ezzy popped in, I didn't even give you a thought."

Nathan introduced Brice to Corbin. When they were done, Nathan evilly grinned, "What I don't understand is, why the boys' room, John?"

"Its close to the pools," John smiled, "and no one would really care that you and Brice were going to take a whiz."

"The rec center is almost as close," Nathan smirked.

Brice giggled, "And Dee wouldn't have raced us."

John shrugged, "But there's always someone, somewhere in the rec center. There's far less traffic here, in comparison. Corbin being comfortable was high priority."

Nathan promised, "It'll all be taken care of tonight, dude." Seeing John smirking, Nathan didn't wait for the question to be posed, answering, "Skylar was here, and I asked him to check ahead a few hours."

With Dee helping with his hair, Stephen muttered, "Doesn't that take the fun out of it?"

Wrapping his arms around Nathan's waist, Brice giggled, "Use your imagination, Stephen."

Coming to an abrupt halt, Dee shouted, "You're boyfriends?"

"Since last night," Nathan chuckled, "which will also fit into the night's activities."

Corbin giggled, "Is everything in the Clan always this weird? It was Saturday, and now it's Wednesday, and I was supposed to meet Nathan first, but Dee beat him in here, and I'm still wearing only underwear!"

"As soon as you're ready, our store is the next stop," Nathan offered.

Releasing Corbin and pointing up into a corner, John called, "Alden, say hi to Corbin."

"Hi, Corbin," Alden giggled.

John explained, "Nathan's gonna be your shadow and protector, for as long as you'd like, but Alden will always be watching everything, everywhere on all our bases. His primary job is to make each and every kid here feel safe. While Nathan and Brice get you clothes and stuff, I'm gonna talk with all the adults, especially the men. They'll see you here and there, and greet you, but you'll never be alone with one; you get to decide when you're ready to deal with grown-ups, kewl?"

"Thank you," Corbin whispered, and then sobbed, "He hurt me, over and over again, and didn't care."

Patting and rubbing Corbin's shoulder, Brice sighed, "I've been there too."

Practically shoving the hairbrush into Stephen's hand, Dee hurried over and tearfully told Corbin, "Me too. Men didn't care that I couldn't breathe, and they didn't care that it hurt more than anything else in the world could possibly hurt." He took Corbin's hand and assured, "That won't happen here, ever. My grandpa and all my grown-up uncles are really nice. You tell me when your ready, and I'll prove it. All the grown-ups here are pretty kewl, for adults, anyway."

Corbin nodded and pleaded, "Please don't cry for me."

Wiping his eyes with his free hand, Dee huffed, "I'm crying for me and you, and all us kids that were hurt like that."

Corbin seemed to stare blankly at Dee for a few moments. He then softly asked, "Ya wanna come to the store with us?"

Trying to pull himself together, Dee grinned, "If you want."

Rapidly nodding at Dee, Corbin told Nathan, "Let's go."

Nathan tapped his sub-vocal and called, "Alden, take the four of us to the store, dude." They vanished from the pool house boy's room.

Noticing John standing there looking at where everyone had been standing, Stephen called, "Hon, are you all right?"

John answered, "Just surprised with Dee. He's helped other kids and told them the same as what he told Corbin, but without tears."

Stephen smiled, "It's a good thing for Corbin though. Right off the bat, he knows us, Nathan, Brice and Dee. Between the five of us, we can introduce him and get him over the past."

"Yeah, I guess."

Immediately upon arrival in the basement store, Dee led Corbin to the shopping carts. Nathan asked, "Corbin, can you fill in some gaps in the Intel reports for me?"

"Sure," Corbin said. "Whatever I can, ya know?"

Nathan asked, "What were you told about me, and by whom?"

"Jorge told me you're unit and good at protecting kids," Corbin answered.

Dee picked up a package of plain white briefs, since that was what Corbin was wearing, and held them up for Corbin's approval. Shaking his head, Corbin frowned, "The bastard wanted me wearing white briefs. They turned him on, I think. Anything except white briefs and tank top tee shirts, Dee." He then seriously asked Nathan, "What does your unit have to do with anything?" Brice sputtered and raced away for the boys' changing room. He howled laughing before getting there.

Turning to Nathan, Dee teased, "Yeah, good question. Brice might care about your unit, but not too many of the rest of us do."

Nathan grinned, "It's not my unit, it's THE UNIT. It stands for Universal Next-Generation Infiltration Team. I'm a Lieutenant in The UNIT. But then I decided to stay here with this division."

"Decided?" Alden sputtered. "More like you were drafted!"

Giggling his ass off at Nathan's frustrated expression, Dee held up a package of colored boxer-briefs for Corbin. "Those are kewl," Corbin smiled. Seeing Dee picking up two more similar packages, Corbin scowled, "What're ya doin', Dee?"

"There's three pair in each pack, and seven days in a week," Dee explained. "Nine is enough for a week, with two extra."

Nathan nodded, "Everybody gets enough clothes for a week. That's SOP."

Not understanding and rapidly blinking, Corbin confirmed, "Soap?"

Nathan sighed, "Standard operating procedure; S.O.P., not s.o.a.p." From the direction of the boys' changing room, Brice was heard laughing and pounding on the walls.

Dee giggled, "Go put on your Mr. Fuzzy G-string and stop acting all military, Nath."

Corbin rapidly blinked at Dee and Nathan, and then softly muttered, "Mister Fuzzy what?"

Telepathically communicating with Alden, Nathan grinned, "It's a Clan perk. Everybody gets a Mr. Fuzzy puppet. Gay guys get Mr. Fuzzy G-strings, like a jock." All four phased out and back in, wearing Mr. Fuzzy puppets on their right hands and Mr. Fuzzy G-strings over their boy bits.

From the boys' changing room, Brice loudly laughed, "NATHAN!" and came running out.

Holding up his Mr. Fuzzy puppet, Dee squeaked, "We got silly last night and had a cozy cuzzy fuzzy water blaster battle."

Watching Brice come running for Nathan and the two boyfriends start racing around the store, Corbin giggled, "You're all crazy?"

"YES!" multiple AIs screamed in unison.

Dee shrugged and giggled, "We're family and know how to have fun." Leading Corbin through the store, Dee shared stories about Joel's various rescues, the luau and concert, about Anahola Bay, gorillas, G-Cats and ferrets, and the move onto the base. He continued with his adoption by Prez and Keith, two of the members of the band Platinum Habits, and the Head Rimmers, which made Corbin intensely blush. Wisely leaving it alone, Dee told Corbin about his three brothers, about Mike, Derrick and their four sons, which Dee now considered his cousins. Every now and then, Nathan and Brice would run by Dee and Corbin, reminding Dee to tell Corbin about something more or someone else. By the time Corbin had finished shopping, Brice and Nathan caught up at the checkout counters.

With the last of his new clothes packed, Corbin sheepishly asked, "Can I please shower and change into new clothes?" He quickly explained, "This stuff I'm wearing is going into the garbage. I want to have dinner looking like everybody else, and wash the last of... and feel clean for the first time in a long time."

After zipping up the suitcase and pulling it off the counter, Nathan called, "Alden, take us to dorm one's lavatory."

Upon arrival, Corbin looked around the room and then checked, "You're not leaving me alone here, right?"

"Course not," Nathan smiled. "Me and Brice will stand guard at the shower entrance."

"And I'll stay in the changing area, until you're done," Dee cheerfully offered. He took Corbin's hand and led the way, then sat on the bench.

Getting undressed, Corbin sighed, "I don't know why I'm so scared still. I know the bastard is gone, and you guys have been awesome, but I'm scared someone will walk in and freak me out. If it's a man, I'll curl up in the corner and cry."

"Don't worry," Brice assured, "we've got this room protected. No one will interrupt or see you. It's dinner time anyhow, so everyone's at the CIC. I'd be surprised if anyone came in here." Nathan picked up Corbin's underwear off the floor and then took them to the lavatory trash can.

Dee pointed up at the cameras in the changing room and then pointed out the cameras inside the shower. He softly reminded, "You're safe, from now on."

Walking into the mob shower, Corbin chose the shower head nearest to the exit, so he could quickly escape if need be. He saw the soap dispensers and asked, "Why's there an 'H' on this one, Dee?"

"For dudes with allergies," Dee answered. "If normal soap gives you a rash or makes you itchy, use the 'H' soap." He then called, "Nath, pass me the suitcase, so I can get clothes out and ready?"

Unfamiliar with everything, Corbin tried twisting the knob on the wall, but nothing happened. Frustrated that he couldn't even get the water turned on by himself, Corbin whimpered, "Dee?"

Hurrying the few steps to the shower entrance, Dee asked, "What's wrong?"

Pointing at the knob, Corbin wept, "I can't figure it out."

Taking a single step inside the shower, Dee admitted, "The first time, I couldn't either. So you don't get hit with cold water, step over to one side, and then just push it up. The water will get warm real fast. If it's too warm, push it a little to the right, so it's cooler. If it's too cold, push it a little to the left."

Corbin did as he was told and water flowed from the shower head. He reached out to feel the temperature. It soon got warmer, but not warm enough, so he pushed the knob hard to the left. Seeing steam, Corbin impatiently huffed, and locked eyes with Dee, wordlessly begging to be shown how to work the shower.

Dee smiled, "Lemme get undressed. We're brothers anyhow." He stepped out of the shower to tell Nathan and Brice, "He needs help. Get some clothes ready." In a minute, Dee had stripped and walked back into the shower, careful to stay clear of the steaming hot water. Taking hold of the knob, Dee showed Corbin and explained, "A little bit to the right for cooler."

Seeing how easy it was, Corbin slumped and softly wept, "I'm such a dummy. He wouldn't even let me go to school the last year."

Dee sighed, "Cause he didn't want you to learn. He wanted you to just be his fuck toy, Corbin. That ain't what's gonna happen here. You're gonna be able to go to school with the rest of us. Take it slow and easy for me, okay?"

"It's always been this way for me," Corbin sobbed. "I'm no good at nothin'. That's why..."

"You're here," Dee interrupted. "I wasn't very good at school either, ya know? At the school here, I'm learning everything all over again. The teachers care that we learn, and don't hassle us when we do it wrong, they just show another way to think of it. I never got multiplication before, but just yesterday it started making sense. Ya know why?"

"Why?"

"Cause the teacher helped me. Cause my daddy and poppa helped me. Cause my brothers, Sammy and Gage helped me. For the first time ever, somebody cared that I learned it right. In one day, what I couldn't do became what I could do. It ain't easy yet, but I know it'll get easier with practice. I just used multiplication in the store. This is your first time using these showers. It'll be easier for you tomorrow. Tonight, everything is new, so me, Brice and Nath will show you everything. Whatever anyone needs to know, somebody here can show us." Seeing a small forced smile, Dee grinned, "Turn around. I'll wash your back and you wash the front. It's just one of the ways Clan brothers show they care."

"Really? Everybody?"

Dee nodded, "Since I got here, yep, everybody can help everybody else, any way they can." As instructed, Corbin turned around. Dee got a palm loaded with soap and started at his new friend's neck and shoulders. During the shower, Dee learned that Corbin was eleven-years-old, and Corbin learned that Dee was ten-years-old.

Out in the lavatory, keeping guard as they had promised, Brice and Nathan grinned at each other. Prez and Keith needed to know that Dee had been fantastic with this newbie. Nathan telepathically told John everything that had been going on since the store. Seconds later, Keith and Prez knew it all too. Minutes after that, Corbin and Dee were dressed, the suitcase was transported to the Hundser's basement, and the four of them walked into the CIC dining room.

Seeing the adult men and women chefs, Corbin clammed up. He would only whisper to Dee. Dee wasn't surprised and took care of placing Corbin's dinner order. It included a McCoy milkshake, which Dee had made a point of drinking every morning and every night. Corbin was a year younger than Nathan, but was much shorter than Nathan. Corbin was about an inch taller than Dee. Dee knew that Corbin was undernourished too and could definitely use the extra vitamins.

Already finished eating, Keith and Prez came into the kitchen chow line. Keith proudly beamed, "You've been busy, Dee."

Dee giggled, "Kind o' by accident, Daddy."

Nathan playfully corrected, "By almost having one."

Dee smirked at Nathan, and then told Corbin, "Meet my dad and pop. Prez is my poppa, and our Division Director. Dad's name is Keith, and he's assistant director." Looking up at his dad and pop, Dee smiled, "This is Corbin Reid. He's eleven, and he's like a lot of us here; his foster dad was really bad." Seeing Corbin blush and frown, Dee sighed, "Don't worry, okay? Almost all of us were just like you; that's all over now."

Prez and Keith noticed chefs waiting to pass plates to Dee and Corbin. They maneuvered to get the plates for the boys and put them down on the trays. Prez told Corbin and Dee, "You guys carry your milkshakes, we'll carry your trays out to our table."

Keith instructed, "Richie is waiting with John's family, Dee." He grinned, "There's room for Brice and Nathan's unit too." Brice sputtered but lost the battle and cracked up.

Smirking and squinting at Keith, Nathan giggled, "Great, John shared that with everybody, didn't he?"

"Only the Core Rimmers and all the telepaths," Prez chuckled. He picked up Corbin's tray, chortling, "It's early yet. By morning, everyone will be commenting on your cute unit, Nath." Dee and Brice digressed into giggling fits. Prez and Keith led the way from the kitchen and into the dining room, with Dee and Corbin following. Brice and Nathan trailed behind. The moment Nathan was seen in the dining room, he was blasted by multiple telepathic remarks. In between all that, Daileass got in a few comments.

"Adam wants to know what you're doing calling HIS unit your unit!" Daileass informed Nathan. "Logan's not happy either, since he says your unit is substandard compared to the original!"

* * * * *

Oneula Beach, Dining Room

Wednesday, November 10, 2004 6:27PM HTZ

After dinner, Prez and Keith went through dimensional doors to where Neil Green and Tad Markell were sitting with Carter Rackham and Doug Zimmerman. Seeing the two leaders approaching, Tad began giggling. Widely smiling, Neil tried to make himself smaller by sliding down in his chair. Pausing near the table, Prez grinned, "And what were you two couples doing this fine day?"

"Being couples," Neil chortled. "We were kept busy Monday and yesterday, right through last night's cozy cuzzy fuzzy water blaster battle."

Carter sniggered, "The good news is that we're right across the hall from each other, but didn't hear much of anything, just televisions."

Keith teased, "More gay couples building teamwork means more future Core Rimmers."

Hearing giggling and seeing all four shaking their heads, Prez smiled, "What makes you think you can't do the job?"

Doug sighed, "We're still too small for our ages, don't you think?"

"John's ten, Corey and Stephen are eleven, and Drew's twelve," Keith offered, "but they're not too young or too small. All our sons, between five and eleven, joined us in Charleston today. Ability, height and weight don't always have to match. All it really takes is willingness."

Prez explained, "We're looking for brains, not brawn. The truth is that we're just waiting for you dudes to become involved in something, so we know where your interests are."

"Why are you telling us this?" Neil wondered.

Keith answered, "We need the help, dudes. Tomorrow and Friday we'll be gone the first half of the days again. More dorm leaders and more Core Rimmers, some of whom can be here, just makes everyone feel more secure."

"I'm still considering it," Prez revealed, "but it's highly likely that I'll leave Drew, Corey, Sean and Troy here tomorrow. Maybe Lance and Scott too, since there's twenty kids at the next hospital, we won't need the majority of the team. We know you dudes need time, but you're adjusting and mostly concentrating on what's important to you. I already know you four have what it takes, not only to be leaders, but to be fathers and married couples."

Doug gasped, "We can get married too?"

Keith nodded. Prez smiled, "It's one of many perks of the job. Think and talk about it." Neither Keith nor Prez were facing the dimensional doors, and therefore didn't see Colonel Cody Wilkins walk inside with his partner, Sheldon Lloyd. Cody quickly found where Prez and Keith were and weaved between tables across the room.

Neil sniggered, "The idea was dumped into my head before we got here, Prez. I just don't think of myself as any sort of leader, even though others think otherwise."

"Leaders don't think like leaders, until it's absolutely necessary," Keith explained. "We're brothers, first and foremost. A brother protects his younger siblings, and offers advice to those that ask for it, from the perspective of the person that asked. We weren't leaders and generally don't act like leaders. Very much like wanting to see two assholes were tied up, and then spitting in their faces." Watching Neil evilly grin and blush, Tad cracked up. Carter and Doug evilly snickered.

"Be true to yourselves," Prez reminded.

Carter said, "I think we are being truthful. We've only been here three days."

Prez smiled, "Chris, Lance, Scott, and Travis got here Friday. Jay and Erik got here Saturday morning. Monday afternoon, Alden saw how you four helped Jason Mullins. I read a note about it. You were here little more than a day and did that. Without your help, Jason might've been down in the dumps the rest of the day. Instead, he and JD are becoming a close couple and couldn't be happier."

"Lance and Scott knew each other for three days before becoming partners," Keith continued. "Erik and Trav were a case of love at first sight, as were John and Stephen, and Angelo and Reggie. The latter couple took a few days to deal with new feelings, but the results are positive. The amount of time a couple needs only depends on the couple."

Not realizing he was being watched and listened to, Prez explained, "There are going to be five active bases in this division someday. The four hundred kids we have now will become more like two thousand, and they'll need good role models. I'm thinking of way more than you four as Core Rimmers. My thoughts since day one were to fill all six townhomes at each base with Core Rimmer families. I'm considering some very special straight couples too, like Horacio and Sonia, and Craig and Felicity. They're unique circumstances, which means some agreements need to be made. We started with eight leaders for eighty-seven kids, so I'd like to keep it with that ratio, or try to do a little better than eleven-to-one. Six townhouses with a leadership couple each makes twelve Core Rimmers for three hundred and fifty kids on each base. That's nowhere near eleven-to-one; it's more like thirty-to-one, so you see the long term problem. Right now we've got twenty-four leaders and three-hundred and ninety-five kids. That ratio is about seventeen-to-one; it's still not good enough for every kid to feel cared for and secure."

Standing behind Prez, Cody Wilkins introduced himself and his partner to the teenagers at the table. Cody then explained, "Typical military protocol is a ten-to-one ratio between enlisted and officers. This is a civilian organization, but the ratio should still be as close to ten-to-one as is reasonable. That way, when the unforeseen issue crops up, it can be dealt with, and still have sufficient leadership available for the remaining troops."

Sheldon smiled, "We heard what happened this morning from the AIs. Cody figured it would cause some confusion. Since Cody hasn't had the chance to visit, and I haven't been here to meet anyone yet, tonight was the night to make the time."

Locking eyes with Cody, Prez scowled, "Ten-to-one, huh?"

"You're not military," Cody repeated, "but I'm sure you realize that there always needs to be a few leaders left here, for the Clan, when the majority have a job to do."

"We have dorm leadership teams too," Keith reminded. "If we included dorm leaders in the calculations, we actually could come close to ten-to-one... closer than we are anyway."

Cody asked, "How many dorm leaders are there?"

"The intention is for a pair for each floor of each dorm," Prez answered. "Right now, there are ten at Ewa Beach and four here, so we're even light on dorm leaders."

Cody scowled, "What's that work out to in numbers?"

Doing the calculations in his head, Prez sniggered, "Twenty-six-to-one." Keith, Cody and Sheldon cracked up. Prez giggled, "Yes, the problem is only getting larger."

"Growing pains," Sheldon chuckled.

Cody prompted, "You'll need to address this, Prez."

"What would you suggest?" Prez asked.

"Continue what you're already doing, on a larger scale," Cody answered.

Tapping is sub-vocal, Prez called, "Alden, we'll need chairs lined up on the Oneula Beach stage for all the Core Rimmers, and connect me to the PA at both bases, bro."

Alden replied, "Go ahead, Prez."

"Attention all Rimmers and all available adults," Prez announced. "We need to have a meeting at the Oneula Beach auditorium. Everyone that isn't occupied needs to be there for this meeting. That's all for now, I'll see you there." Returning his attention to Cody, Prez asked, "Would you mind attending and being available for consultation."

"We'll be there," Cody smiled, "but you already had a clue, Prez. I'd doubt you'll need much from me, but Sheldon and I will be in front row seats, just in case."

Kids already in the Oneula Beach dining room began taking trays to the kitchen and others left for the auditorium. Kids from Ewa Beach began filing through dimensional doors and into the Oneula Beach dining room. AJ, Jerry, Kaleo, Tory, Sean and Troy gathered near Prez and Keith to find out what was going on. Drew, Corey and their sons transported to the Oneula Beach auditorium and began powering the place up.

Chapter 28

Oneula Beach Auditorium

Wednesday, November 10, 2004 7:07PM HTZ

With the entire leadership team gathered on chairs on the stage, Prez checked with Alden to be sure everyone was present in the audience. Once he heard that only those adults who were working or sleeping weren't there, Prez stood and went to center stage. He took a microphone from its stand and joked, "This auditorium isn't as big as Ewa Beach, but we're still barely putting a dent in the number of seats available." Laughter and giggling erupted from the crowd of about seven hundred.

Prez said, "This morning's confusion made it very clear that the leadership of this division needs additional help. Initially, Erik and Travis were dealing with one hundred and forty-four of you. Thanks to another group of eight, things were kept kewl and everybody was happy. Still, that's a hundred and forty-four kids with ten acting as leaders, a fourteen-to-one ratio."

"Let me remind you that when the division began, we had eighty-seven kids and eight leaders, which is an eleven-to-one ratio. By Wednesday morning, we rescued an additional sixty-three, bringing our total to one-hundred and fifty kids, but we only added four Core Rimmers. By Thursday afternoon, we were at two-hundred-twenty-two rescued kids and a nineteen-to-one ratio of kids to leaders. Right now, we're at three-hundred and ninety-four kids to twenty-four leaders, which is a sixteen-to-one ratio. This weekend, another eighty level three orphans will begin showing up, pushing the numbers back up to a nineteen-to-one ratio."

"Not to mention, every time something happens, like Wednesday night's orphanage rescues, and Thursday night's insanity, and Friday's Battle Of Earth repercussions, and this morning's trip to Charleston AI hospital, all you guys and girls are left to fend for yourselves. This is not what I envisioned or expected, but it has shed light on the fact that we need more Core Rimmers, and more dorm leadership too. For the dorm leaders, I think we should have two per hall, so that number needs to double from what it is now."

Seeing Bruce Downing shuffling down the row where the majority of his adopted family were sitting, Prez lowered the microphone, paused and grinned. Jogging down the aisle, Bruce loudly giggled, "WHAT? Joel made me a leader too! I can count chairs. You've been including me in the numbers, so get me a chair, Alden." The audience cracked up, the loudest from Jim and Jen Hundser and the Core Rimmers' sons.

Chuckling, Prez told the crowd, "The next thing I was going to say was that we need more chairs up here for Core Rimmers. Alden, please get thirteen more chairs for our new Core Rimmers, dude." On his way across the stage, Bruce passed by Prez and got a pat on the back. Bruce took the chair beside Stephen Marr, at the end of the row.

The chatter from the audience made Prez evilly snicker, "Oh, I've had several of you in mind for future additions, but was biding my time, waiting for each of the selections to make their interests known. Instead, we'll just have to wait and see what jobs each decides to have. I'd also like to share what I told Horacio, Sonia and Alec Triggs just a little while ago; that there are straight dudes that I would very much like to make Core Rimmers too. Sonia admitted that she wouldn't like having to pass judgement on anyone, and that's part of my dilemma; Clan leaders work in teams of two. Horacio is extremely capable, and Alec proved he can excel at the job, by rescuing his younger brothers, and putting his own well being at risk. Passing over someone only because of their sex and sexuality won't cut it in this division; we could get too large to do that. What I intend to do is bide my time, watch and listen to straight couples. If there are straight couples that can do the job, then we'll have male and female members of the Core team. Alternatively, I could pick two dudes from two couples and discover if they can act as a team."

Turning to see that extra chairs had been set up, Prez then faced the audience and announced, "We're going to go in order, according to those who we've known the longest. When that's done, we'll get some dorm leadership volunteers. Lastly, I'd like to have input from the adults, on whatever they've noticed lacking or missing entirely."

After a long pause to carefully watch the audience, Prez called, "Aaron Farris and Stephen Wicks, come on up here." Both thirteen-year-old boys stood. The audience began applauding as they shuffled across the row of seats and hurried down the aisle toward the stage. Before the applause died down, Prez called, "Keanu Hekekoa and Liki Kealoha, we need you." The applause swelled, and as it diminished again, Prez chuckled, "Tony Lanning and Ray Varga, dorm leadership won't cut it for you two, you're promoted." The audience cracked up. The latter two named boys also stood and broke into giggles.

On his way down the aisle with Ray at his side, Tony laughed, "Why did you bother making us dorm leaders in the first place, Prez?"

Prez sniggered, "I was giving you time to get used to the idea. There, you've had about seven hours. Are you used to it now?"

Over the sound of the applauding and giggling audience, Ray and Tony howled, "I guess so!"

"Neil Green and Tad Markell, come on down." When the two fifteen-year-olds stood, Prez announced, "Carter Rackham and Doug Zimmerman, you too."

The latter two boys stood but didn't leave their seats. Carter called, "Make us dorm leaders, Prez. We're not really as ready as you are." The audience quieted to hushed whispering.

Nodding, Doug offered, "Maybe the next time you're in a promoting mood, Prez."

"I'll check with you privately?" Prez confirmed.

Doug nodded and Carter said, "That sounds good," and they sat back down.

Prez smiled, "I'll be honest, the fact that you dudes refused in front of almost seven hundred people makes me even more sure that you're leaders." In the audience, evil snickering broke loose and heads nodded.

Arriving on stage, Neil sniggered, "I don't suppose we could take dorm leader jobs too?"

"You could," Prez grinned, "but I'd only promote you in the morning, Spitting Rimmers." Tad, Neil, all the already seated Core Rimmers, and the audience roared. Prez chuckled, "For those of you that don't know, Neil made his exit from the Woodlake orphanage by spitting in the faces of his two care-givers." Again, the audience cracked up and there was scattered groaning. Prez chortled, "The really funny part is, Sean and Troy sentenced them to life imprisonment, and the goobers were still on their faces when they were transported out! For all we know, they've still got their marks of appreciation, and Neil's cold too."

Pausing for the audience laughter and applause to die down, Prez lowered the microphone and joined the rest of the team who were congratulating Neil and Tad. Returning to center stage, Prez smiled, "Since Carter and Doug aren't quite ready, a modification is required. These next two dudes are very recent selections, that I had intended to give a few more days before tapping. They probably think that they've slid under my radar, but I saw them together at last night's water blaster battle, again during lunch this afternoon, and again at dinner this evening, sitting all alone, having intimate meals." Moos and giggling erupted.

"I also saw them at the pools this afternoon," Prez continued, "and they were still keeping to themselves, trying their best to be discrete. Unfortunately for them, several telepaths around shared what they knew with John, who has shared that knowledge with the rest of the team. I've been watching half the couple since Sunday, and knew there was leadership potential there. His other half just showed up yesterday, the son of an employee, and made his presence known to several more Core Rimmers. And this dude is another good guitar player, so we'll have to find out what he can do, when he's not cuddled up to his partner." More giggling burst from the audience, and then Kade, Karey, Brad and Cameron began loudly hooting. Prez chuckled, "Everyone already up here agrees, Kassidy Oldcambus and Matt Thornton, come join us."

The moment he bounced up onto his feet, Matt excitedly shouted, "KEWL!" Kassidy, Jeremiah Thornton and the rest of the audience cracked up. On the way down the aisle, hand-in-hand with Kassidy, Matt began praying and thanking the creator for making another of his biggest and most important dreams come true. Those near the aisle heard parts of Matt's prayers and howled hysterically. Out in the audience, amongst the other adult employees, Matt's father proudly glowed.

Once Kassidy and Matt had been greeted and took seats on stage, Prez turned to the audience, grinning, "There are three chairs remaining. The problem is, the Clan generally works in teams of two, but we have three up here already who don't have partners. Let's deal with Reyes first."

From the audience, Ryan shouted, "No way, Prez!" Reyes started giggling.

Knowing what kind of reaction it would cause, Prez playfully suggested, "Then I'll give the job to Paul, when he arrives." Covering his mouth, Reyes cracked up.

"OH, SURE!" Ryan incredulously hollered, and then stood up. On his way down the aisle, Ryan bitched, "The Clan is supposed to have evidence, telepathically scan prisoners, and THEN deliver justice. Paul would kill first and ask questions later... MAYBE... IF HE FELT LIKE THINKING OF THE QUESTIONS!" The audience lost it and fell apart, hysterically laughing.

Prez chuckled, "Alden, get a PADD for Ryan and load Pissed Off Chickens on it. I get the feeling he'll appreciate it soon enough."

Climbing the stage steps, Ryan softly grumbled, "I'm going to kill my brother." Reyes stood and met his boyfriend. They kissed and went to find chairs.

Watching almost the entire row of seated Core Rimmers shift to make a two chairs available for Reyes and Ryan, Prez went to Nathan Hayes, teasing, "Found a boyfriend yet, Nathan?"

"Confirmed, just last night," Nathan giggled.

"If he's your partner, I approve," Prez said.

Standing up, Nathan leaned close to the microphone and called,

"Brice, right here by me." Shivering with delight, Brice Glotzbecker stood and ran down the aisle to join his boyfriend up on the stage. The thought of becoming a leader never occurred to Brice. Widely smiling, he could barely believe that in a single day his best friend became his boyfriend, and now he was a Core Rimmer too.

Once Brice was greeted, Prez went down to the end of the row where Bruce was sitting. Facing the audience, Prez gleamed, "John isn't the youngest Core Rimmer anymore, Bruce is. There's only one way to give Bruce a partner that will keep him safe from harm, under every circumstance, and his name is Skylar Richardson."

Skylar popped onto the stage, into the seat directly beside Bruce. John and Stephen began giggling before Bruce turned to Skylar. Seeing purple eyes, Bruce squealed, "You're teaming me up with a Mikyvis? SWEET!" Everyone howled laughing, including Prez and Skylar.

"Does that mean you get to teach me to kiss?" Skylar giggled.

Intensely blushing, Bruce giggled, "Maybe. I guess we'll have to teach each other." Hearing that, Skylar adjusted his height and weight from an apparent ten-year-old to that of an eight-year-old, and cutely blinked at Bruce. "That's more like it!" Bruce cheered.

Everything paused for the hysterics that followed, and only got louder when Skylar and Bruce disappeared for about ten-seconds. When they returned, Skylar and Bruce were cuddled up close. No one knew where they went, how long they were gone, nor did anyone really want to ask the questions.

When the audience and Core Rimmers had calmed somewhat, Prez returned to center stage, breathlessly chuckling, "There you have it; thirty-eight Core Rimmers for three-hundred and ninety-four kids.

We're back to an eleven-to-one ratio. Now some of us can go visit more level three orphans tomorrow, and there will still be plenty of Core Rimmers here."

Before Prez had finished speaking, groups of kids and adults in the audience stood and applauded. Lowering the microphone, Prez prompted the team of Core Rimmers to stand, move forward on the stage and hold hands. When kids started taking their seats and the applause dwindled, the team of Core Rimmers returned to their chairs.

Remaining at center stage, Prez reminded, "During this weekend, we'll be gaining another eighty kids, which means we'll need another eight Core Rimmers, so I'm no where near done adding to the team. Now, for our dorm leadership; according to Alden, we'll need twenty-six dorm leaders total, two per hallway, but I know we already have a team of three in one hall, namely the Nash brothers and Owen Reed." A line of twenty-seven chairs appeared before the stage. Prez prompted, "If all the existing dorm leaders would come down and take seats in front of the stage, please?"

Horacio, Sonia, Nell, Molly, Corbin, Dominic, Craig, Felicity, Elise, Phil, Owen, Adrienne, Bianca, Carter and Doug stood up. While they made their way down the aisles, Prez reminded, "Dorm leaders are the big brothers and big sisters for the kids in their dorms, and going forward, for their hallways. I'm counting fifteen on their way to chairs, so we still need twelve dorm leaders. Dorm leaders help their kids when someone gets sick and needs a doctor, or if someone needs help with homework, they'll find a helper, or if you decide you need anything for yourself, or for your dorm common rooms. Anything dorm leaders need that they can't get, they'll get help from Core Rimmers."

Noticing Roy and Pete coming down the aisle last minute, Prez paused and then chuckled, "Your girlfriends are down here, so you dudes are volunteering?"

Pete sniggered, "We're generally with our ladies anyway."

"Might as well, since we're occasionally doing the job," Roy chuckled.

"Okay, we still need ten more volunteers," Prez smiled. "According to Alden, we already have a special circumstance brewing at Ewa Beach dormitory one. There are now six dorm one leaders, but four are in the shorter halls, leaving Horacio and Sonia with larger halls and more kids. Now, I know there are other straight couples living in dorm one. We need another guy and another girl, preferably already in the longer hallways." Standing with his girlfriend, Cassie Cornwell, Hank Leve loudly said, "I'm right across the hall from Horacio, but Cassie is upstairs with Helena, in the short hall. Will that work, Prez?"

Prez smiled, "It could, if Cassie and Helena would be willing to find someone to swap rooms with. It's important, so that little kids or sick kids aren't searching for help when they need it. Alden could help transport stuff, so you're not actually moving all your belongings, but just changing rooms."

Looking down the row, Cassie asked Helena, "What do you think?"

Without standing, Helena shrugged, and then giggled, "All the rooms are almost the same anyway. That's fine."

Facing the stage and Prez, Cassie shouted, "We'll get it worked out, Prez."

"Excellent!" Prez cheered, and then prompted, "Come take seats with your team mates. While we're at it, Alden, let's get signs made and posted, so it's obvious which rooms have dorm leaders." Prez paused to listen to Alden in his sub-vocal, then said, "We only need two dudes for the long hall of Ewa Beach dorm two." When there was silence and little activity from the guys, Prez sniggered, "Come on, dudes! Need I remind you that there's a beach house on Kaho'olawe you'll get to visit now and then?"

Abruptly, eight teenagers from that hallway stood at once. The audience, the dorm leaders already seated and the Core Rimmers cracked up.

"Okay," Prez chuckled, "Christian, you're in the kitchen almost every day. I hate to tell you, but none of you are here to work; you're here to learn and be a kid. It wouldn't be good for you to work two odd jobs, one of which is practically round the clock." When Christian and his roommate, Daryl sat down, Prez said, "Another reminder is that there are lots of odd jobs that stronger teenagers are qualified for, most importantly is running movie projectors here and at Ewa Beach. Our youngest kids would love to see movies more often."

"YEAH!" Almost two hundred little kids loudly agreed.

Sniggering, Kelly Littlepage hollered, "We'll need someone to show us how to load and run the projectors, Prez." Kelly and his roommate, Hugh Gartrell sat down.

Prez replied, "If we don't get around to it tomorrow, then definitely Friday night." Christian and Daryl started chatting with Kelly and Hugh. Between the four of them, they could run projectors at both bases. Prez then prompted, "Darren, Lance, Cody and Dominic come down here. All four of you are capable and could excel at the job. Alden, get Horacio a coin and we'll flip for it, like a football game."

Soon, the four named boys were gathered around Horacio, who showed them that it was a real coin, with two different sides, a head and a tail. While that was going on, Prez said, "Ewa Beach dorm three, we need two guys for the long hall."

Raising their hands, level one orphanage rescues, Terrance Parkinson and Mike Busse shouted, "Here, Prez."

"Good job, dudes," Prez smiled. "Come sit with your teammates." Terrance and Mike came out of the audience seconds before Cody and Dominic started up the aisle to return to their seats. Prez announced, "Darren DeVault and Lance Elling are dorm leaders for the long hall of dorm two. Moving on to Oneula Beach dorm one, Carter and Doug have the long hall, so we need two more guys for the short hall, and two girls for the long hall upstairs." Quickly, Lee Bennett and Carlos Burns stood and came down the aisle. Owen could barely believe two of his ex-roommates had volunteered. With a little encouragement from the girls nearby, Catherine Montgomery and Jeanette Craig came down the opposite aisle. Seeing their orphanage sisters, Neil and Tad began applauding, and told the other Core Rimmers who the two girls were.

"And two dudes for Oneula Beach dorm two?" Prez announced. Six teenage boys sitting close together in two rows began chattering. Other nearby younger boys shouted their thoughts. About a minute later, Darrell Sparks and Virgil Austin stood. Prez introduced them to the audience as they came down the aisle.

"Now we're set with fully staffed leadership teams," Prez proudly beamed. "When the newbies show over the weekend, we'll add some more Core Rimmers and dorm leaders as soon as possible." The audience again applauded. Prez smiled, "Now let's hear suggestions from the adults."

Standing up, Jen Hundser loudly said, "FYS has been making plans."

Prez said, "So you don't have to yell, come up and use a microphone, mom. Any other adults with ideas can come up here too." Prez put the microphone back in its stand then stepped back to join the rest of the Core Rimmer team.

During the relatively quiet moments it took Jen Hundser to make it down the aisle and to the stage, from way up near the auditorium's ceiling, singing was heard. "Someone's a rockin' my dreamboat, someone's invading my dreams. I was sailing along, peaceful and calm, suddenly something went wrong." Swooshing down to the seated audience, Davie Owens caused gasping and screaming from kids and adults alike.

Dillon and Jonah howled laughing, "Davie!"

"We told you there were angels in the family!" Dillon giggled.

Jonah laughed, "You're takin' lessons from the seagulls now?"

"Dem birds are stoopit!" Davie sniggered, and paused to hover over Dillon and Jonah. Facing the stage, where all the Core Rimmers except Reyes and Ryan hung their jaws to the floor, Davie explained, "I've been watching quietly, making sure everything goes according to plan." Up on stage and clasping his hands, Matt Thornton softly prayed. Davie giggled, "Mathew, it's really happening, just like the last day has really happened. Patience earned you the boyfriend and partner of your dreams, and a leadership role you only prayed might happen, so be patient now, okay?" Speechless, Matt rapidly nodded. Davie giggled, "Sorry for the interruption. I'll watch and wait," and then faded away.

Arriving at the stage, Jen adjusted the mic in the stand, and then said, "What I have to say will be anti-climatic after an angel. We're making arrangements to interface with the community. The first of many opportunities is to have some of our parents talk with the parents of gay, lesbian and transgendered children. One of the saddest situations is when parents believe that they have brought children into this world to be what they, the parents desire. That's only the first of the planned interfaces, but there are others we're still discussing.

"Also, we'd like to present opportunities for the community to interface with us. What we're hoping for are community volunteers to teach our kids. Jason Taylor would likely become a leader for those men who would like to coach sports, like football, basketball and tennis. Jeremiah Thornton and Roy Combs have expressed interest in joining Jason for our new athletics department."

Troy stood, calling, "Aunt Jen?" He went to stand beside her and offered, "We'll get some places built in the Morale section of our web site, so anyone interested in sports can sign up. That data can be made available to the coaches, so we can start building teams." Finished for the moment, he returned to his chair. Toy Rimmers softly chatted about building the suggested interface.

Jen continued, "Several of the women have suggested getting arts and crafts classes set up for our younger children. Dance classes are something boys and girls can participate in together. Hula dance lessons are another opportunity we could check into. Perhaps some of our young men would like to learn Hawaiian Fire Dancing. Anything that any of you are interested in, simply let Alden know, he'll organize the data and make it available to FYS. Let me remind you that there are very few activities that need be strictly separated by sex. I know that both of our male doctors relax with needlepoint, crocheting and knitting, because it keeps their surgical skills fresh.

"Of course, all the volunteers coming on base would be scanned just as all employees have been. Every child here will always feel safe on our bases, and our volunteers won't have free run of the grounds; they will have FYS representatives with them at all times. Similarly, when our adults go off base for meetings in the community, our security and as much extra security as needed will be present. Our primary goal is to prove to our communities that Clan Short ideals are worth their time, consideration, and volunteer efforts.

"Since what FYS does is dependent upon what our children are interested in, that's all I have for now," Jen finished. "Please let Alden know if any specific activities interest you."

Standing up and going to the microphone, Troy said, "We'll get an online suggestion box set up, on the Morale section of our web site too, Aunt Jen. That way, anyone that has an idea can share it privately." He returned to his seat, and then Prez stood up.

Standing up, Craig Nash loudly said, "I've had a brief chat with Jason Taylor about getting soccer teams organized. We're thinking for three age groups; five- to nine-year-olds, ten- to twelve-year-olds, and thirteen and up. Depending upon how many sign up, we'll adjust accordingly."

Jen and Prez met in the middle of the stage. Only the other Core Rimmers heard Jen tell Prez, "Last night around nine-thirty, Alden told us that he was very disappointed, because he couldn't play in the second water blaster war." Many of the Core Rimmers softly chortled. Jen told Prez, "I have another son pending that I'm looking forward to seeing and holding. Make it happen tomorrow, Preston. Your father and I will want to be there too. Of course, given Alden's natural abilities, he'll want to be a leader, as soon as he has a boyfriend."

Obediently nodding, Prez admitted, "Alden hadn't told me that he had been accepted by a family."

"He asked and we answered early this morning," Jen grinned. "He wanted me to share the news."

Turning to Drew and Corey, Prez checked, "Can that happen tomorrow?"

Pointing at his sub-vocal, Drew chuckled, "As soon as the decision was made, Alden and Stevie told Marc, Danny, Caleb and Noah. Once we finish at Blank Children's Hospital tomorrow, we can complete the process tomorrow afternoon."

"Tomorrow's lunch time is booked," Prez smiled.

"It won't take too long, Prez," Drew said. "A couple of minutes to transfer data and memories, then jump start his heart. It'll take far longer to make sure he's okay and then start the dunks." All thirty-eight Core Rimmers evilly snickered and some rubbed their hands in anticipation. Across Core Rimmer comm-badges, Alden cracked up.

Jen went to the stage stairs and returned to the audience. Prez returned to center stage and raised the microphone stand, beaming, "With thirty-eight Core Rimmers and twenty-seven dorm leaders, we're now at a six-to-one ratio. Tomorrow morning, there will be plenty of leadership around. I'd like to make one other change that I feel is important. Occasionally, communications need to be private or silent. Alden, get all the new Core Rimmers and all the dorm leaders PADDs and sub-vocals... please, little brother?"

Over Prez's comm-badge and picked up by the microphone, everyone heard Alden insanely giggling. On the laps of the new Core Rimmers and all the dorm leaders appeared PADDs and sub-vocals. Prez grinned, "You'd better stop calling me 'boss' immediately, Alden. Every slip is another dunk, and another hour with Grandma Morrison."

"EEK!" Alden squealed. Out in the audience, the entire Taylor family roared laughing.

Skylar and Bruce called, "Hey, Prez?"

Turning to his little brother and divisional Mikyvis, Prez saw them waving him closer. Prez went to them, and Skylar giggled, "The whole auditorium is a time bubble. When everyone leaves, they'll see only a minute or so has passed."

Bruce smiled, "Now you, all the Core Rimmers, and all the dorm leaders need to go to Archmania." He helplessly giggled, "You were there soon after me and Sky arrived, and we'll be there still, even though we're here now, but that's the way it goes. It's a team building meeting with everyone, and then some rehearsals, and then you can get your concert tour started." Rapidly blinking, Prez couldn't believe his young foster brother had just spoke in a time loop, like it was no big deal.

"It was all your idea!" Skylar laughed, "We just happened to already be there."

Sadly shaking his head, Prez smirked, "I love having my thoughts regurgitated back to me before I ever say a word to anyone." Bruce and Skylar cracked up and remained laughing while Prez told the Core Rimmers and dorm leaders to hang back for their first meeting. He then told the rest of the audience, "Y'all can go enjoy the rest of your night, and reset your watches. All our sons and their boyfriends, please hang here with us."

Among the Core Rimmer sons, Dee was bringing Corbin Reid up to the stage. After returning the microphone to the stand, Prez turned to the large group seated and grinned. Derrick, Mike and Keith softly sniggered. Bruce, Sean, Corey and Stephen began giggling. All the newest Core Rimmers glanced up and down the row, wondering what was so funny. Prez chuckled, "I really thought it would take much longer than eleven days to grow the Core team this large."

Bruce, Skylar, Keith, Derrick, Mike, Drew, Corey, John and Stephen went to stand with Prez. Keith whispered to Prez, "If you're thinking of getting the concert tour started too, then let's invite KC, Fred, Joey and Jerry." With a confirming kiss, Keith called for the latter four to come to the stage.

John asked Prez, "Since Robbie Taylor is coming with us, would it be okay if his three brothers and their boyfriends come too?" He then quickly explained, "I could get Intel training done with the quadruple Rs."

"Sure, that works, bro," Prez replied, and then waved the dorm leaders up onto the stage, grinning, "You guys and gals are coming with us for a team building session." Being part of the leadership team, Lindsay Gibbons ran down the aisle to join everyone else on stage. Out in the audience, Ralphie, Pat, Ronnie, Garrett, Richie and Theo turned around and raced down the aisle to the stage.

Reappearing above the audience seats, Davie announced in a booming voice, "Alec and Brad Triggs, Chauncey Eckhart, Rikko, Cameron Combs, Kade and Karey Oldcambus, Tanner and Toby Stoeher, you're invited along too."

Turning to the hovering angel, Prez chuckled, "Are we leaving anyone here?"

"Plenty, for now," Davie giggled.

Prez playfully wondered, "Dare I ask?"

Davie laughed, "Providence?"

Tapping Prez on the arm, John giggled, "Partially to keep brothers together, and partially so I can train additions to my Intel team."

Tapping his nose, indicating John was on target, Davie giggled, and with a bright flash of light, disappeared. Jonah uncontrollably laughed, "What a ham!"

The dorm leadership group stood and began climbing onto the stage. Prez explained, "For you newbies that haven't already figured it out, most of what I do as Head Rimmer is allocate resources. I can't possibly do everything for every kid, which is why this Clan needs each and every one of you. It'll seem like we're gone for a long while..." Bruce and Skylar broke into giggles, interrupting Prez and getting everyone's attention. Prez helplessly chuckled, "But we'll be returning here tonight."

A lot of chatter erupted, wondering what each of them would need to pack and bring along. The Core Rimmers who had been to Archnania before assured them that they wouldn't need to pack a thing, telling them that everything needed would be supplied by the Archnanians. Skylar giggled, "They made my bro, Dylan royalty, which indirectly makes all of you the family of royalty."

Popping onto the stage, Dylan cutely smiled, "Just call me Prince Dylan while we're there."

Skylar laughed, "They do not have to call you Prince!" Wide-eyed, Bruce scampered away from Skylar. In a blink, the two Mikyvis were wrestling and rolling around the stage, occasionally phasing out and back in again.

Stopping near Prez and Keith, Bruce giggled, "I got caught in one of their wrestling matches once before, and will never let it happen again!"

Keith chuckled, "It was that scary?"

Shrugging, Bruce smiled, "Not what they do to each other, but just the places they're phasing to is plenty."

Mike asked his little sister, "What're you doin'?"

Knowing it would annoy her big brother, Lindsay grinned and reminded, "Prez made me a leader too. This is a leadership meeting."

"It's a leadership meeting that's going off planet," Mike growled. "You're staying here."

Firmly planting her feet and wrapping her arms around her chest, Lindsay stubbornly insisted, "I'm going!"

Trying to avoid the wrestling Mikyvis, Drew went to his little brother, saying, "Bruce, the last time we were there, it was all dudes, except for Janice Hernandez."

Bruce offered, "They'll know enough to supply everything the girls need too. Like your last visit, they'll arrange for whatever you need. Girls who don't have boyfriends can have separate bedrooms. It'll be the same for unattached straight guys. Straight couples can have another room, and the little guys will have their own room too." Glancing around the large group, Bruce assured, "You'll all have great times, and get to see a couple of concerts too. Don't worry about anything, it'll be fun."

Prez, Keith, Corey, Drew, John, Stephen and Derrick surrounded Mike and Lindsay, who were still arguing, until the latter two noticed they were encircled. At the pause in sibling rivalry, Prez locked eyes with Mike and sighed, "She's got to come too, bro. I made Lindsay part of the leadership team, mostly because she proved her value, without any of us dudes knowing about it, and besides, I promised." Gesturing over his shoulder, Prez shared, "If I break this promise, then there's another bunch of female dorm leaders who won't trust me."

Noticing all the female dorm leaders were paying close attention to the disagreement, Mike grumbled, "I'm not going to play big brother, watching her every day."

John grinned, "You won't have to," and tapped his forehead, reminding, "There's always a spare room for my best friend."

Stephen giggled, "Phenomenal cosmic powers."

Dee, Richie, Bruce and Geoff loudly laughed, "In a cute itty bitty body." John cheekily grinned. Almost all the other teens and tweens gathered on the stage cracked up. Most pleased, all the female dorm leaders applauded.

Abruptly, Skylar returned to Bruce's side and reached for his hand. Dylan appeared in the center of the group, calmly asking, "Is everybody ready?"

Although most were uncertain, they answered that they were ready. Prez checked, "What about Time Touched, Dylan? As far as I know, about half the band is scattered around, and doing Lord knows what."

Dylan grinned, "You're thinking linear time, Prez. Care to rephrase the question?"

"Never mind," Prez sniggered. "Will they have knotted spaghetti and meatballs?"

"We'll ask," Dylan giggled, and teleported the entire group of over a hundred to Archmania.

About ten-seconds later, while Bruce and Skylar watched from their chairs, the entire group of Core Rimmers and dorm leaders returned. There were some apparent visible changes, primarily clothes and hair length, because they had been gone about a month. Also, some new partnerships had been forged; Helena and Lance Elling were holding hands, as were Darren and Adrienne, and Lee Bennett and Bianca, and Darrel and Virgil, and Dee and Corbin. Surprising even those that had watched it happen, Mike Busse and his roommate Terrance Parkinson were a couple. Obviously, they were a newer couple, in a tight embrace and passionately kissing upon arrival. Also evident were the friendships between Angelo, Reggie, Tony, Ray, Kassidy and Matt. Similarly, Corey, Drew, John, Stephen, Phil, Owen, Nathan and Brice had become much closer, and so had Chris, Jay, Travis, Erik, Lance, Scott, Troy and Sean. Lastly, each Core Rimmer and many of their sons now had phasenmorphs on their wrists.

Due to a few rescues that had occurred while they were away, Erik and Travis were fathers of eleven-year-old Syd, and Syd's ten-year-old brother, Drake. Scott and Lance were fathers of ten-year-old twins named Grant and Krane. Chatting up a storm, the larger group split in half and headed for the stage steps. Eager to return to their dorm rooms and move into townhouses with their sons, Erik, Travis, Grant, Krane, Syd, Drake, Scott and Lance led the pack out of the auditorium.

Waiting outside the auditorium for the Core Rimmers was a small group of little boys. Five-year-old Colin Townsend and seven-year-old Christian Cole immediately went to Neil and Tad, begging to be adopted. All were from the Woodlake orphanage. Neil and Tad expected to be hijacked, but not quite so fast.

Likewise, six-year-olds Don Lien and Rusty Ogburn, and seven-year-old Jacob Bartholomew ran to Chris and Jay, already calling Chris 'daddy', and Jay 'poppa'. Hysterical Core Rimmers roared laughing. At that time, Corbin acted upon his thoughts, and asked Chris and Jay to adopt him too. Thrilled to the core, Don, Rusty and Jacob surrounded Corbin and held on tightly.

With happy tears pooling in his eyes, Corbin glanced around the three little guys, carefully asking, "You guys want me as your big brother?"

Don and Russ rapidly nodded. Jacob smiled up, explaining, "You want daddy and poppa, so we got the most important thing already. I ain't too much older than Russ or Don, so I can't really be the big brother."

Having spent a month with Corbin, and knowing very well what kinds of horrors the eleven-year-old lived through, Jay asked, "What do you say, Corbin; are you ready to be a big brother?"

Uncertainly, Corbin scanned his group of friends, and saw the quadruple Rs, Billy, Jonah, Sammy and Dee nodding their heads. Wiping the tears from his eyes, Corbin widely smiled, "I'll try my very best."

Chris smiled, "No one could ask for more, Corbin."

Giggling Rimmer sons greeted their new cousins. Pausing his family, Prez set up his tricorder for more adoptions. There and then, outside the Oneula Beach auditorium, the entire group stopped to witness the first of what was sure to be many more adoptions.

With the congratulations slowing down, Prez chuckled, "Okay, we have some housing issues that need to be resolved."

"There are three free townhouses here, and only one free at Ewa Beach," Keith reminded.

"But there are condo apartments available," Troy interjected. Focusing on Eric, Lance, Scott and Travis, he revealed, "The top three floors of Condo A are available. They're five bedrooms and four bathrooms, occupying the entire floor, so they're huge."

Derrick reminded, "My dad has plans drawn up for Core Rimmer housing, large enough for two couples and all their sons. Until those homes are built, we'll rely on condos. Barring rain, the new condos here will be ready for occupancy tomorrow."

Travis offered, "Erik, Lance, Scott and our boys can move into a five bedroom condo. Right off the bat, we've occupied four of the five rooms. Neil and Tad can take a townhouse here. Chris and Jay can move into a townhouse at Ewa Beach. Is everybody kewl with that plan?" The sons were the first to loudly agree. Their smiling dads also agreed.

Keanu grinned, "Expect more adoptions tomorrow. Liki and I will make the rounds through our dorm tonight and see if we can start our family."

Clasping his hands together, Matt looked up at the night sky, chuckling, "Dear Lord, please give me and Kass a few more days as a couple before starting a family. I've gotta get dad used to the fact that I'm married, before dumping kids on his lap that call him grandpa." Familiar with a month's worth of Matt's prayers, Angelo and Reggie uncontrollably cracked up.

"Is that days human time or Mikyvis time?" Skylar giggled.

Angelo and Reggie began sniggering, and then recited, "We're sorry, the deity you have called is unable to answer at this time."

Wrapping an arm around Skylar's waist, Bruce grinned, "Hey Sky, in Mikyvis time, it's been a week since he asked that, ain't it?"

Focusing on Kassidy and Matt, Jay smirked, "You guys hooked up before we left, and we were gone for how long? Request denied!"

Softly chortling, Reyes and Ryan tried to slink away from the larger group unnoticed, but Jonah, Gage, Randy and Dillon caught and surrounded them. Turning to Derrick, Mike sniggered, "Which kids are old enough for a fifty-six year-old android and his partner?"

"DADDY!" Darren DeVault and Lance Elling loudly laughed.

More laughter erupted and the group began to wander off in various directions. Some went to their local dormitories and another pack went toward the dining room dimensional doors and Ewa Beach.

Little Colin looked up at Neil, softly commenting, "You look different, daddy."

"We were at a place where we could get healthier faster," Neil told his new son.

Tad told Christian and Colin, "The next time we go there, you guys are coming with us, so you can get healthier too."

Widely smiling at the memory, Neil shared, "We climbed trees while we were gone. The tree limbs actually moved to help us climb."

Both boys began giggling. As far as Colin and Christian were concerned, Neil and Tad hadn't gone anywhere, and had stepped out of the auditorium only a few minutes after they had. Christian loudly giggled, "Is it time for goofy bedtime stories, already?"

"I ain't tired yet," Colin whined through giggles.

Leaning over, Neil picked up Colin, saying, "First, we're going to move out of the dorm and into our new home. By the time we're settled there, we'll have a little time together to watch TV, and then its bath time."

Colin asked, "Do we gets to take baths with you and poppa?"

Rapidly nodding, Christian told Tad, "That's what we're 'upposed to do. Richie, Dillon, Geoffy, Scott and Jimmy says we have to, or we won't be a real family."

"Yep!" Colin cheered. "And we knows all about dicks and spermies too." He paused and then asked Neil, "Are you makin' spermies with poppa?" Watching Neil's face flush scarlet, Tad howled laughing.

Neil wondered, "When did you have this spermies chat?"

"Some in the store when we got here," Colin answered.

Christian nodded and grinned, "And more at the playgrounds."

Neil chuckled, "Me and Poppa got married while we were gone, so yeah, we make lots of spermies for each other every day."

Tad shared, "We're going to have a Vulcan bonding as soon as we can, so you two can see that we're very much in love. You guys can bathe with me and daddy, only if you promise to be real careful with our dicks."

Stopping short and causing the entire family to pause, Christian impatiently huffed, "We told you, we know. If your dicks get really big, then we stop washing right away, 'cause only daddies and poppas share spermies, and we can't make none yet. I'm thinkin' of findin' my own boyfrien' too, ya know? I don't want no other spermies but my boyfriend's, when we're way older and can make some."

"Yeah!" Colin forcefully emphasized all his new brother had said. Both fifteen-year-olds rapidly blinked, trying to process the fact that they were 'way older'.

Picking up Christian, Tad smiled, "Very kewl, dudes. We'll bathe together in our new house, and then we're all going to sleep in a really big bed together, two sons on one side and a daddy and a poppa on the other side. That'll help make us a real family."

Both little guys cheered, "SWEET!" The new family walked toward dormitory one.

Having heard all of what Colin, Christian, Neil and Tad were saying, but splitting off into the Oneula Beach dining room, Jay and Chris checked with their younger three sons to see how much they knew. Heading for the dimensional doors, Jacob giggled, "Yep, we know all that too. There's only one part we don't un'erstand too much."

Chris blinked, "Which part; being in love?"

"That's the easy part," Don giggled.

Nodding agreement, Rusty pointed out Don and Jacob, smiling, "We was best friends, and wanted you for daddies, so we could be real brothers, which is sort o' like love, but not like daddies and poppas love, b'cos we don't kiss and mess with our willies. We hugs all'a time, and like when Donnie had a bad dream, me and Jake helped."

Jacob scowled, "We heard you, and Lance and Scott, in your dorm rooms. At first there's lots of laughing and giggling, but then it gets really quiet, and then it gets really loud again, but it sounds like makin' spermies hurts. Does it hurt really bad?"

"It doesn't hurt at all," Chris sniggered, "it feels really good, like being tickled."

Processing the boys' definition of love and what they thought sex was, Jay smiled, "We moan and groan because we love each other that much, guys. The part where we're really quiet is partly because we're kissing. Also, you can't hear what we're whispering to each other between kisses. Once we move into our house, you'll hear more, and then you'll know that it never hurts. Showing how much you love someone is really the best feeling in the world."

Chris checked with Corbin, who still had Dee's hand in his. Corbin shrugged, "You know I... but that wasn't love. I watched you two, and all the Core Rimmer couples together, but I guess I'm not much smarter about this than my little brothers. It scares me a lot, ya know?"

Proudly beaming, Jay smiled at Corbin, and then glanced over at Dee, asking, "Could you let go of Corbin for a minute, please?"

Knowing that Jay had the same expression he had seen on his fathers' faces, Dee giggled, "Sure," and quickly told Corbin, "just for a minute."

Once Corbin was released, Jay paused the family. All the others heading to Ewa Beach walked around and past them. Locking eyes with Corbin, Jay smiled, "That was the perfect answer for two new dads, and more importantly, for three little brothers to hear. We're going to have a great family based completely on honesty and trust. It's sometimes really hard to be honest, but with a little trust, you know it will get better. Do you trust me and dad to show you real fatherly love?"

"Yeah," Corbin quickly answered, "I really do. I wanna believe love is good."

Kneeling down, Jay prompted, "Climb aboard for a shoulder ride."

Shocked and shivering, Corbin squealed, "Really?"

"Really," Jay replied, and leaned forward, with his neck and head low enough for Corbin. Giggling insanely, Dee helped Corbin get in position and step back. Jay's head popped between Corbin's legs, and he offered his eldest son both hands to hold. Then he stood and Corbin gasped and broke into giggles. Chris, Don, Russ and Jacob helplessly laughed.

Looking up at Jay, his new poppa, Jacob asked, "Would it be okay if we all slept together tonight? We need to see and know it's because you're so happy."

Chris checked with Jay and got a slight nod. Chris then told the boys, "You have to be real quiet, okay guys? We've been around other teenagers making love, but never young boys, and we're new fathers, and you're new sons too."

"We understand how confusing it must be," Jay calmly answered. "You can sleep with us any time any of you need to, but just this one time you can watch us make spermies, because that's very important for our sons to understand. Then you can be sure we're in love and will love each of you as our sons. It matters that you remember what you've seen us doing alone and naked, and then watch us when we're together and dressed, no matter where that might be and who we're with. All those different scenes are the same to me and daddy, because we're in love."

Wide-eyed, Rusty asked, "Like right now, you're dressed, but still in love?"

"Absolutely right now too," Chris emphatically assured all four boys. "Right now, we're becoming daddies, showing our sons that they're so special that we'll answer all your questions, even one's that are embarrassing."

"Kewl, daddy," all three boys chorused.

Looking up at Corbin, Chris said, "You can watch too."

Don looked way up at Corbin, wondering, "Why don' ya wanna see too?"

For his new son sitting on his shoulders, Jay answered, "Corbin's seen spermies, but from a bad man that didn't know anything about real love. Grown men can make spermies any time, but when there's no love there, it's just a mess to be cleaned up." Carefully looking up, Jay smiled, "If you want to watch, it'll be kewl, so you can see what love is really like."

Shrugging, Corbin said, "Maybe I will, or maybe I won't want to."

Chris promised, "Whatever you decide, we'll understand." A moment later, Chris had Don in his arms and planted against his left hip. He ordered the dimensional door, "Ewa Beach," and felt Russ taking hold of his right hand.

Following the two new families were Matt, Cassidy, Angelo, Reggie, Tony, Ray, Keanu, Liki, Stephen Wickes and Aaron Farris, none of which had sons. Although each couple had been in rooms with other gay couples, and all had been seen making love, the realization that young sons might want to witness them having sex had them mutely processing for quite a few minutes. The eight teenagers were silent until they had split off and were away from the little guys. Pausing in the quad, they weren't too sure what to say or how to begin, but small grins began forming.

Tony was the first to offer, "A month ago, I wouldn't have considered making love with Ray unless we were completely alone."

"Liki and I were sexually abused orphans, but that seems like a lifetime ago," Keanu smirked.

Nodding, Liki explained, "There were other little boys and little girls around that saw us with chubbies and bones."

Aaron sniggered, "Making love as a demonstration for boys that are our sons seems pretty impossible."

"Put yourself in the mindset of a kid," Matt instructed. "Especially now, after all that time at Archnania. What those kids said they heard, and how confused they are makes perfect sense."

Stephen giggled, "They're right on target; we start noisy and silly, get quiet for a while, and then finish loud, like we're in pain."

Angelo chortled, "How do you explain to a little kid what having an orgasm is like?"

Reggie smirked, "What's most frightening is that our little kids know so much. With all we've learned from the Archnanians, and from each other, I can honestly say that I'm a little conflicted."

Keanu nodded and admitted, "Just a few minutes ago, I was considering marching into the dorm, ready to act like a father for any kid under eleven-years-old. Suddenly, I'm far less sure of myself." The other seven teenagers softly agreed.

After another few silent moments, Matt sighed, "Okay guys, lets look at where we were at a month ago, and how we've learned to be. We all knew what an orgasm was, and what other guys could do together, but we always kept it private. By Archneanian standards, we're still like those boys; preferring to be separated by sex and sexuality. Sharing bedrooms together, we've learned it's all natural. That's where the little guys are at, it's all natural and kewl, except that little bit of time when we're getting loud again. They don't understand precisely what they can't possibly understand. We can all teach kids, and protect kids too. It's a balancing act, sure, I agree, but we can do it."

"There is something positive to be said when we're all together in a room making love," Kassidy reminded.

"Oh my God," Reggie droned. Remembering some of the post-orgasm remarks made, and others received at Archneania, Angelo began giggling. Soon, the remaining teenagers were laughing.

Taking Stephen's hand, Aaron laughed, "Let's make some spermies and then we can find sons."

"Sounds like a plan!" Keanu and Liki cheerfully acknowledged. Since all four lived in dorm one, the race for their rooms immediately began.

Turning to Tony, Ray, Angelo and Reggie, Matt chuckled,

"We've gotta tell my dad that we're married."

"I want some alone time with Ray," Tony easily shared. "We'll get together again after."

Backing away from Tony, Ray giggled, "I told you, I don't need anyone else's encouragements, just your grunts." Ray took off for dorm three, with Tony grunting up a storm and only a pace behind him.

Nodding, Angelo giggled, "We'll leave our door unlocked and the other bed clear."

"See y'all in a little bit," Kassidy sniggered. Matt and Kassidy started walking toward condominium B. Goosed by Reggie, Angelo cracked up and tore for dorm three.

* * * * *

Columbia, SC

Wednesday, November 10, 2004 11:32PM EST

Beginning to wake, Paul remembered where he was. Thankfully, a small night light was on in the loft. It wasn't much, but it allowed Paul to look around. The space seemed small earlier that day when four adults were present and showing him around. Now, the mostly dark room seemed huge. Sitting up, Paul saw the shadows of the TV stand, the sofa and the coffee table. He could barely make out the small kitchenette area. This was his place, his home, his lucky break. A shiver of excitement raced up his spine. A little paint was all this loft needed, and he could do that in about a week. And then he saw the bathroom door, and remembered that he hadn't relieved himself since breakfast. When he turned to get out of bed, he discovered that his full bladder firmly objected to this maneuver. Like a human of advanced years, Paul managed to almost stand upright and waddled towards the relief, loosening the button on his jeans and lowering his fly. Sitting on the cold toilet was another shock. For a brief moment, Paul wondered if everything inside him, including necessary organs, had escaped into the splashing water.

When the mass evacuation seemed to reach its end, Paul finished his business in the bathroom, pulled up his drawers and began feeling around the wall by the door for a light switch. Finding an old fashioned switch, he flipped it on. Briefly blinded by the bright light, Paul blinked and turned to the sink. He ran the water and looked into the mirror. "I'm home," he softly told himself with a grin, and cleaned up. There was a hand towel hanging nearby too, so he washed his face. When he finished drying off, he reached for the right edge of the mirror and discovered it was a simple medicine cabinet. He even had a place for his toothbrush and toothpaste. "This place is gonna be awesome!" Paul cheered, and returned the hand towel to the bar.

Walking out of the bathroom, he sighed, "It'll be even more awesome if there's some food stashed in here." Again, by the bathroom light, Paul searched for light switches. On the wall near the entryway door Paul found one switch that turned on a fluorescent light in the ceiling above the kitchenette. It lit almost half the loft. Returning to the bathroom, Paul reached in and flipped off that light. He then went to the kitchen and searched the cupboards. He found a few cans of soup, a box of saltine crackers, and even an unopened bag of chocolate chip cookies. In the small refrigerator, Paul found milk, orange juice, a six pack of Coke, a package of bologna, a small loaf of bread, mayonnaise and mustard. "Damn!" Paul giggled, "It sure ain't one of Mary's smorgasbords, but soup and sandwiches works just fine. I'll have to remember to thank the Harts in the morning."

Soon, Paul had found large bowls, a hand operated can opener and began making his late dinner. While the soup heated in the microwave, Paul made two bologna sandwiches. Deciding to eat in front of the TV, Paul grabbed a can of Coke and the plate of sandwiches to take to his living room, and again broke into soft giggles. He put his food and beverage down on the coffee table, then picked up the remote and turned on the television. The microwave beeped, telling him that his soup was ready when he was. With a sandwich in one hand and the remote in the other, Paul ate and channel surfed the local broadcast channels.

There wasn't much to choose from late at night, so he decided to catch up on the news for a little while, to see if the truck driver was telling the truth. During a commercial break, Paul glanced around his new digs. He decided that the furniture needed some reorganizing. There was a pole lamp with three lights in the corner near the sofa he was sitting on, but only a few yards away was the night stand, lamp and clock radio. That night stand needed to move to the far corner, away from the pole lamp. At some point, once the painting was done, he could get something to hang from the ceiling that would separate his 'bedroom' area from the rest of the space. There needed to be something between the entryway door and the bed, but it would be better if he could arrange stuff so that he could see the TV from bed.

Regular programming continued. Finished with both sandwiches, Paul took the plate to his kitchen, got the crackers from the cupboard and brought them to the coffee table. He went back to get his bowl of soup and sat down to finish his meal. Local, national and world news seemed to agree with truck driver Dan's assessment of affairs post-Battle Of Earth; the rebuilding had begun in Washington, New York City and Los Angeles. The world was pulling together and getting help from our allies in the Federation of Planets.

With his fill of news, Paul flipped to a different channel. He landed on a local talk show. A middle aged couple were speaking of their departed son, who had been attending NYU in Manhattan and was a casualty of the riots there. The nineteen-year-old young man had found a small group of younger kids in a burning building. He broke in, rescued the kids and brought them to a nearby medical clinic. Wanting to find his girlfriend, he went back out to continue his search, but he didn't find her or make it. The couple being interviewed praised their son and Clan Short repeatedly, causing Paul to grumble and switch to a different channel.

Watching a music video program, Paul finished his soup. He brought the bowl to the kitchen and cleaned up after himself. The kitchenette of the loft had a window that looked out over the driveway and toward the street. Once the plate, bowl and silverware was clean, Paul roamed his loft, making plans for furniture rearrangements and the task of painting the walls. There were three windows, the front one by the kitchen, one across from it on the back wall, and one on the adjacent wall. The wall with the entry door didn't have a window.

It was approaching one in the morning, and Paul was wide awake. He decided to expend some energy and started rearranging the furniture. He knew that when the job was done, he would be tired and able to take a nap. That way he could be ready for breakfast with the Harts. The small sofa was the heaviest and therefore the first item moved. It had been on the wall where the door was, but Paul wanted it against the back wall. The bed was moved to the same wall, about four feet from the edge of the sofa. The night table was moved, and then the coffee table. Lastly, the television and its stand were moved, across from the sofa, but still viewable from the bed. Only the small dinette table and chairs didn't need to be moved. When it was time to start painting, it would be much easier to move stuff toward the center of the loft and complete one wall at a time.

At 3:27 AM, Paul remade his bed properly and then laid down for a nap. The last thing Paul muttered to himself was; "I wish you were here, bro. This place is nice, and it's been so easy, but I miss you." He drifted off to sleep thinking of his brother, wondering if Ryan was happy in the ROH with Reyes.

What Paul couldn't know was that Ryan and Reyes had been to Archmania and were gone a month. They were the only two unmarried Core Rimmers remaining of the thirty-eight that left.

* * * * *

Ewa Beach, Condominium A

Wednesday, November 10, 2004 7:27PM HTZ

Walking off the elevator at the tenth floor, Scott and Lance followed their clearly elated sons, Grant and Krane, through the double doors and into the massive penthouse apartment. The boys hadn't bothered to find the light switch, but scurried around by the light cascading in from the open door. Separating, Scott and Lance felt around the walls near the doors for light switches. Each had found six switches and flipped them on. The entire space of the main rooms was brightly lit. Scott blinked at the sight before him. Lance's jaw dropped. The twins loudly yelled, "YAAAAA!" and began running around the expansive space.

Lance softly gasped, "Holy fucking hell!" To his right was a huge kitchen. Further away was a dining table for ten. The living room area was to his left, and before him were four columns and lots of empty space. Sliding glass doors to the balcony were between the kitchen and dining area, and another set were on the living room side. In the ceilings were six rows of recessed light fixtures. There were sconces on either side of the entryway door and across the room between the doors. Lance started flipping switches to see which switch controlled which sets of lights.

Insanely sniggering, Scott tapped his comm-badge, calling, "Alden, how big is this place?"

"The main area is two-thousand-one-hundred and fifty square feet," Alden answered. "The entire floor is just over three-thousand-seven-hundred and twelve square feet. It's a five bedroom and four bathroom apartment. The two largest bedrooms are to your left and right, and have private bathrooms. Before you are..."

"Bedroom!" Grant hollered from a doorway.

Opening the next door, Krane yelled, "Bathroom!"

Alden giggled, "Three bedrooms and two full bathrooms. The middle bedroom is the smallest of the five." He then asked, "Is it not big enough?"

Watching his two sons check the other three doors many meters across from him, and not believing Alden's question could possibly be serious, Lance howled laughing.

Scott chuckled, "For eight of us, its plenty big, Alden. We could add in another dozen guests and still have space."

"You've got the basics here already," Alden offered. "There are plates, glasses, silverware, pots, pans, towels, blankets, sheets, pillows and all the expected furnishings. All I need to know is what kind of food and drink you'd like."

"I'm completely blown away," Lance told Scott. Grant and Krane decided to go inside the final bedroom, which was nearest the dining area table.

Nodding agreement, Scott asked Alden, "What're the other Core Rimmers doing in their homes?"

Alden answered, "Since they all eat their main meals at the CIC, they've stuck to basic snacks and sandwich fixings. Keith and Prez have a little bit more, like eggs, bacon, butter, english muffins, and things for breakfasts."

Scott ordered, "Just get some basics for now, Alden. When Erik and Trav get here, we can all decide if there's anything else we'll need or want."

Alden giggled, "It'll be stocked in a minute, Scott. And watch out!"

Streaking twins came racing out of the bedroom directly for their fathers. Lance and Scott braced themselves for the pounces. In seconds, Lance had Krane off the floor and in his arms. With Grant in his arms, Scott chuckled, "Do you guys like your new home?"

The boys didn't answer with words, but with repeated multiple kisses and lots of giggling. Lance chortled, "We were thinking you two needed clothes from our store, but that seems unnecessary."

Krane giggled, "Without seeing our birthmarks, could you tell me from Grant?"

"At least half the time," Lance smiled, and then planted a kiss.

Grant squinted and waited for Scott's reply to Krane's question. Adjusting the boy so he was seated on one arm, Scott tickled behind Grant's knee. Over the squealing laughter, Scott sniggered, "Yep, only Grant is ticklish there. I got it right."

"NO FAIR!" both ten-year-olds laughed.

Lance's comm-badge chirped, and Erik called, "Lance?"

Krane tapped it for his dad, and Lance replied, "Yeah, bro. Wassup?" He put Krane down on the floor. Scott put Grant down and took a few steps nearer to Lance. Playing their identical twin version of the shell game, Grant clung to Lance, and Krane wrapped his arms around Scott. Each of the twins adoringly smiled up at each father. Each father grinned down at the boys that were their sons.

"Sorry for the delay," Erik giggled. "Drake and Syd saw the diving well..."

"And then the pool," Travis chortled. "Naturally, they had to try them out."

Erik giggled, "Now we've got two damp, naked kids greeting everyone in every room. We just made it to your room."

Lance chuckled, "This place is huge, bro. We've got plenty of space for all our stuff, yours and Trav's, and stuff for all four of our boys, and we'd still have room to spare."

"I think this place will do nicely for quite a while," Scott added.

Halfway through Scott's statement, he, Lance and the twins heard the first "Umph!" and then a second grunt, followed by gales of laughter and giggling from Trav, Erik, Drake and Syd.

At the pause in communications, the twins glanced at each other. They stepped back from their dad and pop, and then started doing the goofy hip-swivel dance that they had seen several of the Rimmers doing at Archmania, in an attempt to make their boy-bits swing like their heroes. Lance went over to the satellite system, turned it on and gave his boys something to dance to. When Lance turned around again, Scott was also naked, with a son on each side, and all three were dancing. Lance howled laughing, and stripped off his clothes to join the family party.

Erik giggled, "Are you dudes ready over there?"

"Almost," Lance replied, and shimmied his butt toward one of the master bedrooms, with his partner and two sons following. Once the lights were on and the closet doors opened, Lance announced, "Ready for closet one transport."

"Closet one transported," Erik reported.

"Transport complete," Scott sniggered. Grant and Krane jumped up on the queen size bed and continued their dance on a 'stage'.

Watching two bare butts run out of the room and toward the common room, Travis laughed, "Closet two transported."

"Transport complete," Lance giggled, and jumped up on the bed to dance with his sons.

"Dresser one, drawers opened," Erik cackled.

It took Scott a few extra seconds to open the many drawers of the large dresser and report back, "One dresser here and all drawers off... I mean, opened." Everyone on both sides of the comm-link howled laughing. Eventually, Scott sniggered, "Transport complete."

Everything came to a halt when Nazareth's 'Hair Of The Dog' began playing on the stereo, and all four in the condo apartment started singing. Up on the bed, Lance, Grant and Krane added air-guitar antics to their dancing. Scott cracked up.

Not knowing exactly what was going on that had Scott hysterical, Erik transported over to see for himself. Roaring his butt off, Erik returned to dorm three, and then Travis transported into the room. He shouted over the singing, "We're going into overdrive, so we can all get crazy." With a nod from Scott, Travis returned to dorm three. Erik had the dildos, lube and rubbers transported from one night table to the other at the condo. Moments later, two amplifiers, two electric guitar cases, and two acoustic guitar cases materialized on the floor of the closet. Lastly, Lance's and Scott's MacBook Pro laptops were transported to the room.

Stepping out of Lance's and Scott's emptied room with Drake's and Syd's clothes, Travis looked up and down the hall for his sons. Erik closed the door and cleared the lock, so the room could be cleaned and take new residents. "They're around here somewhere, Champ," Erik smiled, and led the way to their room. The TV in the common room was on, but no one was in there. The door to the Nash brothers' room was open, and there they found Drake, Syd, the Hiram twins, Phil and Owen.

Waving Erik and Travis into the room, Phil sniggered, "The Stoehar twins are at the Seavers' tonight, bros. Since those two are considering a new family, the Hiramsons are too."

"Wouldn't Keanu and Liki like two Hawaiian sons?" Owen giggled.

Nodding, Erik chuckled, "They've talked more about having kids than any of us."

Tapping his comm-badge, Travis called, "Keanu, are you busy, bro?"

Provocatively, Keanu and Liki chorused, "Not yet."

The four younger boys began giggling. Travis sniggered, "Transport over here, dudes."

"We're still on our mission, checking out our dorm," Keanu truthfully replied.

Erik giggled, "Your mission is here, dudes."

Excitedly, Liki ordered, "Alden, transport us, please?" He and Keanu appeared just inside the doorway.

Nudging both Hiram brothers, Syd ordered, "Tell 'em how it is."

Uncertainly, Anakoni softly admitted, "Our old parents didn't care what we did, if we ate, or even if we came home at night."

Nodding, Kapena smirked, "We might like having two dads, if they cared enough?"

With raised eyebrows, Keanu and Liki turned to each other, and then grinned and nodded. At dorm one, they had been concentrating on younger boys, in the five- to eight-year-old range. On several points, Anakoni and Kapena were perfect sons; the twins had been independent beyond their years out of necessity, and they were native Hawaiians. Squatting down to be closer to eye level with the twins, Keanu told the boys, "You must already know that everyone on this base cares about everyone else. We're going to try and make a real family. Since we're fathers for the first time, and you two are becoming sons for the first time, I think this is a good match. We can learn from each other."

Going to the twins and reaching both his hands out for them to take, Liki suggested, "Let's have a private talk, so we can all get better acquainted."

After each took one of Liki's hands, Anakoni and Kapena cheered, "Kewl!"

Keanu tapped his sub-vocal, ordering, "Alden, take all four of us to our room at dorm one, dude." Keanu, Liki, Anakoni and Kapena vanished. Syd, Drake, Phil and Owen broke down in giggles.

Glancing at Travis and Erik, Phil sniggered, "Your sons did that in under ten minutes." Drake and Syd cheekily smiled.

Covering his eyes, Erik cackled, "Turn down the halos! They're way too bright!"

Kneeling down, Travis sniggered, "Imagine what they'll be able to do with kids who aren't already in the Clan?" In no time, Syd was climbing up onto his pop's back. Lifting Drake, Erik planted a kiss on his youngest son's cheek and parked the boy on his hip. Locking eyes with Phil, Travis wondered, "Where's Craig?"

"With Felicity, being examples for the girls at Oneula Beach," Phil replied.

Owen giggled, "After a month away, everyone over there is going to wonder how they got even closer in only a few minutes."

Erik smiled, "We're going to finish our move."

Nodding, Phil offered, "You realize that if the Stoebers and the Hiramns get adopted, half that hall will be empty."

"It'll get refilled," Travis assured.

Owen sighed, "With you two, Angelo and Reggie, Ray and Tony, and Kass and Matt eventually moving out too, this hall will be half empty." Catching the sadness in Owen's voice, Erik and Travis locked eyes with him. Owen shrugged, "It's been the most awesome week... half a week, really."

Wrapping his boyfriend in his arms, Phil suggested, "How about we stir up the masses for another cozy cuzzy fuzzy water blaster battle?"

"YEAH!" Syd and Drake enthusiastically yelled. Travis cracked up, and so did Owen and Phil.

Erik giggled, "We'll have to go clothes shopping tomorrow morning."

"Let's finish our move," Travis chuckled. He then told Phil and Owen, "Set the fuzzy time and place, and we'll be there."

"Kewl," Owen and Phil chanted.

Travis and Erik carried their sons down the hall. Kassidy and Matt walked in the dorm from outdoors, obviously already finished talking with Jeremiah Thornton. They went directly to room twenty-six, opened the door and stepped inside. The door to Erik's and Travis' room was already open and Scott was standing naked in there, already getting the move accomplished. Seeing the family enter, Scott smiled, "You're almost completely moved. Grant, Krane and Lance are anxiously waiting, so go. I can finish this in no time flat."

Nodding and patting Scott on the back, Travis smiled, "Thanks, bro."

Erik called, "Alden, take us to our new home." In a heartbeat, Erik, Travis, Drake and Syd were standing in the center of their new flat. There were four columns in the large open space. Directly in front of them was a nice kitchen area and to the left was a dining table and chairs. Turning around, they saw the living room area.

Drake giggled, "Lemme down, dad." Syd repeated his brother's request, and soon the two brothers were scampering around the apartment. Grant and Krane ran out of a room and soon all four were investigating their new home.

Grinning, Travis told Erik, "I'll keep an eye on the whirlwinds."

"And I'll find Lance," Erik smiled. He stole a kiss from his hubby, and then went to the room that Grant and Krane came out of. Squatting down in front of the dresser, Lance was closing the drawers. Looking around his new bedroom, Erik giggled, "I should be used to seeing your bare butt by now."

As soon as the last drawer was closed, Lance bounced up and spun around. He said nothing, but pointed at his long dick flopping around. Over the course of a month away, just about everyone said something about it, and Reggie's, and Darren's. Only Stephen Marr's unit was never publicly commented on, but Lance, Reggie and Darren had all talked to Stephen privately. Sadly shaking his head, Erik giggled, "Our plan to take our boys to the store has already changed. They want to play in a water blaster battle here. Phil and Owen are getting it set."

Shrugging, Lance went to Erik, smiling, "It's not like the clothes they were wearing are getting dirty. We've got something else that needs to be set up here." Lance wrapped an arm around his best friend's shoulders and guided him out to the main room.

Erik giggled, "Our band, Choise Remedee. We've got a lot of work to do to catch up with Platinum Habits."

Out in the center of the room, Scott had returned from the dorm and had already ordered a Ludwig drum kit for Travis. In the kitchen, Travis was pouring glasses of Coke for everyone. Scott sniggered, "Hey, Champ, you need to adjust these drums."

Travis laughed, "If you keep calling me 'Champ', Erik will be crippled in the morning."

"That's my goal, ya know?" Scott teased.

Mooing through giggles, Erik excitedly bounced his eyebrows. Lance cracked up. If anyone had told them how inseparable they would become when they left for Archmania, each of them would've been surprised to varying extents. However, within the first week of team building, making love in plain sight of each other was necessary and normal. Then, out of the nineteen Core Rimmer couples available, two rescued brothers chose Erik and Travis as their fathers, and the twins made Lance and Scott their new fathers. Out on the balcony, the four boys were running around and checking out the views.

Going to the kitchen and reaching for a glass of Coke, Lance giggled, "Should we tell the boys to come inside? They're out there, streaking around."

Erik blinked at his naked best friend and brother, and then grinned, "It's not like anyone on the ground could see them."

"The kids are fine, bro," Travis assured.

Provocatively, Scott leered, "Com'ere, MSLB."

Approaching his horny hubby, Lance laughed, "You be good!" Erik and Travis evilly snickered.

After fondling his husband's goods and planting a deep kiss, Scott whispered, "Was that good?"

"Just good enough," Lance giggled. Travis and Erik roared. Lance giggled, "You two need to get naked too."

"Down to my underwear only," Travis grinned. He started to strip, explaining, "I'm not parking my bare ass on a new drum throne."

Taking his shirt off, Erik wondered, "What sort of bass guitar should I get?"

Lance asked, "Which felt most comfortable?"

Hanging his shirt over a stool, Erik sniggered, "They're all way bigger than the guitar I had. I would think the tone matters too. Does it matter what it sounds like to you dudes?"

While Erik and Travis finished undressing, Scott shrugged, "You played almost all the basses that Prez played. I liked the tones of the EB-3 most, which is the one Prez plays most often. He'll pickup a Rickenbaker, or a Fender Jazz bass, when he needs those sounds for funk and progressive rock. For now, we'll be playing a lot of heavy rock and metal, at least until we're good enough to try other styles."

Nodding agreement, Lance smiled, "An EB-3 would do it."

Coming out of the kitchen in his boxers, and noticing Erik silently waiting for an opinion, Travis grinned, "They know better than me, cuddle bunny. All I do on drums is make booms and crashes."

Scott chuckled, "But you do that to a tempo, which is more than any of us expected. I know you were only fooling around, but you sat down at Derrick's kit and just started playing. That's why you became their drum roadie."

"Derrick said you started off really good, and all you need is to practice a few flashy tom-tom fills, and you'll be set," Lance reminded.

Sitting down at the drum kit, Travis adjusted the height of the snare drum, sniggering, "The show is over when I miss the snare completely, and accidentally whack the head of my dick."

"That's what I call excessive meat beating!" Erik laughed.

Coming in from the balcony with his brother and the twins, and overhearing what was said, Syd smirked, "We want two fully functional dads, so watch your sticks, pop." Everyone cracked up.

Drake giggled, "Yeah, don't go ringing a ball instead of a bell!"

Three teenagers groaned in sympathetic pain, but all four giggling boys began their dick-flop dance again. Travis roared laughing.

* * * * *

Oneula Beach, Townhouse #4

Wednesday, November 10, 2004 8:27PM HTZ

Finished moving themselves, Colin and Christian from the dormitories to the townhouse, Neil and Tad walked their new sons home. The teen fathers saw lights were on in townhouse three, and stopped to have AJ, Jerry and the Hunnicutts come over. Having two excellent little boys from the same Woodlake home that they were from, Neil and Tad were initially thrilled with the idea of having a real house, and a real family. However, during the move process, the home seemed so large, and so quiet, everything shifted from exciting to frightening. Neil and Tad knew not to say anything aloud that Colin and Christian might overhear, but they needed some help.

Upon entering their home with guests, everything suddenly changed to intoxicating again. Kenny Hunnicutt helped himself to the television remote control and parked his buns on the sofa. Shaun and Mike took Colin and Christian down to the basement, and then all the way up both flights of stairs to the second level. In the meantime, AJ and Jerry helped Neil and Tad get the kitchen stocked and talked.

Whispering so that none of the boys could hear, Neil confided, "We're freaking out, bros."

Nodding understandingly, AJ grinned, "Going from nothing, to something, to all this is a lot to cope with. We were there, thinking the exact same things too."

"How're we going to deal?" Tad wondered.

Jerry shrugged, "In our case, we had a week between living in the dorms and living in our townhouse. It seemed a little weird Sunday night when we were walking home, but the moment we walked inside, we saw the kids had left the living room TV and one kitchen light on. They knew more than AJ and I did. You make a house a home by using what's here. The boys wanted normal sounds in their environment, so the TV was turned on. If one of 'em woke in the middle of the night, a light needed to be left on."

"We left the light on and shut the TV off, and then went upstairs," AJ shared. "We weren't sure where the boys would be and half expected to find them all in our bed. Instead, we found them in one room. That meant me and Jerry had to try and act like everything was normal, for the kids' sake."

"Your situation is only a tiny bit different," Jerry explained. "So tonight, you demonstrate to the kids that you're in love and that you're loving them too. Share a shower and then share your bed with them; two boys between two dads."

AJ chuckled, "We heard what the kids said before. The first time Shaun said the word 'spermies' was at dinner Monday night. I almost choked and Jerry almost sprayed the table with his chewed food."

Jerry softly sniggered, "The main difference between our kids is the Hunnicutts are more normal than any of us ever thought we could be. They understood almost immediately that we were their adults, and needed time alone. It might take Colin and Christian a couple of days and nights, but they'll figure it all out, with help from their peers and their new fathers. None of our boys ever asked what your two did, but the second I heard their perspectives, I knew just what I'd do."

Neil grinned, "And that is?"

"Intercourse and oral sex are out of the question," Jerry smiled. "They wanna see the spermies, so wanks in the shower, with all the kissing and emotion you can put into it, before, during and especially after. All they want to know is that it doesn't hurt and it makes you even closer; lovers, husbands and their fathers."

AJ scowled, "After two nights in the same room as his brothers and a month away with them, I'm wondering where Kenny will sleep tonight."

"They'll tell me," Kenny quickly answered. None of the four teens knew Kenny was near, and they all turned to him. Locking eyes with AJ, Kenny giggled, "Fuzzy-facts-of-life, remember? I don't need proof, but maybe Shaun or Mike would. Maybe they'll still want me in their room tonight, but I'm pretty sure they don't need it anymore. When I'm shoved out of their room, we'll all know."

Gesturing with his index finger, Jerry widely smiled, "Com'ere, Ken." Giggling his butt off, Kenny went to his pop. Grunting far more than necessary, Jerry picked up Kenny and planted a kiss. He put his eldest down again, held him close to his side and firmly told Neil and Tad, "What your little family needs is at least one older brother. If not tonight, then as soon as one shows interest."

AJ told Neil and Tad, "Our little man does half the work for us." He then shared with Kenny, "Neil and Tad want to make this house their home. What do you think these new dads need to do, Ken?"

Overflowing from the ego boosts, Kenny giggled, "What makes a home and a family more than eating together? Put some cookies and glasses of milk on the table, and I'll call them back down here."

Slumping at the simplicity, Neil laughed, "Amazing!" Tad searched the cupboards for cookies. Getting with the program, Neil got glasses and AJ got the two liter carton of milk out.

While the teenager fathers got the table set, Kenny went back around the counter and closer to the stairs then excitedly hollered, "COOKIES? HELL, YEAH!"

Before Kenny got to a chair and slid onto it, a choir of gleeful shouts erupted upstairs, and then the four boys stampeded down the steps. Before the four little tikes made it all the way downstairs, Kenny giggled, "By the way, when it comes to the older brother, let them choose."

Shaun, Mike, Colin and Christian hurried to the table, wiggled onto chairs and dug in. Each of the four teenage fathers snatched a cookie, and then went into the living room. They sat on the couch, and right after he swallowed, Neil grinned, "It already feels more like a home and not just a house."

Widely smiling, Tad thanked AJ and Jerry. After swallowing his cookie, AJ softly reminded, "Once again, half the thanks go to Kenny. Now, you two get to make this your home. Downstairs in the basement, the walls are collapsable; they fold up and open so all our basements are one big area. That'll come in handy over the weekend, when the level three orphans show up."

Seeing Neil and Tad uncertainly check with one another, Jerry offered, "I expect those kids will want to nest. We've already got some games and toys in our basement. Kaleo's got the nesting pads, blankets and pillows stacked in his basement. Later tonight, we'll meet down there to complete the set up. Then we'll come back up here and get some decorations hung on the walls."

Popping into the room with Bruce at his side, Skylar giggled, "Let's go upstairs. I want to reintroduce Neil to a long lost friend." Softly chuckling and not having a clue what Skylar was referring to, Neil, Tad, AJ and Jerry stood. Bruce and Skylar hurried up the stairs and went into the master bedroom. They stepped aside and waited for the teenagers.

Immediately upon entering the room, Neil and Tad noticed a six-foot long table under the window that hadn't been there when they were moving in. "Omigod!" Neil excitedly gasped. Slowly approaching the table that hadn't been seen in more than three years, Neil began shaking and shedding quiet tears. Tad mutely checked with Skylar and Bruce for some explanation. Skylar widely smiled, and Bruce placed an index finger to his lips. On top of the table was the cage and pet left behind. He looked into the cage softly muttering, "It can't be," and spun around to face Skylar.

Skylar smiled, "It's Gus, Neil. As far as he's concerned, nothing unusual happened. The day you were orphaned, I went back to get him. He didn't starve or die. Gus is perfectly fine. And he'll have a view, just like he did in your old bedroom."

"Thank you," Neil softly wept. "Thank you so much, Sky." Three years of guilt began to dissipate. He then turned around again, reached into the cage and lifted his tiny pet. With happy tears rolling down his cheeks, Neil showed Tad. They both greeted Gus, and welcomed him home. Widely smiling, AJ and Jerry prompted Bruce and Skylar to leave Neil and Tad with Gus. The former four went downstairs, so none of the younger boys would come upstairs and see Neil crying.

* * * * *

Ewa Beach, Townhouse #3

Wednesday, November 10, 2004 8:33PM HTZ

"I've given it some more thought," Leo told his dad, pop, and Uncles Keith, Prez, John and Stephen. "I really don't want any of you taking lives for me." He watched the group of older boys glance at each other. When they returned their attention to him, Leo said, "You all have personal security. Let them execute my parents' murderers, with guns, not phasers. The one thing I'll always remember is my dad missing a piece of his skull. That's what I want the families of the murderers to see; their loved ones with their heads blown off. Justice is letting them see what I saw, and have that image flash through their thoughts, like it did for me all Friday, Saturday, Sunday and Monday." Again, Leo paused and watched his dad, pop and uncles check with each other.

Drew softly prompted, "Tell us when, Leo."

Shrugging, Leo said, "Whenever the security guys are ready. I think it should be before the level three kids start showing up here, so this is done and none of us are thinking about it. Remember, I have to be there, so my folks can be there."

Corey quickly said, "Your brothers are already in bed, so it's too late to do it tonight."

Leo nodded, and then grinned as an idea crossed his mind. Still grinning, he shared, "How about we let the gorillas execute them, like a firing squad? Two shots each; one shot to the head and another to the heart."

Almost simultaneously, Corey, Drew, Keith, Prez, John and Stephen tapped their comm-badges to notify their personal security gorillas that tomorrow night, they would all be going to the Rapid Response Base Detention facility to execute the murderers of Leo's parents.

When that was done, Keith reminded Leo, "Sunday, I had our security demonstrate on targets using phasers because you don't need to hear gunfire." Holding his hand out, Keith called, "Alden, get the best sonic ear plugs available for Leo, dude." A small plastic case appeared in Keith's hand. He opened the case and checked out the ear plugs. Nodding, he passed the ear plugs and case to Leo, instructing, "Try them out now." Leo did as he was told. Prez sat with his PADD and began typing. Keith asked Leo, "How do they feel, and do they work?"

"HUH?" Leo giggled. Corey cracked up. After pulling the ear plugs out, Leo asked, "What're you doin', Uncle Prez?"

"Sending a message to the UNIT commander at the Rapid Response Base," Prez answered. Before saying any more, Prez wordlessly checked with Corey and Drew. They shook their heads.

Realizing something was being withheld, Leo asked, "Why? What's going on?" When nobody said a word for a few moments, Leo whined, "Tell me!"

Putting the PADD down, Prez got up off the sofa, went to his nephew and wrapped his arms around him, gently explaining, "We didn't think it was logical to assist in cities where there was rioting. UNIT troops helped to protect infrastructure, like dams, reservoirs and power plants, but we left the protection of cities to the National Guard. Honestly, we wouldn't have had the personnel or resources to help much in Los Angeles or New York City. Because of that, we've got forty-one Battle Of Earth orphans. Five Clan bases in the United States have about as many Battle Of Earth orphans as we do. The Presidio in San Fransisco has several hundred families waiting for their homes to be rebuilt, like many other Clan owned properties scattered around the States. What happened to you, and all those other kids, might've been prevented. Specifically, what happened to you was done by the Crips." Prez paused for Leo's reaction thus far. Leo smiled up at his Uncle and nodded.

"I've ordered that the bodies of the four men we're executing be transported to the homes of their families," Prez continued. "Other Division leaders are taking similar actions in their regions. We're planning a major military operation, to take out the Crips in Los Angeles, and other cities. They took advantage of an ugly situation and made it worse. Uncle Colin, the President Of The United States learned what was planned, and has ordered the FBI to assist. The FBI is getting Army Green Berets and Navy Seal teams to help in this operation. As of now, I know that the Clan Short Naval fleets will also be involved. All the intelligence we've gathered, thanks to our telepaths reading those that have been arrested, will be used to decimate the Crips. By the end of Monday, they'll be leaderless and powerless."

Glancing around the room, Leo smirked, "Do you think I'm bothered by this?" He only paused briefly to see his dad and pop shrug. "I'm not," Leo firmly said. "It's for me and every other kid they've ever hurt. And the President approves too. I don't need Dulce here to tell me that my mom and dad would approve. Leave a note telling them that this is what I saw, so we're only sharing the pain equally."

Drew softly offered, "We didn't think you needed to know, Leo."

Stepping back from Prez, Leo told everyone, "And you're right, I didn't need to know, as long as none of you are directly involved and completely safe. That's all I care about. I can't lose any more family. All day Friday, I felt like I was going to crack, until I met Grandma Morrison, and then dad and pop. Since then, things have been better. The Vulcan healing helped a bunch too. Just promise me that you'll all be safe."

Around the room, Drew, Corey, Prez, Keith, John and Stephen assured Leo they would be safe, on base, and most likely very busy orienting the level three orphans. Knowing that Leo wasn't bothered about anything he'd learned, John levitated his nephew, sniggering, "As soon as you're paired up with a boyfriend, I can foresee a new Core Rimmer couple, ready to fight for what's right."

"Maybe not that soon," Leo happily cackled, "first, I have to want a boyfriend."

"You want to be held," John revealed. "Everybody does, first by their parents, and then by emulating their parents, they find someone special to hold. Sex is maybe ten percent of the equation, Leo. Don't even worry about that part; it happens automatically."

Corey giggled, "I'd hold him now, if I could reach more than his legs."

* * * * *

Ewa Beach, Dormitory #1

Wednesday, November 10, 2004 8:56PM HTZ

In room 104, Keanu and Liki were sitting on one bed, and across from them sat the Hiram twins, Anakoni and Kapena. Out of necessity, the eleven-year-old brothers were wiser than their years, but didn't know the simplest things about family. The twins were frightened that they would be ignored, like their real parents had done. Keanu and Liki were only slightly more enlightened, thanks to the month spent at Archmania.

"We'd like us to be together as dads and sons as often as possible," Keanu explained. "That means we'll do more than simply share a home; we'll do as much as we can together, as often as possible."

The twins didn't really understand what that meant and glanced at each other. Liki asked, "Have you noticed the other Core Rimmer families in the CIC dining room?"

Anakoni nodded and Kapena said, "Yeah, they almost always have breakfast together, but during lunch and dinner, some of their kids eat with their friends."

Getting the idea, but still a little uncertain, Anakoni grinned, "Sammy and Ben eat with Prez and Keith sometimes, and other times they eat with Derrick and Mike, or with the rest of the Gibbons family."

"Exactly," Keanu smiled. "Ben is Mike's brother, so Sammy and Ben try and split their time as evenly as possible. Gage and Jonah do the same thing; they'll have a meal with Prez and Keith one day, and the next day, they'll eat with Mike and Derrick. The rest of the time, they'll eat at tables with friends."

"The point being," Liki emphasized, "we don't want you two guys thinking that we're too busy for you. Yeah, we're a couple, husbands now, and we're Core Rimmers now too, but we want to be more than fathers in name only. We want to know about your days, what you're planning to do in the mornings, and what you've actually done in the evenings. Families share stuff, but at the same time, we're each separate people, so we'll have to find a balance that works for us."

Keanu instructed, "If you think anything is out of balance, then tell us. We'll be sure to tell you guys what we're thinking and feeling too. We've got to share all that stuff, or somebody's gonna feel sad, like we're not really family."

"We're not really sure how a family should be," Kapena reminded.

Anakoni told his brother, "Neither are they." He checked with Keanu and Liki, offering, "So we decide how much time we spend together, like not only at the CIC dining room, but all the time, at school, and at home."

"That's right," Liki proudly beamed.

Keanu smiled, "You guys can eat with us, or with your friends, but let's try to always make time for each other. If either of you ask, 'Can we have lunch together?' then we know that's what you want, so any other plans we might've had need to be adjusted."

"You'd do that?" Kapena suspiciously queried.

Liki nodded and giggled. Keanu chuckled, "We'd definitely do that for you guys. I don't want you calling me dad or pop because you should, I want to hear it because you feel it."

At the open door, Akamu Kahale and Maleko Ka'aukai, two seven-year-old boys from the shorter hall of dormitory one appeared. Everyone in the room turned to the doorway.

Liki smiled, "How's it goin', little dudes?"

"Is it too late already?" Maleko frowned.

Seemingly on the verge of tears, Akamu whimpered, "We wanted daddies too."

Before real tears started to flow, Liki and Keanu hurried to the door. Keanu lifted Maleko and parked the boy on his hip, gently assuring, "It's not too late."

Picking up Akamu, Liki chortled, "Please don't cry. We were just talking about how we'd like our family to be."

Liki and Keanu had just turned their backs to the Hiram twins when they heard giggling.

"That's what we needed to see," Anakoni giggled.

Rapidly nodding, Kapena grinned, "I guess we're too big to be picked up."

"Wanna bet?" Liki and Keanu chorused. Still carrying the little guys, they returned to stand before Anakoni and Kapena.

Setting Maleko on the bed, Keanu warned Kapena, "I've lifted John Hundser a couple of times."

Being lifted off the bed, Kapena giggled, "Yeah, and how many times did John lift you?"

"That's totally irrelevant," Keanu sniggered. Anakoni, Akamu and Maleko cracked up. Soon, Akamu was standing on the bed and Liki was lifting Anakoni up. While Akamu and Maleko cackled, Keanu asked Kapena, "Do you think you can be a son and a big brother?"

Unexpectedly, Kapena landed a kiss on Keanu's cheek, and then giggled, "Yeah, I promise to try, pop."

Stunned at the first utterance of 'pop', Keanu's eyes flooded with tears.

Seeing Keanu getting emotional, Liki asked Anakoni, "Well, big brother, can you deal with two more younger brothers?"

"No sweat, dad," Anakoni grinned, and hugged Liki tighter.

Turning to Keanu, Liki smiled, "With four sons, we're not gonna be able to stay in this room tonight."

Keanu nodded at Liki, returned the kiss Kapena planted and then put him back down on the bed. Immediately, Akamu and Maleko cuddled up close to their new big brother. After wiping his eyes, Keanu tapped his comm-badge, calling, "Prez, are you ready for more adoptions?"

A room full of giggling and laughter came across the comm-badge before Prez chuckled, "I could be, bro. How many kids did you manage to find?"

"All four found us," Liki chuckled, and put Anakoni down on the bed with his three brothers.

Prez sniggered, "I'm surprised it's only four, now tell us which four?"

Keanu answered, "Anakoni and Kapena Hiram, Akamu Kahale and Maleko Ka'aukai."

"Excellent!" Keith cheered, "Two big brothers and two little brothers."

Anakoni said, "We want their last names too, Prez."

"Hiram don't mean anything to us," Kapena smiled. "We're now the Hekekoa-Kealoha twins."

"US TOO!" Akamu and Maleko loudly chorused.

With a call to Alden for transport, Prez, Keith, Drew and John appeared in the room. In a few minutes, Liki and Keanu had officially been adopted as the fathers of four boys. Happier than he ever thought possible, Keanu asked, "Where can we move to, Prez?"

Prez called, "Alden, what's our available housing situation?"

From the speakers, Alden answered, "All the townhouses at Ewa Beach are occupied. Chris and Jay and their four sons are moving to unit number six. Townhomes five and six at Oneula Beach are still available."

"We'll take number five," Liki told Prez.

Prez nodded, "Go for it." Looking down at Akamu and Maleko, Prez grinned, "Since it's getting very late for little dudes, I suggest waiting for tomorrow to do the bulk of your move. Just grab a change of clothes for the morning, and save the rest."

"We're supposed to be in school tomorrow," Maleko reminded.

Shaking his head, Keith smiled, "Families come first for everything. Take the morning off to get your home together. If everything's done, we'll see you in school tomorrow afternoon."

Prez's comm-badge chirped again. Aaron Farris chuckled, "Head Rimmer?" Akamu and Maleko broke down in giggles, causing Liki, Keanu, Anakoni and Kapena to turn and grin at them.

Knowing that Akamu and Maleko shared a dorm room with two other seven-year-olds, Prez grinned, "How many, Aaron?"

"Two," Aaron chuckled.

Stephen Wickes giggled, "Amado Kazanjian and Sakamoto Michiyo."

"We're just down the hall," Prez replied. "We'll be there in a minute. Prez out." John began evilly snickering. Prez suspiciously wondered, "What's so funny?"

John laughed, "Wait for it."

A moment later, Prez's comm-badge chirped again, and Jay called, "Hey, Prez?" He slouched, causing Keanu and Liki to start laughing, which pushed their four sons into fits of giggles.

Tapping his comm-badge, Prez sniggered, "You already adopted four tonight, Jay."

"Yeah," Jay chortled, "but I was so psyched about it that I forgot I have a little brother, who has a boyfriend. I was reminded while we were packing." Drew, John, and the Hekeia-Kealoha family cracked up.

Chris giggled, "A three bedroom townhouse won't cut it, Prez."

"Move your fuzzy family to Condo A, ninth floor," Prez laughed.

Keith sniggered, "That's five bedrooms, right below Erik, Trav, Lance and Scott, which I will not take to its logical conclusion or comment on any further."

While laughter erupted in the room and across the comm-badge, Drew tapped his comm-badge, calling, "Hey Aaron?"

"Yeah, Drew."

Drew giggled, "Get ready to move to townhouse six here at Ewa Beach, and find two more sons."

Aaron and Stephen incredulously bellowed, "WHAT?"

"It's a three bedroom townhouse, that Chris and Jay never got to move into," Drew giggled. "You can start with two tonight, but find two more."

"What's the minimum Valium age?" Stephen cackled.

Drew sniggered, "Check with Doc Andrews tomorrow."

Waving at the Hekeia-Kealoha family, Keith stepped out of the room and into the hall. He tapped his comm-badge, calling, "Reggie?"

"What's up, Keith?"

Starting to walk towards Aaron and Stephen's room, Keith asked, "Where are you and Angelo?"

"In our room, with Kassidy, Matt, Ray and Tony, just hangin' out. Why?"

"Lock your door, and don't answer any knocks," Keith sniggered. "I think every little kid at both bases is shopping for fathers. If any of us intend to get to bed tonight, just hide out until tomorrow."

Ray giggled, "We need an extra bed for me and Tony."

"Call Alden," Keith instructed.

Tony sniggered, "And when one of us needs to leak?"

Prez chuckled, "Have Alden transport you to a commode and quickly lock the door."

Six voices laughed across the comm-badge, "Okay!"

Keith chirped, "Out."

Prez, Drew and John joined Keith in the hall and hurried to catch up. Tapping his comm-badge, Prez called, "Derrick?"

Derrick answered, "Here, bro."

Prez sniggered, "Since you probably don't know and wisely went home, stay there and lock your doors." Chuckling and giggling erupted across the comm-badge. Prez chortled, "Seriously, my next call is to the Ark compound, for more tech-bots, and then to your dad. The Core Rimmer housing is now priority one."

Derrick evilly snickered, "Got it, bro. Since we almost doubled the size of the team, I'll bet my dad is already making arrangements to break ground ASAP."

Entering Aaron and Stephen's room, Prez playfully wondered,

"Would it do any good at all if I ordered all Core Rimmers locked in their rooms for the night? We have some more level three kids to visit in the morning, but at the rate we're going, most of the team will be busy making family time."

Derrick sniggered, "Don't you mean spending family time?"

"It all depends on the perspective," Prez grinned. "Those who haven't made a family can't spend family time, can they?"

Mike giggled, "You've lost it, Prez." Aaron, Stephen, Amado and Sakamoto helplessly giggled.

"He never had it," Derrick teased.

Smirking, Prez huffed, "You'll regret those words when both our families are living in one house."

Derrick and Mike provocatively mooed, and then quickly giggled, "We're out!"

"Then tuck it back in again," Keith grinned.

Ready to begin the adoptions, Prez activated the tricorder, smiling, "Aaron Farris and Stephen Wickes are two of the first kids we ever rescued. Although that didn't work out well, they're right back here with us, showing other rescued kids what's normal. They fell in love and are now a happily married couple, with two little dudes sitting between them. The boys will be the product of your love; they'll set the example for other new Rimmer Tribe members, just like all their new cousins already building our Tribe."

Amado asked, "We got cousins, Prez?"

"Sure you do," Prez chuckled. "Your dads are my brothers, just like all the Core Rimmers. That means that all the Core Rimmers are your uncles, and all the sons of all the Core Rimmers are your cousins, as soon as you tell me that Aaron and Stephen are your dad and pop."

"They are!" Amado and Sakamoto happily giggled.

Glancing at Aaron and then Stephen, Prez prompted, "Two down and two to go."

Stephen proudly announced, "We want these sons to care for, and they'll care for us and each other."

"They've already got ideas for big brothers too," Aaron grinned. "They'll check tomorrow and we'll get the extra bedroom in our townhouse occupied. We'll love and protect Amado and Sakamoto, and their as yet unknown big brothers."

Prez smiled, "And it's official, you're a family."

Prez's comm-badge chirped again. He helplessly began chuckling, tapped his comm-badge and answered, "Rimmer Adoption Agency, how may I direct your call?"

Bill Seaver chuckled, "Can you stop by our house, Preston? Tanner and Toby are ready to make it permanent. Gayle Gibson already has, without paperwork."

Giggling his ass off, Drew asked, "Does Corey know, Dad?"

"Yes," Bill chuckled, "I called Corey first, since I believed you were all together."

Drew told Prez, "Corey needs to be there for that. I'll go back home and send Corey here." As soon as Prez nodded, Drew had Alden transport him home.

"I'll be there in a couple of minutes, Uncle Bill," Prez sniggered. "We're just wrapping up another adoption." Corey appeared where Drew had been standing, between Keith and John.

"We'll see you soon," Bill chortled. "Out."

"We want their last names too," Sakamoto declared.

Nodding, Prez asked, "What's your new last name?"

"Wickes-Farris," Sakamoto answered.

Amado cheekily grinned, "Yep, we don't want poppa thinkin' he's less impo'tant, just b'cause W comes way after F."

Giggling at the mispronunciation, Aaron said, "We'll all have that new last name, Prez."

"It's all recorded and it'll be legal when you get the paperwork tomorrow," Prez grinned. "It's time to get the Wickes-Farris family move started."

Amado asked Sakamoto, "Ya wanna keep our bunk beds?"

"Yeah," Sakamoto replied, and then looked around, checking, "We can keep our bunk beds, right?"

Keith smiled, "Just tell Alden to transport furniture."

"It really simplifies moving," Corey giggled. "That's what I told Tanner and Toby to do. They're already moved into their new room at my parents' house."

Amado cheerfully told Corey, "Geoffy, Richie and Dillon is our new cousins now!"

Nodding, Corey giggled, "I told Geoff about all his new cousins already, as I was putting him to bed, which is where you two guys need to be soon."

Aaron told his new sons, "Let's save the move for tomorrow. You guys can sleep here with us, in this bed."

"Sweet!" Amado and Sakamoto cheered. They jumped off the bed and stripped. In moments, two bare butts were climbing back onto the bed, behind their dads and sliding under the covers.

Immediately, John went over to kiss his new nephews goodnight. While doing so, John also telepathically spoke with both boys, telling them of the beach house, and a little about Archmania. In the meantime, Prez, Keith and Corey hugged Aaron and Stephen. In a few minutes, Amado and Sakamoto were getting kisses goodnight from Corey, Keith and Prez.

Before Prez could call Alden to be transported to the Seavers' home, Amado giggled, "Daddy and poppa needs to make spermies before goin' ta sleep." The six Core Rimmers cracked up.

"What?" Sakamoto giggled. "That's what daddies and poppas do. If they didn't, they couldn't be real daddies and poppas."

Watching Aaron and Stephen blushing and softly giggling, John sniggered, "You got it right, but you guys have to make believe your asleep first, and try not to giggle when daddy and poppa get silly, okay?"

"We can try," Amado mischievously grinned.

Stephen sniggered, "Ever since Joel rescued us, the definition of 'normal' keeps warping."

Nodding, Aaron told his hubby, "A month at Archmania should've prepared us."

"You're both prepared for sons and much more," Corey giggled.

"We'll see you in the morning," Keith offered. Everyone said their final goodnights.

Prez tapped his comm-badge, calling, "Alden, transport us to the Seavers', please." They vanished from dorm one and appeared in the Seavers' living room. Glancing around the room and seeing only six boys and two girls, Prez thoughtfully scowled, "You still have a spare bedroom upstairs?"

"You sound surprised, Preston," Lanna Seaver giggled.

Corey began giggling before Prez smiled, "I am. You've been this Clan's part time mom since day one."

Bill explained, "Core family housekeeping is a small problem none of us foresaw a week and a half ago. Kathy Marr is now working full time at your parents' house. The Seiberts have had Madeline Hupp working full time since they adopted the Steib quadruplets. Over at the Gibbons', there are nine kids that Laura's been keeping up after, but even she sees it's an effort. Laura's invited her widowed sister here to help around the house, since all her kids have grown up and moved out."

Lanna picked up where her husband left off, saying, "We have one more room upstairs to fill, but before we do, we're going through FYS to hire a full time housekeeper." Glaring at Corey, she smirked, "All of us mothers are still looking after our married sons, and their homes, which truly must be a shambles by now." Blushing bright red,

Corey howled laughing. Lanna nodded, "I rest my case. We'll be hiring more housekeepers for our leadership, who will be running out of clean clothes any day now." The surprised faces of Prez, Keith and Corey, pushed Cesar, Felipe, Shimizu, Murakami, Tanner and Toby into fits of giggles.

"Boys!" Rena impatiently huffed. Imitating her new big sister, Gayle crossed her arms and suspiciously squinted.

Turning to Prez, Keith suggested, "Maybe we should stop and say hi to mom and dad?"

Shaking his head, Prez grinned, "We are stopping no place where we can be seen by anyone under twelve-years-old. Our townhouse is already full, T'hyla." Everyone in the room began laughing. Prez giggled, "These three make nine adoptions in under an hour. We'll transport from place-to-place. When the Core Rimmer housing is built, we can consider adopting more kids."

Brushing his hair out of his eyes, Corey giggled, "We could go back to Archnesia? Sky would bring us to Blank Children's Hospital tomorrow morning, no problem."

"That option is still open for further consideration," Prez chuckled, and set up his tricorder for another set of adoptions. "I may just have Sky take us to tomorrow morning, grab all the level 3 orphans, and then go back to Archnesia with all of 'em."

Keith smiled, "They'd get healthier faster, that's for sure."

John seriously offered, "That's not such a bad idea. Before we bring any of the level three kids here, we could take them there, only for a couple of Archnesian days. They've got doctors, most of which look young." Since he had everyone's attention, John grinned at the six kids on the couch, adding "Some family in attendance would be good too, for more than the level three kids, for Intel training, amongst other reasons."

Prez nodded, "Our parents are going there tomorrow for Alden. If they can deal, then so can other parents."

Glaring angrily, Bill told Corey, "You need a haircut, mister; it's well beyond shoulder length and down to your nose in the front." Glancing around at Prez, Keith and John, he smirked, "You all need haircuts."

Corey sighed, "We were gone over a month, dad. First, we spent the better part of a week getting our much larger team working together. During that week, and for part of the next, there were rehearsals for Platinum Habits and Time Touched. Then, the bands played a bunch of concerts. Since we don't have a hair stylist here yet, I'll get it done at Archmania."

"Danny's chainsaw?" John softly sniggered.

At the worried expressions of the adults, Keith grinned, "Or Conner's ax?"

"If worse-comes-to-worst, we'll have the Archnanian birds braid our hair," Prez chuckled.

"I can help!" Skyler giggled when he appeared. The entire group, including adults, found themselves in a purple fog. Seconds later, the shortest hair in the group was twenty-four inches long, with some band members now finding their hair reached their waist. "That's better!" Skyler giggled before vanishing.

"You were saying, dad?" Corey giggled as he watched his father try to keep his hair out of his eyes.

Sadly shaking his head, Bill grumbled, "I'm not sleeping tonight with hair I could strangle myself on."

"Kyle says Skyler will take care of it, but he's occupied now with Bruce," Prez smiled.

Fixing her daughters' hair so they could see, Lanna wondered, "What's so special about this Archnania place?"

"Everything," Corey told his mom. "It's always perfect weather, very pretty, and the people are the nicest you'll ever meet."

"They're just short," Keith said, and held a hand up about five feet, saying, "That's the tallest of them."

Prez nodded and explained, "We can do what we please, anyplace there, but haven't needed security. Crime is a thing of the past there."

"I think we're learning a lot too," John offered. "The band members can rehearse and try stuff out, just jammin', and I've learned stuff that will make school easier."

"Drew and I have learned stuff there too," Corey said. "Sean's learned about the PA gear, and all the amps the guys use. Watch the dorm leaders tomorrow; you'll see they're confident and looking forward to helping kids with whatever they need."

"I'll bet they're already over at their dorms making changes," Keith grinned.

"Hey Prez?" Alden interrupted, "What should I tell the dorm leaders about their new long hair? All of them have hair at least half-way down their back now!"

Prez grinned, "Tell them it's Skyler's fault. When there are twenty-seven knocks on my parents' door, all looking for him, Sky will change our hair and his mind."

<<<<>>>>